PREFACE TO THE TENTH EDITION.

In this edition amendments introduced by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1939 (Act XXII of 1939), the Offences on Ships and Aircraft Act, 1940 (Act IV of 1940) and the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1940 (Act XXXV of 1940) have been inserted in proper places. For the use of the Bench and the Bar in Burma, the amendments introduced by the Government of Burma (Adaptation of Laws) Order, 1937, and the Schedule annexed thereto, have been quoted in Note 4 (pages 12 to 18). Rulings reported up to the end of January, 1941, have been incorporated in the notes and the addenda with copious cross-references. The book has again been thoroughly revised with a view to enhance its usefulness, keeping it at the same time handy for the purpose of ready reference.

PREFACE TO THE NINTH EDITION.

In this edition the book has been thoroughly revised and partly re-written, keeping in view the ideal followed in the previous editions. Rulings reported up to the end of February, 1937, have been incorporated in the notes and the addenda with copious cross-references. Every attempt has been made to make the book more useful both to the Bench and the Bar. I shall deem my labour fully recompensed if I have been able to maintain the reputation of the learned editor who met with an untimely death after the publication of the last edition.

PREFACE TO THE SEVENTH EDITION.

As I have observed in a previous edition of this work, the sweeping Amendments of 1923 have not been able to cope with the tremendous task of removing the divergencies of opinion among the High Courts which exist under almost every important section of the Code. Perhaps the Committees which sat on the Bills of 1914 and 1921 had decided to direct their attention more towards defining the policy of the law than attempting to settle the conflicts of opinion which they accepted as a matter of result.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

But the most far-reaching amendments have been wrought by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923 (popularly known as the Racial Distinctions Act) and the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. The first Act is the result of a compromise between the members of a Committee appointed in 1921 to amend certain provisions of this Code which differentiated between European and Indian British subjects in criminal trials and proceedings. The disabilities of second and third class Magistrates to try European British subjects, the requirement of the first class Magistrate being a European British subject and a Justice of the Peace in order to be able to try European British subjects, the right of such subjects to claim a jury before a District Magistrate, their exemption from security proceedings, the lower scale of punishment, the more extensive rights of appeal—all these privileges have now been taken away though certain inequalities are still retained under the present Code. The amendments have been duly noticed in this book not only by reference to the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill, but also to the Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee.

The Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 has got a long history behind it. The kernel of the Act was a Bill prepared in 1914, in which three-fourths of the present amendments were contained. This Bill was referred to a small Committee (known as the Lowndes Committee) in 1916, which submitted its Report at the end of the same year, but owing to the interposition of the war, further consideration on the Bill was postponed. Meanwhile, suggestions and criticisms were invited and collected, and in 1921 another Bill was prepared (embodying the above Report with certain alterations made in pursuance of the suggestions received) and was referred to a Joint Committee which submitted its Report in 1922. This Bill, with various alterations, ultimately passed into law in 1923.

From this it is evident that neither the Bill of 1921 nor the Report of the Joint Committee of 1922 gives the whole history of the amendments; but in order to understand the Objects and Reasons, one has also to consult the earlier Bill of 1914 and the Report of 1916. The editor has, therefore, spared no pains to trace each amendment to the original Bill and Report in order to elucidate the lawyer as to the reasons of the particular amendment, and where an amendment has been effected during the discussions in the Legislative Assembly, reference has been given to the Debates in the Assembly (with dates), together with extracts from speeches, where necessary. All the rulings modified or overruled by the amendments have been duly noticed. The amendments have been shown in italics, and where a section or subsection has been materially amended, it has been printed in parallel columns, the left hand column representing the old Act, and the right hand column giving the new.

- Act XXXV of 1940 [The Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1940].

The citations have been brought down to the present year, and, as in the previous edition, the notes have been supplemented by extracts from Police Code and Manuals, High Court Rules, Notifications, and Circulars.

Reading sec. 75 (1), sec. 1 (2), sec. 82 and sec. 83, Cr. P. C., together it is clear and beyond all question that the warrant contemplated by sec. 75 is a warrant issued by a Court in British India and that such warrant is executable at any place in British India within or without the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the warrant. There is no provision in the Cr. P. Code authorizing the issue of a warrant to be executed at any place outside British India. Section 82, Cr. P. C., empowers a Magistrate in British Baluchistan to issue a warrant of arrest which may be executed at any place in British Baluchistan. Just as a Court of British India has no power under the Cr. P. Code to issue a warrant for execution at a place outside British India, so as applied side British n the Balu- le has been Territories, rritories can and fallacious.

No doubt the Cr. P. Code has been extended in its application to British Baluchistan and to the Baluchistan Agency Territories, but when the Cr. P. Code is read by a Magistrate in British Baluchistan or in the Baluchistan Agency Territories, it must be read as if all references to British India in the Code of Criminal Procedure were references to British Baluchistan and the Baluchistan Agency Territories—Karimbux, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 154, 42 Cr.L.J. 49, 190 I.C. 661, approving Tahilram Khanchand v.

The provisions of this section, in the case of a warrant to be executed outside the local limits of jurisdiction, would override the express direction of sec. 77, Cr. P. C., that a Presidency Magistrate must direct the warrant to a police officer. The power outside the local limits of the jurisdiction or removed from the local limits, is one of cumspection. In any case warrants must not be sufficiently definite either in the name of the person to whom the warrant is addressed or in the description of the person to be arrested, are invalid—Sagarmal Khemraj, AIR. 1940 Bom. 397, 42 Bom.L.R. 904.

161A. The effect of secs. 85 and 86 is that the person arrested outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the warrant has to be taken before a Magistrate or Commissioner or District Superintendent of Police, and such Magistrate or Commissioner or District Superintendent has to satisfy himself that the person arrested appears to be the person intended by the Court which issued the warrant, and when so satisfied he is bound to direct the removal of the arrested person in custody to the Court which issued the warrant. The Magistrate is not entitled to institute an inquiry under sec. 186, Cr. P. Code—Sagarmal Khemraj, AIR. 1940 Bom. 397 (398), 42 Bom.L.R. 904.

The discretion under this section must be exercised judicially, and it should be exercised in such a way as not to conflict with the policy of the Legislature as disclosed in sec. 162, Cr. P. C., and in secs. 123 to 125, Evidence Act. Statements made to the police are in their nature confidential and sec. 162, Cr. P. C., illustrates the limited purposes for which their production should be required. It is also necessary to bear in mind, that under sec. 125, Evidence Act, a police officer cannot be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence. No exception can be made in favour of a statement made by the informant—Bilal Mahomed, AIR. 1940 Bom. 361, 42 Bom.L.R. 787, 42 Cr.L.J. 58, 190 I.C. 779, I.L.R. 1940 Bom. 768.

The accused was found walking about midnight on a bandh which was apparently used as thoroughfare. Held that on the facts stated, cl. (a) of sec. 109, Cr. P. C., had no application to the case and that no order could be passed under cl. (b) in absence of evidence to show that the statement made by the accused was untrue. The statement of the dafadar that the accused, after the arrest had been effected, had stated before him that he had been invited by a person to commit theft, was inadmissible under sec. 26, Evidence Act—Karu Kandu v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 777, 189 I.C. 641, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 410, 21 P.L.T. 171.

But the Bombay High Court did not follow this view of the Calcutta High Court in Hanmantrao Annarao Kalgil, 41 Cr.L.J. 686, I.L.R. 1940 Bom. 397, 188 I.C. 850, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 204, 42 Bom.L.R. 353. According to it, a Magistrate, in order to have jurisdiction, must receive information that the person to be dealt with is within the limits of his jurisdiction. The section cannot grammatically be read as referring to the place where the acts on which an order is to be based were committed. The words of the section do not refer to the place where the person proceeded against became a robber or a receiver of stolen property and so forth; it refers merely to the place where he was when the information was received. When it comes to proving the truth of the information, no doubt the words of the section must be construed in a common sense manner, and a person can be said to be within the jurisdiction of a Magistrate if he was ordinarily within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. The mere fact that on the particular date on which the information was received he had gone temporarily out of the jurisdiction would not prevent the section from applying. But where the evidence in the case shows that the person proceeded against was not in fact within the local limits at the time when the information was received, and had not left such limits for a purely temporary purpose, the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to proceed against him.

Sub-section (3) of sec. 117, Cr. P. C., provides for a temporary order in an emergency but such order must have some direct relation to the object for which the proceedings are taken. An order under sec. 117, Cr. P. C., is in the nature of an interim order and must be of a kind which could be made in a permanent order in the proceedings. The temporary order under sec. 117, Cr. P. C., must be capable of direct relation to the application under secs. 107, 108, 109 and 110, Cr. P. C., on which the proceedings are based and it is not intended to apply to an offence that has no relation whatever to the object of the proceedings under the Cr. P. C., no relation whatever to proceedings under Chap. VIII, Cr. P. Code. For instance sec. 117, Cr. P. C., could not be said to apply to an offence relating to the adulteration of food or drugs, or, to an attempt to abet or the abetment of the offence of perjury—Sumar, 41 Cr.L.J. 937, 190 I.C. 532, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 494, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 175. It may well be urged that a Court in revision is not in a position, as is the Magistrate, to understand the emergency and the necessity for the order under sub-section (3) of sec. 117, Cr. P. C., and will not substitute its own opinion for that of the Magistrate; yet the order of the Magistrate must have a legal basis though proceedings under this Chapter are only of a quasi-judicial nature—Ibid.

The provisions of sec. 139 A, Cr. P. C., are clearly designed to ensure that where there is reliable evidence in support of the denial of the existence of the public right the Magistrate shall have no jurisdiction to pronounce on the cogency of that evidence but refer the matter to a Civil Court. When the Magistrate does not direct his mind at all to ascertaining whether there is any evidence in support of the denial of the existence of the public right and takes upon himself to decide the question whether a public right exists or not he usurps the function of a Civil Court and deprives the party concerned of the right to have the matter decided by that Court. Where, therefore, the Magistrate has taken evidence with regard to the existence of the public right and on a consideration of that evidence he has been able to decide that the right does exist, it cannot be contended that the order should not be set aside merely because the Magistrate did not comply with the provisions of sec. 139-A, Cr. P. Code—Muni Lal Agarwala v. Public of Bhagalpur, 42 Cr.L.J. 34, 190 I.C. 879, 21 P.L.T. 843, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 38, 7 B.R. 36.

It is true that sec. 144, Cr. P. C., gives wide powers to the Magistrate and that imminent danger to the public peace justifies the subordination of private interests. There is no justification for periodical recourse to sec. 144, Cr. P. Page 351, at the end of Note 379, add—

It would be putting a somewhat narrow construction on the word "frequenting" to exclude a member of the public who occupies a house within a defined area from the category of those who frequent that area. The words "or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place" are wide enough to include all members of the public within the defined area or at the defined place, whether he or she is present there "frequently", e.g., as a resident—or merely casually or occasionally, e.g., as a "visitor"—Bhagwati Prasad v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 All. 465 (466, 467), 42 Cr.L.J. 120, I.L.R. 1940 All. 662, 1940 A.L.J. 547, following *Shander v. absolutely clear.

When therefore the Act says that a "particular place" has to be defined it means what it says, namely that the public must be informed with certainty of the exact place in, at or within which the proscribed acts are forbidden to them. It must not be a matter of doubt, inference, calculation or inquiry. The order itself must define with particularity the place to which the prohibition extends. The order must specify the place or area of its operation with such certainty that, in the minds of those to be affected by it, there can be no reasonable room for mistake. Therefore the somewhat casual reference to the village of Haswa in the words "this order shall remain in force within the local limits of the boundary of Haswa" is not a sufficient compliance with sec. 144 (3), Cr. P. Code—Bhagwati Prasad v. Emp., supra, following Belvi, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 325, 134 I.C. 344, 32 Cr.L.J. 1144, 33 Bom.L.R. 673 and *Sat Narain v. Sub-section (3) of sec 156, Cr. P. C., does not alter the rule laid down in a long line of cases that it is the duty of a Magistrate on presentation of a complaint of an offence immediately to proceed in the manner laid down in Chap XVI. Section 156 (3), Cr. P. C., relates to a stage before the Magistrate has taken cognizance of the offence and not after, but it does not mean that a Magistrate can refuse to take cognizance of an offence upon a complaint made to him within the definition of sec. 4 (1) (b), Cr. P. Code. A Magistrate on receipt of a complaint is bound to examine the complainant under sec. 200, Cr. P. C., and proceed in accordance with the following sections. Therefore, when a complaint of an offence is made to a Magistrate as such, he cannot refuse to take cognizance of it and send it to the police for enquiry under sec. 156 (3), Cr. P. C., and then dispose of it by executive orders and by what is known as a "B" summary—Shahdad Gada v. Emp, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 215, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 431

After the amendment of sec 157, Cr. P. C., it is not imperative on the Police to arrest the suspects as soon as they seize some property from their houses and elicit confessions from them. They have indeed a discretion in arresting them. The Police are entitled to get the suspects at the place of investigation and also to record their statements under sec. 162, Cr. P. C., and further to defer their arrest at their discretion; but all this power does not, by necessary implication, authorise the Police to detain the suspects. When the suspect's examination is over, he must either be arrested or allowed to depart. Section 164, Cr. P. C., cannot be rendered nugatory by the stock argument that if the statement of a witness is recorded under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., the evidence of the witness should be discarded. If this were accepted as universally true, there will be no scope for taking action under sec. 164, Cr. P. Code. If a statement of a witness is previously recorded under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., it leads to an inference that there was a time when the police thought the witness may change but if the witness sticks to the statement made by him throughout the mere fact that his statement was previously recorded under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., will not be sufficient to discard it. The Court, however, ought to receive it with caution and if there are other circumstances on record which lend support to the truth of the evidence of such witness, it can be acted upon—Parmanand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 340 (346), 1940 N.L.J. 459, 42 Cr.L.J. 17, 190 I.C. 849.

If an inadvertent omission to obtain the signature of the accused to a statement made under sec. 164, Cr. P. C., were to vitiate the confession, sec. 533, Cr. P. C., would be rendered entirely otiose. It is exactly for a case of this nature that the provisions of sec. 533, Cr. P. C., are enacted. Where in such a case not only has the Magistrate given evidence to show that the statement was made as recorded by him, but the accused himself has admitted that he made the statement, there can be no possible prejudice to the accused in giving proof that the statement actually was made—*Shamla Hardeo Teli v. 571A. Scope :—This section deals with the case of a Magistrate seeing reason to believe that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction has committed an offence without such limits, and in that case he can send the person to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into the offence. It is dealing with a case in which the Court which has jurisdiction, has not taken cognizance of the matter, and the offence is brought to the notice of a Magistrate who is not competent to try it, in which case he may send it to a Magistrate who is competent. It does not override the provisions of secs. 75 to 86, Cr. P. C., which deal with the execution of warrants of arrest—Sagarmal Khemraj, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 397 (398), 42 Bom L.R. 904.

The interrogation is to be made in order to afford him an opportunity for offering an explanation. Section 342, Cr. P. C.,—the same may be said of sec 209, Cr. P. C., as well—enables the Magistrate to examine the accused only if there are circumstances appearing against the accused in the evidence given by the prosecution and answers given by the accused in the absence of such evidence to questions put by the Magistrate, cannot be used for filling up gaps in the proof adduced by the prosecution. Where the evidence before the committing Magistrate which, even if taken at its face value, falls far short of making out a prima facie case against the accused and the Magistrate proceeds to examine the accused and records his answers, the examination of the accused cannot be said to have been duly recorded by him within the meaning of that expression in sec. 287, Cr. P. C., and consequently the presumption under sec. 80, Evidence Act, cannot apply to it—Kuppamal, A.I.R. 1941 Mad 1 (4, 5), 1940 M.W.N. 1105, 52 M.L.W. 710, following Abdulla Ravuthan, A.I.R. 1916 Mad 407, 30 I.C. 447, 39 Mad 770, 16 Cr.L.J. 623, Mohideen Abdul Qadir, 27 Mad. 238, 2 Weir 408 and Basanta Kumar, 26 Cal. 49.

(24) Where there was only one complaint filed under secs. 124-A and 153-A, I. P. C., and only one sanction was obtained for the prosecution of the accused from the Government, there was no need for a separate trial under sec. 153-A, I. P. Code. The accused could have been convicted under sec. 153-A, I. P. C., in the trial under sec. 124-A, I. P. Code. The provisions of sec. 235, Cr. P. C., are quite clear in this respect. But where by this procedure of holding separate trials the accused has not in any way been prejudiced, the trial cannot be said to be illegal—*Vishambhar Dayal v. It is permissible in a case where there are two charges arising out of the same transaction, one triable as a summons case and the other as a warrant case, for the Magistrate to try them together; but if he does so, he must follow the procedure laid down for warrant cases and he cannot, whilst proceeding with the two cases together, treat them separately. If he wishes to do that, he must deal with them separately from the inception. If he is dealing with the two cases together under one form of procedure, and makes an order of discharge on account of absence of the complainant, the order of discharge is one under sec. 259, Cr. P. Code. The order cannot be construed in one sense in respect of the warrant case and in another sense in respect of the summons case. The order does not prevent the lodging of a fresh complaint in respect of the same matter—Kanji Vijpal v. Pandurang Keshav Rane, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 413, 42 Bom L.R. 902.

Where the Court refuses to summon witnesses on the ground that the accused has cited them for the purpose of delaying the case and the accused gives up those witnesses, he cannot subsequently make a grievance of it. If he has insisted on their being summoned and the Court has refused to do so, it will then be open to the accused to argue in the High Court that the trial Court has wrongly refused to summon his witnesses—*Vishambhar Dayal v. Under sec. 15 of the Bengal Food Adulteration Act (VI of 1919), in the case of an offence committed within a municipality, no prosecution can be instituted without the consent in writing of the Chairman of the Commissioners. A provision of this sort, however, is not sufficient to make the Bengal Food Adulteration Act a Municipal Act. The intention of the legislature in referring to Municipal Acts under sec. 261 (b), Cr. P. C., was to provide that offences against Acts such as the Calcutta Municipal Act or the Bengal Municipal Act should be tried by Benches of Magistrates duly empowered, but this provision would not cover an Act of general application like the Bengal Food Adulteration Act—*Jagannarayan Haluwa v. The words "if any" in sec. 263 (g), Cr. P. C., are not sufficient to override the requirements of sec. 342, Cr. P. C., which applies to all trials, including summary trials. If the Legislature had meant to exclude summary trials from the obligation to take the statement of the accused, it would have done so in clear terms. The words "if any" in sec. 263 (b), Cr. P. (18) The District Magistrate passed an order under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., in which he held that a certain procession was an innovation and that as there were strained relations between the Shias and Sunnis there was the danger of a breach of the peace and so the procession should not be taken out. Subsequent to this order certain Shias approached the Government in order to get the order reversed but the Government rejected the petition. Later on the Shias again petitioned the Commissioner against the order and the Commissioner asked the successor of the District Magistrate to look into the matter. He permitted the taking out of the procession but laid down certain conditions to prevent any breach of the peace. Held that the order was purely an executive order for controlling the procession which he could pass as a District Magistrate and that conditions or formalities which were required under sec. 144, Cr. THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

(ACT V OF 1898)

As amended up to date

RECEIVED THE GOVERNOR GENERAL'S ASSENT ON THE 22ND MARCH, 1898.

An Act to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Criminal Procedure.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to criminal procedure; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

The 1923 Amendments. The Criminal Procedure Code, 1898 underwent drastic amendments at the hands of the Legislature in 1923 by two Acts, viz., the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923 (popularly known as the Racial Distinctions Acts) and Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. Of these the latter Act was the more important and was the outcome of a general revision of the whole Code, whereas the former Act was limited to the amendment of certain sections relating to the trial of European British Subjects. These Amendment Acts came into force from 1st September 1923.

The genesis of Act XVIII of 1923 dates as far back as 1914. In the year a Bill (No. 3 of 1914) was introduced in the Imperial Legislative Council, and was thereafter referred to the Local Governments and Administrations. Their opinions were received and partially examined, but further progress with the Bill was suspended until the conclusion of the war. Meanwhile in 1916 the Government referred this Bill and the opinions received to a Select Committee (known as the Lowndes Committee). The Bill as revised by this Committee was again introduced in the Imperial Legislative Council in 1917, but further consideration of the Bill was postponed until after the war. Meanwhile some further suggestions for the amendment of the Code were considered by the Government, and after the termination of the war, a new Bill was prepared in 1921 which was substantially the Bill as revised by the above Committee. This Bill (No. 3 of 1921) was introduced in the Council of State on the 21st February 1921 and was referred to a Joint Committee, composed of representative members of the Legislative Assembly and the Council of State. This Committee submitted its report after a year (in September 1922); and the Bill as revised by this Committee, with certain alterations made during the discussions in the Council of State in September 1922 and in the Legislative Assembly in January and February 1923 ultimately passed into law, and has been enacted as Act XVIII of 1923.

(For Bill 3 of 1914, see Gazette of India, Part V, 28th March 1914; for the Report of the Select Committee of 1916, see Gazette of India, Part V, September 1917, reprinted in the Gazette of India, February 26, 1921, at p 39; for Bill 3 of 1921, see Gazette of India, Part V, February 26, 1921; for the Report of the Joint Committee, see Gazette of India, Part V, September 9, 1922).

The changes made from time to time by other minor Amendment Acts up to date have been noticed in this book in their proper places.

1. Pending cases are not affected by changes in the Law:—The general rule as to new laws of procedure is that they take effect from their coming into operation, so that the procedure from that date would be governed by such laws. It is also a general rule that such laws are not to affect vested rights. Therefore, where a person was being tried under an old Act, and before the conclusion of the trial, the new Act came into force, the trial ought to be continued in accordance with the procedure laid down in the earlier Act, which was in force at the commencement of the trial—Srinivasachari, 6 Mad 336; Mukund v. Ladu, 3 Bom L.R. 584.

2. Construction:—A penal statute must be construed strictly; that is, nothing is to be regarded as within the meaning of the statute which is not within the letter—which is not clearly and intelligibly described in the very words of the statute itself—Kola, 8 Cal 214; Lakshmi Chand, 1901 P.R. 24; Bishumbhur, 5 C.W.N. 108. Penal provisions have to be strictly construed, nor can the liability to punishment for the neglect of a statutory obligation be extended by inferential reasoning—Kazi, 28 Cal. 504. In interpreting statutes of a penal character, it is important to see that the powers conferred upon the Magistrates are duly exercised with reference to the rendering unlawful of acts that would otherwise be lawful—Sheodan, 10 All. 115. A penal statute must be construed strictly, and Magistrates ought to be very careful before they proceed to inflict imprisonment in a summary manner. They must avoid all appearance of oppression—Ganesh Narayan, 13 Bom. 600. Words importing a doubtful or ambiguous meaning must be construed strictly, and in favour of the subject; that is to say, unless the meaning of the Legislature is perfectly clear, no penalties are to be imposed upon the subjects of the Crown, nor are their liberties to be restricted—Imam, 10 All 150 (F.B.). The language of the Code is conclusive and must be construed according to ordinary principles, so as to give effect to the plain meaning of the language used. No doubt in the case of an ambiguity, that meaning must be preferred which is more in accord with justice and convenience, but in general the words used as read in their context must prevail—Babulal Choukhani v. King Emp., AIR 1938 P.C. 130 (133), 55 I.A. 158, 32 S.L.R. 476, 1938 O.L.R. 189, 1938 O.A. 398, 1938 M.W.N. 505, 19 P.L.T. 343, 1938 A.L.R. 309, 10 R.P.C. 250, 4 B.R. 490, 39 Cr.L.J. 452, 67 C.L.J. 161, 40 Bom L.R. 787, 42 C.W.N. 621, 1938 A.Cr.C. 27, 1938 O.W.N. 416, 1938 A.L.J. 382, 178 I.C. 1, 1938 A.W.R. (P.C.) 116, 1938 P.W.N. 320, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 647 (P.C.). Although the language of a statute is the first test for its interpretation there are other equally important tests, when the language is not clear and unambiguous, and when more than one interpretation is possible. In such circumstances, the interpretation which appears to be most 'in accord with reason, convenience and justice' is to be preferred. Another accepted canon of interpretation is that a penal statute should be construed strictly and that in case of doubt benefit should go to the subject—Parmanand v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 497 (500), 180 I.C. 835, AIR 1939 Lah. 81, 41 P.L.R. 137 (F.B.). See also Balakrishna, 17 Bom. 573; Patandin, 2 A.L.J. 26; Bhista, 1 Bom. 308.

When the meaning of the words is plain, it is not the duty of the Courts to busy themselves with supposed intentions. When the words themselves declare the intention of the Legislature, it appears inadmissible to consider the advantages or disadvantages of applying the plain meaning whether in the interests of the prosecution or the accused—Pakala Narayana Swami v. The King Emperor, 40 Cr.L.J. 364 (369), 180 I.C. 1, AIR 1937 (P.C.) 47, 1939 M.W.N. 185, 1939 O.W.N. 282, 20 P.L.T. 265, 49 M.L.W. 319, 43 C.W.N. 473 (P.C.).

It is beyond question that Judges have to deal with law as they find it, and must give effect to any enactment of the Legislature. The fact that a Judge thinks that a particular enactment is irrational or unfair, is irrelevant provided the enactment is in such clear terms as to admit of no doubt as to its meaning. But a Judge, construing an Act of Parliament, is not a mere automaton whose only duty is to give out what he considers to be the primary meaning of the language used. A Judge must always consider the effect of any construction which he is asked to put on an Act of Parliament, and if he comes to the conclusion that a particular construction leads to a result which he considers irrational or unfair, he is entitled, and indeed bound, to assume that the Legislature did not intend such a construction to be adopted, and to try to find some more rational meaning to which the words are sensible—Sombhai Gobindbhai, 40 Cr.L.J. 97 (100), 177 I.C. 588, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 484, 40 Bom.L.R. 1082 (F.B.).

The same rules of interpretation apply to notifications issued under penal statutes—Lakshmi Chand, 1901 P.R. 24.

When a definition is intended to be exhaustive, the Legislature, as a rule, uses the word 'means' and not the word 'includes'—Narpat Singh, 1901 A.W.N. 10; Ram Sarup, 39 Cr.L.J. 154 (155), 172 I.C. 530, 1938 A.Cr.C. 1, 1938 O.L.R. 8, 1938 O.A. 7, 10 R.O. 182, 1938 O.W.N. 7, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 80.

Is the Code exhaustive?—The essence of a Code is to be exhaustive on the matters in respect of which it declares the law and it is not the province of a Judge to disregard or go outside the letter of the enactment according to its true construction. On any point specifically dealt with by it, the law must be ascertained by interpretation of the language used by the Legislature—Gokul Mandar v. Pudmanund, 6 C.W.N. 825 (828) (P.C.), 29 Cal. 707, 4 Bom.L.R. 793, 29 I.A. 196; Hukum Chand Baid v. Kamalanand Singh, 3 CLJ 67 (71), 33 Cal 927 Criminal Courts, no less than Civil Courts, exist for the administration of justice, and Courts of both descriptions have inherent power to mould the procedure, subject to the statutory provisions applicable to the matter in hand, to enable them to discharge their functions as Courts of Justice—Pulin Behari Das, 16 C.W.N. 1105 (1136), 15 CLJ. 517, 13 Cr.L.J. 609, 16 I.C. 257. The Criminal Procedure Code does not contain a provision corresponding to sec 151 of the Civil Procedure Code; but that section does not lay down any new principle; it merely embodies a legislative recognition of the inherent power of the Court to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice. This inherent power is in no sense restricted in application to civil cases, it is equally applicable to criminal matters. The power is not capriciously or arbitrarily exercised; it is exercised ex debito justitiæ to do that real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone Courts exist; but the Court, in the exercise of such inherent power, must be careful to see that its decision is based on sound general principles and is not in conflict with them or with the intentions of the Legislature as indicated in statutory provisions—Budhu Lal v. Chattu Gope, A.I.R. 1918 Cal 850, 44 Cal 816 (827, 828), 25 CLJ 193, 18 Cr.L.J. 497, 21 C.W.N. 269, 39 I.C. 456; Pigot v. Ali Mahammad Mandal, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 30, 22 Cr.L.J. 213, 48 Cal. 522, 32 CLJ 270, 60 I.C. 325; Akhil Bandhu Ray v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Cal 258 (260), 39 Cr.L.J. 596 (598), 175 I.C. 409, I.L.R. (1938) 1 Cal. 588. So far as it deals with any point specifically, the Code of Criminal Procedure must be deemed to be exhaustive, and the law must be ascertained by reference to its provisions; but where a case arises which obviously demands interference, and it is not within those for which the Code specifically provides, it would not be reasonable to say that the Court had not the power to make such order as the ends of justice require—Rahim Sheikh, 50 Cal 872 (875), 24 Cr.L.J. 677, 37 CLJ 595, 73 I.C. 773; Nagen v. Emp., A.I.R. 1934 Cal 428 (429), 38 C.W.N. 501, 35 Cr.L.J. 911, 119 I.C. 345, 61 Cal 498, 59 CLJ 516, 1934 Cr.C. 538; Bipat Gope v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 777 (779), 169 I.C. 495, 16 Pat. 8, 1937 P.W.N. 271, 10 R.P. 19, 3 BR 584, A.I.R. 1937 Pat 369. But it is not open to a Court to travel outside the Code for finding powers either for the Police or for private persons 'to interfere with the liberty of the subject'—Gopal Naidu, 46 Mad. 605 (625), 44 M.L.J. 655, 73 I.C. 343 (F.B.). Vide also sec. 561A of this Code which is a legislative recognition of the inherent power of the High Court. The Criminal Procedure Code cannot be said to be exhaustive in regard to the conditions under which a jury can be discharged—Yeshvant Vithu, 38 Cr.L.J. 850 (851), 170 I.C. 153, I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 369, 39 Bom.L.R. 355, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 260, 10 R.B. 49. See also Note 889 in this connection.

An order obtained by fraud must be treated as having no legal effect—Patel Bhagubhai Ranchhodas v. Bai Arvinda, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 334 (335).

See also Lala v. Emp., in Note 838.

Preamble:—The preamble of an Act has been called a key to its understanding, and may properly be consulted in order to fix the scope or limit of a Statute—W. D. Edwards and F. C. Vemor, 9 Bom. 333 (343). The preamble does not control the enacting provisions of the Act—Mani Lal Singh v. Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta, 45 Cal 343, 27 C.L.J. 1, 22 C.W.N. 1, 44 I.C. 770. In cases of doubt and in the absence of express provision to the contrary, the preamble must be taken in restricting and governing the rest of the enactment—Shankar Sahai v. Din Dial, 12 All. 409 (418). It is well settled that the preamble to a statute can neither expand nor control the scope and application of the enacting clause, when the latter is clear and explicit; but if the language of the body of the Act is obscure or ambiguous, the preamble may be consulted as an aid in determining the reason of the law and the object of the Legislature and thus arriving at the true construction of the terms employed. It cannot be disputed that where the words of the enacting clause are more broad and comprehensive than the words of the preamble, the general words in the body of the statute, if free from ambiguity, are not to be restrained or narrowed down by particular or less comprehensive recitals in the preamble. The preamble of a statute is no more than a recital of some inconvenience, which by no means excludes any others for which a remedy is given by the enacting part of the statute—Gopi Krishna v. Raj Krishna, 12 C.L.J. 8 (11). The preamble does not control any plain enactment which follows it but it may be a most useful guide when a question of doubt arises upon construction of a particular provision and considerations relating to the scope of the Act are involved—Sital Chandra v. Mrs. A. J. Delanny, 20 C.W.N. 1158 (1163); Debi Das v. Maharaj Rup Chand, 49 All. 903 (911), 102 I.C. 792, 25 A.L.J. 609, A.I.R. 1927 All. 593. See also Kumar Punyendra Narain Deb v. Kumar Jogendra Narain Deb, 64 C.L.J. 212. It is not to be doubted that both the heading and the preamble are to be taken into consideration in interpreting the clauses of the Act, but they are not the operative portion of the Act—Mohammad Yusuf v. Imtiaz Ahmad Khan, 40 Cr.L.J. 421 (427), 180 I.C. 745, 1939 O.W.N. 296 (F.B.).

Marginal Notes:—Marginal notes are no part of an enactment—Dukhi Mullah v. Haluay, 23 Cal 55 (59). Marginal notes to the section of an Act of Parliament cannot be referred to for the purposes of construing the Act. There seems to be no reason for giving the marginal notes in an Indian Statute any greater authority than marginal notes in an English Act of Parliament—Balraj Kunwar v. Jagatpal Singh, 26 All. 393 (406), 8 C.W.N. 699 (706) (P.C.); Natesa Mudaliar, 50 Mad. 733; Syamo v. Emp., A.I.R. 1932 Mad 391, 55 Mad. 903, 1932 Cr.C. 355, 62 M.L.J. 742, 35 M.L.W. 705; 5 M. Cr. C. 75, 137 I.C. 9, 33 Cr.L.J. 418, 1932 M.W.N. 305; Bhagia v. Emp., 28 Cr.L.J. 340, 100 I.C. 820, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 203; Ram Lal v. Emp., 28 Cr.L.J. 1929, 3 Luck. 244, A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 15, 106 I.C. 213. Though the headings and marginal notes should not be held to govern the clear text of a section, yet they can be taken as an indication of what the Legislature meant—Narayanasami v. Rangasami, 49 Mad. 716 (722), 50 M.L.J. 547, 24 M.L.W. 235, 95 I.C. 731, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 749. Marginal notes are not parts of the sections, but there is no reason why they should not be consistent with the sections themselves—Bahadur Molla v. Ismail, 29 C.W.N. 151 (152), 52 Cal. 463, 41 C.L.J. 45, 26 Cr.L.J. 455, 85 I.C. 135, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 329. Whether a marginal note can be referred to for an exposition of the meaning of a section, depends upon whether the note has been inserted by or under the authority of the Legislature. King, J., while discussing the practice in the U. P. Legislative Council, asserted that in that Legislative Council at any rate, the marginal notes are treated as being part of the enactment, and are inserted with the assent and authority of the Legislature—Ramsaran Das v. Bhagdat Prasad, 27 A.L.J. 290, A.I.R. 1929 All. 53, 51 All. 411, 113 I.C. 442 (F.B.); Abdul Hakim v. Fozu Mia, 39 C.W.N. 57 (60), 36 Cr.L.J. 857, 155 I.C. 1003, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 287, 1935 Cr.C. 392, 62 Cal. 266; Ismail, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 417, 57 Bom. 537, 35 Bom.L.R. 886, 146 I.C. 248, 34 Cr.L.J. 1239, 1933 Cr.L.J. 1289.

Proviso:—Arguments from a proviso which seek to extend the operative effect of the substantive enactment are not legitimate unless there is real ambiguity in the substantive enactment—Ram Chunder v. Gowri Nath, 53 Cal. 492 (509), A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 927, 97 I.C. 376. A proviso should not by mere implication withdraw any part of what the main provision has given—Commr. of Income-tax v. Suppan & Co. A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 124 (125), 123 I.C. 801, 31 M.L.W. 141, 1930 M.W.N. 20, 58 M.L.J. 46.

Illustration:—The general words of the section cannot be controlled by any limiting words that may be used in one or more of the illustrations—Balmalund v. Mt. Sohano Kueri, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 164 (167), 8 Pat. 153, 10 P.L.T. 259, 119 I.C. 817; Chhotey Lal v. Emp., 25 Cr.L.J. 578, 85 I.C. 722, A.I.R. 1925 All. 220. A Court should not lightly disregard the illustrations merely because they do not seem to be in accord with generally accepted ideas as to the law in other places—Kandappa Mudahar v. Muthuswami Ayyar, 50 Mad. 91 (120), 99 I.C. 609, 24 M.L.W. 782, 1926 M.W.N. 990, 51 M.L.J. 765, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 99. An illustration is useful so far as it helps to furnish some indication of the presumable intention of the Legislature, and does not bind the Courts to place a meaning on the section which is inconsistent with its language—Satish Chandra v. Ram Doyal, 48 Cal. 388 (398), 59 I.C. 143, 22 Cr.L.J. 31, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 1 (S.B.). When a Court is called upon to interpret a piece of an enactment which comprises both the substantive provision and an illustration of the same, the Court is not justified in rejecting the illustration as a guide to the interpretation of the substantive provision—Ramlal v. Emp., 28 Cr.L.J. 1029 (1031), 106 I.C. 213, A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 15, 3 Luck. 244. It is the duty of a Court of law to accept, if that can be done, the illustrations given as being both of relevance and value in the construction of the text. The illustrations should in no case be rejected because they do not square with ideas possibly derived from another system of jurisprudence as to the law with which they or the sections deal. And it would require a very special case to warrant their rejection on the ground of their assumed repugnancy to the sections themselves. It would be the very last resort of construction to make any such assumption. The great usefulness of the illustrations, which have, although no part of the sections, been expressly furnished by the Legislature as helpful in the working and application of the statute, should not be thus impaired—Mahomed S'edol Ariffin v. Yeoh Ooi Gark, 2 A.C. 575, L.R. 43 I.A. 256; Durga Priya v. Durga Pada, 55 Cal. 154, 109 I.C. 752, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 204. If there be any conflict between the section and the illustrations, the latter must give way to the former—Mt. Sajidunnissa v. Sayed Hidayat, A.I.R. 1924 All. 748, 80 I.C. 896, 22 A.L.J. 425. Illustrations are not exhaustive and will not in case of conflict with the express words of the section override those words—Mukhi Tirathdas v. Jethanand Matvalornal, 38 Cr.L.J. 512 (514), 168 I.C. 89, A.I.R. 1937 Sind. 68, 9 R.S. 222, 31 S.L.R. 123 (F.B.).

Heading:—Though the headings and marginal notes should not be held to govern the clear text of a section, yet they can be taken as an indication of what the Legislature meant—Narayananasami v. Rangasami, 49 Mad. 716 (722), 95 I.C. 731, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 749, 50 M.L.J. 547, 24 M.L.W. 235; Dicaika v. Tafazar, 20 C.W.N. 1097 (1099). For contra see Chunni Lal v. Sheo Charan Lal, 47 All. 755 (760), A.I.R. 1925 All. 787, 89 I.C. 122, 23 A.L.J. 725. There is authority for the proposition that the mere heading of a Chapter is to be dealt with as though it were a preamble and that it cannot be used to cut down the clear words of the sections which are contained in the Chapter—In re Ananda Lal, 35 C.W.N. 1103 (1106). No doubt headings in the body of an Act are of some help in clearing up obscurities when there is an ambiguity, but they cannot control the provisions of the sections when they are unequivocal and clear. The headings are like preamble which supply a key to the mind of the Legislature, but do not control the substantive sections of the enactment—Durga v. Narain, A.I.R. 1931 All. 597 (599), 1931 A.L.J. 875 (F.B.) ; Debi Das v. Maharaj Rup Chand, 49 All. 903 (911), 102 I.C. 792, 25 A.L.J. 609, A.I.R. 1927 All. 593.

See Mohammad Yusuf v. Imtiaz Ahmad Khan, quoted above under the heading "Preamble".

Select Committee's Reports:—Although it is not proper to rely on Select Committee's reports for interpretation of a statute, they are sometimes looked into. But where the language is clear, it is not for a Court to probe into the mind of the legislator or to indulge in surmises—Qamarali v. Tulsi, 39 Cr.L.J. 981 (982), 173 I.C. 54, A.I.R. 1938 Nag 433, 11 R.N. 197.

Statement of Objects and Reasons:—Proceedings of the Legislature in passing an Act—including Statement of Objects and Reasons, and Debates of the Legislature—must be excluded from consideration in order to construe an Act. Nor is it permissible to construe an Act by reference to the Bill in its original form—Kumar Punyendra Narain Deb v. Kumar Jogendra Narain Deb, 64 C.L.J. 212 (265).

Conflicting Rulings:—When there are different rulings of the different High Courts on a particular point, a Judge should follow the rulings of the High Court to which he is subordinate—Swamirao Narayan v. Kashinath Krishna, 15 Bom 419 ; Balaji Ganesh v. Sakharam Parshram, 17 Bom. 555 ; Emp v. Nga Tun Zan, 4 I.C. 827, U.B.R 1909, II Quarter, W.B. of C. Act, sec. 1 ; Korban Ally v. Sharoda Prasad, 10 Cal. 82 ; Azizur Rahman v. Hansa, 47 I.C. 441, 40 All. 670, 16 A.L.J. 715.

If there is a conflict of judicial opinion then the Courts are bound to follow the decisions, if any, of the High Court to which they are subordinate. But in the absence of any pronouncement by the High Court, to which they are subordinate, their duty is to study the law as laid down by other High Courts for the purpose of coming to a proper decision—Ahmad Ali v. Emp., 32 Cr.L.J. 271 (272), 129 I.C. 276, A.I.R. 1930 Lah 1051, 32 P.L.R. 92, 1930 Cr.C. 1127, Ind Rul, 1931 Lah. 164.

A ruling in which two Judges differ on a point cannot be held to support the point—Alopi Din v. Emp., 36 Cr.L.J. 1103 (1105), 157 I.C. 205, A.I.R. 1935 All. 366, 1935 A.L.J. 653, 1935 Cr.C. 384.

2A. The Government of India Act, 1935 [26 Geo. 5.]:—Section 270 of this Act grants indemnity against Civil or Criminal proceedings for past acts done or purported to have been done by a servant of the Crown in India or Burma in the execution of his duty as such servant. Section 271 provides for protection of public servants against prosecution and suits. They are quoted below

270.—(1) No proceedings civil or criminal shall be instituted against any person in respect of any act done or purporting to be done in the execution of his duty as a servant of the Crown in India or Burma before the relevant date, except with the consent, Indemnity for past acts. in the case of a person who was employed in connection with the affairs of the Government of India or the affairs of Burma, of the Governor-General in his discretion, and in the case of a person employed in connection with the affairs of a Province, of the Governor of that Province in his discretion

(2) Any civil or criminal proceedings instituted, whether before or after the coming into operation of this Part of this Act, against any person in respect of any act done or purporting to be done in the execution of his duty as a servant of the Crown in India or Burma before the relevant date shall be dismissed unless the Court is satisfied that the acts complained of were not done in good faith, and, where any such proceedings are dismissed, the costs incurred by the defendant shall, in so far as they are not recoverable from the person instituting the proceedings, be charged, in the case of persons employed in connection with the functions of the Governor-General in Council or the affairs of Burma, on the revenues of the Federation, and in the case of persons employed in connection with the affairs of a Province, on the revenues of that Province.

(3) For the purposes of this section—

the expression "the relevant date" means, in relation to acts done by persons employed about the affairs of a Province or about the affairs of Burma, the commencement of Part II of this Act and, in relation to acts done by persons employed about the affairs of the Federation, the date of the establishment of the Federation;

references to persons employed in connection with the functions of the Governor-General in Council include references to persons employed in connection with the affairs of any Chief Commissioner's Province;

a person shall be deemed to have been employed about the affairs of a Province if he was employed about the affairs of the Province as constituted at the date when the act complained of occurred or is alleged to have occurred.

271.—(1) No Bill or amendment to abolish or restrict the protection afforded to Protection of public servants against prosecution and suits. certain servants of the Crown in India by section one hundred and ninety-seven of the Indian Code of Criminal Procedure, or by sections eighty to eighty-two of the Indian Code of Civil Procedure, shall be introduced or moved in either Chamber of the Federal Legislature without the previous sanction of the Governor-General in his discretion, or in a Chamber of a Provincial Legislature without the previous sanction of the Governor in his discretion.

(2) The powers conferred upon a Local Government by the said section one hundred and ninety-seven with respect to the sanctioning of prosecutions and the determination of the Court before which, the person by whom and the manner in which, a public servant is to be tried, shall be exercisable only—

(a) in the case of a person employed in connection with the affairs of the Federation, by the Governor-General exercising his individual judgment; and

(b) in the case of a person employed in connection with the affairs of a Province, by the Governor of that Province exercising his individual judgment:

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall be construed as restricting the power of the Federal or a Provincial Legislature to amend the said section by a Bill or amendment introduced or moved with such previous sanction as is mentioned in sub-section (1) of this section.

(3) Where a civil suit is instituted against a public officer, within the meaning of that expression as used in the Indian Code of Civil Procedure, in respect of any act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity, the whole or any part of the costs incurred by him and of any damages or costs ordered to be paid by him shall, if the Governor-General exercising his individual judgment so directs in the case of a person employed in connection with the affairs of the Federation or if the Governor exercising his individual judgment so directs in the case of a person employed in connection with the affairs of a Province, be defrayed out of and charged on the revenues of the Federation or of the Province as the case may be.

The Federal Court has jurisdiction in criminal as well as civil case. It would be very surprising if it were otherwise, since it has been in the Criminal Courts that many of the great constitutional questions of the past have been determined; the words "judgment, decree or final order" ought to receive no narrow interpretation. (Per Gwyer, C.J.). The juxtaposition of the words "judgment, decree or final order" is, no doubt, suggestive of civil litigation; but it cannot be said that the word "judgment" is not comprehensive enough to include a judgment pronounced in a criminal case; see sec. 366 of the Criminal Procedure Code and other sections in that Chapter, and also cl. 41 of the Letters Patent of the Chartered High Courts. Unlike sec. 206 of the Constitution Act, sec. 205 is not in terms limited to civil cases; and it is worth noting that sec. 210 (2) places orders of the Federal Court on the same footing as orders made "by the highest Court exercising civil or criminal jurisdiction, as the case may be" (Per Varadachariar, J.). Although the words 'judgment or final order' in the section may be assumed to apply to criminal cases as well, the order of the High Court directing a re-hearing of the criminal appeal by the Sessions Court is not a judgment within the meaning of sec. 205 of the Government of India Act (Per Sulaiman, J.)—Dr. Hori Ram Singh v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 468, A.I.R. 1939 F.C. 43, 1939 M.W.N. 497, 181 I.C. 317, 1939 O.L.R. 366, 1939 P.W.N. 429, 1939 M.Cr.C. 148, 50 M.L.W. 95, 20 P.L.T. 539, (1939) 2 M.L.J. Sup. 23, C.W.N. 1939 F.C. 50, 41 P.L.R. 680.

As the consent of the Governor, provided for in sec. 270 of the Government of India Act, 1935, is a condition precedent to the institution of proceedings against a public servant, the necessity for such consent cannot be made to depend upon the case which the accused or the defendant may put forward after the proceedings had been instituted, but must be determined with reference to the nature of the allegations made against the public servant, in the suit or criminal proceeding. If these allegations cannot be held to relate to "any act done or purporting to be done in the execution of his duty" by the defendant or the accused "as a servant of the Crown," the consent of the authorities would, prima facie, not be necessary for the institution of the proceedings. If, in the course of the trial, all that could be proved should be found to relate only to what he did or purport to do "in the execution of his duty," the proceedings would fail on the merits, unless the Court was satisfied that the acts complained of were not done in good faith (sec. 270A). Even otherwise, the proceedings would fail for want of the consent of the Governor, if the evidence established only official acts (per Varadachariar, J.)—Ibid.

Section 270 of the Government of India Act, 1935 does not mean that the very act which is the gravamen of the charge and constitutes the offence should be the official duty of the servant of the Crown. Such an interpretation would involve a contradiction in terms, because an offence can never be an official duty. The words as used in the section are not "in respect of any official duty" but "in respect of any act done or purporting to be done in the execution of his duty." The two expressions are obviously not identical. The offence should have been committed when an act is done in the execution of duty or when an act purports to be done in the execution of the duty. The reference is obviously to an offence committed in the course of an action, which is taken or purports to be taken in compliance with an official duty, and is in fact connected with it. The test appears to be not that the offence is capable of being committed only by a public servant and not by any one else, but that it is committed by a public servant in an act done or purporting to be done in the execution of his duty. The section cannot be confined to only such acts as are done by a public servant directly in pursuance of his public office, though in excess of his duty or under a mistaken belief as to the existence of such duty. Nor is it necessary to go to the length of saying that the act constituting the offence should be so inseparably connected with the official duty as to form part and parcel of the same transaction. If the act complained of is an offence, it must necessarily be not an execution of duty, but a dereliction of it. What is necessary is that the offence must be in respect of an act done or purported to be done in execution of duty, that is, in the discharge of an official duty. It must purport to be done in the official capacity with which he pretends to be clothed at the time, that is to say, under the cloak of an ostensibly official act, though, of course, the offence would really amount to a breach of duty. An act cannot purport to be done in execution of duty unless the offender professes to be acting in pursuance of his official duty and means to convey to the mind of another the impression that he is so acting. The section is not intended to apply to acts done purely in a private capacity by a public servant. It must have been ostensibly done by him in his official capacity in execution of his duty, which would not necessarily be the case merely because it was done at a time when he held such office, nor even necessarily because he was engaged in his official business at the time. (Per Sulaiman, J.) Ibid.

The question whether a criminal breach of trust can be committed while purporting to act in execution of duty is not capable of being answered hypothetically in the abstract, without any reference to the actual facts of the case. But when a public servant simply embezzles some property entrusted to him and thereby commits a criminal breach of trust under sec. 409, I.P.C., he is not doing an act, nor even purports to do an act in execution of his duty; when he commits the act, he does not pretend to act in the official discharge of his duty. A case like that would not ordinarily fall within the scope of sec 270 (1) of the Government of India Act, 1935. But an offence under sec. 477A, I.P.C., is committed if an officer or servant or anyone employed or acting in such capacity, wilfully and with intent to defraud falsifies any book or account. Thus where it is his duty to maintain a record or a register, and in maintaining that register he makes some entries which are false to his knowledge, he is certainly purporting to act though not actually acting, in the execution of his duty, because he is making certain entries in the register, knowing them to be false. He is ostensibly professing to be discharging his official duty in maintaining the register, which he is bound to maintain correctly. In making the entries he pretends or purports to act in the execution of his duty: but in point of fact he is acting in direct dereliction of it. Consent under sec 270 (1) is necessary for the trial of such an offence. Ibid.

Section 270 of the Government of India Act, 1935, is very wide in its terms and prohibits the initiation of proceedings in respect of the acts described therein against all servants of the Crown employed in connection with the affairs of the Province whether they are "gazetted officers" or not—Arjan Singh v Emp, 41 Cr.L.J 65 (68), 184 I.C. 680, A.I.R 1939 Lah. 479.

The provisions of sub-section (1) of sec. 270 are mandatory and admit of no reservation or exception. They contain a positive prohibition against the institution of civil and criminal proceedings against the persons described in the section in respect of the acts mentioned, without such consent. In other words, the Governor's "consent" is an essential pre-requisite to the competency of the Court to entertain the proceedings. It is the very foundation of the Court's jurisdiction, and its absence renders the entire proceedings void ab initio. This matter has also been put beyond doubt by the decision of the Federal Court in Dr Hori Ram Singh's case, cited above, where it was held that the "consent of the Governor is a condition precedent to the institution of the proceedings against the public servant". Where, therefore, the initiation of the proceedings against the accused was illegal, the subsequent production of the "consent", even though it was before the commencement of the trial de novo, could not validate what was invalid at its inception. The statute contains a positive prohibition against the initiation of proceedings without the prescribed consent, and such an illegality cannot be cured under sec. 537, Cr. P. C., even when no prejudice has been shown to have been caused—Ibid. For contra see Manzur Ali v. Emp., in Note 647.

Where the 'consent' stated that it was granted by the Governor of a Province and there is no indication that in doing so the Governor was acting "with his Ministers," it must be presumed that he granted it "in his discretion"—Ibid.

Where the charges against the accused persons not only state that the alleged criminal acts were done by them while they were engaged in the execution of their duties as Sub-Divisional Officer and Overseer, respectively, but they showed that their "official capacity was involved in the acts complained of as amounting to a crime," clearly, the gravamen of the charges is that the accused persons had acted fraudulently in the discharge of their duties, and therefore, as laid down by the Federal Court in the case cited above, the 'consent' prescribed in sec. 270 was required for initiating proceedings against them—Ibid.

2B. Rules or Police Regulations:—The Police Regulations are a volume of orders by the Local Government and there is no paragraph in the Criminal Procedure Code giving the Local Government power to issue orders for carrying out the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code. The Criminal Procedure Code, therefore, cannot be final order' in the section may be assumed to apply to criminal cases as well, the order of the High Court directing a re-hearing of the criminal appeal by the Sessions Court is not a judgment within the meaning of sec. 205 of the Government of India Act. (Per Sulaiman, J.)—Dr. Hori Ram Singh v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 468, A.I.R. 1939 F.C. 43, 1939 M.W.N. 497, 181 I.C. 317, 1939 O.L.R. 366, 1939 P.W.N. 429, 1939 M.Cr.C. 148, 50 M.L.W. 95, 20 P.L.T. 539, (1939) 2 M.L.J. Sup. 23, C.W.N. 1939 F.C. 50, 41 P.L.R. 680.

As the consent of the Governor, provided for in sec. 270 of the Government of India Act, 1935, is a condition precedent to the institution of proceedings against a public servant, the necessity for such consent cannot be made to depend upon the case which the accused or the defendant may put forward after the proceedings had been instituted, but must be determined with reference to the nature of the allegations made against the public servant, in the suit or criminal proceeding. The provisions of sub-section (1) of sec 270 are mandatory and admit of no reservation or exception. They contain a positive prohibition against the institution of civil and criminal proceedings against the persons described in the section in respect of the acts mentioned, without such consent. 2B. Rules or Police Regulations:—The Police Regulations are a volume of orders by the Local Government and there is no paragraph in the Criminal Procedure Code giving the Local Government power to issue orders for carrying out the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code. The Criminal Procedure Code, therefore, cannot be modified by any order of the Local Government in a departmental Code—Muhammad Yakub v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 971 (973), 177 I.C. 867, A.I.R. 1938 All. 534, 1938 A.L.J. 782.

There is no section of the Criminal Procedure Code which gives the Executive Government power to make rules to supplement the Code, and whatever value may be attached to the paragraph in the Manual of Government Orders, it cannot have any legal effect as regards the admissibility or inadmissibility of the confession—Lal Singh v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 132 (137), 178 I.C. 694, A.I.R. 1938 All. 625, 1938 A.L.J. 943, I.L.R. 1938 All. 875

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

CHAPTER I.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Code of Criminal Short title.
Commencement.
Procedure, 1898; and it shall come into force on the first day of July, 1898.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; but, in the Extent. absence of any specific provision to the contrary, nothing herein contained shall affect any special or local law now in force, or any special jurisdiction or power conferred, or any special form of procedure prescribed, by any other law for the time being in force, or shall apply to—

(a) the Commissioners of Police in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, or the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay;

(b) heads of villages in the Presidency of Fort St. George; or

(c) village Police Officers in the Presidency of Bombay:

Provided that the Provincial Government may, if it thinks fit, by notification in the official Gazette, extend any of the provisions of this Code, with any necessary modifications, to such excepted persons.

2C. Amendment:—In the proviso to sec 1, cl (2), the words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937

3. Object of the Code:—The object of the Criminal Procedure Code is to provide a machinery for the punishment of offences against the substantive law—Ganesh Narain, 13 Bom. 590; Abdul Rahaman, 16 Bom 580; Dular v. Nijabat, 12 Cal 536; Rama Chandra, Ratanlal 776 (778); Mona Puna, 16 Bom 661 (669); Abdul, Ratanlal 577 (579); Ramasami, 43 M.L.J. 710, 23 Cr.L.J. 691 (692).

4. Extent:—British India: 'British India' shall mean, as respects the period before the commencement of Part III of the Government of India Act, 1935, all territories and places within His Majesty's dominions which were for the time being governed by His Majesty through the Governor-General of India or through any Governor or officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India, and as respects any period after that date means all territories for the time being comprised within the Governors' Provinces and the Chief Commissioners' Provinces, except that a reference to British India in an Indian law passed or made before the commencement of Part III of the Government of India Act, 1935, shall not include a reference to Berar. [Vide sec. 3, cl. (7) of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897) as amended by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.]

Aden:—Aden has ceased to be a part of British India from the 1st day of April, 1937. Vide sec. 94, cl. (2) and sec. 288, cl (1) of the Government of India Act, 1935 (25 Geo. 5).

If any such Order is made, it shall confer appellate jurisdiction from Courts in Aden upon such Court in India as may be specified in the Order, and it shall be the duty of any Court in India upon which jurisdiction is so conferred to exercise that jurisdiction, and such contribution, if any, as His Majesty in Council may determine shall be paid out of the revenues of Aden towards the expenses of that Court.

The Order shall also make provision specifying the cases in which an appeal from that Court in India may be brought to His Majesty in Council. Vide sec. 288, cl. (4) of the Government of India Act, 1935 Section 20 of the Aden Colony Order, 1936, which has conferred such jurisdiction, runs as follows:—

20. (1) An appeal shall lie from the Supreme Court to the High Court of Judicature at Bombay (in this section referred to as "the High Court")—

(a) *

(b) in criminal cases, from any judgment of the Supreme Court from which, if it were a judgment of a Court of Session in the Province of Bombay, an appeal would lie to the High Court under the Indian Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, as amended prior to the appointed day:

Provided that no appeal shall lie where the sentence imposed is one of imprisonment not exceeding six months or fine not exceeding five hundred rupees or of both such imprisonment and fine

(2) When any person is sentenced to death and no appeal has been lodged by him within the time limited for that purpose, the Supreme Court shall transmit the record of the case to the High Court and an appeal shall thereby be deemed to have been lodged by the said person; and the sentence shall not be carried out unless and until it shall have been confirmed by the High Court.

(5) (a) The High Court shall, in relation to appeals under this section, have the like powers as are conferred upon it by the Indian Code of Civil Procedure, or the Indian Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, as amended prior to the appointed day, in relation to appeals from a District Court or a Court of Session, as the case may be, in the Province of Bombay.

Unless repealed, amended or otherwise affected by or under any Order of His Majesty in Council or any law made by the Governor all Acts (including this Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898) shall continue to have effect in the Colony of Aden. Vide sec. 16 of the Aden Colony Order, 1936

Burma.—Burma has ceased to be part of India from the first day of April, 1937. Vide sec. 46, cl (2) of the Government of India Act, 1935 and sec. 159 of the Government of Burma Act, 1935

Section 148 of the Government of Burma Act, 1935, provides that the existing law is to continue in force. Sec. 4 (1) of the Government of Burma (Adaptation of Laws) Order, 1937, provides "The enactments mentioned in the Schedule to this Order, until repealed or amended by the Legislature or other competent authority, have effect subject to the adaptations and modifications directed by that Schedule to be made therein or, where so directed, shall cease to have effect." Therefore, the Criminal Procedure Code (V of 1898) is in force in Burma subject to the following adaptations and modifications introduced therein by the Government of Burma (Adaptation of Laws) Order, 1937, and the Schedule annexed thereto.

The adaptations and modifications, which have not been incorporated in the body of the sections as given in this edition to avoid confusion with the changes introduced therein by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, are given below:—

5. (1) Whenever an expression mentioned in the first column of the Table hereunder printed occurs (otherwise than in a title or preamble or in a citation or description of an enactment) in any Burman law then, unless that expression is under the last preceding paragraph expressly directed to be otherwise adapted or modified or to stand unmodified or to be omitted, there shall be substituted therefor the expression set opposite to it in the second column of the said Table

Table of General Adaptations.

Governor-General of India; Governor-General; Governor-General of India in Council; Governor-General in Council; Chief Commissioner of British Burma; Chief Commissioner; Lieutenant-Governor of Burma; Lieutenant-Governor; Local Government of Burma; Local Government;	Governor.
Gazette of India, Gazette of British Burma, Burma Gazette, Local Official Gazette, Official Gazette,	Gazette.

(2) Any words contained in any Burman law, otherwise than in a title or preamble, which require the consent, assent, approval, sanction or control of the Governor-General or the Governor-General in Council in relation to anything done by the Local Government or the Governor shall be omitted.

(3) A direction in the Schedule to this Order that a specified Burman law or section or portion of a Burman law shall stand unmodified shall be construed merely as a direction that it is not to be modified or adapted in accordance with the foregoing provisions of this paragraph

[Vide sec 5 of the Government of Burma (Adaptation of Laws) Order, 1937.]

Schedule II.—Omit the references to "Presidency Magistrate" and "Chief Presidency Magistrate".

Schedules III and IV.—In the headings omit "Provincial".

Schedule V.—Omit "Empress of India" and "Emperor of India".

In clause (1b) of Form XXVIII for "[when the charge is framed by a Presidency Magistrate, for Court of Session substitute High Court]" substitute "[or High Court]"; Omit clause (2).

[Vide the Schedule annexed to the Government of Burma (Adaptation of Laws) Order, 1937.]

The following are within British India:—Chief Commissioners Provinces of British Baluchistan, Delhi, Ajmere-Merwara, Coorg and the Andaman and Nicobar Islands and the area known as Panth Piploda Vide sec. 94 (1) and sec. 311 (1) of the Government of India Act, 1935; Lacadive Islands (Cheriyā Kōya, 13 Mad. 353); Island of Perim (Mangal Tekchand, 10 Bom 258).

Native States:—The Native States and Tributary Mahals are not within British India; therefore this Code does not apply to Rajkot (Abdul Latif, 10 Bom. 186 (188)); Civil Station of Wadhwan (Chiman Lal, 37 Bom. 152; but see 9 Bom 244); Moyurbhanj (Keshub, 8 Cal 985); Keonjhar (Bichitranund v. Bhugbat, 16 Cal. 667 at p. 675); the lands occupied by the Hyderabad State Railway (Muhammad Yusufuddin, 25 Cal. 20 (P.C.)); Railway Station in a Native State (Raghunathrao, 5 Bom.L.R. 873).

But although the Code as such does not apply to the Native States many of those States have in fact adopted it, e.g., the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore (In re Hayes, 12 Mad. 39), Mysore, Kashmir, the Native States in the Rajputana Agency, etc.

Transfer of territory from British India to Native State:—The British Court has jurisdiction to proceed with the trial of an offence committed in a territory which formed part of British India at the date of the offence and at the date of commitment to the Sessions, but was transferred to a Native State before the case came in for trial—Ram Naresh, 34 All 118. Similarly, the British Appellate Court has jurisdiction to hear an appeal if the transfer took place after a conviction but before the appeal therefrom was heard—Mahabir, 33 All 578.

Other places where the Code does not apply—The Code does not apply to the North Cachar Hills (Soonderjee v. Maylon, 26 Cal. 874) or to the Chittagong Hill Tracts (Sonai Mugh, 27 Cal 654). It also does not apply to the Garo Hills, the Khasia and Jaintia Hills, the Naga Hills, the North Cachar Subdivision of the Cachar District, the Mikur Hill Tracts in the Nowgong District, the Dibrugarh Frontier Tracts in the Lakhimpur District, and the Lushai Hills; see Assam Gazette, 1898, Part II, page 788.

Places to which the Code has been extended.—The Code has been extended to the following places:—

(1) The District of Angul (with effect from 1st August, 1898); see Calcutta Gazette, 1898, Part I, p 779;

(2) Upper Burma (excluding the Shan States); see Burma Laws Act (XIII of 1898);

(3) the Shan States (by the Shan States Laws and Criminal Justice Order, 1895, as amended by Notification No 29, dated 19-12-1898, Burma Code);

(4) the Scheduled Districts in Ganjam and Vizagapatam: see Fort St George Gazette, 1898, Part I, page 206; see also Public Prosecutor v Sadanandra, 23 M.L.J. 670, 13 Cr.L.J. 856;

(5) Sonthal Parganas: see Calcutta Gazette, 1898, Part I, page 665;

(7) Pargana of Manpur: see Gazette of India, 1899, Part I, page 419;

(9) Chittagong Hill Tracts: see section 4 of the Chittagong Hill Tracts Regulation I of 1900; but see Sonai Mugh, 27 Cal. 654.

By Notification No. 260-1, dated the 24th April, 1929, in exercise of powers conferred by the Indian (Foreign Jurisdiction) Order in Council, 1902, the Governor-General applied inter alia the Indian Penal Code and the Indian Code of Criminal Procedure to the Administered Areas in the Hyderabad State, with certain modifications, which included a provision that references to the Local Government should be read as referring to the Resident at Hyderabad, and references to the High Court should be as referring to the Court of the Resident at Hyderabad. Further, sec. 268 of the Criminal Procedure Code, which provides that all trials before a Court of Session shall be either by jury or with the aid of assessors, was applied subject to the modification that "trials before a Court of Session may, in the discretion of the Sessions Judge, be without jury or aid of assessors"—Fakira v. King-Emp., 41 C.W.N. 741 (743), 167 I.C. 790, 39 P.L.R. 334, 1937 O.L.R. 216, 1937 M.W.N. 546, 9 R.P.C. 231, 1937 A.Cr.C. 74, 3 B.R. 426, 38 Cr.L.J. 498, 1937 O.W.N. 412, 1937 A.L.R. 328, 64 I.A. 148, 46 M.L.W. 134, 39 Bom.L.R. 966, 11 L.R. (1937) Bom 711, 1937 A.W.R. 1128, 1937 A.L.J. 1055, A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 119, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 323 (P.C.).

The Code has also been extended to the British Protectorates on the East Coast of Africa (Order of Council, 1897); Somaliland (Order, 1899); the Persian Coast and Islands (Order, 1897); and Zanzibar (Order, 1884), under which Zanzibar is to be treated as a District in the Bombay Presidency).

As regards Muscat, it has been held that the Bombay High Court is invested with original criminal jurisdiction over it, but not appellate or revisional jurisdiction—In re Rattansee, 24 Bom. 471.

High Seas:—The trial of a British seaman for an offence committed on the high seas on a British ship must be conducted under the Code of Criminal Procedure, though the offence charged was an offence under the English Law—Gunning, 21 Cal 782; Barton, 16 Cal. 238; Thompson, 1 B.L.R. O.Cr. 1; Elmstone, 7 B.H.C.R. 89. See also Note 31A.

5. Special law:—The expression 'special law' in this section has reference to statutory enactments and not to local family law (e.g., Marumakkattayan law)—Thillu Amma v Sankunni, 37 M.L.J. 361, 20 Cr.L.J. 733, 52 I.C. 893. The Coroner's Act is an instance of special law, which is unaffected by the Cr. P. Code—Jogeshwar Passi, 31 Cal 1 (6). See also Mahomed Rajudin, 16 Bom. 159.

The Evidence Act is a separate statute dealing with an important branch of law, and its provisions are independent of the rules of procedure contained in the Criminal Procedure Code and must have full scope unless it is clearly proved that they have been repealed or altered by another statute—Rannun v King-Emp., A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 88 (89), 7 Lah. 84, 94 I.C. 901, 27 Cr.L.J. 709, 27 P.L.R. 583. It is to the Indian Evidence Act, and not to the Code of Criminal Procedure, that one has to look as to whether the evidence in point is or is not admissible, the more so as there are to be found in the Criminal Procedure Code certain sections, in Chapter XLI entitled "Special Rules of Evidence." If the Legislature had thought it necessary in criminal cases to depart from the general rules laid down in Act No. I of 1872, it is more probable that any such exceptions would be found in the chapter in question—Misri, 31 All. 592 (597), 8 Cr.L.J. 26, 3 I.C. 26; Vellamoonji Goundan v Emp., A.I.R. 1932 Mad 431, 55 Mad. 711, 62 M.L.J. 559, 1932 M.W.N. 449, 137 I.C. 863, 1932 Cr.C. 412, 5 M.Cr.C. 174, 33 Cr.L.J. 526, 35 M.L.W. 512, 18 A.I.C.R. 286.

The Evidence Act is a special law within the meaning of sub-section (2) of this section and in the absence of a specific provision to the contrary in the Cr. P. Code nothing in that Code shall affect anything in the Evidence Act—Faujdar, A.I.R. 1933 All 440 (442), 55 All. 463, 144 I.C. 1021, 34 Cr.L.J. 875, 1933 A.L.J. 1578, 1933 Cr.C. 746. The Evidence Act deals with the particular subject of evidence including the admissibility of evidence and is a special law within the meaning of the Cr. P. Code. It follows, therefore, that no rules about the relevancy of evidence in the Evidence Act is affected by any provision in the Code of Criminal Procedure unless it is so specifically stated in the latter Code—Ram Naresh v Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 559 (563), 181 I.C. 616, A.I.R. 1939 All 242, 1939 A.L.J. 107, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 195. See also Subbiah Tevar, A.I.R. 1939 Mad 856 (858), 1939 M.Cr.C. 133, 50 M.L.W. 318, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 455, 1939 M.W.N. 1000.

The provisions of the Code of Cr. P. are not abrogated or suspended by the introduction of Martial Law—In re Kochunni Elaya Nair, 45 Mad. 14 (18).

6. Local Law:—This Code will not affect any local law, as for instance, Act XXXVII of 1885 which is still in force in Sonthal Parganas. So, an order under that Act sentencing an accused to imprisonment is not open to revision under this Code—Dular v. Nijabat, 12 Cal 536. So also, this Code will not apply to proceedings held under the Sind Frontier Regulation (V of 1872 and III of 1892)—Ghulam Kadir, 5 S.L.R. 105, 12 Cr.L.J. 568.

The Criminal Procedure Code is applicable to prosecutions under the Calcutta Municipal Act (Bengal III of 1923). See the cases of Sisir Kumar Mitter v. The Corporation of Calcutta, 43 C.L.J. 369, 30 C.W.N. 598; Umesh Chandra Mitter v. The Corporation of Calcutta, 43 C.L.J. 231; and Sew Prosad Poddar v. The Corporation of Calcutta, 9 C.W.N. 18. The point was, however, not argued in those cases; and moreover the Court was considering the proceeding in which the petitioners had been fined under penal provisions of the Calcutta Municipal Act. But in a proceeding before the Municipal Magistrate where the only question is whether or not certain structures are liable to be demolished the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code do not apply. The owner of the unauthorised structure is not an accused person and as such is not exempted from administration of oath under sec. 342, cl (4) of the Cr. P. Code—Krishan Doyal Jalan v. The Corporation of Calcutta, 54 Cal. 532.

7. Special jurisdiction:—The following are instances of special jurisdiction:—The jurisdiction conferred by sec 3 of Madras Act XXIV of 1839 (Vizagapatam Agency Act) regarding the administration of criminal justice in the Vizagapatam Agency Tract—Budara Janni, 14 Mad 121; the jurisdiction conferred by secs 20-23, Cattle Trespass Act—Shama v. Lachu, 23 Cal. 300; Budhan v. Issur, 34 Cal. 926; the jurisdiction conferred by Bombay Village Police Act, VIII of 1867—Ragho Mahadu, 19 Bom. 612.

8. Special powers:—Instances—Powers conferred on second-class Magistrates by secs. 3 (5) and 56 of the Bombay Abkari Act V of 1878—Gastadji, 10 Bom. 181; powers possessed by the High Courts to punish for contempts—Surendra Nath Banerjee v. Chief Justice, 10 Cal. 109 (P.C.); powers possessed by the High Courts under sec. 29 of the Letters Patent to transfer criminal cases before itself—Sitapathi, 6 Mad. 32; power of superintendence under sec. 15 of the Charter Act—Lakhraj v. Deb Pershad, 12 C.W.N. 678

Special Procedure:—For instance, the procedure prescribed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XIV of 1908), for the speedy trial of certain offences, and for prohibitions of associations dangerous to public peace.

9. Police of Calcutta, Bombay:—This Code does not apply to the Police in the city of Calcutta, unless expressly made applicable to them—Madho Dhobi, 31 Cal 557; Muhammad Suleman v. Emp., 54 Cal. 218 (222); Makhan Lal Dutta, (1939) 2 Cal. 429 (431). Section 155, however, applies to the Police of Calcutta and Bombay—Nilmadhab, 15 Cal. 596; Visram Babaji, 21 Bom 495. Also secs 42, 44, 54, 55, 56, 68, 83, 84, 85, 86, 127, 164, 202, and Col 3 of Schedule II have been specially extended to the Police in the town of Calcutta. Sections 386 and 387 have been, by ratification under the proviso, extended to the Commissioner of Police for the town of Calcutta (see Calcutta Gazette, 23rd March, 1904). Secs 42, 44, 68, 84, 85, 86, 127, 164, 202 and Col. 3 of Sch. II apply to the Police of Bombay. But secs. 54, 55, 56 and 83 are no longer applicable to the Police of Bombay under sec. 2 (1) of the City of Bombay Police Act IV of 1902.

This Code applies to the Police, but not to the Commissioner of Police, of Madras. See Madras Act III of 1888.

10. Madras Village Headmen:—No part of this Code applies to Village Headmen who are empowered by Madras Regs. XI of 1816 and IV of 1821 to try petty cases—Visramutha Pillai, 2 Weir 1. But secs 528 now applies to Madras Village Headmen. Sections 480 and 482 do not apply to Village Munsiffs—Venkatasami, 15 Mad. 131.

This section should not be read to mean that village Magistrates cannot complain or be tried under this Code; but it only mean that in his official capacity as a village Magistrate, that is, in the proceedings he takes as a village Magistrate, he is not governed by the Cr. P. Code. There is nothing in this Code to prevent him from instituting a complaint himself before a Magistrate—Mari Mudali, 19 L.W. 30, 25 Cr L.J. 221, A.I.R. 1924 Mad 730, 76 I.C. 653.

11. Bombay Village Police-officers:—The ancient village system of Police regulated formerly by Reg. IV of 1818 and Reg XII of 1827 and now by Bombay Village Police Act VIII of 1887 remains unaffected by this Code—Rugho Mahadu, 19 Bom 612. All that sub-sec. (2) of sec 1, Cr. P. C., means is that the procedure to be followed by the village police officers is not to be governed by the Criminal Procedure Code. It does not mean that the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code are not to apply in the case of a complaint against a village police officer—Shankar Sayaji Dalvi, A.I.R. 1938 Bom 489, 40 Cr L.J. 116, 40 Bom L.R. 1106, 178 I.C. 682.

2. [Repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act X of 1914].

3. (1) In every enactment passed before this Code comes into force, in which reference is made to, or to any chapter or section of, the Code of Criminal Procedure, Act XXV of 1861, or Act X of 1872, or Act X of 1882, or to any other enactment hereby repealed, such reference shall, so far as may be practicable, be taken to be made to this Code, or to its corresponding chapter or section.

References to Code of Criminal Procedure and other repealed enactments.

(2) In every enactment passed before this Code comes into force, the expressions "Officer exercising (or 'having') the powers (or 'the full powers') of a Magistrate," "Subordinate Magistrate, first class" and "Subordinate Magistrate, second class," shall respectively be deemed to mean "Magistrate of the first class," "Magistrate of the second class," and "Magistrate of the third class"; the expression "Magistrate of a district" shall be deemed to mean "District Magistrate"; the expression "Magistrate of the district" shall be deemed to mean "District Magistrate"; the expression "Magistrate of Police" shall be deemed to mean "Presidency Magistrate"; and the expression "Joint Sessions Judge" shall mean "Additional Sessions Judge."

Expressions in former Acts.

4. (1) In this Code the following words and expressions have the following meanings unless a different intention appears from the subject or context:—

Definitions.

Section 4 is an interpretation-clause. Its legitimate function is to declare that certain words and expressions used in the Code shall, wherever permissible, not only have the meaning which is generally attached to such words and expressions, but such meaning as is assigned to such words and expressions by the interpretation clause. But by no means it is intended to annex to such words or expressions every incident, which may seem to be attached to them by any other Act of the Legislature—Brooks v. Barwick, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 58 (61), 91 I.C. 99.

- (a) "Advocate-General" includes also a Government Advocate, or, where there is no Advocate-General or Government Advocate, such officer as the Provincial Government may, from time to time, appoint in this behalf:

In this clause the words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

This definition has also been embodied in sec. 2, cl (b) of the Indian Bar Councils Act (Act XXXVIII of 1926). The Advocate-General has pre-audience over all other advocates. He is the ex-officio Chairman of the Bar Councils constituted for the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, at Madras and at Bombay. Vide sections 8 and 4 of the same Act. For the powers and functions of the Advocate-General see sections 194, 333, 495, 526, cl. (4) and 526A of this Code and section 26 of the Letters Patent. See also Note 610A.

- (b) "bailable offence" means an offence shown as bailable in the second schedule, or which is made bailable by any other law for the time being in force; and "non-bailable offence" means any other offence:
- (c) "charge" includes any head of charge when the charge contains more heads than one:

A charge is the precise formulation of the specific accusation made against a person, who is entitled to know its nature at the earliest stage—Reilly v. K-E, 28 Cal. 434 (437) See also Ch XIX of this Code in this connection.

(d) * * * *

- (e) "Clerk of the Crown" includes any officer specially appointed by the Chief Justice to discharge the functions given by this Code to the Clerk of the Crown:

- (f) "cognizable offence" means an offence for, and "cognizable case" means a case in, which a police-officer, within or without the Presidency-towns, may, in accordance with the second schedule, or under any law for the time being in force, arrest without warrant:

12. Cognizable offence:—The words "a Police-officer" in this clause do not mean "any and every Police-officer." That is, an offence is regarded as a cognizable offence, if the offender can be arrested without warrant by certain Police-officers, though not by any and every Police-officer. If the power of arrest without warrant is limited to any particular class of Police-officer, that does not prevent the offence being regarded as a cognizable one—Deodhar, 27 Cal. 144; Abasbhai, 50 Bom 344, 93 I.C. 967, 27 Cr.L.J. 503, 28 Bom L.R. 272, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 195; Maroti v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 95 (97), 1939 N.L.J. 101, 40 Cr.L.J. 905, 184 I.C. 231, I.L.R. 1939 Nag. 488. Thus, under the Gambling Act it is not every Police-officer who can arrest without a warrant. It is only the District Superintendent of Police who can so arrest; but still the offence under that Act will be treated as a cognizable offence—Ibid.

But the power of arrest referred to in this clause must be an unqualified power, and not a conditional power like the one conferred upon the Police by sec. 24, Opium Act, I of 1878, which authorises a Police-officer to arrest without warrant if the accused does not furnish the security required by that section. An offence under sec. 9, Opium Act, is not therefore a cognizable offence—Bahabal v. Tarak Nath, 24 Cal. 691,

The words "under any law for the time being in force" in sec. 4 (f), Cr. P. Code, are wide enough to include an express or implied provision of any law or enactment and would cover the application of the maxim qui facit per alium facit per se (whatever a man may do of himself, he may do by another) and qui per alium facit per seipsum facere videtur (he who does an act through another is deemed in law to do it himself) to any provision of any enactment, in order to arrive at the true intention of the enactment—Ismail Hirji, A I R 1930 Bom. 49 (51), 21 Bom L.R. 1349, 1930 Cr C 113, 54 Bom 146, 31 Cr.L.J. 633. The words "or under any law for the time being in force" in sec. (4) (f), Cr. P. Code, have reference to such offences which are punishable with imprisonment for not less than three years, but are specified as offences for which the Police may arrest without a warrant, that is, offences which but for the special provision would not under the Cr. P. Code be cognizable offences. Examples of cognizable offences of this nature can be found in the Railways Act (IX of 1890), and sec. 131 of that Act is the section which makes these minor offences cognizable. The fact that no proceedings may be instituted for an offence under sec. 19 (f), Arms Act, without the permission of the District Magistrate, does not make the offence non-cognizable—Maganlal Bagdi v. Emp., 35 Cr.L.J. 1097 (1100), 150 I.C. 623, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 71, 1934 Cr.C. 276.

The words "a police-officer may arrest" do not mean every or any police-officer, and that provided one finds that by law a superior police-officer may arrest without a warrant then the offence is a cognizable offence. The words in the definition are "may arrest" and not "does arrest" and that consequently the test is not whether in fact the arrest is effected but whether it may be effected. In other words, the actual fact of arrest is irrelevant to the consideration whether a particular offence is a cognizable offence. The offences under sections 4 and 5 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (Bombay Act IV of 1887) are cognizable offences within the meaning of sec. 4, cl. (f), Cr. P. C.—Emp. v. Abasbhai, 50 Bom 344 (350), 27 Cr.L.J. 503, 93 I.C. 967, 28 Bom L.R. 272, A I R 1926 Bom 195; Q-E v. Deodhar Singh, 27 Cal 144 (150). The correctness of the above view was doubted in Htwan Htin v. Emp., 36 Cr.L.J. 998, 156 I.C. 719, A I R 1935 Rang 181, 13 Rang 130, 1935 Cr.C. 623, where it was held that the offences under secs. 11 and 12 of the Burma Gambling Act (I of 1899) were not cognizable offences either under Cr. P. Code or under the said Act. In Raghunath v. Emp., 33 Cr.L.J. 733, 139 I.C. 281, A I R 1932 Bom. 610, 34 Bom L.R. 901, 1932 Cr.C. 868, the Bombay High Court also held that the offence under sec. 4 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (V of 1887) was a non-cognizable offence. In Maroti v. Emp., A I R 1939 Nag. 95, 1939 N.L.J. 101, 40 Cr.L.J. 905, 181 I.C. 231, I.L.R. 1939 Nag. 488, it was held that an offence under sec. 34 of the Police Act, 1861, was a cognizable offence.

(g) "Commissioner of Police" includes a Deputy Commissioner of Police:

(h) "complaint" means the allegation made orally or in writing to a Magistrate, with a view to his taking action under this Code, that some person, whether known or unknown, has committed an offence, but it does not include the report of a police-officer:

13. Complaint:—Who can make a complaint—The prosecutor in all criminal cases is the crown—Mahadev Lal v. Dhontaj Maistri, 12 C.W.N. 750 (751), 7 C.L.J. 375, 7 Cr.L.J. 342. A crime is an offence against society and has little or nothing to do with the rights in the stolen property of individuals. Government act on behalf of organised societies when enforcing a criminal remedy; when Government themselves stand in the position of a private person whose property has been stolen or embezzled, the exercise of the civil right of property by Government does not preclude the criminal remedy—Emp. v. Sultan Mahmud, A I R. 1939 Lah. 340 (342), I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 119, 41 P.L.R. 432. A complaint need not necessarily be made by the person injured but may be made by any person aware of the offence. The rule is that if a general law is broken any person has a right to complain, whether he himself has suffered any particular injury or not—Ganesh Narayan, 13 Bom. 600 (602); Keshav Lal, 21 Bom. 536; Dedar Bux v. Shyamapada, 41 Cal. 1013, 18 C.W.N. 921, 15 Cr.L.J. 546, 24 I.C. 854; Mahomed Rafiq v. Emp., A.I.R. 1931 Sind 116, 25 S.L.R. 9, 1931 Cr.C. 731, 134 I.C. 1001; Balmukund, 9 Lah. 678, 29 Cr.L.J. 652 (653); Fazand Ali v. Hanuman, 18 All. 465; Sheo Pratap, 1930 A.L.J. 1316, 32 Cr.L.J. 306 (508); Basirulla v. Asadulla, 33 C.W.N. 576 (577), 30 Cr.L.J. 1013; Sathakuttia v. Pichai, 1931 M.W.N. 1316; Quarishi Sahib v. Begum Sahiba, 46 Mad. 88; Emp. v. Ismail Hirji, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 49 (51), 54 Bom. 146, 31 Cr.L.J. 633, 124 I.C. 106; Gajraj v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 56, 159 I.C. 306, A.I.R. 1935 All. 938, 1935 Cr.C. 1184, 1935 A.L.J. 1108. A Magistrate is competent to make a complaint as a common informer—Mehr Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 884 (885), 146 I.C. 387, 35 Cr.L.J. 86, 1933 Cr.C. 1178, 34 P.L.R. 1020. An Assistant Police Prosecutor can make a complaint in his private capacity—Bulomal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 Sind 393, 146 I.C. 1038, 1933 Cr.C. 1433. This general rule is, however, subject to the exceptions mentioned in secs. 195 to 199A, where certain offences are stated to be complainable only by specified persons—Gajraj v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 56, 159 I.C. 306, A.I.R. 1935 All. 938, 1935 Cr.C. 1184, 1935 A.L.J. 1108. See also Note 1236.

It is not necessary under this clause or under section 190 (a) that the person lodging the complaint must have personal knowledge of the facts constituting the offence—Sukumar v. Mofizuddin, 25 C.W.N. 357 (360), 22 Cr.L.J. 455, 61 I.C. 839; Suresh Chandra, 1 P.L.T. 531, 21 Cr.L.J. 346, 55 I.C. 652; Shewak Ram, 7 S.L.R. 77, 15 Cr.L.J. 369 (370); Ganesh, 13 Bom. 600. Therefore, the Public Prosecutor is competent to make a complaint, although he has no personal knowledge of the facts constituting the offence—Shewak (supra). In a case like this it is reasonable that the Court before issuing summons should satisfy itself upon proper materials that a case has been made out for issuing summons—Thakur Prosad v. Emp., 10 C.W.N. 1090, 4 Cr.L.J. 217. See Notes in para. 66 (4).

This section does not prescribe that the complaint should be presented in person by the complainant to the Magistrate, and that it may not be posted to him, or that if it is posted it is not a complaint at all—Chuhermal, 23 S.L.R. 285, 30 Cr.L.J. 732 (733), 117 I.C. 147, A.I.R. 1929 Sind 132, 1929 Cr.C. 160. Thus, a telegram can amount to a complaint in view of the fact that the definition of a complaint includes an allegation made in writing and does not in itself necessitate the presence of the complainant—Hidayatullah v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 Pesh. 66.

Essentials of a complaint—The complaint must allege that an offence has been committed; the use of a house as a brothel is not an offence, and a statement to a Magistrate that a certain person has so used his house is not therefore a complaint—Khari, 6 S.L.R. 254, 14 Cr.L.J. 320. An application for taking action under sec. 107, in which there is no allegation that an offence has been committed, is not a complaint—Md. Yusuf v. Abdul, 52 All. 148, 32 Cr.L.J. 570 (571); Sarfaraiz, 7 C.W.N. 947, 32 Cr.L.J. 570 (571). But if the application for action under sec. 107 alleges facts which amount to a substantive offence, the application would amount to a complaint—Khachho Mal, 27 Cr.L.J. 405 (406), A.I.R. 1926 All. 358. So also, a petition to institute proceedings under sec. 110 (Imam Mandal, 27 Cal. 662; Ahmad Khan, 1900 A.W.N. 206; Muhammad Khan, 1905 P.R. 42) or under sec. 145 (Chathu v. Niranjana, 20 Cal. 729) is not a complaint, because the allegations in support of proceedings under those sections do not amount to an offence. As to what are and what are not offences, see Notes under clause (a), infra.

The complaint must be made to a Magistrate. A Police-officer is not a Magistrate; therefore a petition or information sent to such officer is not a complaint—Ishri v. Bakshi, 6 All. 96; Palanvarappa, 7 Mad. 563; Kailash, 30 Cal. 285; Sutendra v. Rai Mohan, 30 Cal. 690 (F.B.); In re Harilal, 22 Bom. 919. So also, an Agent of the Court of Wards is not a Magistrate—Jogobundhoo, 30 Cal. 415. But a Deputy Commissioner is an ex-officio District Magistrate and a petition addressed to him would amount to a complaint—Shanker v. Manni, 13 N.L.R. 13, 18 Cr.L.J. 459 (460).

The complaint must be made to a Magistrate with a view to his taking action under this Code. A petition alleging that an offence has been committed, but that the petitioner does not desire to prosecute the wrong-doer is not a complaint—Bhawan Singh v. Haluman, 6 C.W.N. 926. A mere statement to a Magistrate by way of information without any intention of asking him to take action is not a complaint—Haider Raja, 36 All. 222; Ahmed Husain, 17 C.W.N. 980, 14 Cr.L.J. 462; Bansi Lal, 12 C.W.N. 438; Rayan Kuti, 26 Mad. 640. So also, a petition sent by a husband to a Magistrate not with a view to his taking action thereon, but to recover the jewels alleged to have been stolen by his wife, is not a complaint—In re Rukmani, 16 Cr.L.J. 466 (Mad). A petition making charges against a person and asking for an order of the Police to warn that person in the first instance is not a complaint—Purno v. Hurish, 15 C.W.N. 1051, 12 Cr.L.J. 535. A letter written by the Assistant Collector to the District Magistrate in which the former did not ask that any action should be taken by the Magistrate nor intended that the Magistrate should proceed according to law against the person complained against, but merely 'solicited for orders' (i.e., asked for directions as to how he should proceed) did not amount to a complaint—Sheosampat, 40 All. 641, 19 Cr.L.J. 963. A petition addressed to a Magistrate containing an allegation that an offence has been committed, not with the view that the Magistrate should punish the offender, but merely with a view to illustrate the kind of conduct (e.g., oppression of tenants by Zemindar, demand of illegal payments) which the offender was following, and against which the petition is seeking protection, asking the Magistrate in his executive, (rather than judicial) capacity to make inquiry and protect the petitioner against a repetition of such conduct, does not amount to a complaint—Bharat Kishore v. Judhistir, 9 Pat. 707, AIR 1929 Pat. 473, 10 P.L.T. 779, 30 Cr.L.J. 1056 (1058) (F.B.). A statement made to a Magistrate with the object of inducing him to take action not under this Code, but under sec. 6 of the Bombay Gambling Act IV of 1887 is not a complaint within the meaning of this section—Hotu, 8 S.L.R. 66, 15 Cr.L.J. 657.

It cannot be laid down that in no circumstances can a telegram amount to a complaint because a person who sends a telegram cannot be at once examined in accordance with the provisions of sec. 200 Cr.P.C. In view of the fact that the definition of a complaint includes "an allegation made in writing" and does not in itself necessitate the presence of the complainant, such a contention cannot be acceptable. In order to render an allegation a complaint, it must be made 'with a view to a Magistrate taking action under the Criminal Procedure Code'. When there was no prayer in the telegram asking the addressee to take such action and in the absence of such a prayer, there must be clear proof that this was the petitioner's intention before it can be held that he submitted a complaint—Hidayatullah v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 604 (606), 162 I.C. 140, AIR 1936 Pesh. 66, 1936 Cr.C. 222, 8 R.Pesh. 189.

Although it is of the essence of a complaint that the accusation must be made with a view to action being taken under this Code, still an express request to that effect is not necessary. Whether the statement was made with a view to action being taken upon it as upon a complaint, must be determined in the light of the circumstances—Bansi Pande, 12 P.L.T. 109, 32 Cr.L.J. 210 (213), AIR 1930 Pat. 550, 1930 Cr.C. 1094.

A complaint need not set out all the facts on which the accused is to be charged—Chidambaram, 32 Mad. 3 (11); but it must contain a statement of the facts relied on as constituting the offence in ordinary and concise language with as much certainty as the nature of the case will admit. A complaint in which no facts are set out but only the words of the section of the Statute are literally copied, is a colourable compliance with the requirements of the law—Pulin Behari Das, 16 C.W.N. 1105, 13 Cr.L.J. 609; Sukumar v. Mofizuddin, 25 C.W.N. 357 (360), 22 Cr.L.J. 455.

It is not necessary that the complaint should specifically, and in terms, accuse any particular person of an offence. It is sufficient if it contains a statement of facts which would constitute an offence—Jagat Chandra, 26 Cal. 786 (789). The mention of the name of the accused is not imperatively required under the definition given in this clause—Shukhadava v. Hamid, 7 Pat. 561, 10 P.L.T. 14, 29 Cr.L.J. 942 (944), 111 I.C. 862, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 585; Baldeo Prasad v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 297 (300), 12 Pat. 758, 14 P.L.T. 330, 1933 Cr.C. 789, 145 I.C. 382, 34 Cr.L.J. 942. A Magistrate can take cognizance of offences against accused who are not named in the petition of complaint but are disclosed by the prosecution evidence—Dedar Buksh v. Symapada, 41 Cal. 1013, 18 C.W.N. 921, 15 Cr.L.J. 546, 24 I.C. 954. See also Charu v. Nagendra, 4 C.W.N. 367, where cognizance was taken on police report.

The complaint need not quote any section of the Indian Penal Code, but must contain a statement of the facts relied on as constituting the offence, and it is for the Magistrate to determine on these facts what offence has prima facie been committed, the nature of the charge will be determined by him. All that is necessary for him to see is that the enquiry into the charge is within his competency, and that, in the case of certain offences, the complaint has been made by the proper person—Mst. Naurati v. The Crown, 6 Lah. 375 (378), A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 631. See also Baldeo Prasad v. Emp. supra.

A complaint, as defined in sec. 4 (h) need not in fact specify any offender or even the section of the law which makes the act or omission punishable; and cognizance is taken under sec. 190 (1) (a) upon receiving a complaint, while charges are framed on the evidence before the trial Court. The evidence may, and not infrequently, does disclose offences other than those originally mentioned or implied, but it cannot be said that cognizance is taken of such new offences under cl. (c), sub-sec. (1), sec. 190, for the double reason that the stage for the application of the sub-section itself is long past and the clause can have no application to the evidence produced in the case. Similar observations apply to cases in which cognizance has been initially taken under cl. (b), upon a police-officer's written report of facts constituting offences. It has in fact been repeatedly held that when a Magistrate has taken cognizance of an offence upon a complaint or upon a police report, any offence that may be disclosed by the evidence may be dealt with at the trial; and that sec. 190 (1) (c) and sec. 191 have no application in such circumstances—Baldeo Prasad v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 297 (300), 14 P.L.T. 330, 1933 Cr.C. 789, 145 I.C. 382, 34 Cr.L.J. 942, 12 Pat. 758. It would not be right to say that merely because the complainant, whether in ignorance or inadvertence, mentions the wrong Act or mentions the wrong section, thereby it must be said that there is no complaint within the meaning of sec. 200, Cr. P. Code. It is true that if such errors occur in the complaint, care must be taken at the proper time to see that the accused is in no way prejudiced. But if the facts are such as to disclose an offence under a particular section, under a particular Act, then existing, then whatever errors there may be in the complaint as regards the number or name of the Act or section, the Magistrate should take cognizance of the complaint for what in substance it is, and although the Magistrate repeats in the summons the mistake that occurred in the complaint itself, that mistake is a mistake which can thereafter be rectified—Lilaram Ladakmal v. Wadhmal Assudomal, 40 Cr.L.J. 122 (124), 178 I.C. 648, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 209.

There is no provision in the Cr. P. Code that there should be a list of witnesses along with the complaint—Banka Lal v. Maiku, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 430 (431), 146 I.C. 638, 10 O.W.N. 1033, 1933 Cr.C. 1315, 35 Cr.L.J. 121. But in practice such an omission is viewed with suspicion.

Value of complaint:—To lodge a complaint is not to give evidence upon which a Court can act. The complaint is in the nature of an indictment. Therefore, averments in a complaint must be established and properly proved by evidence and the matter must not be dealt with as if the complaint is something in the nature of a deposition. The complaint cannot be treated as if it had the sanctity of affidavit-evidence. Before any one can be convicted on charges formulated in a complaint all the charges must be fully and properly proved in accordance with the procedure and the law of evidence applicable to criminal charges—Cotton v. Emp., 35 Cr.L.J. 996 (998), 149 I.C. 450, 1934 Cr.C. 861, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 604.

Limitation :—Rules of limitation are foreign to the administration of criminal justice, and it is only by specific legislation that periods of limitation can be rendered applicable to criminal proceedings—Q-E. v. Ajudhia Singh, 10 All 350 (352). The principles on which rules of limitation are framed have no natural application to prosecutions which are, in theory at least, instituted by the Crown. For the greater protection of subjects certain periods are laid down in special laws for prosecutions to be instituted under them—Q-E. v. Nagesappa, 20 Bom 543 (547). Delay in lodging complaint, however, raises a suspicion as to its truth unless the delay is sufficiently explained.

A prosecution launched after an inordinate delay (of about 4 years) rouses suspicion in one's mind that this has been done to serve some other end, either of the complainant or of others who are interested in disgracing the accused—Kali Prasad Singh v. Sirikrishun, 39 Cr.L.J. 774, 176 I.C. 725, 4 B.R. 755, 11 R.P. 98, A.I.R. 1938 Pat 543.

Court-fees :—For Court-fees payable on a petition of complaint see Sch II, Art. (1), cl. (b) of the Court Fees Act (Act VII of 1870).

A complaint of a public servant (as defined in the Indian Penal Code), a municipal officer or an officer or servant of Railway Company is not chargeable with any Court-fee. Vide, sec 19, cl. (xviii) of the Court-fees Act, 1870 (Act VII of 1870).

13A. Joint Complaint :—A joint complaint by two or more persons is not contemplated by the Code. Sec 200 makes this clear, because in taking cognizance of an offence upon complaint, the Magistrate must at once examine the complainant upon oath, and it is obvious that if there are two or more complainants on the same complaint, it is physically impossible to fulfil the provisions of that section. The proper procedure is for each complainant to file a separate complaint—Sasadhar v. Tegart, 35 CWN 782 (785), 1931 Cr.C. 846, 33 Cr.L.J. 83, 134 I.C. 1189, A.I.R. 1931 Cal 646. A written complaint signed by two persons is not contemplated by the Code of Criminal Procedure. But, however, invalid it is in form, it is a petition of complaint. In such a case the Magistrate has jurisdiction to examine one of them and proceed to issue process on that examination. Should it be necessary to proceed afterwards on the complaint of the second signatory, there is no bar to such action being taken—Uzal Khan v. Purna Chandra, 43 CWN. 527.

14. Instances of complaint :—The following has been held to be complaints—

(1) the petition of a complainant who has withdrawn his case and again asks to be allowed to proceed with the same—Sarat Chandra v. Aghore Nath, 4 CWN ccxxi ;

(2) the presentation of a petition by the complainant that his complaint should be inquired into—Lalji Gope v. Giridhari, 5 CWN. 106 ;

(3) a petition impugning the correctness of a police report and praying for a trial of the accused—Jogendra Nath, 33 Cal. 1, 10 CWN 158, 2 Cr.L.J. 615 ; Lalji Singh v. Pardip Singh, 18 Cr.L.J. 754 (Pat) ; Ramdhari v. Emp., 29 Cr.L.J. 660, 110 I.C. 212, 9 P.L.T. 236 ; Q-E. v. Sham Lal, 14 Cal. 707 (F.B.) ; Gangadhar v. Emp., 43 Cal. 173 ; so also, a petition impugning the police enquiry and asking the Magistrate to call for a charge-sheet or to give opportunity to the petitioner to prove his case by witnesses present—Shukhadev v. Hamid, 7 Pat. 561, 29 Cr.L.J. 942 (944), 111 I.C. 862, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 585, 10 P.L.T. 14. But where all that the petitioner did was to show cause against his prosecution and he asserted that the case was a true one and that he was perfectly innocent and he never made a complaint against anybody or asked the Magistrate to investigate it, held that there was no complaint—Jamini Kanta v. Bhabanath, 43 C.W.N. 279. Where no order was passed on such a petition, which is a complaint, it must be regarded as being still pending—Hamed v. Abdul, 31 Cr.L.J. 462, 123 I.C. 11, 1929 M.W.N. 503, A.I.R. 1929 Mad 849.

(4) a letter to the Magistrate conveying the information of an offence and asking the Magistrate to take action—Khetra Mohan, 17 C.W.N. 448, 14 Cr.L.J. 76 ; Chhotey, 1 O.W.N. 108, 25 Cr.L.J. 1147 ;

(5) the submission of a record, by an Assistant Magistrate trying a rent-suit, .

the Collector, who was also the District Magistrate, for starting a case under sec. 193, I P. C. against the plaintiff in the rent-suit—Sundar Sarup, 26 All. 514 ;

(6) a Yadast sent by a Revenue Officer to a Magistrate charging a certain person with having disobeyed a summons issued by him—Monu, 11 Mad. 443 ;

(7) an application by a complainant to have his witness summoned, coupled with his oral allegations, although not on oath nor reduced to writing—Apurba Krishna, 35 Cal. 141 ;

(8) proceedings of a Court under sec. 476, Cr. P. C., sending a person to the nearest first-class Magistrate—Rachappa, 13 Bom. 109; Narakka, 13 Mad. 144; Iskri Prosad v. Sham Lal, 7 All. 781; Arjan, 31 Cal. 664; Eranpoli Athan, 26 Mad. 98; In re Lakshmidas, 32 Bom. 184.

(9) a communication by a Revenue Court to the District Magistrate that certain documents tendered in evidence before it were forgeries and that such action might be taken as the Magistrate might deem fit—Inder Bhan, 105 P.L.R. 1905, 30 P.R. 1905.

(10) a 'committal sheet' signed by a Superintendent of the Salt Department and sent to the Magistrate (in accordance with departmental rules) and containing inter alia a definite request to the Magistrate to summon certain witnesses and to try the accused for the offences set out in the sheet—Phagun Sahu, 1 P.L.J. 592, 18 Cr.L.J. 366 ;

(11) where A charged B with house-breaking, and B lodged an information against A for theft of his gun, but the Police reported B's case to be false, whereupon B filed a petition of objection asking the Magistrate to make an investigation and to summon the accused, held that the petition of objection filed by B was a 'complaint'—Sadhu Charan v. Balai Swain, 3 P.L.J. 346, 19 Cr.L.J. 874 ;

(12) where in the course of an insolvency proceeding the District Judge found that certain transfers made by the insolvent were fraudulent, and the Judge made a report to the District Magistrate asking him to prosecute the transferees, held that the report was a complaint—Mahadeo, 18 A.L.J. 50, 21 Cr.L.J. 56 ;

(13) where a Magistrate sent a report to the District Magistrate that a certain person had made an alteration in a document filed in his Court and had committed an offence under sec. 477, I. P. C., held that the report amounted to a complaint—Suraj Prasad v. Emp., 21 A.L.J. 825, 25 Cr.L.J. 947, A.I.R. 1924 All. 190 ;

(14) where a petition was filed before a Sub-divisional Magistrate alleging that the accused caused a false entry to be made in a Death Register for their future benefit and praying for an enquiry into the matter and for their prosecution, held that the petition was a complaint—Raghunandan Lal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 156, 15 P.L.T. 17.

(15) where a person sent an application to the Hon'ble Premier against police charging them of offences under secs. 161, 347 and 323 I. P. C., and the Hon'ble Premier sent the application to the District Magistrate who forwarded it to the Sub-divisional Magistrate with the order "Please send for the applicant and ask him to make a statement on oath ; if he does so, send on" And the Sub-divisional Magistrate sent for the applicant and took his statement on oath wherein he reiterated what he had said in his application to the Hon'ble Premier, held that the statement on oath came under the words "upon information given to a Magistrate" in sec. 250 Cr. P. C., and was a complaint—Gajadhar v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 101, 1939 O.W.N. 125, 1939 O.L.R. 73, 179 I.C. 758, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 43, 11 R.O. 203, 1939 A Cr.C. 26, 1939 O.A. 181.

(16) a charge-sheet filed by the police under sec. 379, I. P. C., setting out facts which constitute the offence under sec. 163, cl. (a) (2), Madras Local Boards Act, would amount a complaint of the offence under the latter section—Muthuswamy Pillai, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 839, 1939 M.W.N. 615, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 39, 1939 M. Cr. C. 190, 41 Cr.L.J. 20, 184 I.C. 471.

(17) a petition to the Magistrate in which a person accused others of having suppressed the finding of treasure trove—Govindaraja Pillai v. Vanchinatham Pillai, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 492, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 561, 184 I.C. 485, 12 R.M. 455, 1939 M.W.N. 318, 49 M.L.W. 540,

15. What are not complaints:—

- (1) statements made in a deposition—Imamkhan, 14 Bom L.R. 141, 13 Cr L.J. 287 ;
- (2) a letter merely conveying a sanction of the Local Government under sec. 196 authorising the prosecution—Shamal Khan, 1890 P.R. 16 ;
- (3) an application for issue of process—Lalit Mohan, 38 Cal 559, 15 C.W.N. 98 ;
- (4) a petition for maintenance under sec. 488 of this Code—Sardaran v. Amir Khan, 29 P.R. 1905 ; Hildephonsus v. Malone, 13 P.R. 1885 ; Mehr Khan v. Bakhat, 10 Lah 406, 29 Cr.L.J. 1002 (1003) ; Tokee Bibi v. Abdul Khan, 5 Cal 536 ; Nur Mahomed v. Bismulla, 16 Cal 781 ; Venkata v. Paramma, 11 Mad 199 ; Rozario v. Ingles, 18 Bom 468 ;
- (5) an application under sec. 107, Cr. P. C.—Md. Yusuf, A.I.R. 1931 All. 53, 1930 A.L.J. 1475, 130 I.C. 630, 32 Cr.L.J. 570, 1931 Cr.C. 125, 53 All 148
- (6) an application asking that a woman should be set at liberty as not a criminal complaint but an application under sec. 552 Cr. P. C.—Dalpat Rai v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 857, 163 I.C. 209, A.I.R. 1936 All. 469, 1936 A.L.J. 592, 1936 Cr.C. 614.

16. Report of a Police Officer:—In K E v Sada, 26 Bom. 150 (157), 3 Bom L.R. 586, it was held that although the word 'report' was not defined in the Code, still the Legislature studiously attached to the expression "Police report" a peculiar meaning whenever that expression occurred, that the words "report of a Police officer" in section (4) (h) and the "Police report" in sections 157, 173 and 190 (b) were confined to reports in cognizable cases only, and that if the Police officer went beyond his duties and made of his own motion a report of an information of a non-cognizable case (e.g., if he laid an information of a non-cognizable offence under sec. 51 of the Bombay District Police Act) it was not a report but an information or rather a 'complaint' within the meaning of section (4) (h). This view was also taken in Chidambaram, 32 Mad 3 (10) ; Ghulam, 6 Lah L.J. 606, 25 Cr L.J. 1361, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 237 ; Harhar, 23 C.W.N. 481, and Khushaldas, 6 S.L.R. 82. The Select Committee of 1916, after considering the above Bombay case, changed the words "Police report" in section 190 (b) into the words "report in writing made by a Police Officer" remarking that the term "police report" in section 190 was not intended to be a technical expression, but was used to cover any report made by a police officer. But the Legislature has not made any amendment in section 4 (h), and hence the words "report of a police officer" in clause 4 (h) should be interpreted to mean only the report of a Police officer in a cognizable case ; but any information of a non-cognizable offence which a Police-officer may report to a Magistrate would fall within the definition of a complaint. Thus, the Bombay High Court holds that the 'report of a police officer' in sec. 4 (h) means a report which a police-officer is authorised to make under sec. 173, and does not include the report of a police-officer in a non-cognizable case. A report of the latter kind amounts to a complaint—Shivaswami, 51 Bom 498, 29 Bom L.R. 742, A.I.R. 1927 Bom 440 (442), 28 Cr.L.J. 939. See also Radhika v. Hamid Ali, 54 Cal 371, 28 Cr.L.J. 316, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 405 ; Shanker Lal v. Emp., 28 Cr.L.J. 821, 104 I.C. 437, 9 Lah 280, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 702, 29 P.L.R. 469 ; Mallikarjuna Prasadao v. Emp., 1933 M.W.N. 876. But a contrary opinion has been expressed by Sir J. G. Woodroffe, who observes : "A police report in a non-cognizable case was treated either as a complaint under sec. 4, cl (h) or as a police report under sec. 190 (1)(b). But now sec. 190, cl (b) has been amended so as to include any report whether in cognizable or non-cognizable cases and therefore the term 'complaint' will exclude both"—Woodroffe's Criminal Procedure, p. 12. This view finds support in—Public Prosecutor v. Ratnaidu, 49 Mad. 525 (535), 27 Cr.L.J. 1031, A.I.R. 1926 Mad 865 (F.B.), where Spencer, J., observed : "Mr. Justice Waller was averse to putting a narrow construction on the word 'report' in sec. 190 (1)(b) as including only reports of cognizable offences. We consider the latter view to be more correct" and in many other cases. For a detailed discussion on the point see Note 582 under sec. 190.

When a police officer investigates a non-cognizable case under the orders of a Magistrate, the report which he makes, at the end of his investigation is of same nature as a report made under sec. 157, and such a report being a police report is not a "complaint," though if a police officer acting without instructions from a Magistrate reports a non-cognizable offence to a Magistrate with a view to the Magistrate taking action, this is a complaint—Jagdeo Pandey v. N. C. Hill, 39 Cr.L.J. 776, 176 I.C. 694, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 257, 1938 Rang.L.R. 150, 11 R.R. 74.

The report of an Excise officer (e.g., Sub-Inspector of Excise and Salt) under sec. 74 (4) of the Excise Act is not a report of a Police officer for the purpose of sec. 4 (h), but is a complaint, in as much as it is an allegation, made to a Magistrate in writing with a view to his taking action under the Code, that some person has committed an offence. The report of the Excise officer is deemed to be a report of a police officer only for the purpose of sec. 190 (1) (b), according to the express words of sec. 74 (4) of the Excise Act—Radhika v. Hamid Ali, 54 Cal. 371, 28 Cr.L.J. 316.

If, however, a report is made by a Police officer investigating a non-cognizable case, under the orders of a Magistrate having power to try the case, the report falls within the duty of the Police officer, and it is a report, not a complaint—Sarfaraz, 11 A.L.J. 332.

(i) "European British subject" means—

- (i) any subject of His Majesty of European descent in the male line, born, naturalized or domiciled in the British Islands or any colony, or
- (ii) any subject of His Majesty who is the child or grand-child of any such person by legitimate descent:

17. Change:—This clause has been amended by sec. 2 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923 (popularly known as the 'Racial Distinctions Act'). Prior to the present amendment, the definition stood as follows:—"European British subject means (i) any subject of Her Majesty born, naturalised or domiciled in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland or in any of the European, American or Australian Colonies or possessions of Her Majesty or in the Colony of New Zealand or in the Colony of the Cape of Good Hope or Natal; (ii) any child or grand-child of such person by legitimate descent."

Under the old definition the place of birth was the determining factor. "European" meant "born" in Europe. Should a Madras Ayah be taken to London and there give birth to an illegitimate son conceived of a pariah, that son would have been an European British subject. Now, however, this is not so, for the subject must be of European descent—Woodroffe, p. 12. "The present amendment has narrowed the definition, so that the number of persons who will be entitled to the privileges conferred by this Code on European British subjects will now be reduced by reason of the fact that they will only be claimable by persons of European descent in the male line"—Statement of Objects and Reasons, para. 9, of the Criminal Amendment Bill.

In order to sustain the plea of a British-born subject under clauses (i) and (ii), not only the legitimate descent of the accused, but also the nationality of his father or grandfather, as the case may be, must be proved to the satisfaction of the Court—Turnbull, 6 M.H.C.R. 7.

The words "born, naturalized or domiciled" should not be interpreted as "born, naturalized and domiciled"; in other words, it is not necessary that the applicant, in order to come under the definition of an European British subject, should, besides an European British subject by birth, also be domiciled at the time in the British Islands or any colony. Therefore, an European British woman who marries a native British Indian husband or an Indian subject of a Native State does not cease to be an European British subject either by reason of her marriage or because of her domicile in the Native State—In re Bai Asha, 53 Bom. 149, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 81 (85), 31 Bom.L.R. 62, 30 Cr.L.J. 772.

See sections 29A, 34A and Chapters XXXIII and XLIV-A which deal with provisions relating to trial of European British subjects.

- (j) "High Court" means, in reference to proceedings against European British subjects, or persons jointly charged with European British subjects, the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, Patna, Lahore * * * and Nagpur, the Chief Court of Oudh and the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind; in other cases "High Court" means the highest Court of criminal appeal or revision for any local area; or, where no such Court is established under any law for the time being in force, such officer as the Provincial Government may appoint in this behalf:

18. Change:—The words "and the Court of the Provinces" in this clause have been added by sec. 2 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XII of 1923). Before this Amendment, it was held that a Judicial Commissioner's Court could exercise its revisional powers over an European British subject only when the latter waived his privileges under Chapter XXXIII (old) of the Code (Grant, 12 Bom 561); otherwise he was under the revisional jurisdiction of the Bombay High Court. See also Jeremiah v. Johnson, 45 M.L.J. 800, A.I.R. 1924 Mad 373, 25 Cr.L.J. 231, 1924 M.W.N. 60, 33 M.L.T. 194, 76 IC 695 (following 12 Bom. 561). These cases are no longer of any authority. Under the present law a Judicial Commissioner's Court (at Nagpur) will exercise its revisional jurisdiction over an European British subject under all circumstances in the same way as it will over an Indian accused.

The words "the Chief Court of Oudh" have been added by the Oudh Courts Act (XXXII of 1925), and the Sind Courts Act, 1926.

The words "Lahore, Rangoon and Nagpur, the Chief Court of Oudh and the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind" have been substituted in place of the words "Lahore and Rangoon, the Chief Court of Oudh and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of the Central Provinces and Sind" in this clause by the Central Provinces Court (Supplementary) Act, 1935 (Act VIII of 1935) consequent on the establishment of the High Court of Judicature at Nagpur.

In this clause the word "Rangoon" has been omitted and the words "Provincial Government" have been substituted in place of "Governor-General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Under the Sonthal Parganas Justice Regulation, 1893, the 'High Court' for the purpose of hearing an appeal against an acquittal under sec 417 would be the High Court of Patna; but for the purpose of hearing an application for revision under sec 439 against an order of acquittal, the Commissioner of the Bhagalpur Division would be deemed a 'High Court'.—Anwar Ali v. Chairman, Deoghar Municipality, 6 Pat 83, 28 Cr.L.J. 80, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 449, 99 IC 112, 8 P.L.T. 271.

Section 219 (1) of the Government of India Act, 1935, which enumerates the Courts which shall in relation to British India be deemed to be High Courts for the purposes of that Act, runs as follows:—

The following Courts shall in relation to British India be deemed to be High Courts for the purposes of this Act, that is to say, the High Courts in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, Lahore and Patna, the Chief Court in Oudh, the Judicial Commissioner's Courts in the Central Provinces and Bihar, in the North-West Frontier Province and in Sind, any other Court in British India constituted or reconstituted under this Chapter as a High Court, and any other comparable Court in British India which His Majesty in Council may declare to be a High Court for the purposes of this Act:

Provided that, if provision has been made before the commencement of Part III of this Act for the establishment of a High Court to replace any Court or Courts mentioned in this sub-section, then as from the establishment of the new Court this section shall have effect as if the new Court were mentioned therein in lieu of the Court or Courts so replaced.

High Court, Original Side.—A single Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court is not a High Court within the meaning of this Code—Kalikinkar v. Dinabandhu, 32 Cal 379; Harendra, 51 Cal 980 (1982), 29 C.W.N. 384; Sukumar v. Emp., A.I.R. 1932 Cal 867, 59 Cal. 1218, 34 Cr.L.J. 107, 140 I.C. 873, 1932 Cr.C. 891.

The internal arrangements of the High Court are dealt with by its Rules and the Code does not decide what functions can be exercised by a single Judge or must be exercised by a Division Bench. It deals with the High Court as one and the definitions of High Court are not intended to do more than to point to the Court itself so as to distinguish it from other Courts—Girish Chunder, 34 C.W.N. 13 (28), 50 C.L.J. 408, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 756, 1929 Cr.C. 468 (F.B.).

Proceedings against European British Subjects.—These words in sec. 4 (j), Cr. P. C., mean proceedings against persons who had claimed to be dealt with as European British subjects, and that was the intention of the Legislature; for otherwise the result would be that the definition in sec. 4 (j) would nullify the effect of the substantive provision in sec. 528B, Cr. P. C.—H. B. Babington, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 14 (16), 1936 M.W.N. 1091, 44 M.L.W. 755, 71 M.L.J. 827, 1936 M.Cr.C. 386, 167 I.C. 160, 38 Cr.L.J. 336, 1 I.L.R. 1937 Mad 339. See also Notes under sec. 528B.

(k) "inquiry" includes every inquiry other than a trial conducted under this Code by a Magistrate or Court:

19. Clause (k)—Inquiry.—The word 'inquiry' is meant to include everything done in a case by a Magistrate, whether the case has been challanned or not—Bhallun Singh, 1897 P.R. 3. A proceeding under Chapter XII is an inquiry—Lalit Mohun v. Suryakanta, 28 Cal 709, 5 C.W.N. 749; Satish v. Rajendra, 22 Cal 898; Ali Mahomed v. Tarak Chandra, 13 C.W.N. 420, 1 I.C. 336, 9 Cr.L.J. 278. A "register case" or a preliminary inquiry into an accusation of an offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session is an inquiry and not a trial—Palanlandy, 32 Mad. 218. A proceeding under sec. 176 is an inquiry—In re Laxminarayan, 30 Bom.L.R. 1050, 29 Cr.L.J. 1063 (1066).

The word "inquiry" relates to proceedings of Magistrates prior to trial, whereas "investigation" is a word confined to proceedings of police or persons other than Magistrates—Pedda, 45 Mad. 230 (233).

The term is not confined to proceedings in which an accused is placed before a Magistrate charged with an offence. Under sec. 159, Cr. P. C., a Magistrate may make a preliminary inquiry in order to ascertain whether an offence has been committed and if so whether any persons should be put upon their trial. It is difficult to see how it can be said that if a Magistrate is instituting an enquiry under sec. 159 into an offence, that offence is not under enquiry—Motilal Hirralal, 46 Bom. 61 (66), 22 Cr.L.J. 728. But it is difficult to hold that such inquiry is included within the meaning of the word as used in sec. 337, Cr. P. C.—Ibid.

Trial.—The words "try" and "trial" have no fixed or universal meaning, but they are words which must be construed with regard to the particular context in which they are used and with regard to the scheme and purpose of the measure concerned—Jiban v. Emp., 31 Cr.L.J. 684, 144 I.C. 90, 37 C.W.N. 906, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 551, 1933 Cr.C. 911. The word 'trial' is not defined in the Code. It means according to Wharton's Law Lexicon, "the examination of a case, civil or criminal, before a Judge who has jurisdiction over it, according to the laws of the land"—In re Ramaswami, 27 Mad. 510. In the Oxford Dictionary the meanings of the word given under the heading 'Law' are: 1. The examination and determination of a cause by a judicial tribunal; determination of the guilt or innocence of an accused by a Court. 2. The determination of a person's guilt or innocence, or the righteousness of his case by a combat between the accuser and the accused, etc. It is this idea of the determination of the guilt or innocence of the person who is tried that forms the fundamental conception of the trial that is held in respect of him. When, therefore, some competent authority directs that an accused person shall be tried, the trial that is to take place can end only in one or other of the recognised forms in which the trial can terminate: under the Code of Criminal Procedure such forms are,—conviction, acquittal, discharge, i.e., finding him guilty or not guilty or finding that there is no case against him or that the charge is groundless—Harihar Sinha v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 356 (363), 40 C.W.N. 876, 163 I.C. 9, 1936 Cr.C. 583, 37 Cr.L.J. 758, 63 C.L.J. 307. It means, the proceeding which commences when the case is called on with the Magistrate on the Bench and the accused on the dock, and the representatives for the prosecution and the accused are present in Court for the hearing of the case—Gomer Sirda, 25 Cal. 863 (865), 2 C.W.N. 465. Under the definition of "enquiry" under sec 4 (k), combined with sec 252, the inquiry of the case was not deferred till such time as the Magistrate would begin to record evidence, but commenced, not indeed with the lodging of the complaint or even with the issue of process, but with their appearance on such process before the Magistrate to answer the charges—Pandurang v. Emp., 32 Cr.L.J. 1161, 134 I.C. 361, 33 Bom L.R. 668, A.I.R. 1931 Bom 411, 1931 Cr.C. 726. It refers only to trial for offences, and not to miscellaneous matters such as those coming within sec. 145—Suffaruddin v. Ibrahim, 3 Cal 754; Satish v. Rajendra, 22 Cal. 898 (901). A trial is a judicial proceeding which ends in conviction or acquittal. All other proceedings are mere enquiries which may have various endings according to circumstances—Hema Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1929 Pat 644 (646), 9 Pat. 155, 1929 Cr.C. 372; Haridas v. Saritulla, 15 Cal 608 (F.B.). Arguments are part of the trial which must be held to include the judgment also—Neamat Sha v. Hanuman Buksha, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 626 (632), 36 C.W.N. 1112, 1931 Cr.C. 810, 134 I.C. 1057, 33 Cr.L.J. 31, 55 C.L.J. 34, 59 Cal. 478. But see Public Prosecutor v Chockalinga, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 201 (202), 118 I.C. 274, 30 Cr.L.J. 908, 52 Mad. 355, where it has been held that the trial, as that word used in the Code, is over before the judgment is pronounced and that the pronouncing of judgment is no part of the trial. The Allahabad High Court has also held that 'trial' does not include judgment—Bakshi Ram v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 345 (347), 173 I.C. 663, A.I.R. 1938 All 102, 1937 A.L.J. 1152, 1937 A.W.R. (H.C.) 1147. The word 'trial' as used in sec. 497 includes appeal—Madhub Chunder v. Novodeep, 16 Cal 121. A proceeding under sec. 107 is a trial—In re Ramaswami, 27 Mad. 501; Venkatachinnaya, 43 Mad. 511 (F.B.), 21 Cr.L.J. 402. For contra see Binode v. Emp., 50 Cal 985 (989), 25 Cr.L.J. 1085, 81 I.C. 909, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 392.

The proceedings in revision must be treated as a subsequent stage of the case—Jeremiah v. Johnson, A.I.R. 1924 Mad 373, 76 I.C. 695, 25 Cr.L.J. 231, 45 M.L.J. 800; Grant, 12 Bom. 561; In re H B Babington, A.I.R. 1937 Mad 14 (15), 1936 M.W.N. 1091, 44 M.L.W. 755, 71 M.L.J. 827, 1936 M.Cr.C. 386, 167 I.C. 160, 38 Cr.L.J. 336, 11 L.R. 1937 Mad 339. For contra see Harris v. Peal, A.I.R. 1920 All. 351, 58 I.C. 351, 21 Cr.L.J. 767, 17 A.L.J. 896 and H. C. Bolton v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 Cal 240 (241). 1933 Cr.C. 325, 143 I.C. 892, 34 Cr.L.J. 671, 60 Cal. 676.

Trial, when begins:—In a case triable exclusively by a Court of Session, the trial begins only after the charge is framed—Palaniandy v. Emp., 32 Mad. 218. So also, in a warrant case, the trial commences when the accused is called upon to plead to a charge, and until a charge has been framed, there is no trial but only an inquiry—Manna, 9 N.L.R. 42, 14 Cr.L.J. 230 (231); Sreeramulu v. Veerasalingam, 38 Mad. 585, 15 Cr.L.J. 673; Narayanadaswami, 32 Mad. 220 (224, 234) (F.B.); Haridas v. Saritulla, 15 Cal. 608 (F.B.); Painda v. Gulab Khatun, 40 Cr.L.J. 515, 181 I.C. 49, 11 L.R. 1938 Lah 619, 41 P.L.R. 221, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 122. In a summons case, however, as it is not necessary to frame a formal charge, the trial may be said to commence when the accused is brought or appears before the Magistrate.

- (l) "investigation" includes all the proceedings under the Code for the collection of evidence conducted by a police officer or by any person (other than a Magistrate) who is authorized by a Magistrate in this behalf:

20. Clause (1)—Investigation:—A Police Inspector who got information that certain persons were carrying on a wagering business, and having satisfied himself, obtained a warrant and effected the arrest of the accused and the seizure of books, articles of gaming, etc., was held to have taken part in the 'investigation' of the case—Tribhovan Das, 26 Bom 533.

An inquiry relates to a proceeding held by a Court or a Magistrate while an investigation relates to the steps taken by a police officer or a person other than a Magistrate—K Hoshide v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 82 (86), A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 97; 41 Cr.L.J. 329, 186 I.C. 486

Investigation by the Calcutta Police or the Custom authorities in the nature of a search for evidence is not even "investigation" as defined in the Code, not being a proceeding under the Code—K. Hoshide v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 82 (90), A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 97, following In re Mahomed Tahir, 36 Bom L.R. 96.

"Criminal Proceedings" in sec 211 I. P. C. include the investigation by a police officer—Emp. v. Johri, A.I.R. 1931 All. 269 (271), 1931 A.L.J. 177, 1931 Cr. C. 429, 33 Cr.L.J. 256, 136 I.C. 277.

See also Asandas v. Khanchand, A.I.R. 1933 S'nd 240 (243), 1933 Cr.C. 800.

- (m) "judicial proceeding" includes any proceeding in the course of which evidence is or may be legally taken on oath:

21. Clause (m)—Judicial Proceedings, what are?—This definition is not clearly exhaustive—Bahadur v. Eradatulla, 14 C.W.N. 799 (806), 12 C.L.J. 45, 11 Cr.L.J. 407, 6 I.C. 801, 37 Cal 642 (S.B.). An inquiry is judicial if the object of it is to determine a jural relation between one person and another, or a group of persons; or between him and the community generally; but, even a judge, acting without such an object in view, is not acting judicially—Queen-Emp. v. Fujla, 12 Bom. 36 (42). The words "judicial proceedings", include the whole proceeding from the filing of the complaint until the decision of the Court, and under sec 202, Cr. P. C., an inquiry or investigation may be ordered and such inquiry or investigation is a part of the judicial proceedings. It is on the result of the inquiry or investigation that the Magistrate takes further action either by dismissing the complaint under sec. 203, Cr. P. C., or issuing a process for the appearance of the accused—Veni Madho Prasad v. M. Wajid Ali, A.I.R. 1937 All. 90 (93), 1937 A.L.J. 20, 1933 A.W.R. (H.C.) 1205, 1937 All.L.R. 191, 167 I.C. 433, 11 L.R. 1937 All 390.

The following have been held to be judicial proceedings:—

(1) Investigation proceedings under sec. 202 by a Subordinate Magistrate on a complaint which was taken cognizance of by another Magistrate and sent to him for inquiry and report—Kanchan v. Ram Kishun, 36 Cal. 72; 2 Cr.L.J. 118; Veni Madho Prasad v. M. Wajid Ali, supra. But see Note 22 (15).

(2) Proceedings of a Court holding a preliminary inquiry and directing prosecution under sec. 476 of this Code—Abdulla, 37 Cal. 52 (56); Gopal Barik, 34 Cal. 42 (47);

(3) an inquiry on an application under sec. 100 to issue a search warrant is a judicial inquiry, and proceedings preliminary to the issue of a search warrant are judicial proceedings—Abdul Aziz, 1916 P.R. 34, 17 Cr.L.J. 491 (495), 36 I.C. 171. See also Godai Shaha v. King-Emp., 9 C.W.N. 1030 in this connection;

(4) proceedings under sec. 514—Q. E. v. Har Chandra, 25 Cal. 440;

(5) proceedings in which a Magistrate decides as to the fitness of sureties under Chapter VIII—Mahro, 2 S.L.R. 11;

(6) proceedings in which the statement of a witness is recorded under sec. 164—Andal, 5 S.L.R. 174; Vishwanath, 8 Bom.L.R. 589; but a statement recorded by a Magistrate in the course of police investigation under sec. 164 Cr. P. C., is not evidence in a stage of a judicial proceeding within the meaning of Explanation 2 to sec. 193, I. P. C.—Purshotham Ishwar, 45 Bom. 834, differing from Alagu Kone, 16 Mad. 421; Parashram Raysing, 8 Bom. 216 and Suppon Teven v. Emp., 29 Mad 89; see also Bharma, 11 Bom. 702 (F.B.);

(7) an inquiry by a Magistrate before issuing an order under sec. 144—Tirunarasimma, 19 Mad. 18;

(8) a proceeding under sec. 195, whether of the Original or Appellate Court, and whether granting or refusing or revoking a sanction (now abolished)—Seshadri, 20 Mad. 383; Pampapathi v. Subba Sashtri, 23 Mad 210; Sheikh Beari, 10 Mad. 232; Kalagava Bapiah, 27 Mad. 54 (57);

(9) proceedings under sec. 176—In re Laxminarayan, 30 Bom.L.R. 1050, 29 Cr.L.J. 1063 (1066), 112 I.C. 567, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 390;

(10) an investigation by a Magistrate under Chapter XIV—Suppa Tevan, 29 Mad. 89;

(11) maintenance proceedings under Chapter XXXVI—Laraiti v. Ram Dial, 5 All 224;

(12) proceedings in execution of a decree—Bahadur v. Eradatulla, 12 C.L.J. 45, 11 Cr.L.J. 407, 14 C.W.N. 799, 6 I.C. 801, 37 Cal. 642 (S.B.) (overruling Hara Charan, 32 Cal 367, Kanto Ram v. Gobardhan, 35 Cal 155 and Jadu Nath v. Jagadish, 7 C.W.N. 423); Dakhineshwar v. Harish Chandra, 10 C.L.J. 450; Bhola Nath, 10 C.W.N. 55; Sheshankarputi, 10 N.L.R. 177; Charen, 1 P.R. 1910;

(13) an inquiry by a Registrar of the Presidency Small Cause Court as to the proper service of summons—Balchand v. Tarak Nath Sadhu, 18 C.W.N. 1313, 16 Cr.L.J. 151;

(14) an inquiry by a Collector under the Income Tax Act hearing objections to assessment—Rup Singh, 44 P.R. 1905;

(15) an inquiry under the Legal Practitioners Act—Nallasivam v. Ramalingam, 22 M.L.J. 402, 18 Cr.L.J. 785; Subba Chetti, 6 Mad 252; Gouri Shankar, 9 A.L.J. 156;

(16) a proceeding before a Magistrate for recovery of Municipal cesses and taxes under sec. 84 of the Bombay Municipal Act (VI of 1873)—Municipality of Ahmedabad v. Jumna, 17 Bom 731;

(17) an inquiry by a Magistrate into the truth of allegations against a subordinate official, contained in a petition presented to a Deputy Commissioner—Kuna Sah, 28 All. 89;

(18) proceedings under sec. 8 of the Reformatory Schools Act—Manaji, 14 Bom. 381;

(19) mutation proceedings under U P Land Revenue Act (III of 1901)—Lachman v. Emp., A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 58, 5 Luck. 435, 31 Cr.L.J. 679, 124 I.C. 364, 1930 Cr.C. 154, 6 O.W.N. 953;

(20) proceedings under sec. 107, Cr. P. C.—16 P.R. 1897 (Cr.).

(22) proceeding in which it is or has to be determined whether bail should be taken falls within the definition of a judicial proceeding—Manikam v. Queen, 6 Mad. 63 (64), 30 Bom. 523 (535), 8 Bom.L.R. 705, 4 C.L.J. 181, 1 M.L.T. 301 (P.C.).

22. Judicial Proceedings, what are not:—(1) It was formerly held that the proceedings of a Magistrate under sec. 88 investigating claims of third parties to attached property were not judicial proceedings, because the Magistrate had no authority to hold such proceedings—Sheodihel, 6 All. 487. But sec. 88 as amended in 1923 provides for an inquiry into such claims by the Magistrate, and such an inquiry is a judicial proceeding.

- (2) An order of Government authorising or sanctioning a prosecution under sec. 196 or 197—In re Kalagava Bapiiah, 27 Mad. 54.
- (3) An examination by a Police officer under sec. 161—Ismail, 11 Bom 659.
- (4) Proceedings of a District Magistrate under sec. 125 for cancelling a bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour—Daya Nath, 37 Cal. 72.
- (5) A report of an inquiry under sec. 176 into the cause of death of a person under suspicious circumstances—In re Troilokha Nath, 3 Cal. 742. For contra see 29 Cr.L.J. 1063 (1065), 112 I.C. 567, 30 Bom L.R. 1050, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 390.
- (6) Calling for records under sec. 435—Kuppu, 7 Mad. 560; In re Subbaraya, 15 M.L.J. 489, 2 Weir 601a; Natchi, 2 Weir 180 (181); Sangila, 25 Mad. 659.
- (7) A departmental inquiry by a Magistrate into a complaint made against a Sub-Magistrate—Suria Narayana, 29 Mad 100.
- (8) A departmental inquiry by a District Registrar into a complaint made against a Sub-Registrar—Mulfat Ali, 2 C.L.J. 619.
- (9) An inquiry by a Magistrate with a view to ascertain whether a sanction to prosecute (now abolished) should be given or not—Venkataramana, 23 Mad. 223.
- (10) A departmental inquiry under sec. 197 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1897)—In re Chotalal, 22 Bom. 936.
- (11) An inquiry by a Deputy Magistrate in pursuance of an order of the District Magistrate calling for inquiry on the report by the Police stating that a complaint lodged with them was false—Maibat Khan, 33 Cal. 30.
- (12) An inquiry by a Magistrate on the strength of an information from the Secretariat that a seditious pamphlet was published—Fattek Ali, 1894 P.R. 15.
- (13) Proceedings conducted by a person not legally authorised or having no jurisdiction—Radhika v. Lal Mohan, 20 Cal 719; Abdul Majid v. Krishna Lal, 20 Cal. 724; eg., an inquiry into the professional conduct of a second grade pleader, conducted not by the presiding officer of the Court in which the pleader practises but by the District Judge—Nallasivam v. Ramalingam, 32 M.L.J. 402, 18 Cr.L.J. 785.
- (14) Inquiries made by a District Magistrate on receipt of information that a grave crime was being, or was about to be, committed—Chandrasangji v. Mohansangji, 30 Bom. 523 (535), (P.C.), 8 Bom L.R. 705, 4 C.L.J. 181, 1 M.L.T. 301.
- (15) A preliminary investigation under sec. 202, Cr. P. C.—In re Kachi, 21 M.L.J. 795, 12 Cr.L.J. 323, 1911 M.W.N. 9.
- (16) The reference to the Judge by the Telegraph authorities for verification of a letter and the subsequent action in regard thereto—Chait Ram, 6 All. 103.

(n) "non-cognizable offence" means an offence for, and "non-cognizable case" means a case in, which a police officer, within or without a presidency-town, may not arrest without warrant:

(o) "offence" means any act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force; it also includes any act in respect of which a complaint may be made under section 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871:

23. Clause (o)—Offence:—This definition is the same as that given in sec. 3 (37) of the General Clauses Act. The definition in sec. 40, I. P. Code is wider and includes acts committed outside British India. In the Extradition Act the word has a still wider meaning and is not restricted to offences as defined in sec. 41, I. P. Code or in this Code—Adams, 26 Mad. 607.

An Ordinance (eg., Ordinance III of 1914) is a 'law for the time being in force' and an infringement of its provision is an offence—Sher Singh, 10 P.R. 1916, 17 Cr.L.J. 225 (226).

Civil wrong:—Where an act may be a criminal offence or a mere civil wrong according to the intention of the person doing the act, the aggrieved party should not be encouraged to go into a Criminal Court unless he is fully prepared to prove that the act is criminal and not a mere civil wrong—Gulzar, 50 P.R. 1887.

24. Offences, what are:—(1) Breach of a husband's duty (to maintain his wife) declared by the Magistrate's order, or a disobedience of such order is an offence, because it is attended with a penalty—In re Shaik Fakruddin, 9 Bom 40 (45).

(2) Failure to prepare and retain counterfoils of rent receipts as specified in sec. 58 of the Bengal Tenancy Act—Mohant Ramdas, 9 C.W.N. 816.

(3) Omission to stamp a share-warrant under sec. 35 of the Indian Companies Act—Moore, 20 Cal. 676.

(4) Illegal seizure of cattle mentioned in sec. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act—Buddhan Mahto v. Issur Singh, 34 Cal. 926, 6 Cr.L.J. 363.

(5) Offences under sec. 10 of the Mussalman Wakf Act (XLII of 1923)—Ali Mahomed v. Emp, 28 Cr.L.J. 954, 105 I.C. 666, A.I.R. 1928 Sind 43.

25. Offences, what are not:—(1) Neglect to maintain wife or children—Mehr Khan v. Bakht, 10 Lah. 406, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 32, 29 Cr.L.J. 1002 (1003); In re Ponnammal, 16 Mad. 234; Hildephonsus v. Malone, 13 P.R. 1885.

(2) Inability to give a satisfactory account of oneself, or want of ostensible means of livelihood (sec. 109)—Buddhu, 3 N.L.R. 51.

(3) The mere use of a house as a brothel—Khari, 6 S.L.R. 254, 14 Cr.L.J. 320. The use of a house as brothel or for habitual prostitution or as a disorderly house is not an offence; but if a Magistrate passes an order under sec. 3 of the Eastern Bengal Disorderly Houses Act (II of 1907) prohibiting the use of the house as brothel, etc., the disobedience to such order is an offence—Rajani Khemtawali v. Pramatha, 37 Cal. 287 (290-292).

(4) An application to take proceedings under sec. 107 is not an accusation of an offence—Imam Mandal, 27 Cal. 662; Chathu v. Niranjana, 20 Cal. 729; Govind, 25 Bom. 48. See Notes under sec. 107.

(5) The erection of an unauthorised structure is not an offence under the Calcutta Municipal Act; it is only when an order of demolition of the structure passed by the Municipal Magistrate is disobeyed that the owner of the structure commits an 'offence'—Krishen Doyal v. Corporation of Calcutta, 54 Cal. 532, 31 C.W.N. 506 (508), 28 Cr.L.J. 407.

(6) An application made to a Magistrate solely with a view to his taking proceedings under sec. 110, Cr P C, is not an accusation of an offence—Lakhpai, 15 All. 365.

(7) The act of a person causing obstruction of a public thoroughfare, which comes within the purview of sec. 133 Cr. P. C., is not an offence—Srinath Roy v. Ainaddi Halder, 21 Cal. 395.

(8) Travelling in a train by a passenger without having a proper ticket with him is not an offence under the Railway Act, 1890 (IX of 1890)—Ram Pal, 20 All. 95; Kuloda Prosad Majumdar v. Emp, 11 C.W.N. 100. See also Subramania Ayyar, 20 Mad 385 and Kutrapa, 18 Bom 440.

25A. Offence under the Cattle Trespass Act:—Since an offence as defined in this clause includes an "act in respect of which a complaint may be made under sec. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act," a Magistrate who is generally empowered under the Cr. Pro Code to receive complaints of offences is competent to receive complaints under sec. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, and he need not be specially authorised by the District Magistrate to receive complaints under that section—Dcendayalu v. Ratna, 50 Mad 841, 52 M.L.J. 251, 28 Cr.L.J. 301, 25 L.W. 282, 100 I.C. 381. See also Budhan Mahto v. Issur Singh, 34 Cal 926, 6 Cr.L.J. 363 and Vishvanath Vishun Joshi, 54 I.C. 493, 44 Bom. 42, 21 Bom.L.R. 1084, 21 Cr.L.J. 95.

(p) "officer in charge of a police station" includes, when the officer in charge of a police-station is absent from the station-house or unable from illness or other cause to perform his duties, the police officer present at the station-house who is next in rank to such officer and is above the rank of constable or, when the Provincial Government so directs, any other police officer so present:

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

26. Clause (p):—This clause is not applicable to the Police of Calcutta—Madho Dhobi, 31 Cal. 557.

The words 'present at the station-house' do not mean physically present at the station-house; therefore, if a person is deputed to be in charge of a police-station, the fact that he was doing duty within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Police Station but outside the station-house, does not deprive him of his capacity as Station-House officer—Assan Aliar v Maslamani, 42 Mad 446, 36 M.L.J. 252, 20 Cr.L.J. 422.

If the Sub-Inspector in charge of the thana is ill, the writer Head Constable who is the officer next in seniority to him can act in his place. Thus, where the Magistrate sent a cognizable case to the Police for investigation and report, and the Sub-Inspector was ill that day, it was the duty of the writer Head Constable who was in charge of the Police-station on that day to investigate the case, although he was not generally empowered to make investigation into cognizable cases—Bhola Bhagat, 2 Pat. 379 (384), 4 P.L.T. 521, 24 Cr.L.J. 375. But when there is nothing to show that the officer-in-charge of the police-station was unable to perform his duties as such, an Assistant Sub-Inspector of Police who was investigating a case outside the station-house could not be regarded as the officer-in-charge of the Police station—Momin, 30 Cr.L.J. 803, 117 I.C. 601, A.I.R. 1928 Cal 771, Ind. Rul. 1929 Cal. 553

Constable:—By a judicial notification no. 3, dated 31-1-1883, the senior constable present at any police station shall be deemed to be the officer in charge for the time being, during the absence of the officer in charge—Kuppa Kavundan, 9 M.L.T. 414, 12 Cr.L.J. 190, 10 I.C. 667.

(q) "place" includes also a house, building, tent, and vessel:

(r) "pleader," used with reference to any proceeding in any Court, means a pleader or a mukhtar authorized under any law for the time being in force to practise in such Court, and includes (1) an advocate, a vakil, and an attorney of a High Court so authorized, and (2) any other person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in such proceeding:

27. Clause (r):—Change in the Law:—The definition of 'pleader' has been amended by the Criminal Procedure Code Further Amendment Act (XXXV of 1923). The old definition ran as follows:—

"Pleader used with reference to any proceeding in any Court means a pleader authorised under any law for the time being in force to practise in such Court, and includes (1) an advocate, a vakil and an attorney of a High Court, so authorised, and (2) any mukhtar or other person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in such proceeding"

Thus, under the old law, a mukhtar fell under the second part of the definition of the word 'pleader'; that is, a mukhtar was not entitled as of right to practise in Criminal Courts, but it was necessary for him to obtain permission of the Court in each case before he was authorised to practise before Magistrates and Sessions Judges (In re Anant Ram, 30 All. 66; Ishan Chandra, 38 Cal. 488), though such permission was usually and naturally granted. The mukhtars were placed in the same category as "other persons," i.e., ordinary persons without any training or license. For this reason the mukhtars had a sentimental grievance, and in order to remove it, the definition has been amended by the Amendment Act (XXXV of 1923). This amendment has done away with the necessity of obtaining the permission of the Court, and gives a legal status to mukhtars, placing them on the same footing as pleaders. (See Gazette of India, 1923, Part V, pp. 129-131).

Practise.—The word 'practise' does not connote the doing of acts habitually or often, but signifies the performance of even a single act by a person as a professional man, which as a private individual he could not do—Beni Bahadur, 26 All. 380. A petition-writer who attends Court all day cannot be said to practise—Shib Churn v. Ishan Chunder, 18 W.R. 27. Only persons entitled to appear, plead or act in Court can be said to practise—Tussudug v. Girhar, 14 Cal 556 (565).

Mukhtar.—The word refers to such Mukhtars as have obtained a certificate of qualification from the High Court—In re Anant Ram, 30 All 66.

License for one district.—A pleader who holds a license to practise in a particular district is not entitled as a matter of right to practise in a Criminal Court of another district, unless he is permitted to practise in the latter Court—Kimatrai, 4 S.L.R. 207, 12 Cr.L.J. 118, 9 I.C. 717. It is the duty of a pleader, who appears in a Criminal Court of a district to which his sanad does not apply, to inform the Magistrate that he cannot appear as of right, and to apply for a permission under this clause—Re Clements, 7 S.L.R. 98, 15 Cr.L.J. 382, 23 I.C. 750.

Other person.—The words 'other person' embrace pure outsiders as well as duly qualified and enrolled mukhtars who have failed to take out their certificates—Tussudug v. Girhar, 14 Cal. 556.

The Code entitles a prisoner to authorise any person to be his agent in any Criminal Court—Ramchandra, Ratanlal 1; see also Chandrabhaga, Ratanlal 206. It is open to the accused to appoint any person (e.g., the manager of his estate) to appear in his stead and plead and do other acts on his behalf; but there must be clearly on record something to show that the person who represents the accused has been duly appointed by him (just as an ordinary pleader has to file a vakalatnama), and that the Court has given the requisite permission for his appearance in place of the accused—Dorabshah, 50 Bom 250, 28 Bom L.R. 102, 27 Cr.L.J. 440 (444), A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 218. A constituted attorney can also appear for the accused—Jaffar, A.I.R. 1934 Bom 212, 35 Cr.L.J. 1035, 149 I.C. 1132, 36 Bom L.R. 433, 1934 Cr.C. 759. The prosecuting Inspector can be appointed by the accused to defend them, with the permission of the Court, in a case where the accused are Government officers—Chote Khan, 26 N.L.R. 172, 31 Cr.L.J. 419 (420), 1930 Cr.C. 506, 122 I.C. 412, A.I.R. 1930 Nag 150.

The authority which can grant permission to an ordinary person to appear in any case is the Court in which he appears; and the District Magistrate cannot debar such persons, by a general order, from appearing in any proceeding in a Criminal Court—In re Baji Rao, 29 Bom L.R. 1587, 29 Cr.L.J. 226, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 33.

Advocates on the Appellate Side do not come within the definition of "pleader" as defined in Cr. P. C. for the purposes of the Sessions Court, because they are not authorised by law for the time being in force to practise in that Court—In re N. Godinho, A.I.R. 1934 Bom 70, 35 Bom L.R. 1, 58 Bom. 456, 148 I.C. 664, 1934 Cr.C. 302 (F.B.).

As for the right of Advocates to practise in different Courts, see sec. 14 of the Indian Bar Councils Act, 1926 (XXXVIII of 1926). See also 24 All. 348 (F.B.) in this connection.

- (s) "police station" means any post or place declared generally or specially by the Provincial Government to be a police-station, and includes any local area specified by the Provincial Government in this behalf:

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

- (t) "Public Prosecutor" means any person appointed under section 492, and includes any person acting under the directions of a Public Prosecutor, and any person conducting a prosecution on behalf of His Majesty in any High Court in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction:

28. Clause (t)—Public Prosecutor—The appointment of a Magistrate, who had in the first instance tried the accused, as a Public Prosecutor to conduct an inquiry subsequently directed in the case, is a most improper proceeding—Kashinath, 8 BH.C.R. 126.

The complainant may appoint a pleader, and the Public Prosecutor may avail himself of his services; but in doing so, the Public Prosecutor does not deprive himself of the management of the case—In re Narayan, 11 BH.C.R. 102

The purpose of a criminal trial is not to support at all costs a theory, but to investigate the offence and to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused, and the duty of a Public Prosecutor is to represent not the police, but the Crown, and his duty should be discharged by him fairly and fearlessly, and with a full sense of the responsibility that attaches to his position. The guilt or innocence of the accused is to be determined by the tribunals appointed by law and not according to the tastes of any one else. It is, therefore, undoubtedly the duty of the Public Prosecutor, in a capital case, to have placed before the trial Court the testimony of all available eye-witnesses. This is no technical rule. It is founded on common sense and is dictated by humanity—Ram Ranjan v. Emp., 42 Cal. 422 (428), 19 C.W.N. 28, 16 Cr.L.J. 170, 27 I.C. 554; Brahmadeo v. Emp., 1920 Pat. H.C.C. 24 (31); Fateh Chand, 44 Cal. 477 (509), 24 Cr.L.J. 400, 18 Cr.L.J. 385, 21 C.W.N. 33, 38 I.C. 945 (F.B.).

As to who may be appointed a Public Prosecutor, see sections 492 and 495

- (u) "sub-division" means a sub-division of a district:

- (v) "summons-case" means a case relating to an offence, and not being a "warrant-case": and

If the Court is dealing with a charge of abetment of a specific offence, which offence is a summons case, then the abetment is also a summons case—Narsinha Narayan Chandur v. Emp., AIR. 1931 Bom 199, 33 Bom L.R. 353, 1931 Cr.C. 343, 131 I.C. 472, 32 Cr.L.J. 718, 16 A.I. Cr.R. 338.

- (w) "warrant-case" means a case relating to an offence punishable with death, transportation, or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months.

29. Clause (w):—The term "Sessions case" has not been defined here. This term does not necessarily mean case triable exclusively by the Court of Session, but includes all cases which a Magistrate has committed to a Court of Session, although he might have tried them himself—Gulabdas, 11 BH.C.R. 98

A case becomes a "summons case" or "warrant case" according to the nature and measure of punishment which the law attaches to the offence. The terms of sec. 45 of the C. P. Excise Act (V of 1915) leave no doubt that all offences under secs 34 and 36 of the said Act, which are committed after the conviction of the first offence, have to be tried as a "warrant case"—Gayaprasad, 33 Cr.L.J. 573, 138 I.C. 175, A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 111, 28 N.L.R. 18, 1932 Cr.C. 275.

(2) Words which refer to acts done extend also to illegal omission: and all words and expressions used herein, and defined in the Indian Penal Code, and not hereinbefore defined, shall be deemed to have the meanings respectively attributed to them by the Code.

Words to have same meaning as in Indian Penal Code

30. Thus, the words "force" and "criminal force" used in section 522 must be interpreted according to the definition given in sections 349 and 350 of the Indian Penal Code—Balram v. Chamru, 2 P.L.T. 120; Churaman v. Ramlal, 25 All 341; Hari Chand, 1919 P.R. 16, 20 Cr.L.J. 488, 51 I.C. 472; Ishan Chandra v. Dena Nath, 27 Cal 174; Ram Chandra v. Jityendra, 25 Cal 434 (439). So also, the definition of the word 'Judge' given in section 19, I. P. Code would apply to the word 'Judge' used in sec 539, Cr P Code—Ramchandra, 5 Pat 110, 27 Cr.L.J. 499 (501), A.I.R. 1926 Pat 214

Although sub-section (2) is separated from sub-section (1) by a full stop, still sub-section (2) must be read as qualified by the words "unless a different intention appears from the subject or context" occurring in the beginning of sub section (1)—Gantapalli v. Gantapalli, 20 Mad 470 (474) (F B).

5. (1) All offences under the Indian Penal Code shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions hereinafter contained.

Trial of offences under Penal Code.

(2) All offences under any other law shall be investigated, inquired into, tried, and otherwise dealt with according to the same provisions, but subject to any enactment for the time being in force, regulating the manner or place of investigating, inquiring into, trying or otherwise dealing with such offences.

Trial of offences against other laws

31. Power of High Court to punish for contempt:—The power to punish for contempt vested in the High Court by the Common Law of England is not affected by the provisions of this Code. A contempt of the High Court by a libel published out of Court, when the Court is not sitting, is not included in the words 'offences under the Indian Penal Code' or "offences under any other law" in sec. 5 of the Cr. P. Code, though the contempt may include defamation. It is something more than mere defamation and is of a different character which the High Court can deal with by virtue of its superior powers—Surendra Nath Banerjee v. Chief Justice, 10 Cal 109 (P.C.); In re Abdul Hasan, 48 All 711 (F B), 24 A.L.J. 819, 97 I.C. 108, A.I.R. 1926 All 623; Muslim Outlook, 28 Cr.L.J. 727 (F B), 103 I.C. 775, A.I.R. 1927 Jah 610, 9 L.L.J. 455, 29 P.L.R. 294; Crown v. Sayyad Habib, 6 Lah. 528 (S B).

"Otherwise dealt with":—To 'otherwise deal with' a case includes the act of transferring a case from one Court to another under sec. 526—Basdeo v. Badal, 49 All. 188, 28 Cr.L.J. 94.

31A. Offence on the high seas:—The Presidency Magistrate, Bombay, has authority to convict a person for an offence under the Indian Penal Code, the said offence having been committed in a British ship during her voyage on the high seas. The charge should be framed in reference to the Indian Penal Code, and in case of conviction the punishment should be awarded under that Code—King-Emperor v. Chief Officer of S.S. "Mushtari," 25 Bom. 636. Under sections 684 and 686 of the Merchant Shipping Act (57 & 58 Vict., c. 60) the Original S.d.e of the Calcutta High Court has jurisdiction to try a Native Indian seaman for murder or manslaughter committed on board a British vessel on the high seas when he is brought to Calcutta under custody, notwithstanding that the vessel touched at the intermediate ports in course of the voyage after the commission of the offence. Dissenting from the view expressed above by the Bombay High Court it was further held that the offence should be tried and the charge framed under the English law, but the procedure at the trial and the sentence must be regulated by the law of India—Salimullah, 39 Cal. 487, 13 Cr.L.J. 246, 14 I.C. 598. The Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta has jurisdiction to proceed with trial of crewmen charged with having been guilty of rioting and causing grievous hurt while on the high seas, although there was no evidence to show that they were in Calcutta on the day on which the complaint was made and they surrendered themselves to the Court after proclamations were issued—Legal Remembrancer v. Raisalle, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 145, 60 Cal 44, 34 Cr.L.J. 631, 143 I.C. 774, 1933 Cr.C. 222. See also Note 4 under the heading "High Seas."

A subject of the State of Junaghad in Kathiawar was arrested in Bombay and accused of committing a serious offence on a ship belonging to a Junaghad subject on the high seas some eighteen miles or thereabouts from the coast of the Kanara District. Held that the First Class Magistrate in Kanara had no jurisdiction to deal with the alleged offender—Punja Guni, 42 Bom. 234.

32. Clause (2):—Where a special law (e.g., the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act of 1887) has provided a special procedure for the manner or place of investigating or inquiring into any offence under it, its provisions must prevail, and no provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code can apply. Where, however, the special Act is silent, the Cr. P. C. would be applicable—Kaitan, 31 Bom. 438.

Thus, the Gambling Act III of 1867, sec. 5, prescribes a special procedure for searches under that Act, and the provisions of Chapter VII of this Code shall not apply thereto—Khilinda Ram, 3 Lah. 359, 23 Cr.L.J. 621. So also, under the Madras Akbari Act (I of 1886), an accused person has the right to a special procedure regulating the course of an investigation and providing for a much more elaborate inquiry than is provided for in the Cr. P. Code; and if a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence under the Madras Akbari Act, under the proceedings of this Code, the proceedings are not properly instituted—Kuppuswamy, 44 M.L.J. 231, 24 Cr.L.J. 335, 17 L.W. 308, 72 I.C. 175, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 339, where it was observed: "The police have no right to file a charge sheet or otherwise to proceed under Ch. 14, Cr. P. Code, in respect of an offence under the Akbari Act. Ch. 14 is controlled by sec. 5 (2), Cr. P. Code, and this is an offence under a special law which can be investigated and tried only according to the provisions of the law." This ruling is no doubt given with reference to the Madras Akbari Act. But the principle on which that ruling is based equally applies to the provisions of the Bombay Act (V of 1878)—Mahomed Usman, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 325 (326), 35 Cr.L.J. 129, 146 I.C. 419, 1933 Cr.C. 1077. Under the Madras Akbari Act the proceedings must be initiated and conducted under the elaborate rules contained in the chapter and sections of the Act. For an offence against the Opium Act (I of 1878) the procedure which is indicated in that Act is to be strictly followed. Complaints by private persons are not provided for in these Acts and must be treated as not properly instituted—Fernando, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 604, 52 Mad. 613, 30 M.L.W. 112, 1929 M.W.N. 507, 57 M.L.J. 214, 30 Cr.L.J. 1011, 119 I.C. 174, 1929 Cr.C. 78. The Madras Salt Act (1889) does not intend a scheme of procedure, or intend anything more than a few special additions to the normal procedure of Cr. P. Code—Sudarsanam, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 769 (770), 61 M.L.J. 127, 31 M.L.W. 211, 133 I.C. 383, 32 Cr.L.J. 1035, 1931 M.W.N. 405, 1931 Cr.C. 1025, 35 Mad. 86.

Where the special law prescribes no special procedure, the procedure of the Cr. P. Code must be followed. So, an offence under sec. 20 of the Calcutta Rent Act must be summarily inquired into under the provisions of Chapter XXII of this Code—Ishan v. Manmatha, 37 C.L.J. 298, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 339. The Cr. P. Code is applicable to trial before a Magistrate of offences under the Bengal Excise Act—Upendra, 41 Cal. 694 (702), 18 C.W.N. 485. As no rules have been framed under the Ordinance III of 1914, the provisions of this Code must be followed in the trial of an offence under that Ordinance—Sher Singh, 1916 P.R. 10, 34 I.C. 641, 17 Cr.L.J. 225 (226). The provisions of the Cr. P. Code are to apply so far as they are not inconsistent with the Ordinance (II of 1932). In case of conflict the provisions of the Ordinance prevail—Abdul Majid, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 537, 60 Cal. 652, 1933 Cr.C. 893, 145 I.C. 656, 34 Cr.L.J. 1023.

The Cr. P. Code is applicable to a prosecution under the Calcutta Municipal Act—See Sisir Kumar Mitter v. Corporation of Calcutta, 30 C.W.N. 598; Umesh Chandra v. Corporation of Calcutta, 42 C.L.J. 231; Sew Prosad v. Corporation of Calcutta, 9 C.W.N. 18; Krishen Doyal v. Corporation of Calcutta, 54 Cal. 532, 31 C.W.N. 506.

The offence under sec. 63 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908) is an offence not under the I.P.C., but under a different Act. By reason of sec. 5 (2) of the Cr. P. C., it must be investigated into and tried according to the provisions of the Code, because there is nothing in the statute creating the crime dealing with the method in which investigation is to be made and the trial to be held—Angelo v. Kandan Manjhi, 41 Cr.L.J. 221 (224).

A simultaneous conviction under the Indian Penal Code as well as under a special law for the same offence is illegal—Hussun Ali, 5 N.W.P. 49. It cannot be laid down as a general rule of law that where there is a special law making a particular act an offence and providing penalties for such an offence, the general law must be held to be inapplicable. It is possible that the same act may be an offence under two different Acts, and both may be applicable simultaneously and the offender may be prosecuted and convicted under either Act. It may, however, be conceded that where the offence falls strictly within the provisions of a section of a special Act and does not go beyond it, it would be more appropriate to prosecute the offender and convict him under that special Act, rather than fall back upon a more general law which prescribes a heavier penalty. In such a case it may be assumed that the Legislature in prescribing the smaller penalty has considered recourse to the special law as the proper course—Jiva Ram, 33 Cr.L.J. 309 (310), 135 I.C. 571, A.I.R. 1932 All. 69, 1932 Cr.C. 89, 1932 A.L.J. 519.

See also 45 Mad. 14 (18) quoted in Note 5

33. "Enactment":—A rule framed under any act (e.g., Calcutta Rent Act) is not an 'enactment' within the meaning of clause (2) of this section—Gobardhan v. Doolie Chand, 48 Cal. 955, 25 C.W.N. 661, 22 Cr.L.J. 351, 33 C.L.J. 551.

PART II.

CONSTITUTION AND POWERS OF CRIMINAL COURTS AND OFFICES.

CHAPTER II.

OF THE CONSTITUTION OF CRIMINAL COURTS AND OFFICES.

A.—Classes of Criminal Courts.

6. Besides the High Courts and the Courts constituted Classes of Criminal Courts. under any law other than this Code for the time being in force, there shall be five classes of Criminal Courts in British India, namely:—

I.—Courts of Session:

II.—Presidency Magistrates:

III.—Magistrates of the first class:

IV.—Magistrates of the second class:

V.—Magistrates of the third class.

33A. High Court:—See Notes under sec. 4, cl. (j) of this Act. Sec. 6, Cr. P. C., says that besides the High Courts there shall be five classes of Criminal Courts in British India. It is obvious that these five Courts are inferior criminal Courts qua the High Court so far as sec. 435, Cr. P. C. is concerned—Municipal Board, Benares v. Ram Sahai, A.I.R. 1933 All. 281, 34 Cr.L.J. 1105, 145 I.C. 959, 1933 A.L.J. 469.

Court of Session—Under sec. 9, cl. (3), Cr. P. C., Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges may be appointed by the Local Government to exercise jurisdiction in Courts of Session.

The High Court exercising Original Criminal Jurisdiction is not a Court of Session within the meaning of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Under sec. 6 of the Cr. P. Code, Courts of Session belong to a class of Courts different from the High Courts—Harendra Chandra Chakravarty, 51 Cal 980 (982), A.I.R. 1925 Cal 384, 26 Cr.L.J. 385, 29 C.W.N. 384, 84 I.C. 929; Sukumar Majumdar v. Emp., A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 867, 59 Cal. 1248, 1932 Cr.C. 891, 34 Cr.L.J. 107, 140 I.C. 891.

34. Magistrate:—Court:—For the sake of brevity the Code uses the terms "Court" and "Magistrate" generally, if not always, as convertible terms—Clarke v. Brajendra Kishore Roy Chowdhury, 39 Cal 953 (966) 16 C.W.N. 865, 13 Cr.L.J. 693, 16 I.C. 501, 16 C.L.J. 231, 10 A.L.J. 193, 14 Bom.L.R. 717, 23 M.L.J. 32, 39 I.A. (163 (P.C.) The term "Magistrate" shall include every person exercising all or any of the powers of a Magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force. Vide sec. 3, cl. (31) of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897). There is no definition of this term in the Cr. P. C.

A Magistrate as such is not a Court unless he is acting in a judicial capacity—Clarke v. Brajendra Kishore, 36 Cal 433. A Magistrate taking cognizance of a case under sec. 145 is a "Criminal Court" within the meaning of the Code. It is a Court which is constituted under sec. 6 of the Act, and bound to administer the law relating to criminal procedure as prescribed by the Code—Lalit v. Surja, 28 Cal 700 (713). The Court of a Police Patel is not a Criminal Court within the enunciation contained in this section—Q.E. v. Ramia, Ratanlal 317; 4 Bom 417. A village Panchayat constituted under U. P. Act VI of 1920 is a Criminal Court within the meaning of Chap. II of the Cr. P. Code—Basdeo v. Badal, 49 All. 188, 28 Cr.L.J. 94; Kamalapati, 48 All. 23, 27 Cr.L.J. 19. Contra—Sat Narain v. Sarju, 46 All. 167, 25 Cr.L.J. 1390. But see Badri Nath v. Sheophaal in Note 35B.

35. Presidency Magistrate:—The term "Presidency Magistrate" would not be ordinarily included in the words "District Magistrate" or "Magistrate of the first class" because sections 10 and 12 of the Code show that the District Magistrate and Magistrates of the first class are appointed only in districts outside the Presidency-towns—Chota Singh, 32 Mad. 303. But the term "Magistrate of the first class" used in sec. 111 of the Emigration Act (XX of 1883) means a Magistrate appointed to exercise the highest magisterial powers, and includes a Presidency Magistrate—Jeevanti, 31 Bom. 611; Haji Shaikh Mahomed, 32 Bom 10. This section differentiates "Presidency Magistrates" from "Magistrates of the first class," and section 10 defines who a "District Magistrate" is. There is nothing to prevent a Presidency Magistrate from examining a witness within his jurisdiction at some other place than the Court house—Sremutty Hem Kumari Dasee v. Q. E., 1 C.W.N 333, 24 Cal 551.

When the Code itself confers certain powers on an ordinary Presidency Magistrate, any one appointed to be or declared as such, can exercise those powers, unless those powers are restricted or curtailed, at the time of the appointment or declaration. By virtue of sec. 31, Madras City Police Act (III of 1888), the provisions of sec. 523, Cr. P. Code have to be applied as far as practicable, to all property seized or taken charge of by the police. In his capacity as a Presidency Magistrate the Commissioner of Police can exercise the power under sec. 523 of the Code, in the absence of any Government order, stating that he shall not exercise such a power—Devidan Sowcar v. Janaki Ammal, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 428, 1932 M.W.N. 106, 62 M.L.J. 632, 35 M.L.W. 625, 1932 Cr.C. 409, 138 I.C. 126, 33 Cr.L.J. 539.

35A. District Magistrate:—The Code does not recognise any Court other than the 5 classes mentioned in this section. A District Magistrate's Court is, for the purposes of an ordinary criminal trial, the Court of Magistrate of the first class. Therefore when a Magistrate vested with the first class powers began to try a case against the accused while he was officiating as the District Magistrate, he has jurisdiction to continue and conclude the trial even after he ceased to be the District Magistrate—Syed Sajjad, 3 A.L.J. 825, 4 Cr.L.J. 140, 1906 A.W.N. 201. A District Magistrate as such is not a Court and is only a first class Magistrate who exercises special powers with which he is invested either by the Cr. P. Code or by the Local Government. His Court is that of a Magistrate, first class, and appeals from the appealable sentence of his Court lie to the Court of Session—Pilalal v. Emp., 30 Cr.L.J. 550, 116 I.C. 77, A.I.R. 1929 Nag 97, 25 N.L.R. 1 (F.B.). So also, the Sub-divisional Magistrate is not entered as being one of the five classes of criminal Courts. Such Magistrate may be counted as a Magistrate of the first (or second) class—Chhoti v. Khacheru, 42 All. 649 (654), 18 A.L.J. 758, 21 Cr.L.J. 746, 58 I.C. 250.

The terms "Deputy Magistrate", "General Deputy Magistrate" are unknown to this Code, and should not be used—Sadananda, 23 M.L.J. 670, 13 Cr.L.J. 850 (852), 12 M.L.T. 601, 17 I.C. 785.

35B. Constituted under any law:—This section appears to recognize that besides the High Court and the five classes of Criminal Courts constituted by the Code, there may be other Courts constituted under other laws, meaning presumably other Courts having jurisdiction to try criminal offences—Goberdhane v. Doolichand, 43 Cal. 955 (982), 33 C.L.J. 551, 25 C.W.N. 661, 22 Cr.L.J. 354, 61 I.C. 220. A Municipal Magistrate appointed to deal with offences against the Calcutta Municipal Act (III of 1923) is a Court constituted under a law other than the Code for the time being in force, and comes within this section—Ram Gopal v. Corporation of Calcutta, 52 Cal 962 (969), 29 C.W.N. 898, 90 I.C. 317, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1251. But a Panchayat u. Chapter VI of the U. P. Village Panchayat Act (VI of 1920) is not a Court 'con under any law other than this Code' as defined under this section—Badri Nath v. Sheopthal, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 143 (144), 1939 O.W.N. 231, 1939 O.L.R. 120, 180 I.C. 142, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 54, 40 Cr.L.J. 338, 14 Luck. 592, 11 R.O. 240, 1939 O.A. 259, 1939 A.Cr.C. 44. But see Basdeo v. Badal in Note 34.

B.—Territorial Divisions.

7. (1) Every province (excluding the presidency-town) shall be a sessions division, or shall consist of sessions divisions; and every sessions division shall, for the purposes of this Code, be a district, or consist of districts.

Sessions divisions and districts.

(2) The Provincial Government may alter the limits or the number of such divisions and districts.

Power to alter divisions and districts.

(3) The sessions divisions and districts existing when this Code comes into force shall be sessions divisions and districts respectively unless and until they are so altered.

Existing divisions and districts maintained till altered.

(4) Every presidency-town shall, for the purposes of this Code, be deemed to be a district.

Presidency-towns to be deemed districts.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

36. Division, District:—The word 'district' in this section does not mean a revenue district, but a district for the purposes of criminal administration. And a sessions division shall be the equivalent of one such district or a number of such districts. By Notifications nos. 175 and 177 of the Local Government, dated the 22nd June 1921, there have been constituted a Sessions Division of West Tanjore and a Sessions Division of East Tanjore. Before these Notifications there was one Tanjore Sessions Division, and it was also Tanjore District for criminal administration. The Government not having declared that each Sessions Division should consist of more than one district, the effect of the Notification is that we have got East Tanjore Sessions Division and East Tanjore District, as also West Tanjore Sessions Division and West Tanjore District (though for revenue purposes, there is only one District of Tanjore, having only one officer at its head who is the Collector of Tanjore). The notification is not ultra vires, having regard to sub-sec. (1) of this section—Arumuga, 54 Mad. 943 (F.B.), 61 M.L.J. 265, 32 Cr.L.J. 1095 (1096, 1097), 1931 Cr.C. 937. A district has a different conception from that of a division, though a division may be equivalent to a district. It need not necessarily be so, for it may consist of a number of districts. The conception underlying a division is that a Sessions Judge is presiding over a division (sec. 9); the conception underlying a district is that there is a District Magistrate for each District (sec. 10). So, a Sessions Division is not identical with a district, though territorially one may be equivalent to a District—Arumuga, supra.

36A. Local Government may alter, etc.:—This section assumes the existence of Sessions Divisions in every part of British India, but it does not contemplate the creation of such division by the Local Governments, which can only alter the limits or number of such divisions under sub-sec. (2) of this section—Mangal Tekchand, 10 Bom 274 (282). The word "district" as used in this section and in other sections of the Code is a district for the purposes of criminal administration. The object of cl (1) of this section is not to enable the Local Government to constitute Sessions Divisions out of districts but to lay down a rule governing the relation between Sessions Divisions and Districts; that is, a Sessions Division shall not consist of half a district or even one and a half districts, but shall consist of one district or of a plurality of whole districts—Arumugha Solagan, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 697, 54 Mad. 943, 134 I.C. 51, 32 Cr.L.J. 1095, 1931 M.W.N. 161, 34 L.W. 201, 1931 Cr.C. 937, 61 M.L.J. 265 (F.B.).

37. Sessions Division:—Instances:—Cachar is a Sessions Division of Assam (see Assam Gazette, 1874, page 3). Darjeeling is included within the Dajpore Division. The District and Town of Rangoon are two Sessions Divisions for the purposes of this Code (see Gazette of India, 1784, p. 62). The Ganjam Collectorate consists of two Sessions Divisions, one consisting of the Agency District, and the other of the Non-Agency Tracts—Sadananda, 23 M.L.J. 670, 13 Cr.L.J. 850. The Districts of North and South Malabar are two Sessions Divisions in the Malabar District—Valia Amulu, 30 Mad. 136, 16 M.L.J. 444, 4 Cr.L.J. 443.

8. (1) The Provincial Government may divide any district outside the presidency-towns into sub-divisions, or make any portion of any such district a sub-division, and may alter the limits of any sub-division.

Power to divide districts into sub-divisions

Existing sub-divisions maintained.

under the charge of a Magistrate shall be deemed to have been made under this Code.

Amendment:—The words “Provincial Government” have been substituted for the words “Local Government” in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

C.—Courts and Offices outside the presidency-towns.

9. (1) The Provincial Government shall establish a Court of Sessions for every sessions division, and appoint a Judge of such Court.

(2) The Provincial Government may, by general or special order in the Official Gazette, direct at what place or places the Court of Session shall hold its sitting; but, until such order is made, the Courts of Session shall hold their sittings as herebefore.

(3) The Provincial Government may also appoint Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges to exercise jurisdiction in one or more such Courts.

(4) A Sessions Judge of one sessions division may be appointed by the Provincial Government to be also an Additional Sessions Judge of another division, and in such case he may sit for the disposal of cases at such place or places in either division as the Provincial Government may direct.

(5) All Courts of Session existing when this Code comes into force shall be deemed to have been established under this Act.

Amendment:—The words “Provincial Government” have been substituted for “Local Government” in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

38. Sub-section (1):—The High Court exercising original criminal jurisdiction is not a ‘Court of Session’ within the meaning of this Code. A Court of Session is established in the mofussil in every Sessions Division, and belongs to a class of Courts different from the High Courts—Harendra, 51 Cal. 980 (1982), 29 C.W.N. 384, 26 Cr.L.J. 385, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 384, 84 I.C. 929. See also Sukumar Majumdar v. Emp., A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 867, 59 Cal. 1248, 1932 Cr.C. 891, 34 Cr.L.J. 107, 140 I.C. 891.

Under sec. 20 of the Aden Courts Act (Bom Act II of 1864), the Resident of Aden is not a Court of Session, but is a persona designata invested with the powers of a Court of Session except as in that Act otherwise provided. The powers of the Court of Session conferred on the Resident are not wholly such as are defined in the Cr. P. Code, but only such as are specially provided in Act II of 1864—Robert Comlev, 29 Bom 575, 7 Bom L.R. 104.

Sub-section (2):—If the Local Government directs a particular place of sitting of any Court of Session, the High Court cannot alter the place of sitting; but it can, under sec. 526, change the venue of trial of any case from any one of these places to another, both notified under sec. 9—Lakshman, 55 Bom 576, 33 Bom L.R. 675, 32 Cr.L.J. 1147 (1148), A.I.R. 1931 Bom 313, 131 I.C. 347, 1931 Cr.C. 569.

Sub-section (3):—The appointment of an Additional Sessions Judge does not constitute an additional Sessions Court. There can be only one Judge of such Sessions Court. If an Additional Sessions Judge is appointed, he can try only such cases as the Local Government directs or as the Sessions Judge makes over to him—Kunjan, 1 M.L.J. 397 (440) (F.B.). There is only one Court of Session, though it consists of a number of Judges (viz., Sessions Judge, Additional Sessions Judge, etc.). It is not correct to speak of the "Court of the Sessions Judge" or the "Court of the Additional Sessions Judge." Therefore, if an offence is committed before the Additional Sessions Judge, the complaint under sec. 476 may be made by the Sessions Judge, because they are Judges of the same Court of Session—Iffatullah, 58 Cal. 1117, 35 C.W.N. 400, 32 Cr.L.J. 842 (843), A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 100. But a different view seems to have been taken by Patkar, J., in Lakshman, supra, where he observes "I think, therefore, that the Additional Sessions Judge and the Assistant Sessions Judge appointed under sec. 9 (3), though exercising jurisdiction as a Sessions Court, are, while exercising their functions in respect of particular cases which have been made over to them, different Courts to the Sessions Judge who has been appointed under sec. 9 (1) Criminal P. C. The Assistant Sessions Judge, the Additional Sessions Judge, and the Sessions Judge exercise co-ordinate or equal jurisdiction of a Sessions Court within the limits of the authority conferred on them by the Code, and are nevertheless different Courts each subordinate to the High Court."

A Sessions Judge has jurisdiction only within his division—Shanmugam Chetty v. Rennappa Mudaly, 29 Mad. 137.

10. (1) In every district outside the presidency-towns, the District Magistrate Provincial Government shall appoint a Magistrate of the first class who shall be called the District Magistrate.

(2) The Provincial Government may appoint any Magistrate of the first class to be an Additional District Magistrate * * * and such Additional District Magistrate shall have all or any of the powers of a District Magistrate under this Code or under any other law for the time being in force as the Provincial Government may direct.

(3) For the purposes of sections 192 sub-section (1), 407 sub-section (2), and 528 sub-sections (2) and (3), such Additional District Magistrate shall be deemed to be subordinate to the District Magistrate.

39. Change:—In sub-section (2), the italicised words have been added, and the words "for a period not exceeding six months" have been omitted, by sec. 2 of the Cr. P. Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923).

Sub-section (3) has also been newly added by the same Amendment Act. Prior to this amendment, the Code did not define the relation between a District Magistrate and an Additional District Magistrate. Section 12 also did not make an Additional District Magistrate subordinate to a District Magistrate, and therefore the latter had no power under sec. 528 to transfer a case from a Sub-divisional Magistrate to the Additional District Magistrate—Prakas Chunder, 34 Cal. 918. This case is no longer good law, because under sub-section (3), newly enacted, the District Magistrate has been expressly empowered to transfer cases under sec. 528 to the Additional District Magistrate.

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

40. District Magistrate:—A District Magistrate is appointed in a district outside the Presidency-towns. Therefore a Presidency Magistrate is not included in the term 'District Magistrate'—Chota Singh, 32 Mad 303.

A District Magistrate is subordinate to the Sessions Judge and cannot disregard the order of the latter—Tun Lin, 5 L.B.R. 49, 2 I.C. 541, 10 Cr.L.J. 77.

This section directs that a District Magistrate shall be appointed for every district, but it does not say that one officer should not be appointed District Magistrate for two districts—Arumuga, 54 Mad. 943 32 Cr.L.J. 1095 (1097), 61 M.L.J. 265 (F.B.).

Because the District Magistrate has been invested with certain powers under this section, it does not follow that he has not other powers which are not contemplated by the Criminal Procedure Code. He is in addition the Collector of the district. He is also the District Officer and in those capacities he has to perform many functions which are not covered by the Criminal Procedure Code—Bejoy Krishna v. Shyam Narain, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 30 (31).

District Magistrate and first class Magistrate —Where a trial was commenced by an officiating District Magistrate, and before its close, the officer reverted to his original position as first class Magistrate of the district, in which capacity also he had jurisdiction over the offence, it was held that he had jurisdiction to continue the trial. This Code does not recognise any particular Court as that of the District Magistrate but only Courts of First, Second and Third Class Magistrates—Syed Sajjad Husain, 3 A.L.J. 825, 4 Cr.L.J. 140, 1906 A.W.N. 201.

An Additional District Magistrate is invested by the Local Government by virtue of the powers conferred upon it by sec. 10 (2), Cr. P. Code, with the powers of a Court of Revision and is, therefore, competent when disposing of a case by virtue of those powers to make any consequential order as to the disposal of property—Nagappan v. Ramaram, 31 Cr.L.J. 1085, 126 I.C. 594, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 769. But see Mania Pillai v. Gopalakrishna Iyer, 1928 M.W.N. 633, where a contrary view seems to have been taken. This view was not approved in Abdur Rahiman Kully v. Emp., infra.

There is no difficulty in reading sec. 8, Sarda Act (Child Marriage Restraint Act, XIX of 1929) with sec. 10 (2), Cr. P. C., and holding that an Additional District Magistrate who has been given all the powers of the District Magistrate is empowered to try a case under the Sarda Act also—Abdur Rahiman Kully v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Mad 637, (1937) 1 M.L.J. 498, 1937 M.W.N. 321, 45 M.L.W. 435, 1937 M. Cr. C. 114, 169 I.C. 71, 38 Cr.L.J. 664, 1 L.R. 1937 Mad. 1034.

It does not mean that the District Magistrate referred to in sub-sec. (1) is a different functionary from the District Magistrate referred to in sub-sec. (2). In Part 5 of Sch. III, Cr. P. Code, the ordinary powers of a District Magistrate have been specified and those powers include "power to tender pardon to an accomplice at any stage of a case" under sec. 339, Cr. P. C. Consequently sub-sec. (2) of sec. 10 refers to the powers of a District Magistrate evidently using the term in a general sense, and the mere fact that in sub-sec. (1), the article 'the' has been used before the words "District Magistrate" does not alter the situation in any manner. The Additional District Magistrate is, therefore, in his own right empowered under the law to tender a pardon to the accused—Amar Singh, 40 Cr.L.J. 543 (544), 181 I.C. 509, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 796, 40 P.L.R. 758, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 38.

11. Whenever, in consequence of the office of a District Magistrate becoming vacant, any officer succeeds temporarily to the chief executive administration of the district, such officer shall, pending the orders of the Provincial Government, exercise all the powers and perform all the duties respectively conferred and imposed by this Code on the District Magistrate.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

40A. An officer absent on casual leave is not treated as absent from duty. While such officer is on casual leave, the next senior officer remains in charge of the current duties. There is no vacancy and no temporary succession within the meaning of this section, when a Sub-divisional Magistrate is temporarily looking after the current duties of a District Magistrate absent on casual leave on account of illness, and when there is no order appointing him to officiate as District Magistrate—Achhaibar, 24 O.C. 255, 22 Cr.L.J. 713, 63 I.C. 873.

12. (1) The Provincial Government may appoint as many persons as it thinks fit, besides the District Subordinate Magistrates. Magistrate, to be Magistrates of the first, second or third class in any district outside the presidency-towns; and the Provincial Government, or the District Magistrate subject to the control of the Provincial Government, may, from time to time, define local areas within which such persons may exercise all or any of the powers with which they may respectively be invested under this Code.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by such definition, the jurisdiction and powers of such persons shall extend throughout such district.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

41. Magistrate:—A Cantonment Magistrate is a Magistrate appointed under this section—Maula Buksh, 1879 P.R. 1.

42. Local area:—Although the expression "local area" includes a sessions division, district or sub-division (Punardeo v. Ram Sarup, 2 C.W.N. 577, 25 Cal. 858), still it appears sufficiently clear that the Legislature did not contemplate the exercise of jurisdiction by any Magistrate outside the limits of an area called a 'District' in which he might be appointed by the Local Government—Shaik Fakhudin, 9 Bom 40 (45). A Sub-divisional Magistrate who has had his jurisdiction defined within a sub-division or local area in the district by order of the District Magistrate, cannot take cognizance of a matter outside such local area—Kunj Behari v. Lanua, 19 A.L.J. 72, 59 I.C. 554, 22 Cr.L.J. 122. But where a notification, appointing a Magistrate, did not specify any local area within which he was to exercise jurisdiction, but conferred on him power to try "all such cases as might be instituted in his Court," it was held that the notification by necessary implication conferred jurisdiction throughout the province—Lakshmi Chand, 24 P.R. 1901, 96 P.L.R. 1901.

But a Magistrate having jurisdiction within a district cannot record a confession in a place outside British India (e.g., in a Native State) although the offence in respect of which the confession is made has been committed within that district—Nahar Singh, 19 A.L.J. 355, 22 Cr.L.J. 567

43. Jurisdiction extends throughout district:—Unless the powers of a Magistrate have been restricted to a certain local area, he has jurisdiction over the entire district—Sarat Chandra v. Bipin, 6 C.W.N. 552, 29 Cal 389; Hiranand, 10 C.W.N. 1095 (1098), 4 Cr.L.J. 228; Achhaibar Singh, 24 O.C. 255, 63 I.C. 873, 22 Cr.L.J. 713; therefore a Magistrate appointed for a whole district, but put in charge of a particular taluk or sub-division only, is not without jurisdiction, if he inquires into or tries a case in another taluk or sub-division of the same district—Jamshedji Ratanlal 177; Rameshwar, 1 P.L.T. 632, 55 I.C. 593, 21 Cr.L.J. 321; Ghulam Hussain v. Sajawal Shah, A.I.R. 1933 Lah 143, 1933 Cr.C. 241, 34 P.L.R. 365, 142 I.C. 430; Yaqub v. Appaswami, 25 Cr.L.J. 556, 81 I.C. 44, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 140. But a Magistrate to whom the District Magistrate has allotted a particular area can take cognizance of offences committed only in that area—Kunj Behari Lal v. Lanua, A.I.R. 1921 All 123, 59 I.C. 554, 19 A.L.J. 72, 22 Cr.L.J. 122; Khush Chand v. Emp., 29 Cr.L.J. 124, 106 I.C. 716, A.I.R. 1927 All 791; Mahangu Lal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 131, 154 I.C. 873, 1 B.R. 356, 7 R.P. 498, 35 Cr.L.J. 580, 16 P.L.T. 347, 1935 Cr.C. 331; Syed Ali v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 810, 176 I.C. 784, 11 R.N. 79, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 448. Where the District Magistrate transferred a case under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code from the file of one Sub-divisional Magistrate to the file of another Sub-divisional Magistrate vested with 1st class powers who drew up fresh proceedings under sec. 145 in respect of lands included in the previous proceedings and also other lands not within his sub-division and not included in the previous proceedings, held that he had jurisdiction to do so—Rameshwar v. Baynath, 37 Cr.L.J. 55, 159 I.C. 12, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 436, 16 P.L.T. 576, 1935 Cr.C. 1107, distinguishing Chellapathi v. Subba, 32 Mad 211, 114 I.C. 625, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 123, 30 Cr.L.J. 340, 55 M.L.J. 693, 28 M.L.W. 664, 1928 M.W.N. 921.

A Magistrate stationed at the Sudder of a district has jurisdiction, in the matter of proceedings under sec. 107, in respect of a breach of peace in a sub-division of the district—Golam Rahaman v. Kalipada, 36 C.W.N. 796 (797), 33 Cr.L.J. 858, 139 I.C. 850, 59 Cal 1484, 1932 Cr.C. 888, Ind Rul. 1932 Cal 663. A contrary view seems to have been taken in Syed Ali v. Emp., supra.

The mere definition of areas cannot be taken as a provision excluding jurisdiction of the rest of the district, for if it did, sub-sec. (2), sec. 12, would be meaningless. The sub-section clearly requires some provision excluding jurisdiction in the rest of the district, which is either express or must be inferred by necessary implication—Gulabrao Laxmanrao Changude v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 514, 162 I.C. 207, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 409, 37 Bom.L.R. 745, 1935 Cr.C. 1113, dissenting from Kunj Behari Lal v. Lanua, supra. This view seems to be in agreement with the view taken in Golam Rahaman v. Kalipada, supra.

44. Effect of transfer:—Since the jurisdiction of a Magistrate extends throughout the district, the transfer of a Magistrate from one local area to another local area in the same district does not oust his jurisdiction over the former area—Karuppana v. Akobalamatam, 22 Mad. 47, 2 Weir 430. Cases on the file of one Magistrate in a district do not automatically pass to his successor in the local area, merely because the former has been transferred to another local area in the same district. The former Magistrate can retain the case on his file even after he is transferred to another local area in the district, and can pass order in the case—Mithani, 34 All. 203, 9 A.L.J. 448, 13 Cr.L.J. 203, 14 I.C. 103; Chhoti v. Khacheru, 42 All. 649 (654).

But when a Magistrate is transferred to another district, his jurisdiction over the district in which he was originally appointed ceases as soon as he is relieved by his successor, and therefore a judgment passed after, though on the same day as, he was relieved by his successor, was held to be without jurisdiction—Anand Sarup, 3 All. 563; Balwant v. Krishen, 19 All. 114; Baishnab Charan v. Amin Ali, 50 Cal. 664, 38 C.L.J. 202, 24 Cr.L.J. 489, 18 Cr.L.J. 10, 36 I.C. 842.

Concurrent jurisdiction:—Where there is a concurrent jurisdiction and one Court has taken up the case, the jurisdiction of the other Court is not ousted by the first Court, taking seizin of the case. Of course where one Court had arrived at a conclusion and delivered a judgment it would be open to the accused to plead autrefois convict or autrefois acquit but that is a different question altogether from holding that the proceedings in one or other in the Courts are coram non judge—Dhanwantri v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 852, 34 P.L.R. 672, 1933 Cr.C. 1108, 35 Cr.L.J. 171.

44A. Magisterial Powers:—No recommendation shall be made for the grant of magisterial powers or of enhanced magisterial powers to, or the withdrawal of any magisterial powers from, any person save after consultation with the District Magistrate of the district in which he is working, or with the Chief Presidency Magistrate, as the case may be. Vide sec. 256 of the Government of India Act, 1935 (26 Geo. 5).

13. (1) The Provincial Government may place any Magistrate of the first or second class in charge of a sub-division, and relieve him of the charge as occasion requires.

Power to put Magistrate in charge of sub-division.

(2) Such Magistrate shall be called Sub-divisional Magistrate.

(3) The Provincial Government may delegate its powers under this section to the District Magistrate.

Delegation of powers to District Magistrate.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Sub-section (3):—Under sub-sec.(1) of this section the Local Government (now Provincial Government) may place any Magistrate of the first or second class in charge of a Sub-division, and relieve him of the charge as occasion requires, and under sub-sec (3), this power may be delegated to the District Magistrate. It appears that there is a notification of 1873 which was published in the Calcutta Gazette delegating to District Magistrates the powers of the Local Government under sub-sec. (1). It is competent, therefore, for the District Magistrate to appoint any Magistrate of the first or second class as a Sub-divisional Magistrate on a particular date or dates or for a particular period. Thus he may do without relieving the permanent incumbent. When there is a standing order of the District Magistrate that when the S. D. O. is away on tour, the second officer is to carry on the work of his general file, it means that there is an appointment, but that the appointment is limited only to a particular kind of work and a particular occasion. There is nothing in sec. 13 Cr. P. C. to prevent such a limited appointment being made. The fact that the second officer is to transact the business on the general file of the S. D. O., cannot divest him of his jurisdiction as second officer. When so acting, he acts in addition to his own duties as second officer—Ramkrishna Sinha v. Emp., 42 C.W.N. 246 (249), 174 I.C. 513, 39 Cr.L.J. 417, 10 R.C. 693, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 195.

14. (1) The Provincial Government may confer upon any person all or any of the powers conferred or conferrable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first, second, or third class in respect to particular cases or to a particular class or particular classes of cases, or in regard to cases generally, in any local area outside the presidency-towns.

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Special Magistrates, and shall be appointed for such term as the Provincial Government may by general or special order direct.

(3) The Provincial Government may delegate, with such limitations as it thinks fit, to any officer under its control, the power conferred by sub-section (1).

(4) No powers shall be conferred under this section on any police officer below the grade of Assistant District Superintendent, and no powers shall be conferred on a police officer except so far as may be necessary for preserving the peace, preventing crime, and detecting, apprehending, and detaining offenders in order to their being brought before a Magistrate, and for the performance by the officer of any other duties imposed upon him by any law for the time being in force.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937 .

45. "Any local area":—The words 'any local area' can be extended to cover, if necessary, a whole province; therefore, where the Local Government, by Notification, appointed a Special Magistrate under this section with all the powers of a first class Magistrate in regard to cases generally 'throughout the Punjab', it was held that the appointment was not ultra vires—Hiralal, 7 P.R. 1918, 19 Cr L.J. 310, 44 I.C. 326; Lakhmi Chand, 24 P.R. 1901.

The connotation of a Special Magistrate under this Code is that he should have (1) specified powers conferrable on a Magistrate by the Local Government; (2) a local area within which to exercise those powers; and (3) jurisdiction to try particular cases or classes of cases generally. Each of the above ingredients enters into the conception of a Special Magistrate, but the last is a variable element and does not necessarily require specific mention. If nothing is said about the cases to be tried, it will be understood that all cases triable by law by a Magistrate invested with the powers of a Special Magistrate may be tried by him. But the powers and the local area must be defined—Lakhmi Chand, 24 P.R. 1901, 96 P.L.R. 1901.

Case:—If a Special Magistrate is appointed under sec. 14 to try a particular 'case', against a certain person, the 'case' would cover all the charges which are laid against that person—Jhangur, 29 Bom L.R. 996, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 501, 28 Cr L.J. 1012 (1013). The word 'case' is comprehensive enough to include all the offences which come to light during the investigation of the case which the Special Magistrate was originally empowered to try—Bhat, 33 Bom L.R. 1192, 33 Cr.L.J. 68 (70), 134 I.C. 1230, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 517.

Where the Local Government only empowered the Judge to try cases under secs. 121, 121-A, 122 and 395, I. P. C., it cannot be presumed from this that it was intended that an offence under sec. 395, I. P. C., when no murder was committed, was to be tried under this special procedure—Nga Aung Pa v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 'Rang.' 116, 34 Cr.L.J. 929, 145 I.C. 251, 1933 Cr.C. 641.

Appeal:—Appeals from the orders of a Special Magistrate would lie to the Sessions Judge within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the Magistrate was in any particular case holding his Court—Hiralal, 7 P.R. 1918, 19 Cr.L.J. 310, 44 I.C. 326.

15. (1). The Provincial Government may direct any two or more Magistrates in any place outside the Benches of Magistrates. presidency-towns to sit together as a Bench, and may by order invest such Bench with any of the powers conferred or conferrable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first, second, or third class, and direct it to exercise such powers in such cases, or such classes of cases only, and within such local limits, as the Provincial Government thinks fit.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by any order under this section, every such Bench shall have the Powers exercisable by Bench in absence of special direction. powers conferred by this Code on a Magistrate of the highest class to which any one of its members, who is present taking part in the proceedings as a member of the Bench, belongs, and, as far as practicable shall, for the purposes of this Code, be deemed to be a Magistrate of such class.

See Notes under sec. 350A.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937

46. Powers of Bench:—Where a case triable by a first class Magistrate was at first tried by a Bench of Magistrates which could exercise first class powers when sitting together, but neither of whom was individually invested with first class powers, and at the adjourned hearing only one member of the Bench was present, it was held that he was not competent to try the case alone—In re Baroda, 2 C.L.R. 348. An Honorary Magistrate who is a member of a Bench, which exercises powers of third class collectively cannot act independently (that is, when not sitting on the Bench), unless he is authorised to act independently—Nun Sheikh, 29 Cal. 483, 6 C.W.N. 596.

Where there was a rule framed under this section, that only such cases as could be tried summarily should be transferred to the Bench, and in spite of this rule, a case not triable summarily but within the competency of the Bench was transferred to it, and the Bench tried the case in the regular way, it was held that this contravention of the rule in transferring a case to the Bench which was not triable summarily was cured by the provisions of sec. 529 (f), and the trial was valid—Nga San, 11 I.C. 247, 12 Cr.L.J. 383 (Bur.).

An order appointing an Honorary Magistrate for a particular period is wrong; if therefore such Magistrate has been appointed for a particular term of years, the term imposed is ultra vires and his jurisdiction to try cases extends even after the expiry of the period, in the absence of a specific order cancelling his appointment—Tukaram v. Dagdu, 31 Cr.L.J. 24, 120 I.C. 223, A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 96, 1930 Cr.C. 201.

Where a complaint under sec. 430, I.P.C., was sent to a Bench Court for trial, treating it to be a case regarding an offence under sec. 426, I.P.C., the trial under sec. 426, I.P.C., was held to be not void, though the Bench Court had no jurisdiction to try an offence under sec. 430, I.P.C.—Picha Kudumban v. Servaikara Thevan, 32 Cr.L.J. 971, 133 I.C. 4, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 491, 1931 Cr.C. 558, 1930 M.W.N. 770, 46A. "Sit together":—Reading secs 15 and 16 together it seems that the words "sit together" in sec. 15 must be construed as equivalent to "constitute," so that the Local Government may direct any two or more Magistrates to constitute a Bench, and then they may invest that Bench with special powers, and they may make rules under sec. 16 providing how the Bench is to be constituted for the purpose of conducting trials. Where under sec. 15 the Government directed that ten Magistrates, two having powers of the first class and eight of the second class, should sit together as a Bench and conferred on the said Bench all the powers conferred by the Code on a Magistrate of the first class except certain specified powers, the Bench consisting of three Magistrates, who were individually vested with second class powers, had the powers of a First Class Magistrate and an appeal from their decision lies to the Sessions Judge—Bhimbai Sitaram, A.I.R. 1934 Bom 176, 36 Bom L.R. 314, 36 Cr.L.J. 592, 151 I.C. 827, 1934 Cr.C. 664.

16. The Provincial Government may, or subject to the Power to frame rules control of the Provincial Government, the for guidance of Benches District Magistrate may, from time to time, make rules consistent with the Code, for the guidance of Magistrates' Benches in any district respecting the following subjects:—

- (a) the classes of cases to be tried;
- (b) the times and places of sitting;
- (c) the constitution of the Bench for conducting trials;
- (d) the mode of settling differences of opinion which may arise between the Magistrates in session.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

47. Consistent with this Code:—The rules framed under this section must be consistent with this Code. "The Judges have recently had occasion to call for and examine the rules made in each district, and they noticed that in several districts, District Magistrates have exceeded the powers conferred upon them by sec. 16, either by making rules inconsistent with the Code itself, or by adding rules on the subject not mentioned in the section in question, and so not within the powers conferred by it. Care should, therefore, be taken to limit action under the section to the powers conferred by it"—Punj. Cir., No 13-2612 G., of 1890.

48. Classes of cases to be tried:—There is nothing in this Code which prescribes that any particular class of cases should be tried by Honorary Magistrates—Yagub v. Appaswami, 25 Cr.L.J. 556, 81 I.C. 44, A.I.R. 1925 Nag 140. But Magistrates should ordinarily not make over cases to Benches which are likely to be of a protracted character—Bholanath, 2 Cal. 23. So also, cases involving difficult questions of fact or law should not be directed to be tried by a Bench of Honorary Magistrates—Varadarajulu, 47 Mad. 716 (722), 47 M.L.J. 470, 25 Cr.L.J. 1070. There can be no gainsaying the fact that cases, which are likely to be keenly contested and intricate in nature, are, on the whole, likely to be more efficiently disposed of by stipendiary Magistrates than by Honorary Magistrates or at least the accused persons concerned will believe this to be the case—Pondurang v. Emp., 28 Cr.L.J. 893, 105 I.C. 226, 10 N.L.R. 184, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 21.

Where a Bench Court thinks that a case pending in its file involves intricate questions of fact or of law and should be transferred to some other Court, it should move the matter officially, without leaving it to the parties concerned—In re Gopal Nair, 29 Cr.L.J. 123, 106 I.C. 715, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 403.

Offences under sec. 3 (12) of the Madras Town Nuisances Act (III of 1889) may be tried by Bench Magistrates—24 Cr.L.J. 110, 71 I.C. 233, 45 Mad. 843.

Constitution of Bench—Quorum:—See Notes under sec. 350A.

49. Differences of opinion:—According to the new rule framed in Bengal (see rule 6 of the Bengal Rules, cited below) in case of difference of opinion as to the finding between an even number of Magistrates the case shall be referred back to the District Magistrate or the Sub-divisional officer; and the provisions of sec. 350 shall then apply—Chand v. Shamsheer, 19 Cr.L.J. 312, 44 I.C. 328, (Cal.). But in Eastern Bengal and Assam, the old Notification under which the difference of opinion between two Honorary Magistrates forming a Bench is to be settled by the casting vote of one of them, viz., the Chairman, is still in force. See Utsal, 18 C.W.N. 394, 14 Cr.L.J. 684, 19 C.L.J. 92, 21 I.C. 1004.

According to the U. P. rules, if there is an irreconcilable difference of opinion among the members of a Bench as to the guilt of the accused, he should be given the benefit of doubt. The Bench cannot refer the case to a District Magistrate; such a reference is irregular and is not justified by any provisions of the Code—Kashinath v. Shanker, 16 Cr.L.J. 113, 27 I.C. 177 (All.); Abdul Aziz, 15 A.L.J. 237, 18 Cr.L.J. 506.

In a case where the President of the Bench is in a minority as to conviction or acquittal, the judgment should be written by some member of the majority. "Otherwise, as in the present case, we have a conviction based on an acquitting judgment, and we (Court of Revision) are left without any reasons for the conviction which under the provisions of the Cr P Code the Bench is bound to set out. The judgment does not conform to the law and the conviction cannot be upheld"—Lalamma, 51 Mad. 338, 54 M.L.J. 709, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 197, 29 Cr.L.J. 207, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 197; see also 1928 M.W.N. 31; In re Dyla Seetharamayya, 27 Cr.L.J. 90, 91 I.C. 394, 23 M.L.W. 537, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 354.

The fact that the President of the Bench was among those who thought the accused were not guilty was no reason why on their being found guilty by a majority of the Bench, he should not vote on the question of sentence—In re Mennakantirosayya, 28 Cr.L.J. 310, 100 I.C. 534, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 500.

49A. Rules:—Apart from any prejudice to the accused where a Rule affecting the constitution of the Bench has not been complied with the trial cannot be treated as valid—Mohidin, 44 Bom. 400 (403), 22 Bom.L.R. 154, 21 Cr.L.J. 369.

RULES FOR GUIDANCE OF BENCHES.

Bengal Rules.

1. The Bench shall try such cases as its powers enable it to try and it is authorised to try, arising within the local limits following.—

(Here enter local limits.)

or such particular cases as are made over to it by the Magistrate of the district, or any Magistrate empowered to make over cases. It can only entertain of its own motion complaints made in respect of the following classes of offences.—

(Here enter classes of cases.)

2 The Bench shall sit at the place and on the date mentioned below. The Honorary Magistrates will sit in the rotation arranged by the Magistrate of the district or division; but any Magistrate not named may sit, provided he is not personally interested in the case before the Bench.

(Here enter place and ordinary dates of sitting)

3 The Bench may hold one or more adjourned sittings if this be found necessary for the disposal of business or of part-heard cases; but it shall be open to the Bench at the close of its regular sitting either to apply to the District or Subordinate Magistrate to transfer from their file any unheard cases, or to postpone them to next Bench day as may seem most convenient.

4. The Chairman of the Bench for the time being shall be the Magistrate of highest powers, present at a sitting. Where two or more are of equal powers, the Bench may elect its own Chairman, provided always that it shall be in the discretion of the Magistrate of the district to appoint the Chairman for each time of sitting or generally.

5. The Chairman shall maintain order, conduct the proceedings of the Court, and exercise all the functions in that behalf usually exercised by a Magistrate when sitting alone. It shall be open to any member of the Bench to put any question to the witnesses, either direct or through the Chairman, as to the latter may seem advisable, and to suggest any matter for the Chairman's consideration.

6. Each member for the Bench shall have a voice in deciding as to the admissibility of evidence and in the finding and sentence. In a Bench of three or other uneven number of members, the opinion of the majority shall prevail. When the numbers are even, the opinion of the Chairman shall prevail in all points, except the finding. In the event of disagreement as to the finding, the case shall be referred back to the District Magistrate or to the Sub-Divisional Officer as the case may be. (Substituted for the old rule 6. Vide Cal. Gaz., 2-5-1906, Part I, p. 980) [See 8 C.W.N. 862 and 10 C.W.N. 642 (F.B.) in this connection]

7. In the trial of ordinary cases, the Chairman shall generally record the evidence and judgment, but such duty may, with his consent, be performed by any one of the colleagues.

In the trial of summary cases, where the Bench has been invested with summary powers, the necessary record shall be prepared by the Chairman or one of his colleagues, or by means of the Clerk of the Court, but in every case the record must be signed by each member of the Bench who is present.

8. [This rule as to the hearing of any part-heard case has been cancelled by Government Notification, June 6th, 1893—Calcutta Gazette, 1893, Part I, p. 523]. See Hardwar v. Khaga, 20 Cal. 870 which declared this rule to be ultra vires. See also 18 Mad. 394.

9. The Bench may refer any point of law for the opinion of the Magistrate of the District or Sub-Division, or of any first class Magistrate appointed by the Magistrate of the district for that purpose, and the Magistrate may certify his opinion thereon.

10. Magistrates should ordinarily not make over cases to Benches which are likely to be of a protracted character. Calcutta Gazette, 1899, Part I, p. 1071.

Madras Rules.

1. One or more Special Magistrates appointed for any local area may sit as a Bench, together with any salaried Magistrate whom the District Magistrate shall from time to time nominate for the purpose. The salaried Magistrate shall be the Chairman of the Bench so constituted, and the Bench is hereby invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the third class or such higher powers as are exercisable under the provisions of sub-sec. (2) of sec. 15 of the Code of Criminal Procedure—

- (1) to try summarily offences against the I. P. C., ss 277, 278, 279, 285, 286, 289, 290, 323, 334, 336, 341, 352, 426 and 447;
- (2) to try summarily offences against Municipal Acts and the Conservancy clauses of Police Acts, punishable only with fine or with imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month;
- (3) to try summarily abetments of any of the foregoing offences;
- (4) to try summarily attempts to commit any of the foregoing offences when such attempts are offences;
- (5) to try, in accordance with Chapter XX of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, offences punishable under—
 - (a) sub-section (2) and (3) of s. 112 of the Madras Local Boards Act, 1884;
 - (b) s. 18 of the Madras Registration of Births and Deaths Act, 1899;
 - (c) ss. 5, 6 and 7 of the Madras Towns Nuisances Act, 1889;
 - (d) the Madras Hackney Carriage Act, 1911;

.. Provided that no Bench of Magistrates shall try offences under ss. 426 and 447, I. P. C., including abetments of and attempts to commit, such offences, except with the special sanction of Government :

Provided also that with the approval of the District Magistrate, any three or more Special Magistrates, of whom one is specially designated by the District Magistrate, may sit together as a Bench and shall exercise the powers of a Magistrate of the third class in respect of the offences specified above other than those referred to in the first proviso.

2. The Magistrate specially designated by the District Magistrate shall, if no salaried Magistrate is present, be Chairman of such Bench.

3. All existing rules made by District Magistrates for the guidance of Benches in their several districts as to the times and places of sitting shall continue in force until modified or withdrawn.

4. Differences of opinion shall be settled by the votes of the majority of the Magistrates present, the Chairman having the casting vote.

5. If any person charged with any of the offences specified above is arrested without warrant, and has not been released on bail, he shall be produced for trial before the salaried Magistrate having jurisdiction. If such person has been released on bail, or if process to compel his appearance is issued by the salaried Magistrate having jurisdiction, the bail bond or the process shall require him to appear in accordance with its terms before the Bench of Magistrates having jurisdiction. The District Magistrate or the Sub-divisional Magistrate shall exercise the same powers in regard to withdrawal or reference of cases from Benches as he possesses in the case of Magistrate under s. 528 of the Cr. P. C.

6. Under s 265, Cr. P. C., every Bench of Magistrates is authorised to prepare the record of judgment of the Bench by means of any officer appointed by the Sub-divisional Magistrate.

7 Under s 260 of the said Code, every Bench of Magistrates exercising first class powers is hereby invested with power to try summarily any or all of the offences specified in that section, and every Bench of Magistrates exercising powers of the first or second class is hereby empowered to try summarily all or any of the offences specified in clauses (1) and (2) of Rule 1, supra. Government Order No. 1628, Notification, Judicial, 8th October, 1912. See also Fort St George Gazette, 1891, Pt 1, pp. 879, 923, and 1095.

8. The Governor in Council is pleased to direct that the term of office of Honorary Magistrates shall be five years.

Bombay Rules.

Rules made by Government of Bombay for the guidance of Benches of Magistrates, "A" and "B" established by Government Notification No 5848 for the area within the limits of the Poona City and Suburban Municipalities.—

1. Class of cases to be tried.—Except in respect of offences under the Indian Penal Code, Chapters VI, VII, VIII, IX, XV, XXI, XXII, and offences designated in Col. 8, Sch II, of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, as triable exclusively by the Court of Session, any such quorum of either of the said Benches as shall be constituted as hereinafter provided, may exercise the ordinary powers of a Magistrate of the first class in all cases transferred to the said Bench by or under the order of the Magistrate of the district or by the Sub-divisional Magistrate to whom the said Benches are immediately subordinate

2. Each Bench to be divided into two sections.—Each of the said Benches shall be divided into two sections containing four Honorary Magistrates in each

3. District Magistrate to determine composition of each section.—The Magistrate of the district shall from time to time determine which of the Honorary Magistrates in each Bench shall belong to each section of such Bench. The constitution of each section should be frequently changed.

4. Each section to sit separately.—Each such section shall sit separately, but any stipendiary Magistrate who is a member of the Bench may sit at any time on either section.

5 Times of sitting :—Except on Sundays and closed holidays, at least one section of each Bench shall hold a sitting every day between the hours of 10 A M and 5 P M.

6. Order and days of sitting .—Not less than ten days before the end of each month, each Bench shall meet and arrange the order in which and the days on which each of its sections shall sit during the following month. The arrangement so made shall be forthwith submitted to the Magistrate of the District for his approval.

Unless the Magistrate of the District communicate his disapproval before the beginning of the month for which it is made, the said arrangement shall hold good for that month. If either Bench fails to make such arrangement, or makes one which the Magistrate of the district disapproves, the Magistrate of the district may himself make an arrangement as aforesaid, which shall be communicated by him to the Bench and shall hold good for the month for which it is made

7. Places of sitting .—Each section of each Bench shall hold its sitting at such places as may be from time to time appointed for this purpose by the Magistrates of the district.

8 Quorum —In order to form a quorum, at least three members shall be present from the beginning to the end of a trial or inquiry as members of the Bench :

Provided that if a stipendiary first class Magistrate be present throughout a trial or inquiry as President, the case may be proceeded with to its conclusion, notwithstanding that a quorum may not have been present throughout the proceedings

9. Stipendiary Magistrate may take part in any proceedings at any time .—Any stipendiary Magistrate who is a member of the Bench and is present during any part of any proceedings may take part therein as a member

but not give final vote unless present throughout .—Provided that no member of a Bench shall preside or give such vote as is referred to in Rule 15 in any case, who has been absent during any part of the proceedings therein

10 What members entitled to preside —Except as provided in Rule 9, the stipendiary Magistrate of highest official rank present, if, he be a first class Magistrate and if his official rank is not inferior to that of a Deputy Collector, shall preside. If there be no such stipendiary Magistrate present, the Honorary Magistrate whose name stands highest of those present, in a list of the Honorary Magistrates prepared from time to time by the District Magistrate, subject to the orders of Government, for this purpose, shall be President.

11 Members not to preside if unable to attend throughout —The claim of a member to preside at the trial of or enquiry into any case shall pass to the person next entitled thereto, if the former shall state that he has reason to doubt, whether he will be able to be present throughout the proceedings.

12. Substitution of President .—If any President be unable to be present or fail to be present throughout the proceedings such one of the members who have been present throughout such proceedings as is next entitled to preside shall take the place of the President.

13. Each quorum to proceed with its partly-heard adjourned cases notwithstanding Rule 6 —Notwithstanding any arrangement made as provided in Rule 6, any quorum that may have heard part of a case which stands adjourned at the rising of the Court shall proceed with such case till the conclusion of the trial or enquiry, as the case may be, at sittings held either from day to day or, if the case stand adjourned for more than one day, then on the days to which it stands adjourned. In such case the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may, for as long as shall be necessary, set aside or vary any arrangement made under Rule 6

14. Votes as to question other than final decision —The votes of all members present at the time being shall be taken to decide

(a) whether any particular evidence should be admitted or recorded ;

(b) whether an adjournment shall be allowed ;

(c) and any other question or order not finally decisive of the case.

15. Votes as to final decision :—Except as provided in Rule 9, the votes of the President and of every member present shall be taken to decide :

- (a) whether an accused person shall be convicted, acquitted, discharged or committed to the Court of Session ;
- (b) the sentence to be passed in the case of conviction.
- (c) When a person is accused in the alternative of two or more offences not equally punishable, and a difference of opinion arises between the Magistrates in session, as to which of such offences the accused person is guilty of, the presiding Magistrate shall put to the vote first, the question whether the accused is guilty of the offence for which the law provides the highest punishment, and if the votes decide such question against the accused, the question of his guilt on the minor charge or charges shall be excluded. (Addition to Rule 15).
- (d) if a difference of opinion arise between the Magistrates on any other point the questions raised shall be put to the vote by the presiding Magistrate in such order as he may deem most conducive to the furtherance of justice. (Addition to Rule 15)

16 Questions to be decided by a majority of votes :—All questions shall be decided by a majority of the votes taken, the President having a second or casting vote in all cases of equality of votes. (Bom. Govt. Gazette, 1885, Part I, p. 1262).

Rules for other areas:—4. The Bench in session shall ordinarily consist of ten Magistrates but in order to form a quorum at a trial or inquiry, at least three members shall, from the beginning to the end thereof, be present as members of the Bench.

5. If for any cause it is found necessary to adjourn the hearing of a case after the evidence has been partly taken, the trial shall either be completed before the Magistrates before whom it was commenced or shall be held afresh before a different set of Magistrates.

7. No Magistrate, who has been absent during any part of the trial, shall give an opinion or record a vote to the final order of conviction, sentence, acquittal or discharge (Government Resolution, No. 3447 of 19th May 1916).

Rules for U. P.

1. The Bench is authorised to try such cases or classes of cases as the Magistrate of the district may by special or general order from time to time direct.

2 The Bench shall sit on the days hereunder appointed at A.M. It shall not consist of more than three members ; and two of these shall form a quorum. The sittings shall be held in the Municipal Office or other Public Office appointed.

3. The Bench may hold one or more adjourned sittings, if this be found necessary, for the disposal of business or of part-heard cases ; provided that if any case is adjourned and the members at the adjourned session are not the same as sat at the first hearing of the case, the provision of s. 350 of the Criminal Procedure Code will be held to apply to the case

4. The Chairman of the Bench for the time being shall be the Magistrate of highest powers present at the sitting. Where all present are of equal powers, the Magistrate of oldest standing shall be the Chairman, provided always that it shall be in the discretion of the Magistrate of the district to appoint the Chairman for each time of sitting, or generally.

5 The Chairman shall conduct the proceedings of the Court and shall exercise all the functions in that behalf usually exercised by a Magistrate when sitting alone. He shall decide upon the admissibility of evidence and maintain order in the Court ; but it shall be open to any member of the Bench to put any question to the parties or witnesses, either direct or through the Chairman, as the latter may deem advisable, and to suggest any matter for the Chairman's consideration,

6. Any recording of evidence, issuing of process or other function exercisable by the Chairman may, with his consent, be exercised by any one of his colleagues.

7. Each member of the Bench shall have a voice in the finding and sentence, which shall be signed by the Chairman and by the members present. In regard to the finding, when the number of members is uneven, the opinion of the majority shall prevail; when the number is even and the members are equally divided, the accused shall get the benefit of the doubt.

In regard to the sentence, the opinion of the majority shall prevail; when the members are equally divided, the Chairman shall have casting vote; when the opinions of members are all different (as in a Full Bench of three members), the opinion of the Chairman shall prevail.

8. No Bench shall take cognizance of any offence committed by any European British subject or Government official. Any such case shall be forwarded to the Magistrate for disposal. Rule 8 above forbids Benches of Honorary Magistrates to take cognizance of any offence committed by any European British subject or Government official; but there is no order which debars the Magistrate from transferring such cases to Benches of Honorary Magistrates for trial. The Government assumes, however, that the Magistrates of Districts will, before exercising this power, carefully consider the circumstances of any such case, especially where Police-officers and Policemen are concerned. See All Man., p. 47.

17. (1) All Magistrates appointed under sections 12, 13

Subordination of Magistrates and Benches to District Magistrate; and 14, and all Benches constituted under section 15, shall be subordinate to the District Magistrate, and he may, from time to time, make rules or give special orders consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among such Magistrates and Benches; and

(2) Every Magistrate (other than a Sub-divisional Magistrate) and every Bench exercising powers to Sub-divisional Magistrate in a sub-division shall also be subordinate to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, subject, however, to the general control of the District Magistrate.

(3) All Assistant Sessions Judges shall be subordinate to Subordination of Assistant Sessions Judges to Sessions Judge.

the Sessions Judge in whose Court they exercise jurisdiction, and he may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among such Assistant Sessions Judges

(4) The Sessions Judge may also, when he himself is unavoidably absent or incapable of acting, make provision for the disposal of any urgent application by an Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge, or, if there be no Additional or Assistant Judge, by the District Magistrate, and such Judge or Magistrate shall have jurisdiction to deal with any such application.

(5) Neither the District Magistrate nor the Magistrates or Benches appointed or constituted under sections 12, 13, 14 and 15 shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge except to the extent and in the manner hereinafter expressly provided.

50. Scope:—The District Magistrate's powers under this section relate to the distribution of business among the subordinate Magistrates; this section does not empower a District Magistrate to stay the criminal proceedings pending before a subordinate Magistrate—Jagannath v. Rajagopalachari, 12 P.L.T. 671, 33 Cr.L.J. 147 (151), 135 I.C. 513. But see Nambia v. Sudalamuthu, 44 M.L.J. 642, 32 M.L.T. 191, 1923 M.W.N. 276, 17 L.W. 570, 25 Cr.L.J. 280, 76 I.C. 872, 25 Cr.L.J. 277, 76 I.C. 869, 1923 M.W.N. 251.

Subordinate:—'Subordinate' means inferior in rank within the meaning of sec. 435—Priya Gopal, 9 Bom 100; Padmanabha, 8 Mad. 18; Opendra v. Dukhim, 12 Cal. 473. All Magistrates and Courts made subordinate to the District Magistrate are 'inferior Criminal Courts' in respect of him within the meaning of sec. 435—Shamsuddin v. Pir Ala, 38 P.R. 1885. A Magistrate who is subordinate to a Sub-divisional Magistrate is also subordinate to the District Magistrate—Thaman Chetti v. Alagiri, 14 Mad. 399. A covenanted Magistrate of the third class to whom a case is made over by the Sub-divisional Magistrate is subordinate to the Sub-divisional Magistrate—Kallu, 4 All 366.

The Court of a subordinate Magistrate in the district is subordinate to that of the District Magistrate both in its judicial as well as executive capacity—Gur Dayal, 2 All. 205 (F.B.); and the District Magistrate has power to call for and examine the record of a proceeding before a Sub-divisional Magistrate of the first class—Laskari, 7 All. 853 (F.B.).

51. Clause (3):—Additional Sessions Judge not subordinate to Sessions Judge:—On a reference to this clause it is seen that the Code itself enacts that Assistant Sessions Judge shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge; but does not enact for the purposes of this section at any rate that the Additional Sessions Judge shall be subordinate to him. There is a distinction made between the position of an Additional Sessions Judge and that of an Assistant Sessions Judge—Daulat Ram v. Emp., 33 Cr.L.J. 158 (159), 135 I.C. 252, 1931 A.L.J. 591, A.I.R. 1931 All. 435, 1931 Cr.C. 707.

Clause (4):—There is nothing in the Cr. P. Code which gives jurisdiction to the Sessions Judge himself to transfer an appeal from the file of an Additional Sessions Judge to his own file, and even supposing a Sessions Judge has such jurisdiction, there is no provision in the Cr. P. Code by which an Additional Sessions Judge can issue such an order to another Judge of equal jurisdiction to himself—Daulat Ram v. Emp., 33 Cr.L.J. 158 (159), 135 I.C. 252, 1931 A.L.J. 591, A.I.R. 1931 All. 435, 1931 Cr.C. 707. An application within the meaning of this clause must be an application which is recognised by law, that is, a document properly stamped—Ibid.

Clause (5)—Magistrates not subordinate to the Sessions Judge:—A Sub-divisional Magistrate is subordinate to the District Magistrate and not to the Sessions Judge—Maini, 6 Pat. 39, 28 Cr.L.J. 353, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 111. Neither the District Magistrate nor the other Magistrates are subordinate to the Sessions Judge except in so far as is expressly provided in the Code (see secs. 123, 193, 195, 408, 431, 436, 437); therefore, an order of the District and Sessions Judge declaring certain persons to be touts and prohibiting them to appear within the precincts of the Court is limited only to his own Court and the Civil Courts subordinate to him, but does not extend to the Courts of Magistrates—Baru Sahib, 26 Mad. 596. So also, where Sub-divisional Magistrates (acting as an executive officer and not as a Court) revoked a sanction granted by a Sub-Magistrate, the Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction to set aside the order of the Sub-divisional Magistrate—Anon, 2 Weir 19; Sankaram v. Sakkarappa, 2 Weir 155.

"Except. . . hereinafter provided":—See for instance sec. 435, Explanation, which provides that all Magistrates shall be deemed to be inferior to the Sessions Judge for the purposes of sec. 435 (1) and sec. 437.

52. Delegation of powers by District Magistrate:—Clause (1) of sec. 17 empowers only a District Magistrate to make rules or pass orders as to the distribution of work. Such power cannot be delegated by a District Magistrate to a Sub-divisional Magistrate or to a senior Honorary Magistrate—Balkishen v. Sipahilal, 36 All. 468, 15 Cr.L.J. 584, 12 A.L.J. 803, 25 I.C. 336.

D.—Courts of Presidency Magistrates.

18. (1) The Provincial Government shall, from time to time, appoint a sufficient number of persons (hereinafter called Presidency Magistrates) to be Magistrates for each of the presidency-towns, and shall appoint one of such persons to be Chief Presidency Magistrate for each such town.

Appointment of Presidency Magistrates.

(2) The powers of a Presidency Magistrate under this Code shall be exercised by the Chief Presidency Magistrate, or by a salaried Presidency Magistrate, or by any other Presidency Magistrate empowered by the Provincial Government to sit singly, or by any Bench of Presidency Magistrates.

(3) A Presidency Magistrate may be appointed under this section for such a term as the Provincial Government may, by general or special order direct.

(4) The Provincial Government may appoint any person to be an Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate, and such Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate shall have all or any of the powers of a Chief Presidency Magistrate under this Code or under any other law for the time being in force, as the Provincial Government may direct.

Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate.

Change:—Sub-sections (3) and (4) have been added by section 3 of the Cr P. Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) "The Local Government is given power to define the term for which a Presidency Magistrate may be appointed; and provision is made for the appointment of an Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate to meet the contingency of such an officer being needed, which has been actually experienced in Calcutta"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Bill 3 of 1914).

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937

52A. Presidency-towns:—See Note 56.

52B. Powers of the Chief Presidency Magistrate:—See Note 44A.

53. Powers of Presidency Magistrate:—For the purposes of the Emigration Act, a Presidency Magistrate is included in the term 'Magistrate of the First Class' in sec. 111 of that Act—Jeevanji, 31 Bom. 611. But a Presidency Magistrate is not a District Magistrate or a Magistrate of the First Class within the meaning of sec. 52 of the Prisons Act, and has no jurisdiction to try offences under that section—Chota Singh, 32 Mad 303. A Presidency Magistrate has jurisdiction to charge, convict and punish under the Indian Penal Code a person who has committed an offence on the High Seas on board a British ship—Chief Officer, 25 Bom. 635, 3 Bom.L.R. 253. A Presidency Magistrate has jurisdiction to hold a preliminary inquiry into a case (or to try the case himself if it is triable by him) which has been committed to the High Court by the Coroner—Md. Rajuddin, 16 Bom. 159; Jogeshwar, 31 Cal. 1, 7 C.W.N.

889 (894) ; Mahomed Rajudin, 16 Bom. 159. But now the Coroner may also, where the verdict justifies him in so doing, issue his warrant for the apprehension of the person who is found to have caused the death of the deceased person, and send him forthwith to a Magistrate empowered to commit him for trial. Vide sec. 26 of the Coroners Act (IV of 1871) as amended by Act IV of 1908.

54. Bench of Magistrates:—This section confers the full powers of a Presidency Magistrate on a Bench of Honorary Presidency Magistrates, and the Bench can therefore take action under sec 106—J. Hassan v. Yas Kubar, 7 Bom L.R. 833, 2 Cr.L.J. 770.

55. Sub-section (4)—“any person”:—This is, not necessarily a Presidency Magistrate. “It is not necessary to restrict the appointment of an Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate to persons who are already Presidency Magistrates, and we have therefore substituted the words ‘any person’ for the words ‘any Presidency Magistrate’”—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

All stipendiary as well as non-stipendiary Presidency Magistrates have been declared by the Local Government subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate : Vide Notification No 3540 J.D. published in the Calcutta Gazette, 1903, Pt. I, dated 7th October 1903, p. 1321. By clause (4) of this section an Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate has been vested with all the powers of the Chief Presidency Magistrate. A power to send the case to a Subordinate Magistrate under sec. 202 of the Code is one of those powers. An Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate is, therefore, empowered to send a case to a Presidency Magistrate for judicial enquiry and report under sec. 202, Cr. P. Code—Kanayalai Bengam v. Kanmull Lodha, AIR 1934 Cal 405, 59 CLJ. 204, 38 C.W.N. 560, 148 IC 691, 61 Cal 467, 35 Cr.L.J. 929, 1934 Cr.C. 549.

19. Any two or more of such persons may (subject to the rules made by the Chief Presidency Magistrate under the powers hereinafter conferred) sit together as a Bench.

20. Every Presidency Magistrate shall exercise jurisdiction in all places within the presidency-town for which he is appointed, and within the limits of the port of such town and of any navigable river or channel leading thereto, as such limits are defined under the law for the time being in force for the regulation of port and port-dues.

56. Local limits of jurisdiction:—Under this section, a Presidency Magistrate, as one appointed for the whole of the Presidency town, has jurisdiction over all offences committed anywhere within the Presidency town. Therefore, the Chief Presidency Magistrate of Bombay has power to try an offence committed at a place within the jurisdiction of a Police Court in another part of the town—Khodabux, 28 Bom.L.R. 1066, 27 Cr.L.J. 1213, A.I.R. 1926 Bom 564, 97 IC 973.

Presidency Town.—It means the local limits for the time being of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William, Madras or Bombay as the case may be—Sec. 3 (41), General Clauses Act, X of 1897.

Within the limits of Port.—A Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta has jurisdiction to try an offence committed under sec. 84 of the Calcutta Port Act (III of 1890), outside the limits of Calcutta but within the limits of the port of Calcutta—Ganpat Rai v. Good, 47 Cal. 147, 24 C.W.N. 79, 30 CLJ. 252

The Presidency Magistrate of Bombay has jurisdiction over the port of Bombay up to high watermark—Joomabhai, Ratanlal 193 (194).

21. (1) Every Chief Presidency Magistrate shall exercise within the local limits of his jurisdiction all the powers conferred on him by this Code or which by any law or rule in force immediately before this Code comes into force are required to be exercised by any Senior or Chief Presidency Magistrate, and may from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Provincial Government, make rules consistent with this Code to regulate—

- (a) the conduct and the distribution of business and the practice in the Courts of the Magistrates of the town;
- (b) the times and places at which Benches of Magistrates shall sit;
- (c) the constitution of such Benches;
- (d) the mode of settling differences of opinion which may arise between Magistrates in session; and
- (e) any other matter which could be dealt with by a District Magistrate under his general powers of control over the Magistrates subordinate to him.

(2) The Provincial Government may, for the purposes of this Code, declare what Presidency Magistrates including Additional Chief Presidency Magistrates are subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, and may define the extent of their subordination.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

57. Subordination:—In Bombay (and Calcutta) all Presidency Magistrates and Benches are subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, and the Chief Presidency Magistrate has power to transfer a case from one Presidency Magistrate to another under sec. 528—Nageshwar, 1 Bom L.R. 347. But in Madras the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate and the Courts of the other Presidency Magistrates are of equal jurisdiction—Venkateswara, 35 Mad 739, 10 M.L.T. 518, 12 Cr.L.J. 451, 22 M.L.J. 114, 1911 M.W.N. 50. Under notification G. O. No 168, Judicial, dated 2nd February, 1900, all Presidency Magistrates in Madras are, however, subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate for the purposes of secs 124 (1), 144 (4), 192 and 528 Cr. P. C.

By a Notification No 6787 J, dated 23-10-1923, the Bengal Government has declared the Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta to be subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate. The latter has therefore power under sec. 528 to withdraw a case from the file of a Presidency Magistrate to whom that case was transferred by the Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate for disposal—Mohini v. Punam Chand, 51 Cal. 820 (826), 28 C.W.N. 903. See also Note 55.

58. Benches:—Section 18 has conferred on Benches of Magistrates all the powers of a Presidency Magistrate; and the Chief Presidency Magistrate has no power either to confer, restrict or enlarge those powers—J. Hassan v. Yaskubar, 7 Bom.L.R. 833, 2 Cr.L.J. 770. Therefore, where a Chief Presidency Magistrate revived a case that had been dismissed by him, and transferred it for trial to a Bench of Magistrates, it was held that the latter had jurisdiction to entertain a preliminary objection as to the jurisdiction of the Chief Presidency Magistrate so to revive and transfer—Walters v. Ibrahim, 7 C.W.N. 527.

According to the Rules (rr. 9 and 10) framed by the Bombay Government, if the Bench of Presidency Magistrates is equally divided in opinion, the Chairman shall have a second or casting vote. This holds good even though the Bench consists of only two members. But in such case the dissentient judgment also should form part of the record.—Fardunji, 29 Bom L.R. 1470, 28 Cr.L.J. 1025, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 630, 106 I.C. 209.

RULES.

Calcutta:—The following revised rules have been sanctioned by the Lieutenant-Governor for the guidance of Benches of Magistrates in the town of Calcutta :—

1. The Presidency Magistrates other than the Chief Presidency Magistrate or salaried Presidency Magistrate shall sit in the rotation arranged by the Chief Presidency Magistrate.

2. The Presidency Magistrates other than the Chief Presidency Magistrate or salaried Presidency Magistrate shall take only such business as is made over to them by the general or special order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate.

3. The Presidency Magistrates other than the Chief Presidency Magistrate or salaried Presidency Magistrate shall ordinarily sit from noon to 5 P.M. on the days on which they have been invited to attend by the Chief Presidency Magistrate.

4. A Bench of Presidency Magistrates shall ordinarily be composed of three Presidency Magistrates other than the Chief Presidency Magistrate or salaried Presidency Magistrate sitting together; or of two so sitting when, in the opinion of the Chief Presidency Magistrate, this is necessary.

5. A Bench of Presidency Magistrates may, however, be composed of the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the salaried Presidency Magistrate and two Presidency Magistrates other than the Chief Presidency Magistrate or salaried Presidency Magistrate, or of the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the salaried Presidency Magistrate and one Presidency Magistrate other than the Chief Presidency Magistrate or salaried Presidency Magistrate.

6. Should any Presidency Magistrate other than the Chief Presidency Magistrate or salaried Presidency Magistrate appointed to sit in Bench be unable or fail to be present on the appointed day, the Chief Presidency Magistrate may in his discretion, at any time before the actual sitting of the Court, reform or reconstitute such Bench in such manner as to him seems most convenient for the disposal of business.

7. The Chief Presidency Magistrate and the salaried Presidency Magistrate shall be ex-officio members of Benches; the Chief Presidency Magistrate shall, if present, officiate as Chairman of the Bench; the salaried Presidency Magistrate, if sitting, shall, in the absence of the Chief Presidency Magistrate, officiate as Chairman; and in the absence of the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the salaried Presidency Magistrate, the Chief Presidency Magistrate shall nominate the Chairman.

8. Every member of a Bench shall have a voice in the determination of all points arising in cases before them and in the finding and sentence. In a Bench composed of three members, the decision of the majority shall prevail; and in a Bench composed of two members, the decision of the Chairman shall prevail.

[This Rule, in so far as it directs that in a Bench composed of two members, the decision of the Chairman shall prevail, has been held to be inconsistent with the provisions of the Code, as well as arbitrary and not consonant with natural justice—Wakefield v. Haran, 8 C.W.N. 862. An analogous rule, viz., Rule 6 under s 16, supra, was strongly disapproved of by the majority of the Full Bench in 10 C.W.N. 642, and has since been modified by the Bengal Government.]

9. The Chairman shall ordinarily record the evidence and judgment in cases where a record of evidence and judgment is necessary; but such duty may, with his consent, be performed by any of his colleagues, or the evidence and judgment may be taken down by the Registrar, or the Clerk of the Court, at the dictation of the Chairman.

10. A Bench or a Presidency Magistrate sitting singly may hold one or more adjourned sittings, should it be necessary to do so for the disposal of business or part-heard cases, but such adjournment shall be, as far as possible, de die in diem.

11. Any part-heard case may be sent back to the Chief Presidency Magistrate for disposal, should it, in the opinion of the Court, be thought to be a case which should be committed to the Sessions Court for trial.

12. Any case transferred to a Bench or to a Presidency Magistrate other than the Chief Presidency Magistrate or salaried Presidency Magistrate sitting singly remaining unheard at the close of the day may be either adjourned or, on necessity arising, may be sent back for disposal to the Chief Presidency Magistrate.

13. No private business shall be carried on in the Chambers set apart for the Presidency Magistrates other than the Chief Presidency Magistrate or salaried Presidency Magistrate, and no outsiders shall be admitted therein. It will be the duty of the Presidency Magistrates other than the Chief Presidency Magistrate or salaried Presidency Magistrate to report to the Chief Presidency Magistrate any infraction of this rule which may come to their knowledge.

14. It shall be the duty of the Registrar to inform the Chief Presidency Magistrate of any stress of business in the Courts.

15. The Chief Presidency Magistrate may at any time delegate any or all powers conferred on him under these rules to the salaried Presidency Magistrate—Notification No. 1256 J, dated 5th March, 1900, Calcutta Gazette, 1900, Pt. I, p. 714.

Madras:—(i) The Chief Presidency Magistrate may of his own motion or on the application of any Presidency Magistrate refer any case, or class of cases, triable by a Presidency Magistrate, for trial by a Bench of two or more Magistrates, and may, by his order, appoint the time and place at which such Bench shall sit.

(ii) The Chief Magistrate shall, if present, officiate as Chairman. In his absence the senior Magistrate present shall officiate as Chairman.

(iii) The Chairman shall conduct the proceedings of the Court and exercise all the functions in that behalf usually exercised by a Presidency Magistrate when sitting alone; but it shall be competent to any member of the Bench to put any question to a witness either direct or through the Chairman as the latter may deem advisable, and to suggest any matter for the Chairman's consideration.

(iv) Each member of the Bench shall have a voice in the finding and sentence. In a Bench of three or other uneven number, the opinion of the majority shall prevail. When the numbers are even, the Chairman shall have a casting vote.

(v) In regard to the recording of evidence and the judgment, the proceeding shall be conducted in a manner similar to proceedings before a single Magistrate and subject to the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code.

(vi) The Bench may hold one or more sittings for the disposal of such cases as may be referred to it, or of part-heard cases. Any part-heard cases postponed to a further sitting of the Bench may be proceeded with if any member of the Bench has been present at the previous hearings in the case but subject to the provisions of sec. 350 of the Criminal Procedure Code—Fort St. George Gazette, 1901, Pt. I, p. 1414.

Rules for the guidance of Honorary Presidency Magistrates in Madras—

(1) Power of trial.—The Honorary Presidency Magistrates shall sit as Benches to try such cases or classes of cases and to undertake such business as may be made over to them by the general or special order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate.

(2) Number and sitting hours.—Each Bench will ordinarily consist of three Magistrates selected by the Chief Presidency Magistrate from the list of those appointed by Government. A Bench will sit in the Magistrate's Court at Egmore and another in the Court at George town from 7-30 to 9-30 A.M. or till the work of the day is over, if earlier, on all days except Sundays and close holidays.

(3) Sitting to be arranged by Chief Presidency Magistrate. Inability to attend to be notified.—Not less than ten days before the end of each month the Chief Presidency Magistrate will arrange the order in which and the days on which the Honorary Presidency Magistrates shall sit during the following month and communicate the same to the Honorary Presidency Magistrates concerned. If any Honorary Presidency Magistrate is unable to attend on a day for which he has been named, he shall give timely notice to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, mentioning, where possible, a substitute who is willing to take his place. The Chief Presidency Magistrate may depute such substitute in his place or make such other arrangements as he thinks fit. If occasion arises, the Chief Presidency Magistrate may alter any arrangement he has made under this rule.

(4) Salaried Magistrates may sit.—The Chief Presidency Magistrate or any salaried Presidency Magistrate may, with the permission of the Chief Presidency Magistrate, sit as a member of a Bench of Honorary Presidency Magistrates.

(5) Quorum.—In order to form a quorum, at least two Magistrates shall be present from the beginning to the end of a trial or inquiry as members of the Bench, provided that if a salaried Magistrate be present throughout the inquiry or trial a case may be proceeded with to a decision, notwithstanding that a quorum was not present throughout the proceedings. If a Bench is unable to sit for any particular day, the case set down for hearing before it on that day, may be put up before a Stipendiary Magistrate or adjourned to the Bench's next working day, as the Chief Presidency Magistrate may direct.

(6) Adjournment.—Any case before a Bench remaining unheard at the close of a sitting may be either adjourned to the next working day or sent back to be disposed of as the Chief Presidency Magistrate directs.

(7) Chairman.—The Chief Presidency Magistrate shall, if present, officiate as Chairman of the Bench. In his absence the Stipendiary Presidency Magistrate (if any) present shall officiate as Chairman of the Bench. In the absence of any Stipendiary Presidency Magistrate, the Bench shall, as often as may be necessary, elect a Chairman from among the Magistrates present. If the votes should be equal, the Chief Presidency Magistrate shall decide which Honorary Magistrate shall preside.

(8) Powers of Chairman.—The Chairman shall conduct the proceedings of the Court and exercise all the functions in that behalf, usually exercised by a Stipendiary Magistrate when sitting alone. He shall decide upon the admissibility of evidence and maintain order in the Court, but it shall be open to any member of the Bench to put any question to the witness, either direct or through the Chairman, as the latter may deem advisable and to suggest any matter for the Chairman's consideration.

(9) Taking down evidence.—The Chairman shall generally record the evidence and judgment in which a record of evidence and judgment is necessary; but such duty may, with his consent, be performed by any one of his colleagues.

(10) Opinion of majority of members to prevail.—Each member of the Bench who has been present throughout the proceedings shall have a voice in the finding and sentence. In a Bench of three or other uneven number the opinion of the majority shall prevail; when the numbers are even the Chairman shall have a casting vote.

(11) Same Bench to hear a case till conclusion.—Notwithstanding any arrangement made as provided in Rule 3, any quorum that may have heard part of a case which stands adjourned at the rising of the Court, shall proceed with such case till the conclusion of the trial or inquiry, as the case may be, at sittings held, either from day to day, or, if the case stands adjourned for more than one day, then on the days to which it stands adjourned. In such case the Chief Presidency Magistrate may, for as long as shall be necessary, set aside or vary any arrangement made under Rule 3.

(12) Signing Calendars.—Every Honorary Presidency Magistrate will sign the daily calendar of the day's proceedings at which he is present.

(13) Transfer of cases.—The Chief Presidency Magistrate may at any time transfer for disposal any case, whether part-heard or not, from the file of any Bench to his own file or to the file of any salaried Magistrate or Bench of Honorary Magistrates.

(14) Delegation of powers.—The Chief Presidency Magistrate may at any time delegate any of his powers under these rules to any salaried Magistrate subordinate to him.

(15) Additional Benches.—These rules shall also apply to any additional Bench of Honorary Presidency Magistrates which the Governor in Council may be pleased to appoint. See Notification No. 18, Fort St. George Gazette, Part I, 3rd January, 1911, pp. 7 and 8.

Bombay:—The following revised rules to regulate the conduct and distribution of business and the practice in the Courts of the Magistrates of the town and Island of Bombay, which have been made by the Chief Presidency Magistrate with the previous sanction of His Excellency the Governor in Council, are hereby published in supersession of the rules published in Government Notification No. 287, dated the 16th January, 1894:—

1. The Magistrate will ordinarily sit in Court for the disposal of business at 11 A.M. Complaints and cases arising in the A, C, H and I Divisions shall ordinarily be heard at the Esplanade Police Court. Complaints and cases arising in the B, D, E, F and G Divisions shall ordinarily be heard at the Mazagon Police Court.

2. The Chief Presidency Magistrate and Third Presidency Magistrate will ordinarily sit at the Esplanade Police Court, and the Second Presidency Magistrate and the Fourth Presidency Magistrate will ordinarily sit at the Mazagon Police Court. In case of emergency any Presidency Magistrate may hold his Court at such place and hour as he may consider best suited to meet the requirements of the police service.

3. In the event of any perrure of work occurring in any Court, or during the casual or other absence of any Magistrate, the Chief Presidency Magistrate shall arrange for the distribution of buisness among the Magistrates

4. All applications for processes, copies, certificates or otherwise shall ordinarily be made to the Magistrates on their first taking their seats on the Bench in the morning. Applications which are shown to involve urgency may be made at any time during the sitting of the Court. The Magistrates will not undertake to entertain any application of any sort at their private residences.

5. Complaints and applications should, as a general rule, be made in writing, with proper stamp affixed. In each complaint the names of the complainant and of the accused parties, and also of the witnesses, and the section of the law alleged to have been infringed should be legibly written, with such particulars of the facts as may be necessary to support the complaint.

6. All applications must be presented in person or by pleader. The Magistrate will not undertake to reply to written communications.

The following fees shall be levied —

(a) Copying fees at 5 annas per folio of 90 words or fraction thereof. Prisoners will be charged 2 annas per folio for copies of proceedings, but will be furnished with a copy of the judgment in cases other than summons cases free of charge.

(b) Inspection fee Re. 1 on each application per day.

(c) Translation fee Re. 1 per folio of 90 words or fraction thereof. Parties not supplying their own paper for copies will be charged $\frac{1}{4}$ anna per sheet of foolscap supplied.

8. The Magistrates at each Court will divide the work between themselves, and any difference of opinion will be decided by the Chief Presidency Magistrate. As a general rule, petty Police cases will be disposed of before others.

9. The Magistrate shall submit such forms, records, reports and returns as may be called for by the Chief Presidency Magistrate.

10. The office hours shall be from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. The Courts and offices shall be closed on the gazetted Government holidays; but the Chief Presidency Magistrate will arrange for the despatch of urgent business.

11. If in any case there exist special circumstances which in the opinion of any party concerned or interested in such case require a departure from the ordinary procedure prescribed by these rules, such party may bring such special circumstances to the notice of the Chief Presidency Magistrate, who shall thereupon make such order in the matter as he shall think fit.

Note.—An authorized petition-writer is attached to each Court for the purpose of writing at a moderate charge applications and petitions for persons requiring his services—Bombay Notification No 2536, dated 19th May, 1904.

For Rules for the guidance of Honorary Presidency Magistrates in Bombay, see G R., J. D. no. 2536 of May 19, 1904, subsequently modified by G R., J. D. No. 3801 of July 29, 1906, and G. R., J D No 1653 of March 28, 1906. Vide Manual for use of Honorary Presidency Magistrates of Bombay.

E.—Justices of the Peace.

Justices of the Peace for the mufassal.

22. Every Provincial Government, so far as regards the territories subject to its administration, * * * may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint such persons resident within British India and not being the subject of any foreign State as it thinks fit, to be justices of the Peace within and for the territories mentioned in such notification..

Change:—In the first para, the words ("other than the towns aforesaid") have been omitted, and in para. 2 the italicised words have been substituted for the words "European British subjects" by sec. 3 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XII of 1923). "By omitting section 23, and by assimilating the provisions of sections 22 and 23, this clause has removed the qualification of being an European British subject for being appointed as a Justice of Peace"—Notes on Clauses (Criminal Law Amendment Bill).

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

59. Powers:—The powers conferred on the Justices of the Peace are the ordinary powers conferred on 1st class Magistrates under sec 36 The power to entertain complaints is not one of such powers—Loghan v. Romer, 31 Mad. 343, 12 Cr L.J. 535.

23. [Repealed by section 4 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923].

24. [Repealed by ditto.]

"Section 24 is incidentally repealed as being spent"—Notes on Clauses (Criminal Law Amendment Bill).

25. In virtue of their respective offices, * * * * * the Judges of the High Courts are Justices of the Peace within and for the whole of British India; Sessions Judges and District Magistrates are Justices of the Peace within and for the whole of the territories administered by the Provincial Government under which they are serving; and the Presidency Magistrates are Justices of the Peace within and for the towns of which they are respectively Magistrates.

Amendment:—The words "the Governor-General, Governors, Lieutenant-Governors and Chief Commissioners, the Ordinary Members of the Council of the Governor-General and" were omitted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937. By sec. 4 of the same Order the words "Provincial Government" were substituted for the words "Local Government", in this section.

26-27. [Omitted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.]

CHAPTER III.

POWERS OF COURTS.

A.—Description of Offences cognizable by each Court.

28. Subject to other provisions of this Code, any offence under the Indian Penal Code may be tried—

- (a) by the High Court, or
- (b) by the Court of Session, or
- (c) by any other Court by which such offence is shown in the eighth column of the second schedule to be triable.

Illustration.

A is committed to the Sessions Court on a charge of culpable homicide. He may be convicted of voluntarily causing hurt, an offence triable by a Magistrate.

60. Subject to other provisions of this Code:—The Schedule to the Code and sec 28 must obviously be read together, and sec. 28 is subject to the other provisions of this Code, that is, it is subject to sec 30—In re Prithvinath, AIR 1938 Nag 56 (57), I.L.R. 1938 Nag 248, 175 IC 935, 39 CrLJ. 660, 11 RN 18, 20 N.L.J. 151; Danaji, 27 CrLJ 728, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 374, 95 IC. 56

61. Power of Court of Session:—The provisions as to the "other Court" indicated in clause (c) do not cut down or restrict the jurisdiction of the High Court or the Sessions Court. This section gives powers to the High Court and the Court of Session to try any offence under the Penal Code even though it is triable by a Magistrate according to the 8th column of the 2nd Schedule of this Code—Kharga, 8 All. 665. Therefore, the fact that in a case committed to the Sessions, the Sessions Judge adds a charge of an offence triable exclusively by a Magistrate, does not affect the jurisdiction of the Sessions Judge to try it—Kharga, 8 All 665, 1886 A.W.N. 254. There is nothing illegal in a Magistrate committing a person charged with an offence under sec. 147, I. P. C., to the Sessions Court if in his opinion it cannot be adequately punished by him, though the second Schedule of this Code says that the offence is triable by a Magistrate only—Kayemulla, 24 Cal 429, 1 C.W.N. 414

But if the offence falls under some other law and that law specifies a particular Court, the forum cannot be changed (see sec. 29). Thus, an offence under sec. 9, Opium Act must be tried by a Magistrate; a Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction over the offence and the Magistrate has no power to commit the case to the Sessions—Schade, 19 All. 465 (466), 1897 A.W.N. 115.

The illustration shows that in a case committed to the Sessions Court for a more heinous offence, the accused can be convicted of a minor offence triable by a Magistrate.

62. Offences within and beyond jurisdiction:—A Magistrate has a discretion to decide whether a case shall be tried by himself or by the Court of Session when the offence is triable by both the Courts. The High Court will not interfere with such discretion if exercised in a judicial manner—Hari Moreswar v. Emp, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 63, 33 Bom.L.R. 1515, 1932 Cr.C. 87, 56 Bom. 61, 33 Cr.L.J. 262, 136 I.C. 187. When an offence is triable by an inferior tribunal but it also contains an element of aggravation which puts the offence beyond the jurisdiction of that tribunal, the jurisdiction of that tribunal is not necessarily ousted thereby—Anonymous, 2 Weir 20 (21). In other words, where the facts disclose an offence within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, it is a complete fallacy to say that he is not empowered to try the offence, merely because the same facts disclose a more serious offence beyond his jurisdiction. If the case had ended in a conviction it will be not illegal merely because the offence committed really fell under a more serious section and was not one which the Magistrate was competent to try—Ayyan, 24 Mad. 675; Mahajanam v. Kodu, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 223, 45 Mad. 29, 30 M.L.T. 95, 66 I.C. 72, 23 Cr.L.J. 232, 41 M.L.J. 398, 14 M.L.W. 247, 1921 M.W.N. 613. Where the facts disclose a major offence (e.g., offence under section 330, I P.C.), triable exclusively by a Court of Session, the Magistrate can convict the accused for a minor offence (e.g., under sections 232, 342 or 348, I P.C.) triable by him which constitutes a component of the major offence—Dawson, 2 Rang. 455, 26 Cr.L.J. 1108

But no tribunal can properly clutch jurisdiction by intentionally ignoring facts of aggravation which make the offence really cognizable only by a higher tribunal. Where the accused has himself objected to the jurisdiction it is possible that the High Court would feel itself bound to interfere—Anonymous, 2 Weir 21; In re Maduri, 12 Mad 54; Babu Rao, 4 N.L.R. 18, 17 Cr.L.J. 319; Gundya, 13 Bom 502; Lakhraj v. Crown, 31 P.R. 1910, 11 Cr.L.J. 639; Kattuva v. Suppan, 28 Cr.L.J. 164, 99 I.C. 596, 25 L.W. 86, A.I.R. 1927 Mad 307. The Legislature has decided that certain offences, either because of their serious or difficult nature, should be tried by one of the higher Courts of criminal jurisdiction and thus being so, it is not for a Magistrate to evade those provisions of law by usurping jurisdiction to himself—Shambhooram, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 221, 159 I.C. 271, 1935 Cr.C. 1272, 37 Cr.L.J. 80. The only person capable of weighing the respective advantages or disadvantages of trial before different types of tribunals are the accused persons themselves and it is only their opinion which is entitled to any serious consideration—Netai Chandra, A.I.R. 1936 Cal 529 (533), 40 C.W.N. 959.

If a Magistrate entirely overlooks some fact which would carry the case beyond his jurisdiction and tries the accused for a lesser offence, he is not held to have acted without jurisdiction. The question whether he has or has not entirely overlooked the circumstances would be one of fact. If, on the other hand, he does not overlook the circumstance, but, after his attention has been drawn to it, he deliberately ignores it, his proceedings would be improper, though not void. If a Magistrate not empowered under sec. 28 and Sch. II of the Cr P. Code tries an offence, it is difficult to see how he acts otherwise than in a private capacity. If he exceeds his power in good faith sec 529 allows him a certain latitude; but that section does not allow him to try an offence which he is not empowered to try. On the contrary, sec 530 definitely avoids such proceedings. Quite apart from the charge whenever facts are proved constituting the aggravated offence, that is the offence which is being tried. It is not as though the analogy of a civil trial were applicable and the Magistrate is restricted to the facts set forth in the plaint issues. In a criminal trial he must be ever ready as the facts are disclosed either to alter the charge under sec. 227 or to refer the case under sec. 345. It may be said that the accused has no real grievance if he has been tried for lesser offences, but such an argument runs counter to the whole intention of the Code—Kattuva v. Suppan, 28 Cr.L.J. 164, 99 I.C. 596, 25 L.W. 86, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 307. A statement by an accused person that the offence committed by him is a more serious one, not triable by the Magistrate, does not deprive the Magistrate jurisdiction unless the prosecution accept the truth of that statement or the Magistrate is of opinion that it is true—In re Appu Goundan, 39 Cr.L.J. 659, 175 I.C. 896, 1938 M.W.N. 592, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 43, 48 M.L.W. 145. The mere fact that in order to make his case more serious a complainant alleges the commission of an offence which could not be tried by a junior Magistrate does not render the proceedings of that Magistrate illegal if he goes on to try the case and decide it holding that the facts disclosed show that it is lesser offence which he is competent to try. But, in any event, it is settled law that in a warrant case the trial does not commence until the charge is framed under sec. 254, Cr. P. C., and there is nothing illegal or invalid in a Magistrate of the Third Class proceeding to enquire into a complaint which was not instituted in his Court but sent to him under secs. 192 or 528 of the Cr. P. C., even if after hearing the prosecution case he has come to the conclusion that a case has been made out which he himself could not try. There is specific provision of the Code in sec. 346, which provides for such cases and the existence of this very provision by itself implies that a Subordinate Magistrate can legally enquire into a serious offence up to the stage at which the question of charge or discharge has to be decided—Panda v. Gulab Khalun, 40 Cr.L.J. 515, 181 I.C. 49, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 122, I.L.R. 1938 Lah. 619, 41 P.L.R. 221. See also 1930 M.W.N. 770 in this connection.

A second class Magistrate came to the conclusion that the case before him was one for trial under sec. 148, I. P. C., and was, therefore, triable by a first class Magistrate and not triable by him. He sent the record to the District Magistrate who ordered him to proceed with the case, as no first class Magistrate was available. He then framed a charge under sec. 147, I. P. C., and convicted the accused. Held that the matter involved was one of jurisdiction and the District Magistrate could not give jurisdiction to the trying Magistrate by such an order because of the fact that at the moment there was no Magistrate with first class powers available. Administratively it might have been inconvenient but administrative inconvenience cannot give jurisdiction to a Magistrate—Azizur Rahman, 43 Cr.L.J. 214, 27 Cr.L.J. 545, 93 I.C. 1041. See Note 1406 "Court of competent jurisdiction"

It is a well settled rule that any acquiescence or even consent cannot invest a Court with jurisdiction of which it is not otherwise possessed. Therefore, where the accused was charged under sec. 506, I. P. C., an offence not triable by a Bench of Magistrates with second class powers, the mere fact that no objection was raised to the jurisdiction, did not invest the Bench Magistrates with jurisdiction to try the accused—Ram Udai, 33 Cr.L.J. 511, 137 I.C. 625, 9 O.W.N. 319, 1932 Cr.C. 592, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 251

Under Sch. II to the Cr. P. Code it is provided that the method of trial for offences under sec. 124-A, I. P. C., may be either the Court of Sessions, Chief Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Magistrate of the First Class specially empowered by the Local Government in that behalf. The Magistrate has a discretion to decide in what way the case shall be tried, having regard to the alternatives given by the schedule. The Magistrate must have regard to the importance of the case and to the fact that the maximum penalty under the section is transportation for life, though if he tries the accused himself he cannot give a longer term of imprisonment than two years. He must consider no doubt also whether if he sends the case to the Court of Session there will be Jury or assessors and in that connection he may consider which of the two tribunals, his own Court or the Sessions Court is the more satisfactory tribunal for deciding the case. Though the Magistrate's discretion is subject to review by the High Court, the High Court will not interfere with his discretion except on certain definite grounds—Hari Moreshwar, 33 Cr.L.J. 262, 136 I.C. 187, 33 Bom.L.R. 1515, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 63, 56 Bom. 61, 1932 Cr.C. 87, Ind. Rul. 1932 Bom. 171, commenting on Krishnaji, 119 I.C. 666, 53 Bom. 611, 31 Bom.L.R. 602, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 313, 30 Cr.L.J. 1090, Ind. Rul. 1929 Bom. 538.

Where two or more persons are jointly indicted, and the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is ousted in the case of one of them, the proper course is to commit all the accused for trial before the Court of Session—Anonymous, 1 Weir 448 (449).

A Magistrate is not entitled to decline jurisdiction on the ground that the offence is a petty one ordinarily triable by heads of villages, and to direct the complainant to seek redress from the head of the village—Anonymous, 2 Weir 237, 7 M.H.C.R. App. 31. So also, a Magistrate is not entitled to decline to exercise jurisdiction in a case on the ground that it falls under the jurisdiction of ecclesiastical authority, when the act of that authority plainly amounts to an offence. Thus, where the ecclesiastical authority threatened a Roman Catholic that unless he abstained from certain acts (which he was legally entitled to do) he would be ex-communicated, the action of the ecclesiastical authority was illegal and amounted to criminal intimidation and the Criminal Courts had therefore jurisdiction over the offence—Paul De Cruz, 8 Mad. 140

29. (1) Subject to the other provisions of this Code, any offence under any other law shall, when any Court is mentioned in this behalf in such law, be tried by such Court.

(2) When no Court is so mentioned, it may be tried by the High Court or subject as aforesaid by any Court constituted under this Code by which such offence is shown in the eighth column of the second schedule to be triable.

63. "Shall be tried by such Court":—An offence under a special law triable only by a Magistrate invested with special powers cannot be transferred to an ordinary Magistrate or be tried by any other Magistrate—Deokinandan, 1886 A.W.N. 289. An offence under sec. 9, Opium Act must be tried by a Magistrate, and not by a Court of Session—Schade, 19 All. 465 (466). An offence under Madras Act I of 1868 (e.g., supplying liquor without a license) is triable only by a Magistrate, and not by the Sessions Court or the High Court—Donoghue, 5 M.H.C.R. 277. An offence under sec. 16 of the Bombay Village Police Act (VIII of 1867) is triable by Police Patels duly empowered, and not by Taluk Magistrates—Hanmantla, Ratanlal 196. An offence under sec. 52, Prisons Act is not triable by a Presidency Magistrate, since he is not a District Magistrate or a First Class Magistrate mentioned therein—Chota Singh, 32 Mad 303. An order under sec. 3 (1) of the Defence of India Act (IV of 1915) whereby the Local Government had directed that all persons accused of the offence of committing dacoity on 27th February 1915 at Basti Naurang should be tried by the Commissioners appointed under the provisions of the said Act, ousted the jurisdiction of the regular Courts in respect of the persons accused of the offence specified—Samaila v. Crown, 38 P.R. 1917, 42 I.C. 159, 18 Cr.L.J. 927. Under section 83, Registration Act, an offence under sec. 82 of that Act is triable by a Magistrate not inferior to a Magistrate of the second class—Krishna, 7 Mad 347. A third Class Magistrate has jurisdiction to try an offence under sec. 68 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873)—Naran Narsing, Ratanlal 763. An offence under sec. 20, Calcutta Rent Act, must be tried by the President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal, which is the Court mentioned in sec. 20 of that Act—Ishan v. Manmatha, 37 C.L.J. 298, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 339, 71 I.C. 611.

64. When no Court is mentioned:—A Magistrate can try a landlord for an offence under sec. 58 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act (failure to prepare and retain counterfoils of rent receipts) in the same way as he would try a summons case, the Act not having specified any particular Magistrate to try such an offence—Mohunt Ramdas, 9 C.W.N. 816 (817), 2 Cr.L.J. 532.

As the Mussalman Wakf Act (XLII of 1923) contains no provision regarding the Court by which offences under sec. 10 of the said Act are to be tried, it is triable by any Magistrate under sec. 29 read with the 8th column of the Second Schedule of the Cr. P. Code—Ali Mahomed, 28 Cr.L.J. 954, 105 I.C. 666, A.I.R. 1928 Sind 43.

There is absolutely no conflict between the provisions of sec. 5 and those of sec. 29, Cr. P. C. Section 29 merely empowers the High Court when no Court is mentioned for any offence under any law other than the Indian Penal Code, to try such offences. Section 5 (2), on the other hand, lays down that all offences under any other law shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the same provisions, etc. The mere fact that sec. 29 empowers the High Court to try such an offence does not show that the High Court can take cognizance of the offence straight off, try the accused and convict him and punish him without following the procedure laid down in the Code. There are elaborate rules of procedure laid down in the Code regulating trial of accused persons, and it is imperative that they should be followed. Therefore, if the case of an offence due to the contravention of the provisions of sec. 85, Companies Act (VII of 1913), were committed to the High Court under sec. 194 (1), Cr. P. C., or proceedings were started on an application of the Advocate-General under sec. 194 (2), or were transferred to it under sec. 526, Cr. P. C., then the High Court would have jurisdiction to try the accused: but it would not have jurisdiction to try the accused merely on an application under sec. 85, Companies Act—Harish Chandra v. Kavindra Narain Sinha, 38 Cr.L.J. 111 (113), 166 I.C. 53, A.I.R. 1936 All. 830, 1936 A.L.J. 1105 (F.B.).

29A. No Magistrate of the second or third class shall inquire into or try any offence which is punishable otherwise than with fine not exceeding fifty rupees, where the accused is an European British subject who claims to be tried as such.

Trial of European British subjects by second and third class Magistrates.

This section has been added by sec. 6 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XII of 1923) "The Bill does away with all provisions under which a person who may try an European British subject must be a Justice of the Peace. Except in cases punishable with sentences of fine only not exceeding rupees fifty, the Bill provides that European British subjects shall not be triable by second or third class Magistrates, but all first class Magistrates are given power to try European British subjects no matter what their nationality may be"—Statement of Objects and Reasons, Para. 8 (i).

See Notes under Chapter XLIV-A.

29B. Any offence other than one punishable with death or transportation for life, committed by any person who at the date when he appears or is brought before the Court is under the age of fifteen years, may be tried by a District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate, or by any Magistrate specially empowered by the Provincial Government to exercise the powers conferred by section 8, sub-section (1), of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, or, in any area in which the said Act has been wholly or in part repealed by any other law providing for the custody, trial or punishment of youthful offenders, by any Magistrate empowered by or under such law to exercise all or any of the powers conferred thereby.

Jurisdiction in the case of juveniles.

Amendment:—This section has been added by sec. 6 of the Cr. P. Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). The reasons for the amendment have been thus stated: "The existing procedure of committal of a Court of Session is lengthy and often involves the prolonged detention of juvenile offenders as undertrial prisoners, although the offences generally committed by them seldom require to be so severely punished as to necessitate the intervention of a Sessions Court, the sentence or order eventually passed being often incommensurate with the time and energy expended upon a committal and sessions trial. It is therefore proposed that offences of children, unless so serious as to be punishable with death or transportation for life, should be triable by a District Magistrate, a Chief Presidency Magistrate, or by any Magistrate specially empowered to exercise the powers conferred by sec. 8, sub-section (1), of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1921).

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

64A. Scope of the section:—This section speaks of offences other than those punishable with death or transportation for life. Therefore, an offence under sec. 304, I. P. Code (culpable homicide) committed by a boy of 14 cannot be tried by a Magistrate presiding over the Central Children Court—Lakhi Sahu, 36 C.W.N. 164, 33 Cr.L.J. 645 (646), A.I.R. 1932 Cal 487, 59 Cal. 856, 138 I.C. 626, 1932 Cr.C. 479.

This section is in terms clearly permissive. When a juvenile under the age of fifteen years is brought before a Magistrate other than one of those specially referred to in this section, the Magistrate can, if he chooses, either under sec. 9, Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, or under sec. 349, Cr. P. Code, refer the matter to the District Magistrate with a view to the case being tried by a special Magistrate under this section; and the District Magistrate of his own volition can direct any such case to be tried by a Magistrate having special powers. But if neither of those courses is adopted, the trial Magistrate can deal with the case under the regular provisions of the Code. This section enables one of the special Magistrates there referred to to deal with many cases which, apart from this section, could only be tried by a Court of Session. But this section does not invalidate a trial which would be valid apart from the section—Jalal, A.I.R. 1931 Bom 211, 35 Cr.L.J. 1033, 149 I.C. 1135, 36 Bom L.R. 435. The words "may be" in this section are permissive. No doubt, the word "may" is sometimes construed as "shall" but obviously its prima facie effect is merely permissive and not obligatory. The Magistrate has a discretion under this section. He may deal with the matter under the ordinary provisions of the Code or he may direct that the accused be dealt with under this section. But he is not bound to deal with the case in that way—Natvarlal, 32 Cr.L.J. 723, 131 I.C. 476, 33 Bom L.R. 312, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 193, 1931 Cr.C. 342. Section 8, Reformatory Schools Act, does not enact that a Magistrate cannot try a juvenile offender. It says that certain Magistrates who are not specially empowered may not exercise the power of sending a juvenile offender to a Reformatory School. Section 29B of the Cr. P. C., is also not intended to take away the jurisdiction already conferred on Magistrates under sec. 28 and Col. 8, Sch II, Cr. P. C. It is intended to extend to certain Magistrates the power to try juvenile offenders for certain offences which would otherwise have been triable exclusively by the Court of Session—Onkar Nath v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 All. 675, 1936 A.W.R. 735, 1936 A.L.J. 957, 1936 Cr.C. 884, 165 I.C. 148, 1936 All.L.R. 863, 37 Cr.L.J. 1073.

The offence under sec. 130, Railways Act should now be tried by superior Magistrates contemplated in sec. 29B, Cr. P. Code—Wah Mahammad, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 185 (186), 30 S.L.R. 9, 165 I.C. 642, 38 Cr.L.J. 83, 1936 Cr.C. 971, distinguishing Dhondya Dudhya, A.I.R. 1919 Bom 178, 52 I.C. 667, 43 Bom 888, 21 Bom L.R. 768. See also Jannat, 29 Cr.L.J. 733, 110 I.C. 589, 29 P.L.R. 536, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 909, 10 A. I. Cr. R. 499.

the other provinces in which there are Deputy Commissioners or Assistant Commissioners, the Provincial Government may, notwithstanding anything contained in section 29, invest the District Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first class with power to try as a Magistrate all offences not punishable with death.

Amendment:—The words "and Burma" were left out by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

By sec 4 of the same Order the words "Provincial Governments" have been substituted for the words "Lieutenant-Governors" and the words "Provincial Government" for the words "Local Government", in this section.

65. Object of Section:—The object of conferring special powers on District Magistrates is to accelerate proceedings at the trial by avoiding the delay consequent on commitment to the Sessions Court which sits only at considerable intervals. It is also intended to afford relief to those who have to attend as witnesses in the Court—Amir Khan, 7 C.W.N. 457 (460); In re Pruthivmath, A.I.R. 1938 Nag 56 (58), 20 N.L.J. 151.

Section 30 must be read as qualifying or controlling the provisions of sec. 28 which in its turn makes reference to column 8 of the Second Schedule—Danaji, 27 Cr.L.J. 728, 95 I.C. 56, A.I.R. 1926 Nag 374; In re Pruthivmath, supra.

Magistrate must purport to act under this section—A first class Magistrate who is simply described on the heading of his judgment as invested with the powers under this section, but not purporting to act under such powers, cannot exercise those powers in passing the sentence—Mahu, 7 Cr.L.J. 461.

66. Powers of District Magistrate:—This section speaks of "all offences not punishable with death" and must include those that would normally go to the Sessions Court—In re Pruthivmath, supra. As a general rule, the cases which a District Magistrate should refrain from trying under his higher powers, are those in which a sentence more severe than a District Magistrate can inflict under sec 34 appears to be called for if the offence be established, and secondly, those cases in which the issues are so complex or the difficulty of ascertaining the true facts or of correctly applying the law to them so considerable as to make a trial before a Sessions Judge more appropriate than a trial before a District Magistrate—Saw Kadu, L.B.R. (1893-1900) 219.

In the exercise of special powers under this section, a District Magistrate has no power to try cases summarily—Fazlu, 1879 P.R. 25.

A District Magistrate empowered under this section cannot try an offence punishable with death (e.g., murder) and find the accused guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder on the ground that the case falls within one of the exceptions mentioned in sec 300, I.P.C.—Gurdit Singh, 3 P.R. 1891; Shamra, 27 Cr.L.J. 846, A.I.R. 1926 Lah 575, 95 I.C. 766. He cannot legally try the offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder punishable under the first part of sec 304, I.P.C., though it is not punishable with death. The reason is, that where there is credible evidence both of murder and of qualified murder, the accused should be committed for trial before a Court which is competent to try both offences once for all and to pronounce a judgment which shall be an effectual bar to a second trial on the same facts—Mangal Singh, 1 P.R. 1893. So, where there is sufficient evidence to constitute an offence of murder, a Magistrate exercising special powers under this section should not try the case as on a minor charge—Paramananda, 10 Cal. 85. A Magistrate exercising powers under this section can try an offence under sections 302/302B, I.P.C., where murder was not committed in pursuance of the conspiracy so that the offence was not punishable with death—Hussain, 25 Cr.L.J. 1241, 82 I.C. 169, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 157.

67. Deputy Commissioner:—A Magistrate holding an inquiry into a case triable by a Court of Session, cannot make over the case to a Deputy Commissioner specially empowered under this section to try such cases, because the Deputy Commissioner is a Magistrate and not a Sessions Judge. Such a commitment was held to be illegal and was quashed and the case was ordered to be committed to the Court of Session—Piran Litta, 17 P.R. 1873. But in a Calcutta case, the High Court maintained the conviction by the Deputy Commissioner, where it was found that the accused had not been prejudiced by such trial—Amir Khan, 7 C.W.N. 457.

Where a Deputy Commissioner tries a case exclusively triable by a Sessions Court, under the powers conferred by this section, he does so as a Magistrate, and if he tenders conditional pardon to one of the accused, he is precluded from trying the case himself—Paban Singh, 19 C.W.N. 847, 4 Cr.L.J. 44; Kishore, 25 Cr.L.J. 1341, 82 I.C. 573, A.I.R. 1925 Nag 119. The procedure to be followed in such a case is that of a warrant case provided for in Chap. XXI—Jallo, 131 P.L.R. 1901.

Once a Magistrate has been specially empowered under sec. 30 by the Local Government, he can necessarily, when acting as a Magistrate, exercise the powers mentioned in sec. 34; he cannot at will divest himself of the powers conferred upon him and he cannot by any action of his own, become a First Class Magistrate not empowered under sec. 30, Cr. P. Code. Far less by an unintentional failure or even by a habitual failure to describe himself as being so empowered, can he divest himself of his powers. He need not mention the existence of his special powers in order to exercise them, or in order to pass any sentence covered by sec. 34, Cr. P. Code—Nadar Alam Khan, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh 108, 36 Cr.L.J. 1143, 157 I.C. 211, 1935 Cr.C. 832. For contra see Mahi, 17 P.W.R. 1908 Cr.; Ramchandra, 34 Cr.L.J. 162, 141 I.C. 574, 1933 Cr.C. 122, 34 Bom.L.R. 1676, A.I.R. 1933 Bom 58 (S.B.); Sukhdev Raj, 35 Cr.L.J. 1288, 151 I.C. 265, 1934 Cr.C. 608, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 361.

68. Appeals:—See sec. 408, proviso (b). Where the Magistrate was acting within his ordinary powers as a Magistrate of the 1st class, and not within the special powers conferred by this section, and appeal would lie to the Court of Session, and not to the High (Chief) Court—Tulsi Ram, 1881 P.R. 23. Where, however, it appeared from the sentence awarded that the District Magistrate in trying the particular case has exercised enhanced powers under this section, the appeal would lie to the High Court and not to the Court of Session—Bahadur, 8 P.R. 1877; Jeytumul, 36 P.R. 1880; Jai Singh, 1900 P.L.R. 46; Batera, 3 P.R. 1898. If, however, the offence is not one exclusively triable by a Court of Session, and the sentence of imprisonment awarded does not exceed two years, an appeal lies to the Court of Session, and not to the High Court, even though the District Magistrate records that he is exercising his powers under this section—Nathu, 10 P.R. 1875. See Note 1107.

69. Revision:—A Sessions Judge is competent under section 437 (now 436) to revise the order of a District Magistrate and order further inquiry, even though the latter was exercising enhanced powers under this section. The District Magistrate acting under this section is inferior to the Sessions Judge within the meaning of sec. 435—Jalloo, 15 P.R. 1904, 131 P.L.R. 1904.

B.—Sentences which may be passed by Courts of various Classes.

Sentences which High Courts and Sessions Judges may pass.

31. (1) A High Court may pass any sentence authorised by law.

(2) A Sessions Judge or Additional Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorised by law; but any sentence of death passed by any such Judge shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court.

(3) An Assistant Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorised by law, except a sentence of death or of transportation for a term exceeding seven years, or of imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years.

32. (1) The Courts of Magistrates
 Sentences which Magistrates may pass. may pass the following sentences, namely:—

- | | |
|---|---|
| (a) Courts of Presidency Magistrates and of Magistrates of the first class; | { Imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, including such solitary confinement as is authorised by law;
Fine not exceeding one thousand rupees;
Whipping. |
| (b) Courts of Magistrates of the second class; | { Imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, including such solitary confinement as is authorised by law;
Fine not exceeding two hundred rupees. |
| (c) Courts of Magistrates of the third class; | { Imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month;
Fine not exceeding fifty rupees. |

(2) The Court of any Magistrate may pass any lawful sentence, combining any of the sentences which it is authorized by law to pass.

70. Powers and discretions of Judges and Magistrates:—It is an elementary proposition in criminal jurisprudence that sentence in each case should be proportionate to the nature and gravity of the crime. A Magistrate cannot claim a right to inflict a sentence of fine in all cases because he has done so in hundred other cases—some of which were more serious—without any regard to the nature of facts, upon which each case has to be decided. He cannot bring in the aid of prescription in his favour—Maiku, A I R 1930 All 279, 31 Cr L J 631, 124 I C 46, 1930 Cr C 447. It is necessary in awarding punishment to exercise some discretion, and to consider the circumstances of each case and the degree of guilt disclosed in awarding punishment—Kesavaier, 10 Bur L T 268, 18 Cr L J 489. The theory of deterrent punishment should not be loosely put into practice. Deterrent punishments are necessary only when waves of imitative crime commence to sweep over the State or in time of public tumult, where there is a danger of a wide breach of the peace or security, or where a highly organised association of persons engineer series of offences—Gossain, 2 P L T 596, 22 Cr L J 679. See also Badri, 17 Cr L J 243 (All).

The question of punishment depends on two considerations: firstly, the public importance of the offence, and the deterrent effect of the punishment; secondly, the desserts of the particular offender—Badan Singh, 30 Cr L J. 933 (938), 118 I C. 577, A I R 1928 All. 150, Ind Rul 1929 All 881. Justice should be even-handed. Other things being equal, the same offence should receive the same punishment—Udharam, 33 Cr L J. 900 (902), 140 I C. 23, A I R. 1932 Sind 143, 1932 Cr C. 587, Ind Rul. 1932 Sind 170. A sentence of two years' imprisonment on a juvenile offender, when his adult co-accused with three previous convictions is awarded only one year's imprisonment, is improper—Abul, 46 Bom 429, 23 Cr L J 93, 23 Bom L R. 1199. The law vests a discretion in the trying Magistrate to pass adequate sentence in each case and it is for him to decide after taking into consideration all the pertinent circumstances of the case, what should be the adequate sentence. No rule of thumb can be laid down by a higher tribunal as a guide for the trying Magistrate in awarding an adequate sentence—Murido, 31 Cr L J. 763, 125 I C. 46, A I R. 1930 Sind 58, 1930 Cr C. 122. In determining to what extent in any particular case the punishment should approach to, or recede from, the maximum limit prescribed by the section, the trying Magistrate has to take into account several factors, inter alia, the antecedents of the prisoner, whether such antecedents speak well or ill of him, such as his character and state of life whether good or bad including the previous convictions, if any. The imposing of sentence is, within the wide limits allowed by the law, a matter of discretion; it is not a matter of proof. What these matters are to be, is largely left to practice and to the common sense and knowledge of the world of the Court—Baksho, 31 Cr.L.J. 1046 (1051), 126 I.C. 468, A.I.R. 1930 Sind 111, 24 S.L.R. 252. Where the Court awards the maximum sentence provided by the law for an offence, it should record its reasons for doing so—Harnam Singh v. Emp., 27 Cr.L.J. 186, 91 I.C. 1002, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 239, 2 Lah. Cas 161. In awarding sentence one need not take into consideration the moral indignation which may be felt on looking at the offence committed; all that it is necessary to consider is, what sentence is likely to prevent the offender from committing the offence again and to prevent other persons similarly situated from committing similar offences?—Mohamed Cassim v. The King, 39 Cr.L.J. 692 (695), 176 I.C. 150, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 220. A Magistrate who pronounces a sentence must define precisely the nature of the sentence intended, as well as the period of detention. Generally, the sentence ought to be self-contained, like a decree of a Civil Court, so that the functionary who has to execute it should have nothing to do but to obey the direction given, without making an inquiry on his own account—Rama, 24 Mad 13.

There cannot be one law for the rich and one for the poor or rather one for the good family and one for the bad—Dharam Singh, 34 Cr.L.J. 180, 141 I.C. 592, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah 154, 34 P.L.R. 552. The fact that the accused is a man of some education and position and a member of the Legislative Council cannot be urged in his favour as an argument for the infliction of fine only. These considerations cut the other way—Badan Singh, 30 Cr.L.J. 933 (939), 118 I.C. 577, A.I.R. 1928 All. 150, Ind. Rul. 1929 All. 881. A man is not entitled to get off with a small sentence, merely because he is a person of high position and one who has done good service for the Government in the past. When such a man falls in this manner everybody looks to see whether it is not true that there is one law for the rich and another for the poor, and a Court cannot lightly reduce the sentence in such a case to one far below that which should have been awarded to an ignorant and poverty-stricken offender who had in the same way fallen victim to temptation—Qabul Ahmad, 28 Cr.L.J. 749, 103 I.C. 797, 1 Luck. Cas 220, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 319. That the accused is a fairly respectable man, and not a hardened litigant are not circumstances of extenuation—In re Assam Masaliarakath Kunhi Bava, 30 Cr.L.J. 247, 114 I.C. 234, 1929 M.W.N. 114, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 226, Ind. Rul. 1929 Mad. 250, 29 M.L.W. 673, 16 M.L.J. 550. But by universal practice the previous character of an accused may be taken into account in awarding sentence—Khuda Baksh, 38 Cr.L.J. 24, 165 I.C. 909, A.I.R. 1936 Lah 914, 17 Lah. 284, 38 P.L.R. 630. It is necessary at all times, and not least when respect for the law is being undermined, that, whatever the attitude or the policies of any party, the Courts should in all respects scrupulously hold the scales even, observe the correct procedure and that they should not by sentences themselves still further undermine this respect for the law—Sakinabai, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 70 (73), 55 Bom. 220, 32 Bom.L.R. 1506, 1931 Cr.C. 78, 129 I.C. 346, 32 Cr.L.J. 283.

In awarding punishment for an offence under the Excise Act the Courts should bear in mind that illicit distillation implies a good deal of preparation and results not only in the loss of excise revenue, but also in drunkenness. Judicial experience also shows that the offence often escapes detection, and it is, therefore, necessary to impose a sentence which will have a deterrent effect—Crown v. Piyara Singh, 94 I.C. 129, 7 Lah. 32, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 166, 27 Cr.L.J. 561, 27 P.L.R. 221; Dharam Sing, 34 Cr.L.J. 180, 141 I.C. 592, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 154, 34 P.L.R. 552.

The defiance of the processes of law is a serious offence, as they hamper the administration of justice. If allowed to be committed with impunity, the prestige of the Court is lost. Lenient sentences should not be passed in such cases—Shao Akir v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 548, 19 P.L.T. 663, 1938 P.W.N. 813, 178 I.C. 487, 5 B.R. 104. To assault a constable in uniform, purporting to act in the execution of his duty with due moderation, and to declare that the accused did not care for the authority of the police constable is not a matter which should be treated lightly—Maroti v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Nag 95 (97), 1939 N.L.J. 101, I.L.R. 1939 Nag. 488, 184 I.C. 231, 40 Cr.L.J. 905.

The powers of the Magistrate to pass sentence are limited by this section. Even a request by the accused to pass a greater sentence will not empower a Magistrate to pass a sentence which he is not authorised by law to pass—In re Krishnanand, 3 B.L.R. App. 50 (52). Even when the accused makes a prayer for an appealable sentence, a Court, in passing it, should inflict such a sentence as the gravity or otherwise of the crime with which the accused has been convicted warrants and merits, irrespective of whether the sentence inflicted will involve a right of appeal or not. A Court should weigh the sentence with reference to the crime committed and the circumstances of the case and not with reference to anything which may happen subsequently—Yar Muhammad, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 448 (450), 58 Cal. 392, 1931 Cr.C. 660, 32 Cr.L.J. 1181, 134 I.C. 536. See also Anant Singh, 37 Cr.L.J. 417, 161 I.C. 307, A.I.R. 1936 All. 147, 1936 A.L.J. 209, 1936 Cr.C. 175 and Maung Saw Han, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 69 (70), 40 Cr.L.J. 248, 179 I.C. 716 in Note 1113.

There is no law that says a penalty must always follow a conviction. The maximum penalty for each breach of the law is fixed by it, but there is no minimum, except in a very few special cases—Sitaram, 29 Cr.L.J. 506, 109 I.C. 234, 11 N.L.J. 46, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 188, 24 N.L.R. 110. When the Legislature has laid down a maximum punishment for an offence or a series of offences, it is the duty of the trial Court to apportion punishment in each case after considering all the circumstances having a bearing upon it, and not to shirk its responsibility by imposing the maximum penalty upon every offender—Kehr Singh, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 29, 10 Lah. 524, 30 Cr.L.J. 15, 112 I.C. 783, 30 P.L.R. 638. The sentence passed on a convicted person should not be such as to be open to the criticism that it is an unmitigated exhibition of superior force unredeemed by a tinge of judicial balance—Badan Singh, 30 Cr.L.J. 933 (937), 118 I.C. 577, A.I.R. 1928 All. 150, Ind. Rul. 1929 All. 881.

Where an accused person is clearly guilty and has really no defence, but instead of pleading guilty and throwing himself at the mercy of the Court defends himself by throwing mud at witnesses who are persons of standing and honour, he really is deserving of very little consideration—Sanwal Das v. Emp., A.I.R. 1929 Sind 253 (255), 1929 Cr.C. 682.

In awarding sentences in a case of communal riot and dacoity committed while the accused were smarting with indignation against the outrages upon their sacred places every allowance should be made for their feelings and comparative leniency should be shown. At the same time they must be adequately punished, and this fact must be taken into consideration that the persons injured and robbed had no share in desecrating the holy places and were made to suffer for the sins of others—Daulat v. King-Emp., 2 Luck. 264 (267).

When a kind of offence is of common occurrence in a particular area, it should be dealt with severely and deterrent punishment is advisable—Basa Meah, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 70, 37 Cr.L.J. 416, 161 I.C. 90, 1936 Cr.C. 75.

When the accused acted bona fide in the beginning but became particeps criminis later on, finding himself in a difficult position in which he felt bound to carry on, a severe sentence is not called for—Mohammad Shafi, 37 Cr.L.J. 430, 161 I.C. 313, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 15, 1936 Cr.C. 2.

Where the right of privacy of the accused's household was being invaded, the accused, although he may have transgressed the law, may be liable to a lesser degree of punishment—Meeratal Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 221 (222), 172 I.C. 933, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 31, 18 P.L.T. 869.

Where the accused was in custody for about ten months, this is a circumstance which the Court is justified in taking into consideration by making an equivalent reduction of sentences—Ram Babu Jadav v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 302 (308), 173 I.C. 418, 18 P.L.T. 964.

It is true that the gravity of the offences of dishonesty is to be judged not only by the pecuniary value involved. However when the offences are numerous, but when they are added up, they do not involve great monetary value, this is a matter for consideration regarding the question of sentences to be passed on the accused—Mg. Po Kywe v. The King, 40 Cr.L.J. 621, 182 I.C. 63, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 152, 1939 Rang. 251.

Before the High Court would interfere in revision on the question of sentence, it should be satisfied that the sentence was so unreasonable and so excessive as to require a reduction—Murido, 31 Cr.L.J. 763, 125 I.C. 46, A.I.R. 1930 Sind 58, 1930 Cr.C. 122.

71. Death:—Unless there are extenuating circumstances the person who is found to be guilty of murder should receive the extreme penalty of the law—Dinabandhu, 31 Cr.L.J. 737 (741), 124 I.C. 818, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 199, 1930 Cr.C. 231. See also Nga Tha Hmwe, 37 Cr.L.J. 267, 160 I.C. 234, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 504, 1935 Cr.C. 1300. See also U Zawana, 37 Cr.L.J. 418, 161 I.C. 113, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 60, 1936 Cr.C. 88.

There is no hard and fast rule that because the murderer is of what is called tender age, he must necessarily escape the normal penalty prescribed by the law. Age is no doubt a circumstance to be taken into consideration, but this has got to be taken into consideration along with various other circumstances present on the record and to which attention may be drawn either by the prosecution or by the defence—Prodyot, 33 Cr.L.J. 837, 140 I.C. 80, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 1, 1933 Cr.C. 21 (F.B.); Ghenu, 31 Cr.L.J. 81, 120 I.C. 276, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 50, 1930 Cr.C. 18; Nga Ba Thin, A.I.R. 1922 L.B. 34; Tiri, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 171, 9 Rang. 81, 132 I.C. 816, 1931 Cr.C. 667, 32 Cr.L.J. 941. See also Motilal, 36 Cr.L.J. 1220 (1226), 157 I.C. 829, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 526, 39 C.W.N. 199, 1935 Cr.C. 902; Nga Thein Maung, 37 Cr.L.J. 290, 160 I.C. 459, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 46, 1936 Cr.C. 45; Nga Kan, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 71 (74), 37 Cr.L.J. 463, 161 I.C. 574, 1936 Cr.C. 76. The sentence of transportation for life is imposed in cases where there are in the opinion of the Court some extenuating circumstances and it is not necessary in the interests of the public at large that the sentence of death, which is primarily a deterrent sentence, should be inflicted. There is no question of reform of criminals who are sentenced to transportation for life—Bhagwandin, 32 Cr.L.J. 83, 128 I.C. 80, 7 O.W.N. 767, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 16, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 81, 1930 Cr.C. 956. Youth may be a circumstance to be taken into consideration in offences where the accused person is not fully able to understand the nature of his act or has been influenced by older persons but not in a case where a youth deliberately murders a small boy for motive of greed, being prompted to the crime by his own base nature. It is not the intention of the Legislature to reform murderers and the sentence of transportation for life is imposed only where there are some extenuating circumstances and where sentence of death is not necessary in the interests of public at large—Bhawani, 34 Cr.L.J. 250, 141 I.C. 747, 9 O.W.N. 1161, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 52, Ind. Rul. 1933 Oudh 83, 1933 Cr.C. 92. See also Manohar v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 201, 159 I.C. 830, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 170, 1935 Cr.C. 1159. For contra see Thakura Singh, 30 Cr.L.J. 65, 113 I.C. 177, 10 Lah.L.J. 463, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 64, Ind. Rul. 1929 Lah. 138. The circumstance that the accused is the only remaining son of the widow and the circumstance that he afterwards displayed considerable remorse, ought not to be taken into consideration in assessing the sentence to be passed in a case under sec. 302, I. P. C. What ought to guide the Court in a question of this character is the state of mind of the accused at the time when the crime was committed—Mominaddi, 39 C.W.N. 262. Old age is no doubt a point for consideration, but it is not in itself a sufficient ground for not awarding the death penalty on a conviction for murder—Sankaran Nayar v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N. 728.

Where the accused was in an abnormal mood when he committed murder, though it cannot be said that he was insane or did not know the nature of his actions, there is sufficient reason for not inflicting the extreme sentence—Nga Po Swa, 37 Cr.L.J. 435, 161 I.C. 250, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 113, 1936 Cr.C. 180.

The absence of the proof of premeditation would be a good ground for not passing the sentence of death—A. Plet, 37 Cr.L.J. 419, 161 I.C. 297, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 28, 1936 Cr.C. 32. See also Nga Bo Thin v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 1051, 171 I.C. 285, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 254, 1937 Rang.L.R. 169, 10 R.Rang. 141. Where the accused intended to kill the father of the child but he unfortunately succeeded in killing the child, and not the father, the ends of justice would be met by a sentence of transportation for life—Arumuga Tevan v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N. 723.

In the case of constructive liability under sec 34, I. P. C., the penalty of death should not be exacted from either of the convicts—Pakhar Singh, 31 Cr.L.J. 41 (43), 120 I.C. 180, 11 Lah.L.J. 20, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 292. A contrary view was, however, taken in Shafi Khan, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 161, 117 I.C. 176, 30 Cr.L.J. 737, 8 Pat. 181. Following this case it is laid down that neither principle nor approved practice can be adduced in favour of the view that a capital sentence should not be passed when the offenders are constructively guilty of murder—Mosaddi, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 100, 13 P.L.T. 702, 11 Pat. 807, 1933 Cr.C. 253, 142 I.C. 841, 34 Cr.L.J. 427. Once it is established that the intention of a number of persons is to make a joint assault, the culpability of those who deliver the assault and those who make the assault possible by beating off a rescue, is the same. In a case of extended liability under sec 149, I. P. C., and in a case where it is doubtful whether death was intended it is not in appropriate to treat all alike and sentence each of the accused to transportation for life. If the evidence is such that it can be reasonably found that all who joined an attack knew that death would be an almost certain result of the attack, for instance when guns were openly carried perhaps death in the case of all would be the appropriate penalty, but where accused persons are saddled with vicarious liability under sec. 149, I. P. C., and in addition intention to cause the actual result achieved cannot be clearly established, the accused should be given the benefit of the lower penalty—Rahman Samail v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 245 (253), I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 77.

In Benoyendra, 40 C.W.N. 432 (442), A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 73, the Calcutta High Court reduced the sentences of death to those of transportation for life in view of the circumstantial nature of the evidence, the long delay since the judgment and the possibility of the actual murder being detected.

No man can butcher his wife and escape hanging on the plea that he suspected her of misconduct—In re Dasan, 30 Cr.L.J. 630, 116 I.C. 142, 1929 M.W.N. 269, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 495, Ind. Rul. 1929 Mad. 526, 30 L.W. 229. See also Sohrai Sao, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 247, 124 I.C. 836, 31 Cr.L.J. 721, 9 Pat. 474. Where the accused committed murder because he suspected that his younger brother had been murdered by a person and the murderer had gone unpunished, this was no palliation of, or justification for, the accused's conduct in murdering the father of that person and the sentence of death was proper—Nga Po U v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 297, 160 I.C. 466, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 38, 1936 Cr.C. 37. A Court must not pass the more severe sentence where circumstances of extenuation exist merely because the consequences of the crime have been more serious than in the ordinary case (i.e., where by the murder of a pregnant woman two lives were sacrificed)—Nga Saw Maung v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 466, 172 I.C. 395, 39 Cr.L.J. 137.

In a case of murder, once the Court is satisfied that the murder has been committed and that the accused person has committed it, the question of sentence must be determined upon the gravity of the offence, irrespective of the circumstances whether the body has not been discovered—Raggha, 89 I.C. 903, A.I.R. 1925 All. 627, 26 Cr.L.J. 1431, 23 A.L.J. 821; Ram Nath, 93 I.C. 252, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh. 234, 27 Cr.L.J. 460, 1 Luck. 327; Munda, 32 Cr.L.J. 493 (495), 130 I.C. 331, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 25, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 267, 1931 Cr.C. 89. A Judge should not sentence a person accused of murder to transportation for life, instead of sentencing him to death, merely on the ground that the evidence is not strong enough to justify an irrevocable sentence. If the Court has any doubt as to the guilt of the accused it should acquit him—Sohrai Sao, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 247, 124 I.C. 836, 31 Cr.L.J. 721, 9 Pat. 474; Mosaddi, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 100, 13 P.L.T. 702, 11 Pat. 807, 1933 Cr.C. 253, 142 I.C. 841, 34 Cr.L.J. 427; Gul Zaman v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Pesh. 47; Mohsena Khatun v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Cal.

610, 43 C.W.N. 893; Muhammad Murid Rind v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 953 (1955), 170 I.C. 605, 30 S.L.R. 354, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 239, 10 R.S. 63. The strength of the evidence against the accused is a matter to be considered before but not after conviction. In case of a conviction of murder by assassination the sentence of transportation for life instead of to death on the ground that the evidence is not of a sufficiently convincing character to justify the latter punishment is utterly wrong—Santokhi, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 149, 14 P.L.T. 82, 12 Pat. 241, 142 I.C. 474, 34 Cr.L.J. 349, 1933 Cr.C. 404 (S.B.). But see Ma Shwe Yi, 1924 Rang. 179, 81 I.C. 945, 25 Cr.L.J. 1121, 1 Rang. 751 and Nga Khan, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 71 (75), 37 Cr.L.J. 463, 161 I.C. 574, 1936 Cr.C. 76, where it has been laid down that an accused person is entitled to the benefit of reasonable doubt in the matter of sentence as in the matter of conviction. When once the guilt of murder is proved the proper penalty to be is a matter for the discretion of the Judge and it is by no means true to say that merely because there is doubt as to which of several of the attackers inflicted the fatal blow, this is a sufficient ground for withholding the death sentence in the case of any or all of them. On the other hand, it is of course clear that those cases in which once it has been established that one person out of several took a leading part and the others a comparatively subsidiary part, the greater penalty may be inflicted upon the ring-leader and the lesser penalty upon those who took a comparatively subsidiary part—Tun Khim U v. The King, 40 Cr.L.J. 49 (51), 178 I.C. 298, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 331. In cases where many persons are involved, the Court should hesitate to pass sentence of death on all of them and try to discriminate. Infliction of five sentences of death in one and the same case, is apt to fail of the effect which such sentences would otherwise have—Nibharesh Mondal, 39 Cr.L.J. 479, 174 I.C. 803, 66 C.L.J. 351, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 295, 10 R.C. 726.

It is no part of the duty of a Sessions Judge to be influenced by public feeling. His duty is to administer the law. The law says that the proper sentence for murder is death and that whenever a person is convicted of an offence punishable with death, and the Court sentences him to any punishment other than death, the Court shall, in its judgment, state the reasons why the sentence of death was not passed. The state of public feeling is not an admissible reason for refraining from passing the sentence of death. Nor it is permissible to refrain from sentencing the murderers to death merely because their numbers exceeded the numbers of their victims. When four persons have together planned and executed the murder of a single person, each of them must be sentenced to death unless there are some legal reasons for not doing so—In re Sambangi Lakshumanna, 40 Cr.L.J. 249 (251), 179 I.C. 682, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 109, 48 M.L.W. 730, 1938 M.W.N. 1166, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 1028.

Ordinarily Courts refrain from passing the capital sentence on a person who is convicted on an appeal against his acquittal—Niamat, 32 Cr.L.J. 51 (56), 127 I.C. 850, 31 P.L.R. 411, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 409, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 882, 1930 Cr.C. 469.

As a general rule, a sentence of death should not necessarily follow a conviction under sec. 396, I. P. C., and this section differs from sec. 302, I. P. C., in that respect. The rule under sec. 302 is that a sentence of death should follow unless reasons are shown for giving a lesser sentence. No such rule applies to sec. 396, I. P. C.—Lal Singh v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 132 (133), 178 I.C. 694, A.I.R. 1938 All. 625, 1938 A.L.J. 943, 1 I.R. 1938 All. 875.

Where strong language was used on both sides and the accused acted under the impulse of the moment, sentence of death should not have been passed upon him—Inayat Khan, 36 Cr.L.J. 1335, 158 I.C. 336, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 94, 1935 Cr.C. 92, 16 Lah. 589. Where the crime was unpremeditated and committed in hot blood in the course of a dispute, the sentence of death is not called for—Nga Mye, 37 Cr.L.J. 181, 159 I.C. 902, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 427, 1935 Cr.C. 1201. Where an accused commits murder while drunk as a result of provocation, however slight, a sentence of death may be reduced to transportation for life—Nga Po Than v. The King, 40 Cr.L.J. 67, 178 I.C. 431, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 448.

Where the accused murders of young and helpless child, who is his own aunt's daughter, for the sake of her ornaments, nothing short of a sentence of death will satisfy the ends of justice—Mittayi Ameer Sab v. Emp, 1938 M.W.N. 34.

The deceased was a person of loose character and while living in her parents' village conceived from a stranger and came to the accused's house in a state of pregnancy. This was naturally resented by the accused who was her husband. She then gave birth to an illegitimate child in his house and he was chafed by his fellow villagers who "congratulated" him on the birth of a son. He then murdered his wife and caused grievous hurt to the illegitimate child. In these circumstances it was held that that was not a case in which the extreme penalty of the law should be imposed on him—Kartar Singh v. Emp, 39 Cr.L.J. 769 (771), 176 I.C. 666, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 556, 40 P.L.R. 854. The accused was a man of 25 years. His conduct in the past was above reproach and he showed a great deal of forbearance in the way he behaved after both his wives left him. He took his second wife back when she returned to him without question, and there was no evidence at all that he ill-treated her in any way. He was a tea garden cooly and was a man of no education and low mentality. He was convicted under sec. 302, I. P. C., for murdering his second wife who again left him. He confessed that he committed the crime as he felt that he could not face his parents, his brothers and his sisters. Held that the ends of justice would be served by imposing the alternative sentence of transportation for life instead of the capital penalty—Rama Koya, (1939) 2 Cal. 518. Where a young girl of 15 killed her newly-born baby, a sentence of transportation for life appeared to be wholly inappropriate. In England it is always assumed that a girl who commits such a murder at such a time is hardly responsible for her actions, it being well known that the child-birth produces occasionally peculiar reactions in the mother. The High Court suggested that Government should reduce the sentence of transportation for life to a sentence for a short period—Tahan v. Emp, 39 Cr.L.J. 718, 176 I.C. 272, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 473, 40 P.L.R. 23.

The accused was less than seventeen years old at the time of murder in which her mother and husband were chief actors. Though she failed to earn her pardon as an approver on account of subsequent retraction, her statement led to a successful investigation and to the conviction of the principal criminal. She served a considerable sentence and suffered by reason of the birth of her child in jail. The High Court held that there could not be a stronger case for the exercise of the prerogative of mercy—Aziz Begum v. Emp, 39 Cr.L.J. 16 (18), 171 I.C. 951, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 689, 39 P.L.R. 391.

It is always difficult to assess the penalty when a man dies after being beaten or kicked. As soon as it is found that the offence does not amount to culpable homicide, it is best to leave the death entirely out of account, and look only to the injury—Shanmuga Kodumban, 31 Cr.L.J. 477, 123 I.C. 43, 1930 M.W.N. 74. In Bhusan v. Kanai, 44 C.L.J. 208 some of the accused charged with an offence under the latter part of sec. 304 read with 149, I.P.C. were dealt with under sec. 562, Cr. P.C., on the ground of their age being below 21 years.

It is desirable to say quite clearly that where a Sessions Judge passes a more lenient sentence in contravention of the rulings of law which are laid down from time to time for the guidance of those dealing with criminal cases, the High Court will interfere and will enhance the sentence. At the same time where there was an absence of pre-meditation, not such as to make it wrong to pass the death sentence, but such as might well have weighed with other authorities in exercising clemency and three months elapsed during which the accused believed that his life would be spared, the sentence of transportation for life passed on the accused should not be enhanced. Legally there may be no justification for not imposing the death penalty. It does not, however, necessarily follow that the High Court must enhance the sentence in revision. It is recognised that a person who has, even wrongly, got the benefit of a lenient sentence at his trial, may sometimes be allowed to benefit by his good fortune, provided the sentence passed is one which is legal—Nga Bo Thin v. Emp, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 254.

(255), 1937 Rang L.R. 169, 171 I.C. 285, 38 Cr.L.J. 1051, following Mangal Naran, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 268, 87 I.C. 424, 26 Cr.L.J. 968, 49 Bom. 450, 27 Bom.L.R. 355 and In re Gunduthalayan Thalian, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 446, 1930 Cr.C. 498, 127 I.C. 290, 31 Cr.L.J. 1193, 53 Mad 585, 58 M.L.J. 490; Tun Khine U v. The King, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 331, 178 I.C. 298, 40 Cr.L.J. 49; Nga Chit Tin, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 225 (238), 40 Cr.L.J. 725, 183 I.C. 145. See also Gul Zaman v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Pesh. 47. The power to enhance sentences should be sparingly exercised by the High Court and sentences should be enhanced only in cases where the failure to enhance the sentence would lead to a serious miscarriage of justice. The mere fact that the High Court, had it been trying the case, might have imposed the capital sentence, is not a sufficient reason for enhancement—Uttam Singh Sochet Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 502 (504), 174 I.C. 949, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 260.

72. Transportation:—A sentence of transportation for life means a sentence of transportation for the whole of the remaining period of the convicted person's natural life—Nga Tha Byit v. Queen-Emp., (1893-1900) L.B.R. 13; Po Kun v. The King, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 124 (126), 1939 Rang L.R. 44. Under sec. 19, I. P. C., it is competent to the Judge to award a sentence of transportation in lieu of a substantive term of imprisonment; but sec. 31, Cr. P. C., does not authorise the award of a sentence of transportation in lieu of the imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine—Kunhussa v. Queen, 5 Mad. 28; Emp. v. Nuran, 1880 P.R. 17.

73. Imprisonment:—It is altogether inappropriate to add a fine to a substantial term of imprisonment. It is true that the Code sanctions either a term of imprisonment or a fine or both, and it is left to the discretion of the Court whether to inflict a sentence of imprisonment or a fine or both. But in practice, it can only be in very exceptional circumstances that it is suitable and appropriate to inflict a fine as well as a substantial term of imprisonment. In English practice there is hardly a case in which a substantial term of imprisonment has been inflicted as well as fine. It can only be suitable in cases where the Court thinks that the justice of the case will be met by inflicting a substantial fine, but at the same time thinks that a short term of imprisonment in addition will serve as a salutary lesson to the accused, or in cases where it is desired to compensate the complainant or in cases where the accused has profited financially by his misdeeds—Islam v. King-Emp., 35 C.W.N. 519. Where the Statute lays down that for a certain offence the punishment shall be imprisonment, it means that the offender shall go to jail, and imprisonment till the rising of the Court is a clear evasion of that intention—In re Assam Masaliarakath Kunhi Eara, 30 Cr.L.J. 247, 114 I.C. 234, 1929 M.W.N. 114, A.I.R. 1929 Mad 226, Ind Rul 1929 Mad. 250, 29 M.L.W. 673, 56 M.L.J. 550.

The Subordinate Courts should ordinarily avoid passing sentences of imprisonment for short terms, especially on first offenders of immature age—Tirtha, 31 Cr.L.J. 1076, 126 I.C. 578, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 424, 41 P.L.R. 660.

When the value of the articles stolen is trifling, even the previous conviction of the accused would not justify a sentence of 8 years' rigorous imprisonment—Subba Valayan v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N. 552.

It is not illegal to order that rigorous imprisonment and simple imprisonment shall run concurrently—Sheikh Badai Sahib v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N. 1334.

The act of nose-cutting is one which imports deliberate design of a particularly brutal and cruel character and should be adequately punished—Ismail Umar v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 928, 177 I.C. 647, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 430, 40 Bom.L.R. 832, 11 R.B. 111, following Abdul Rahiman, 16 Bom. 580, Rat. Un. Cr.C. 577 and Bhagwan v. Chhagan, A.I.R. 1915 Bom. 120, 27 I.C. 552, 16 Cr.L.J. 168, 17 Bom.L.R. 68.

73A. Solitary Confinement:—The punishment of solitary confinement can be awarded only for offences under the Penal Code (see sec. 73, I. P. C.) and not for offences under Special or Local Acts—Hurnarain, 20 P.R. 1870; Manauar, 4 P.R. 1875.

Thus, a person is not liable to a sentence of solitary confinement, if he is convicted of an offence under sec. 35 of the Excise Act—Gurdu Singh, 17 P.R. 1889 or under sec. 48 of the Post Office Act—Mukh Ram, 24 P.R. 1879 or under sec. 19 of the Arms Act—Nazir Singh, 25 Cr.L.J. 120, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 667 or under sec. 22 of the Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1911)—Bidha, 46 All. 114.

Again, solitary confinement can be awarded only as part of a substantive sentence of imprisonment—Umar Singh, 20 P.R. 1869; and not when such imprisonment is awarded in default of payment of fine—Jita, 26 P.R. 1873; Jamdad, 53 P.R. 1887; or in default of furnishing security—Kundan, 36 All. 195. Solitary confinement cannot be awarded in default of payment of fine—Bunsi, 9 P.R. 1882.

But it is not illegal to award solitary confinement as part of an imprisonment awarded in lieu of whipping under sec. 395 of this Code—Gaman, 14 P.R. 1899; nor is it illegal to impose solitary confinement as part of a sentence in a summary trial under Chap. XXII—Annu, 6 All. 83.

74. Sec. 75, I. P. C.:—A Magistrate in passing an enhanced sentence under sec. 75, I. P. C. (for previous conviction) cannot exceed the powers limited by sec. 32 of the Cr. P. Code. Thus, where a person who was convicted of theft was sentenced by a second class Magistrate to undergo six months' rigorous imprisonment, and to further imprisonment for six months under sec. 75, I. P. C., on account of his previous conviction, held that the second class Magistrate had no power to so sentence under sec. 75 as to make the total sentence exceed six months—Gulab, Ratanlal 688

The mere fact that a man has been convicted many times, is not in itself sufficient reason for passing a heavy sentence on him for an offence which is trivial in itself—Maulu, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 787, 121 I.C. 419, 1929 Cr.C. 419, 11 Lah. 115, 31 P.L.R. 217, 31 Cr.L.J. 264. When an accused person has had a certain number of previous convictions against him, it is not in accordance with enlightened ideas of the administration of criminal justice to sentence him to transportation for life for the commission of a subsequent offence which is trivial in itself. The previous record of the prisoner is, of course, an element which the Court should take into consideration in substantially increasing punishment for a subsequent offence—Daya Ram, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 768, 30 P.L.R. 530, 30 Cr.L.J. 1082, 119 I.C. 429, 1929 Cr.C. 465.

75. Fine:—In imposing fine, regard is to be had to the nature of the offence and the means of the accused—Subhan, 18 P.R. 1878. When a fine is not suited to the nature of the offence and is beyond the means of the offender to pay it, it ought not to be inflicted merely in order that a further period of imprisonment in default should be suffered. If the substantive sentence awardable by the Magistrate is insufficient for the offence, the case should be sent for trial to a Court which can award adequate sentence—Mohana, 20 P.R. 1895. Whether a fine is severe or not depends to a large extent on the position and status of the person fined. What would be a severe punishment in one case would be practically none in another—Jugal, 33 Cr.L.J. 28, 134 I.C. 1129, 35 C.W.N. 436, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 633, 1931 Cr.C. 833, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 41.

A fine should not be imposed on an accused person which it is wholly impossible for him to pay without ruining himself and inflicting great hardship on his family. In inflicting a fine the possibility of payment should be borne in mind—Abdulla, 71 I.C. 998, 9 Lah.L.J. 271, 24 Cr.L.J. 278, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 81; Dip Chand, 27 Cr.L.J. 480, 93 I.C. 704, 8 Lah.L.J. 113, 27 P.L.R. 199; Dhanu, 28 Cr.L.J. 865, 104 I.C. 705, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 59, 9 Pat.L.T. 217.

No doubt the Court must look to the means of the accused person, his respectability, his standard of living and all similar matters in inflicting a sentence. But because a man may easily pay a fine, is no ground for ordering him to pay the maximum fine fixed by law, irrespective of whether the nature of the offence committed by him demands it or not—Ganga Sagar, 31 Cr.L.J. 83 (92), 120 I.C. 435, A.I.R. 1929 All. 919, 1930 A.L.J. 26.

Where a first class Magistrate, who was also vested with the powers of a Special Magistrate, convicted the accused under sec. 4 of the Emergency Powers Ordinance (II of 1932) and sentenced him to pay a fine of Rs. 1,500, signing the order as a first class

72. Transportation:—A sentence of transportation for life means a sentence of transportation for the whole of the remaining period of the convicted person's natural life—Nga Tha Byit v. Queen-Emp., (1893-1900) L.B.R. 13; Po Kun v. The King, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 124 (126), 1939 Rang.L.R. 44. Under sec. 19, I. P. Emp.*, 39 Cr.L.J. 928, 177 I.C. 647, A.I.R. 1938 Bom 430, 40 Bom L.R. 832, 11 R.B. 111, following Abdul Rahiman, 16 Bom. 580, Rat. Un Cr.C 577 and Bhagwan v. Chhagan, A.I.R. 1915 Bom. 120, 27 I.C. 552, 16 Cr.L.J. 168, 17 Bom L.R. 68.

73A. Solitary Confinement:—The punishment of solitary confinement can be awarded only for offences under the Penal Code (see sec. 73, I. P. C.) and not for offences under Special or Local Acts—Hurnarain, 20 P.R. 1870; Manauwar, 4 P.R. 1875.

Thus, a person is not liable to a sentence of solitary confinement, if he is convicted of an offence under sec. 35 of the Excise Act—Gurdit Singh, 17 P.R. 1889 or under sec. 48 of the Post Office Act—Mukh Ram, 24 P.R. 1879 or under sec. 19 of the Arms Act—Nazir Singh, 25 Cr.L.J. 120, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 667 or under sec. 22 of the Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1911)—Bidha, 46 All. 111.

Again, solitary confinement can be awarded only as part of a substantive sentence of imprisonment—Umar Singh, 20 P.R. 1869; and not when such imprisonment is awarded in default of payment of fine—Jita, 26 P.R. 1873; Jamdad, 53 P.R. 1887; or in default of furnishing security—Kundan, 36 All. 195. Solitary confinement cannot be awarded in default of payment of fine—Bunsi, 9 P.R. 1882.

But it is not illegal to award solitary confinement as part of an imprisonment awarded in lieu of whipping under sec. 395 of this Code—Gaman, 14 P.R. 1899; nor is it illegal to impose solitary confinement as part of a sentence in a summary trial under Chap. XXII—Annu, 6 All. 83.

74. Sec. 75, I. P. C.—A Magistrate in passing an enhanced sentence under sec. 75, I. P. C. (for previous conviction) cannot exceed the powers limited by sec. 32 of the Cr. P. Code. Thus, where a person who was convicted of theft was sentenced by a second class Magistrate to undergo six months' rigorous imprisonment, and to further imprisonment for six months under sec. 75, I. P. C., on account of his previous conviction, held that the second class Magistrate had no power to so sentence under sec. 75 as to make the total sentence exceed six months—Gulab, Ratanlal 688.

The mere fact that a man has been convicted many times, is not in itself sufficient reason for passing a heavy sentence on him for an offence which is trivial in itself—Maulu, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 787, 121 I.C. 419, 1929 Cr.C. 419, 11 Lah. 115, 31 P.L.R. 217, 31 Cr.L.J. 264. When an accused person has had a certain number of previous convictions against him, it is not in accordance with enlightened ideas of the administration of criminal justice to sentence him to transportation for life for the commission of a subsequent offence which is trivial in itself. The previous record of the prisoner is, of course, an element which the Court should take into consideration in substantially increasing punishment for a subsequent offence—Daya Ram, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 768, 30 P.L.R. 530, 30 Cr.L.J. 1082, 119 I.C. 429, 1929 Cr.C. 465.

75. Fine:—In imposing fine, regard is to be had to the nature of the offence and the means of the accused—Subhan, 18 P.R. 1878. When a fine is not suited to the nature of the offence and is beyond the means of the offender to pay it, it ought not to be inflicted merely in order that a further period of imprisonment in default should be suffered. If the substantive sentence awardable by the Magistrate is insufficient for the offence, the case should be sent for trial to a Court which can award adequate sentence—Mohana, 20 P.R. 1895. Whether a fine is severe or not depends to a large extent on the position and status of the person fined. What would be a severe punishment in one case would be practically none in another—Jugal, 33 Cr.L.J. 28, 134 I.C. 1129, 35 C.W.N. 436, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 633, 1931 Cr.C. 833, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 41.

A fine should not be imposed on an accused person which it is wholly impossible for him to pay without ruining himself and inflicting great hardship on his family. In inflicting a fine the possibility of payment should be borne in mind—Abdulla, 71 I.C. 998, 9 Lah.L.J. 271, 24 Cr.L.J. 278, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 81; Dip Chand, 27 Cr.L.J. 480, 93 I.C. 704, 8 Lah.L.J. 143, 27 P.L.R. 199; Dhanu, 28 Cr.L.J. 865, 104 I.C. 705, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 59, 9 Pat.L.T. 217.

No doubt the Court must look to the means of the accused person, his respectability, his standard of living and all similar matters in inflicting a sentence. But because a man may easily pay a fine, is no ground for ordering him to pay the maximum fine fixed by law, irrespective of whether the nature of the offence committed by him demands it or not—Ganga Sagar, 31 Cr.L.J. 88 (92), 120 I.C. 435, A.I.R. 1929 All. 919, 1930 A.L.J. 26.

Where a first class Magistrate, who was also vested with the powers of a Special Magistrate, convicted the accused under sec. 4 of the Emergency Powers Ordinance (II of 1932) and sentenced him to pay a fine of Rs. 1,500, signing the order as a first class

Magistrate, the fine in excess of Rs 1,000 was held to be illegal and was remitted—Ram Chandra, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 58, 34 Bom.L.R. 1676.

An order for payment of daily fine is illegal, in as much as it is an adjudication prospectively in respect of an offence which has not been committed when the order is passed—Ram Krishna v. Mahendra, 27 Cal. 565. See also Husain v. Notified Area of Mahaba, 49 All. 245; Kashmiri Lal, 43 All. 644; Amir Hasan Khan, 40 All. 569. There must be proof of a continuing offence before the jurisdiction of a Magistrate to make such an order arises—Wazir Ahmad, 24 All 309. Thus, under sec. 580 of the Calcutta Municipal Act (III of 1899) the failure to comply with an order of the Municipality on each subsequent day is a continuing offence, for which a daily fine can be imposed, and no fresh order is necessary to authorise the imposition of the daily fine—Noni Lal v. Corporation of Calcutta, 7 C.W.N. 853.

Where fine was imposed because it was represented to the Judge that a friend might pay it, it was held to be rightly imposed although it was contended later on that the accused, being unable to pay fine, would have to stay in jail for a long period.—Rattan Lal v. Emp, 38 Cr.L.J. 51, 165 I C 544, 9 R L 265.

Fine under other laws:—Under this Code and the Penal Code a Magistrate has power only to inflict fine up to Rs. 1,000—In re Abdoor Rahaman, 7 W.R. 37. But if an offence under any other law, e.g., under sec. 35 of the Companies Act, is proved, the Magistrate is bound to impose a fine of Rs. 500 in respect of each offence of issuing an unstamped share-certificate; and the fact that sec. 32 of this Code gives the Magistrate power to inflict only a fine of Rs 1,000 will not curtail the Magistrate's jurisdiction to impose a fine of more than Rs. 1,000 in a case where more than two unstamped share-certificates have been issued—Moore, 20 Cal. 676. So also, under sec. 12 of the Opium Act, the Magistrate can impose any amount of fine in lieu of confiscation, and his power is not limited by sec. 32 of this Code—Maghan v. Rahim, 23 Cr.L.J. 747 (Pat).

Joint fine:—A joint fine with terms of imprisonment in default, is plainly open to the objection that it is impossible to say whether either of the convicted persons is liable to suffer the entire term of imprisonment and for what proportion of the default. Such an order cannot be supported—Safder Khan v. Gaya Municipality, 39 Cr.L.J. 531, 175 I C. 176, A I R. 1938 Pat. 271. See also Note 84A

Refund of fine:—There is no provision in the Criminal Procedure Code, that on reversal of the sentence of fine the Crown must return the amount to anybody other than the accused, even if the amount had been paid by such other person. The proper assumption to make in such cases is that at the time of the payment of the fine all parties agreed that the money might be treated as the property of the accused—Hiralal Jindani v. Official Assignee, Madras, A.I.R. 1937 Mad 191, 1936 M.W.N. 1246, 166 I.C. 344, 1937 M. Cr. C. 6, (1937) 1 M.L.J. 130, 45 M.L.W. 222, 38 Cr.L.J. 199.

76. Whipping:—A second class Magistrate cannot pass a sentence of whipping under this Code, although he was empowered to do so under the old Code of 1872—Bhagvanta, 7 Bom. 303.

A sentence of whipping is not appropriate in the case of a person holding a respectable position in life—Bhagel, 1907 P.W.R. 9.

Whipping cannot be awarded in default of payment of fine—Budhu v. Bahu, 5 P.R. 1866; nor can fine be awarded in addition to whipping—Thusku, 6 C.P.L.R. 34.

A sentence of whipping should be imposed when there is an aggravation in the commission of the offence. Whipping should not be added to imprisonment where the hurt caused (in a case of robbery) was very slight and negligible and the accused was a young man and a first offender—Badri Prasad, 44 All. 538, 20 A.L.J. 388, 23 Cr.L.J. 274. See also Udharam, 33 Cr.L.J. 900, 140 I C. 23, A I R. 1932 Sind 143, 1932 Cr.C. 587, Ind. Rul 1932 Sind 170. Where dacoity is attended with acts of great cruelty, a sentence of whipping may be properly inflicted in addition to a substantive sentence of transportation—Ram Sahai, 19 A.L.J. 610, 22 Cr.L.J. 397. Where the accused, after using violence, committed unnatural offence upon a boy of 12 years, under the most revolting circumstances, a sentence of whipping would be eminently right and proper in addition to a substantive sentence of imprisonment—Emp. v. Shera, 37 Cr L J. 474, 161 I.C. 591, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 256, 1936 Cr.C. 205.

Where a man is deemed to have committed an offence he is, in the eye of law, to be treated as though he had committed the offence and is liable to all the pains and penalties which the commission of the offence may bring upon him. If the commission of an offence makes the man, who commits it, liable to whipping, he must also be regarded as liable to whipping if he is to be deemed to have committed the offence, e.g., under sec. 114, I. P. C., read with the substantive section—Emp. v. Maung Pu Kai, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 203, 7 Rang. 329, 118 I.C. 637, 30 Cr L J. 961, 1929 Cr C. 177.

Rules for whipping:—"The Governor-General in Council observes that the extent to which the punishment of whipping is inflicted in the several provinces is a matter which should, even during ordinary times when the circumstances of the country are normal, be carefully watched by Local Governments and Administrations, in order that any tendency towards an indiscriminate or ill-judged resort to this form of punishment may be promptly checked. This is especially necessary during times of scarcity, when, from causes more or less beyond their own control, the poorer classes of the population are driven to the commission of petty crimes. The policy of largely resorting, during times of agricultural distress, to whipping as a punishment for petty thefts and other offences of a similar nature, may, no doubt, be defended by the argument that it would be impossible at such times to provide accommodation for all offenders in the jails. But if due and timely provision is made for employment of the industrious poor, there need be no excessive resort to punitive measures of this kind; and the Governor-General in Council trusts that if such times should unfortunately recur, the matter will be watched with especial care by the Local Governments and Administrations concerned, and that it may be found possible to distinguish between those members of the criminal classes who take advantage of seasons of public trouble to prey upon their neighbours, and the honest labouring poor who are driven by sheer necessity to grain-pilfering or similar offences. For the former, the punishment should be sharp and effective, and whipping may often be most appropriate. The latter should be considerably dealt with, and put in the way of relief after such punishment of fine or moderate imprisonment as may seem to be appropriate in each case"—Proceedings of the Government of India, Home Department (Judicial), 11th January, 1882.

"The Judges of the Punjab Chief Court have invited the attention of the Criminal Courts to the following points—(1) that persons in respectable position of life should not ordinarily be whipped; (2) that the punishment should be inflicted only in case of false evidence, extortion and forgery under any exceptional circumstances; (3) that whipping, as an additional punishment, should only be ordered when a further deterrent appears to be really called for in the interests of justice; (4) that special care and judgment should be exercised in times of agricultural scarcity and distress"—Punjab Cir. LXII, p 280.

76A. Joint actors:—As a general principle of criminal law, all who participate in the commission of an offence are severally responsible, as though the offence had been committed by each of them acting alone. Consequently, although as joint actors in the commission of the crime, they may be jointly tried and convicted, each must be separately punished as if he had committed the offence alone—Amrita Lal Bose v. Corporation of Calcutta, 41 Cal. 1025 (1063).

33. (1) The Court of any Magistrate may award such term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine as is authorized by law in case of such default:

Power of Magistrates to sentence to imprisonment in default of fine.

Provided that—

Proviso as to certain cases.

(a) the term is not in excess of the Magistrate's powers under this Code:

(b) in any case decided by a Magistrate where imprisonment has been awarded as part of the substantive sentence, the period of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of the fine shall not exceed one-fourth of the period of imprisonment which such Magistrate is competent to inflict as punishment for the offence otherwise than as imprisonment in default of payment of the fine.

(2) The imprisonment awarded under this section may be in addition to a substantive sentence of imprisonment for the maximum term awardable by the Magistrate under section 32.

77. Imprisonment in default of fine:—The imprisonment in default of payment of fine need not always be proportionate to the amount of fine imposed—Nga Chin, 1 Bur. S. R. 483.

Where the sentence is one of imprisonment and fine, this section should be read with sec. 65, I. P. Code; and where the sentence is one of fine only, it should be read with sec. 67, I. P. Code.

The rule of sec. 262 of Act X of 1882 applies to substantive sentences of imprisonment. In cases of simple imprisonment ordered as a process for enforcement of payment of fine, the general rules of secs 32 and 33 are applicable, and the principle of sec. 67, I. P. C. (read with Act VIII of 1882) is unaffected by Chap. XXII of Act X of 1882—Emp. v. Osghar Ali, 6 All 61.

Clause (a) of the proviso applies where the sentence is one of fine only, and in such a case the Magistrate may award imprisonment, in default of fine up to the limit of his powers.

Clause (b) applies where the accused is sentenced to imprisonment as well as fine, and in such cases, this section does not authorise the Magistrate to pass a sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine in excess of the term prescribed by sec. 65, I. P. Code (i.e., one-fourth of the maximum term of imprisonment fixed for the offence)—Venkatesagadu, 10 Mad. 165 (F.B.) (overruling 1 Mad. 277); 10 Mad. 166 (Note); See also Darba, 1 All. 461.

Sub-section (2) of this section does not apply to cases where the substantive sentence is one of fine only—Nga Sen, 1 Bur S R. 486.

Section 113 of the Railway Act (IX of 1890), which directs that on failure to pay on demand excess charge and fare when due, the amount shall on application be recovered by a Magistrate as if it were a fine, does not authorize the Magistrate to impose imprisonment in default. The excess charge and fare referred to in the section is not a fine, though it may be recovered as such—Kutrapa, 18 Bom. 440; Subramania Ayyar, 20 Mad. 385.

34. The Court of a Magistrate, specially empowered under section 30, may pass any sentence authorised by law, except a sentence of death or of transportation for a term exceeding seven years or of imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years.

Higher powers of certain District Magistrates.

78. Under sec. 34 read with sec. 33, a District Magistrate specially empowered under sec. 30, in trying a case under sec. 471, I. P. C., can pass a sentence of imprisonment for one year and nine months (i.e., one-fourth of 7 years) in default of payment of fine—Karam Chand, 35 P.R. 1885. A Magistrate exercising powers under this section is competent, under sec. 59, I. P. C., to pass a sentence of transportation for seven years instead of awarding a sentence of imprisonment—In re Bodhoo, 9 W.R. 6.

It is clear that so far as imprisonment is concerned the period of seven years must not be exceeded, but any sentence authorized by law under sec 32 (2) Cr P. C., is permissible. A sentence of imprisonment may therefore be combined with one of whipping if the offence is punishable with whipping in addition to other punishment to which the offender may be liable under the I. P. C. Therefore a Magistrate who is specially empowered under sec. 30, Cr. P. C., may pass a sentence of whipping in addition to the maximum sentence of seven years' imprisonment for the same offence—Nga Kyan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 183, 14 Rang. 662, 168 I.C. 975, 38 Cr L.J. 670, 9 R.R. 380.

Sentences which Courts and Magistrates may pass upon European British subjects.

34A. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 31, 32 and 34—

(a) no Court of Sessions shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than a sentence of death, penal servitude, or imprisonment with or without fine, or of fine; and

(b) no District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than imprisonment which may extend to two years or fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or both.

This section has been added by section 7 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923. Under the old law, the sentences that could be awarded by Magistrates of the first class, District Magistrate and Court of Session in the case of European British subjects were limited to three months' imprisonment and a fine of Rs 1,000; six months' imprisonment and a fine of Rs 2,000; and one year's imprisonment and unlimited fine, respectively. These restrictions are now removed. "The Bill proposes that so far as sentences of death, penal servitude, or imprisonment with or without fine, or of fine only are concerned, the powers of those officers shall be identical in the case of European British subjects and Indian British subjects, except as regards Magistrates who have been specially empowered under sec 30 of the Code. Such Magistrates will only be able to pass those sentences on European British subjects which could be passed by ordinary first class Magistrates. Such Magistrates will, however, have power to try European British subjects for the same additional offences as they are able to try Indian subjects under their special powers"—Statement of Objects and Reasons, Para 8 (iii).

This section further shows that an European British subject shall not be punished with whipping.

Although there is still some privilege as regards the Courts by which a European British subject can be tried, there is practically no privilege with regard to sentence—Mrs. Rego v. Emp., A.I.R. 1933 Nag 136 (146), 143 I.C. 17, 1933 Cr C 610, 34 Cr L.J. 505, 29 N.L.R. 251.

35. (1) When a person is convicted at one trial of two or more * * * offences, the Court may, subject to the provisions of section 71 of the Indian Penal Code, sentence him, for such offences, to the several punishments prescribed therefor which such Court is competent to inflict; such punishments, when consisting of imprisonment or transportation, to commence the one after the expiration of the other in such order as the Court may direct, unless the Court directs that such punishments shall run concurrently.

(2) In the case of consecutive sentences, it shall not be necessary for the Court, by reason only of the aggregate punishment for the several offences being in excess of the punishment which it is competent to inflict on conviction of a single offence, to send the offender for trial before a higher Court:

Provided as follows:—

(a) in no case shall such person be sentenced to imprisonment for a longer period than fourteen years;

(b) if the case is tried by a Magistrate (other than a Magistrate acting under section 34) the aggregate punishment shall not exceed twice the amount of punishment which he is, in the exercise of his ordinary jurisdiction, competent to inflict.

(3) For the purpose of appeal, the aggregate of consecutive sentences passed under this section in case of convictions for several offences at one trial shall be deemed to be a single sentence.

Explanation—Separable offences which come within the provisions of section 71 of the Indian Penal Code are not distinct offences within the meaning of this section.

(Omitted)

A breaks into a house with intent to commit theft and steals property therein. A has not committed distinct offences.

(Omitted)

78A. Change:—This section has been amended by sec. 7 of the Cr. P. Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. In sub-sec. (1) the word 'distinct' has been omitted and the italicised words have been added; in sub-sec. (3), the words "aggregate of consecutive" have been substituted for the word "aggregate"; and the Explanation and Illustration have been omitted.

"The existing Explanation and Illustration to sec. 35 have occasioned considerable misunderstanding. It is, therefore, proposed to omit them and state definitely that sec. 35 must be read subject to sec. 71, I. P. C. It is also declared that aggregate sentences passed under sec. 35 in case of conviction for several offences at one trial shall be deemed to be a single sentence for the purpose of appeal, if they run consecutively."—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Bill 3 of 1914).

Section 71, I. P. C. :—Section 71 of the Indian Penal Code provides as follows :—

"Where anything which is an offence is made up of parts any of which parts is itself an offence, the offender shall not be punished with the punishment of more than one of such offences, unless it be so expressly provided.

"Where anything is an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, or where several acts, of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence, constitute, when combined, a different offence, the offender shall not be punished with a more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for any one of such offences."

In all other cases (e.g., where the offences are independent of each other), the Court can pass separate sentence for each of the offences, under sec. 35 of the Cr. P. Code.

"Section 35 has been materially altered by the recent amendment of the Code. Under the present Code no reference is made to distinct or separable offences, and it is not necessary to consider whether the two offences are distinct offences. For the application of sec. 35 we have now only to consider whether the offences are of the nature described in sec. 71, I P. Code, so that the punishment for more than one of the offences is forbidden by that section"—Kanchan, 41 C.L.J. 563, 26 Cr.L.J. 1253, 88 I.C. 997; Hanma Timma, 30 Bom.L.R. 383, 29 Cr.L.J. 544; Bhawan Surji, 37 Cr.L.J. 553 (555), 162 I.C. 283, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 172, 38 Bom.L.R. 164, 60 Bom. 627 (633), 1936 Cr.C. 364, 8 R.B. 405; Bajinath Singh Attar Singh v. The King, 39 Cr.L.J. 607 (608), 175 I.C. 515, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 138, 1938 Rang. 63. See also Piru Rama, 49 Bom. 916, 27 Cr.L.J. 113, 91 I.C. 689, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 64; Pandu Avachut, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 141, 108 I.C. 512; *Sothavalu v. Cases under sec. 71, I. P. C.:—In awarding punishment under sec. 71, I. P. C., in case of convictions for several separable offences, falling within the purview of the section, it is illegal to impose a sentence for each offence—Nilmony, 16 Cal. 442; Keamuddi, 51 Cal. 79; Mithoo Sing v. Gopal Lal, 3 C.W.N. 761; Bhagwan, 4 P.R. 191. Thus, the offence of being members of an unlawful assembly with the common object of committing an offence, and the actual commission of that offence, may be considered as separate and distinct offences; but having regard to the provisions of sec. 71, I. P. Code, a person convicted of such offences would not be liable to separate punishment for each offence—Sarat Chandra, 37 C.L.J. 171, 24 Cr.L.J. 851, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 408, following Bhup Sing, 8 C.W.N. 305 (rioting and criminal trespass), and Alim Sheikh v. Shahzada, 8 C.W.N. 483 (wrongful confinement and rioting). This ruling has been rendered obsolete by the new amendment. Vide Kanchan, 41 C.L.J. 563, 26 Cr.L.J. 1253. Such is also the case with Ramdhal, 3 C.W.N. 174, Alim Sheikh v. Shahzada, 8 C.W.N. 483 and Amiruddin v. Emp., 27 Cr.L.J. 232, 92 I.C. 216, 40 C.L.J. 306, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 217. Vide Fattar Bop, 31 C.W.N. 691. So also, it is improper to pass separate sentences upon the accused both for rioting and theft, when the former offence is but an element of the latter—Mithoo v. Gopal, 3 C.W.N. 761. If a person abducts a woman with intent to commit rape, and then actually commits rape, he cannot be awarded separate sentences under secs. 366 and 376, I. P. C. The sentence under sec. 366, I. P. C., will be set aside—Imam, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 212, 27 Cr.L.J. 338. Where an accused is charged under sections 121 and 121A of the I. P. Code in respect of a single speech he will be liable to one punishment only, even if he is convicted of both the offences charged—Hasrat Mohani, 24 Bom.L.R. 885, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 284. The Bombay High Court holds in some other cases that though a Court in awarding punishment under the provisions of sec. 71, I. P. C., should pass one sentence for either of the offences and not a separate one for each offence, still if two sentences are passed and the aggregate of them does not exceed the punishment provided by law for any one of the offences, or the jurisdiction of the Court, it would be an irregularity only and not an illegality—Malu, 23 Bom. 706 (F.B.); Piru Rama, 49 Bom. 916, 27 Cr.L.J. 113, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 61; Bana, 17 Bom. 260 (F.B.). The Allahabad High Court likewise holds that it is not illegal to pass separate sentences for all the offences, but the amount of punishment should not be heavier than that which the Court can inflict for any one of the offences—Wazir, 10 All. 58.

Where the offences are independent of each other, e.g., the offence of house-breaking at night with intent to commit theft (sec. 457, I. P. C.) and the offence of theft of ornaments in a dwelling house (sec. 380, I. P. C.), the case does not fall under sec. 71, I. P. Code, and separate sentences can be passed for the two offences, the one sentence to commence after the expiration of the other—Kanchan, 41 C.L.J. 563, 88 I.C. 997, 26 Cr.L.J. 1253, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1015; Bajinath Singh Attar Singh v. Emp., I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 378, 40 Cr.L.J. 466, 181 I.C. 45, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 76, 11 R.S. 202; Shaikh Idris v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 751, 181 I.C. 217, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 349, 1939 P.W.N. 35, 5 B.R. 907, 29 P.L.T. 736, 12 R.P. 121 where it is also laid down that the question is not of much practical importance as in an overwhelmingly large number of cases the punishment provided for any of these two offences will be sufficient and if the Court of Appeal finds that the trial Court has wrongly passed two separate sentences but the sentences taken together are not excessive, they can be consolidated. See also Ajudhia, 2 All. 644; Zar Singh, 10 All. 146 (In these cases the change in the law has been very fully explained). For contra see Mt. Champa Pasin v. Emp., A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 326, 108 I.C. 81, 29 Cr.L.J. 325. Q.-E. v. Mahe, 23 Bom. 706 is no longer good law. So also, the offence of possessing illicit liquor and the offence of possessing apparatus for manufacturing such liquor, are quite distinct offences for which separate sentences can be passed—Padu, 52 Bom. 277, 30 Bom.L.R. 378, 29 Cr.L.J. 412. In this case Fawcett, J., has used the word 'distinct' obviously to mean that the case does not fall under sec. 71, I. P. Code. Separate sentences should also be passed for offences under secs. 37 and 30 (d), Excise Act—Emp. v. M. Hliwa, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 338, 36 Cr.L.J. 460, 154 I.C. 75, 12 Rang. 419, 1934 Cr.C. 1248; and under secs. 353 and 225, I. P. Code, as the provisions of sec. 71, I. P. Code do not apply to these offences—Zarkhan Nurkhan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pesh. 10. So again, consecutive sentences can be imposed where a person is convicted of receiving stolen property under sec. 411, I. P. Code, and of concealing other stolen property under sec. 414, I. P. Code; sec. 71, I. P. Code, does not apply to the case—Hanna Timma, 30 Bom.L.R. 383, 29 Cr.L.J. 544, 109 I.C. 368, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 145. A person who steals a bullock and subsequently kills it for food is, therefore, guilty of both theft and mischief and a separate sentence can be passed for each offence—Nga Paw Din. v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 607, 175 I.C. 515, 1938 Rang.L.R. 63, 10 R.R. 503, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 138; Bhawan Surji, 37 Cr.L.J. 553, 60 Bom. 627, 162 I.C. 283, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 172, 38 Bom.L.R. 164, 1936 Cr.C. 364, 8 R.B. 405, dissenting from Ramla Ratanji, 5 Bom. L.R. 460, Hussain Buksh v. Emp., 3 Pat. 804, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 34, 84 I.C. 34, 26 Cr.L.J. 277, 7 P.L.T. 36, Bichuk Ahur v. Anhuck Bhoonea, 6 W.R. 5 (Cr.), Genya, 1877 Rat. Un. Cr. C. 129 and approving Krishna, 1889 Rat. Cr. C. 430. The offence of forgery and the offence of using a forged document as genuine are separate offences, and separate sentences may be passed on an accused person who has been convicted at one trial for both—Sriramulu, 52 Mad. 532, 56 M.L.J. 554, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 450. Imposition of separate sentences are illegal where the acts constituting the offences under secs. 354 and 342, I. P. C., form part of the same transaction as constituted the abatement of rape alleged against the same accused—Champa Pasin, 29 Cr.L.J. 325 (332), 108 I.C. 81, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 326. When proved facts in the case established two distinct offences falling under secs. 356 and 376, I. P. C., the accused can be convicted separately for both offences—Tek Singh, 29 Cr.L.J. 248, 107 I.C. 388. Separate sentences can be awarded when the accused is convicted of two separate and distinct offences of dacoity—Nga Po Nyein, 35 Cr.L.J. 1161, 150 I.C. 747, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 122, 1934 Cr.C. 715. Acts done in pursuance of the conspiracy cannot be separately punished unless these acts are separately charged and particularized as required by the Code—Karamalli Gulamalli, 40 Cr.L.J. 118 (121), A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 481, I.L.R. 1939 Bom. 42, 40 Bom.L.R. 1092. Where the accused's proved connection with the specific offence is only through the general conspiracy and he has already received a sentence of two years' rigorous imprisonment for his part in the general conspiracy, there should be no additional sentence on the cheating charge—Solomon Ezekiel v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 255, 186 I.C. 171, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 376, 69 C.L.J. 298.

The offence of voluntarily causing hurt or of voluntarily causing grievous hurt obviously can be committed without the commission of the offence of rioting and in like manner, rioting can be committed without commission of the two other mentioned offences. Therefore, there has been a general agreement amongst all the High Courts except that of Lahore that if a person is convicted of rioting and of a substantive offence of hurt of some kind, he can be awarded separate sentences even when the common object of the unlawful assembly is to commit assault—In re Ponniah Lopes, 35 Cr.L.J. 1226, 57 Mad 643, 150 I.C. 977, 1934 M.W.N. 8, 39 M.L.W. 566, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 81, 1934 Cr.C. 684, 66 M.L.J. 572; Sonthavalau v. Rama Kone, 34 Cr.L.J. 273, 142 I.C. 31, 56 Mad. 481, 37 M.L.W. 250, Ind. Rul 1933 Mad. 180, 1933 M.W.N. 254, 64 M.L.J. 314, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 338, 1933 Cr.C. 441; Mohur Mir, 16 Cal. 725; Ram Anugatha Singh, 18 I.C. 402, 40 Cal. 511, 14 Cr.L.J. 66; Q-E. v. Bana Punja, 17 Bom. 260; Q-E. v. Dungar Singh, 7 All 29, 1884 A.W.N. 220; Q-E. v. Ram Sarup, 7 All 757, 1885 A.W.N. 195 Piru Rama, 27 Cr.L.J. 113, 91 I.C. 689, 27 Bom.L.R. 1371, 49 Bom. 916, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 64; Fatiar Bap, 31 C.W.N. 691; Kapil v. Rabbani, 41 C.L.J. 471, 26 Cr.L.J. 1297, 89 I.C. 241. The contrary view was taken by the Lahore High Court in Bishna, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 405, 73 I.C. 517, 24 Cr.L.J. 629; Bhagawan Singh, 4 P.R. 1901, 52 P.L.R. 1901; Mangal Singh, 38 I.C. 756, 31 P.R. 1916 (Cr.), 18 Cr.L.J. 372 and Manek Chand, 27 Cr.L.J. 834, 95 I.C. 754, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 581. The same High Court, however, dissented from the above view in Ali Akbar, 30 Cr.L.J. 575, 116 I.C. 216, Ind. Rul 1929 Lah. 472, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 670, where Piru Rama, was followed and Bhagawan Singh was dissented from. It was also laid down there that in practice it is undoubtedly better to give a single sentence for all the offences or order the sentences to run concurrently. The Peshwar Court holds that the provisions of sec. 71, I. P. Code, are applicable to the offences under secs. 147 and 353, I. P. Code and as the offences fall within two separate definitions of law they cannot be punished with a more severe punishment than the Court can award for any one of them—Zarkhan Nurkhan v Emp, A.I.R. 1940 Pesh 10. The ruling reported in 4 C.W.N. 245 (Hriday v. Jagananda) seems no longer to be good law.

Separate sentences passed upon persons for the offences of rioting and hurt of any kind are not legal where it is found that such persons individually did not commit any act which amounted to voluntarily causing hurt, but were guilty of that offence under section 149, I. P. Code—Nilmony Poddar, 16 Cal. 442 (F.B.). The amendment of sec 35, Cr P C, in 1923 in no way touches the authority of the Full Bench decision. Now the view expressed above in the Full Bench case has been adopted by the High Courts of Patna and Madras—Kitabdi, 35 C.W.N. 184, 32 Cr.L.J. 890, 132 I.C. 247, A.I.R. 1931 Cal 450, 1931 Cr.C. 602; Boja Singh, 8 Pat 271, 120 I.C. 311, 31 Cr.L.J. 83, 10 P.L.T. 353, A.I.R. 1929 Pat 263, Ind. See Kiamuddin Kartkar, 28 C.W.N. 317, 51 Cal. 79, 81 I.C. 593, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 771, 25 Cr.L.J. 945, where it was further held that the sentences were illegal, even though they were made to run concurrently. The Bombay High Court took a different view in Bona Punjab, 17 Bom. 260, which was confirmed in Peru Rama, 91 I.C. 689, 49 Bom. 916, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 61, 27 Cr.L.J. 113. The Oudh Chief Court followed its previous decisions and the decision of the Bombay High Court in 17 Bom. 260. Vide Raghubar v King-Emp, 40 Cr.L.J. 217, 179 I.C. 461, 1939 O.W.N. 27, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 14, following Maphal Singh v. King-Emp, 17 O.C. 184, 25 I.C. 633, 1 O.L.J. 328, 15 Cr.C. 625, A.I.R. 1914 Oudh 205 and Sheo Nath v King-Emp, 3 O.W.N. 92 (Sup), 97 I.C. 804, 27 Cr.L.J. 1172.

79. Scope of Section:—'Convicted'.—This section applies only to convictions for offences; it does not apply to imprisonment under sec. 123—Kanki, 5 Bom. L.R. 26; Tukaram, 4 Bom.L.R. 876. Therefore, it is illegal for a Magistrate to direct under this section that a sentence of imprisonment for an offence should take effect after the expiry of the sentence which the accused may be undergoing for default of furnishing security for good behaviour—Pichari Anthu, 16 Cr.L.J. 622, 30 I.C. 446 (Mad.) ; Joghi, 31 Mad 515. The order is also illegal under sec. 120.

This section is not restricted to cases where the several punishments are all of the same kind, i.e., all the sentences of imprisonment or all are sentences of transportation. It covers cases of the description where one of the punishments is imprisonment while the other is transportation—Khokua, 21 C.W.N. 608, 17 Cr.L.J. 238, 23 C.L.J. 596.

80. One trial:—This section has reference only to the conviction of an accused person of two or more offences at one trial. It does not apply to sentences passed at different trials—Q. v. Puban, 7 W.R. 1 ; In re Daulatbai, 3 All 305 ; Thakur, 1881 A.W.N. 23 ; Kamal, 20 C.W.N. 1300 ; Makbul Husain, 11 A.L.J. 263 ; Emperor v. Daulli, 47 All. 59. Thus, it does not include the case of separate trials held on the same day for separate offences committed by the same accused—Venkatesadu, 2 Weir 30. But in Emp. v. Mahomed Isaf, 10 I.C. 769, 13 Bom.L.R. 200, 12 Cr.L.J. 24, a Magistrate convicted the accused of two offences of cheating in separate trials concluded on the same day and ordered the sentences to run concurrently. Held that as the two offences in question could have been tried jointly under sec. 234, Cr. P. C., the order was not illegal. Vide Mahadeo, 27 Cr.L.J. 807 (811), 95 I.C. 471, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 426, where the above ruling was quoted with approval. This section has no application whatever when a person is convicted in two or more separate trials, even though in all of them the complainant is the same and the offences are similar and they are concluded on the same date—Sheo Narain, 1910 P.L.R. 105, 11 Cr.L.J. 679.

See sec. 397 Cr. P. C.

81. Distinct offences:—By reason of the omission of the word 'distinct' the present section applies to all cases (except those which are covered by sec. 71, I P. Code) whether the offences are distinct or not. In all cases, the Court will be competent to inflict an aggregate punishment in excess of the punishment which it is ordinarily competent to inflict in respect of a single offence.

Owing to this change in the law the ruling in Dhondi, 8 Bom.L.R. 850, 4 Cr.L.J. 445, is overruled. In this case it was held that if the offences were not distinct, the trying Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass enhanced sentence under the provisions of sub-section (2) and proviso (b).

82. "May sentence":—The words 'may sentence' do not mean that the Court must necessarily pass distinct sentences—Mahomed, Ratanlal 597 (per Jardine, J.). The use of the word may shows that this section only permits and does not make it obligatory on Courts to pass separate sentences in one trial—Nga Kin, L.B.R. (1872-1892) 261 ; Ngakyn, 1 Bur.S.R. 271. This view was dissented from in Emp. v. Dharamdas, 31 Cr.L.J. 143, 141 I.C. 280, 26 S.L.R. 416, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 9, Ind. Rul. 1933 Sind 46, 1933 Cr.C. 33 where it was held that in this section the word "may" not only conferred a power but also imposed the duty of putting it in use. The Rangoon High Court took the same view in Mi Hluwa, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 338, 12 Rang. 419, 1934 Cr.C. 1248, 154 I.C. 75 where Ba U. J., observed: "S. 35, Criminal P. C., as it stands, in my opinion, means nothing more or less than this, that in a case where the provisions of sec. 71, Penal Code, do not come into play the Court has no discretion whatever to pass only one sentence for one offence and decline to pass sentences for the other offences of which it may find the accused guilty. Separate sentences must be passed for the several offences of which the Court finds the accused guilty..... If that is not the proper view to be taken of this section, it cannot, in my opinion, be reconciled with secs. 245 and 258." The same view was taken by the High Courts of Bombay and Allahabad in Reg v. Tukaya, 1 Bom. 214 ; Phakeera, Rat. Un. Cr. C. 369 ; and Wazir Jan, 10 All. 58, 1887 A.W.N. 274.

But though it is not illegal to pass one sentence for all the offences, still it is generally the proper course to pass a separate sentence for each offence—Mahomed, Ratanlal 597; Anonymous, 4 M.H.C.R. App. 27; because such a course will enable the Appellate Court to know the punishment to be remitted, in case the conviction for one of the offences is set aside—4 M.H.C.R. App. 27. If one aggregate sentence is imposed for all the offences, it is impossible to apportion it to the different offences for which the accused is convicted—Bahadur, 14 P.R. 1886. But the passing of one aggregate sentence for the several offences is not an illegality but a mere irregularity; it is not an error or defect in consequence of which the High Court would reverse or alter the sentence—Vinayak, 2 B.H.C.R. 391.

On the other hand, if the offences are not separate (e.g., offences under secs. 392 and 75, I. P. C.), the awarding of two separate sentences is illegal—In re Muthurakla, 18 M.L.T. 121, 18 Cr.L.J. 611.

83. Consecutive sentences:—If separate sentences are passed for each offence of which an accused stands convicted, the sentences must commence one after the expiry of the other—Maung Kala, L.B.R. (1872-1892) 526. Where a man is imprisoned under two warrants, ordering consecutive sentences, the first should be completely executed both in regard to the substantive term of imprisonment as well as the imprisonment in default of fine, before any effect is given to the second warrant—Anonymous, Ratanlal 132.

Where the Magistrate passes two separate sentences of imprisonment, but does not specify that they are to run concurrently, they must be held to have been ordered to run consecutively under sec. 35, Cr. P. C.—Shaikh Idris v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 751, 183 I.C. 217, 5 B.R. 907, 20 P.L.T. 736, 12 R.P. 121, 1939 P.W.N. 35, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 319.

84. Concurrent sentences:—The Court must expressly direct whether the sentences are to run concurrently or consecutively. Omission to determine whether the sentences of imprisonment and transportation (in a case where both sentences have been passed) are to run concurrently or consecutively, makes the sentence defective in form—Khohua, 21 C.W.N. 608, 23 Cr.L.J. 596, 17 Cr.L.J. 238, 34 I.C. 651.

It is not illegal to direct a sentence of imprisonment to run concurrently with a sentence of transportation—Bogi, 1913 P.R. 21, 15 Cr.L.J. 68, 22 I.C. 420.

The imprisonment referred to in this section is a substantive sentence of imprisonment; an order directing that the terms of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine shall run concurrently is illegal—Subrao, 27 Bom.L.R. 1351, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 62, 27 Cr.L.J. 111, 91 I.C. 543; Akidullah, 15 I.C. 808, 5 S.L.R. 263, 13 Cr.L.J. 536; Ghulam, 30 Cr.L.J. 907, 118 I.C. 224 A.I.R. 1929 Sind. 179, Ind. Rul. 1929 Sind. 192; Shidlingappa, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 416, 96 I.C. 270, 28 Bom.L.R. 668, 27 Cr.L.J. 926; Kanda Moopan, 38 Cr.L.J. 796, 169 I.C. 607, 10 R.M. 77, 15 M.L.W. 87, 1 I.L.R. (1937) Mad. 362, 1937 M.W.N. 52, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 400, (1937) 1 M.L.J. 74. See Note 1082.

84A. Joint sentence:—Omission to pass a separate sentence in respect of each separate offence is illegal—Queen-Empress v. Wazir Jan, 10 All. 58, 1887 A.W.N. 274; Queen-Empress v. Phakeera, Ratanlal 369. This view was modified in recent cases and it was held that it was not illegal to pass one sentence for two offences when there were separate convictions for two distinct offences in the same case, but it was generally the proper course in such a case to pass a separate sentence for each offence—Queen-Empress v. Mahomed, Ratanlal 597; Emp. v. Dharamdas, 34 Cr.L.J. 143, 141 I.C. 280, 26 S.L.R. 416, A.I.R. 1933 Sind. 9, Ind. Rul. 1933 Sind. 46. The Rangoon High Court agreed with the view of the Allahabad High Court and the Bombay High Court in Ratanlal 369 and held that sentence, even though it may be joint, should be passed on conviction for each of the offences charged—Emp. v. J. H. Hoon, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 338, 36 Cr.L.J. 460, 151 I.C. 75, 12 Rang. 419, 1934 Cr.L.J. 1248. Where a Magistrate passed 18 months' rigorous imprisonment on the accused under sec. 326(148, I. P. C.), it was interpreted to mean that the Magistrate passed two separate sentences under each section—Sohan Ahir, 25 Cr.L.J. 992, 81 I.C. 640, 22 P.L.J. 272. A.I.R. 1924 All. 492. See also Note 75.

85. Appeal:—An accused who has been sentenced to concurrent sentences of imprisonment, no one of which is individually appealable, has no right to aggregate them and appeal against them collectively—Aziz Shaikh, 40 Cal. 631, 19 I.C. 510, 17 C.W.N. 825; Abdul Jabbar, 25 C.W.N. 613, 66 I.C. 65, 23 Cr.L.J. 225; Suknandan, 17 C.L.J. 392, 13 Cr.L.J. 787; Gur Sahay, 3 P.L.J. 138, 19 Cr.L.J. 90; Tulsi Ram, 35 All. 154. Contra—Abdul Khalik, 17 C.W.N. 72, 13 Cr.L.J. 877; and Bepin Behari, 15 C.W.N. 734, 12 Cr.L.J. 391, 15 C.L.J. 82, 11 I.C. 255, where it was held that concurrent sentences must be aggregated for purposes of appeal, as otherwise there would be no distinction between a concurrent sentence and a single sentence in which no sentence was passed under the second charge. But these two rulings can no longer stand as good law in view of the recent amendment made in sub-section (3) under which only consecutive sentences can be aggregated for the purpose of appeal.

86. Proviso (a):—According to proviso (a), fourteen years is the maximum term of imprisonment which can be awarded as an aggregate sentence. Therefore, an aggregate sentence of 20 years' rigorous imprisonment is illegal—8 I.C. 550, Sheo Narain, 1910 P.L.R. 105, 11 Cr.L.J. 679. What this proviso aims at is the prohibition of the passing of consecutive sentences in one trial beyond the period of fourteen years. If the sentences given in respect of two or more convictions in one trial are directed to run concurrently instead of consecutively and the period of such concurrent sentences does not exceed fourteen years, the aforesaid provision is in no way infringed—Nga Mya Gai, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 391, 171 I.C. 912, explaining Sheo Narain, supra.

The fact that the Magistrate passes the maximum term of imprisonment under this section, is no bar to his awarding further punishment on the same accused for a distinct offence tried separately. Thus, where, a person was charged with two charges of dacoity and one charge of kidnapping, and was tried separately for the dacoity and for the kidnapping, and the Magistrate inflicted a sentence of 14 years for the charges of dacoity, held that this would not disqualify him from passing a further sentence for the offence of kidnapping, although the trial for that offence was contemporaneous with the trial on the dacoity charges and terminated on the same day—Bahadur, 14 P.R. 1886.

87. Proviso (b):—Where there are separate trials, the Magistrate's power of punishment is not limited to twice the amount which he is competent to pass—In re Daulatai, 3 All. 305.

88. Sub-section (3):—For the purposes of appeal.—It is only for the purposes of appeal (and for no other purpose, e.g., for the purpose of commutation into transportation) that the consecutive sentences can be treated as one sentence; therefore, two or more sentences cannot be added up so that the aggregate period may be commuted into transportation—Ootum Mal, 2 W.R. 1.

For the purposes of appeal, only consecutive sentences are allowed to be taken in the aggregate as one sentence—Hamid, 32 Cr.L.J. 469, 129 I.C. 731, 1930 A.L.J. 1206, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 219. This sub-section does not apply to concurrent sentences—Nga Shwe, L.B.R. (1900-1902) 57; Saw Slaing, U.B.R. (1897-1901) 13; Sher Muhammad, 1901 P.R. 25; Jagadish, 10 N.L.J. 135, 28 Cr.L.J. 672. See Notes under "Appeal" above.

Only substantive sentences can be aggregated under this section; a sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine must not be included for the purposes of calculation—1892 P.R., page 22.

This sub-section, which provides that the aggregate of consecutive sentences should for the purposes of appeal be deemed to be a single sentence, refers only to sentences of imprisonment, and not to sentences of fine—Shidlingappa, 28 Bom.L.R. 668, 27 Cr.L.J. 926, 96 I.C. 270, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 416. In this case the Magistrate passed two sentences of fine amounting in the aggregate to Rs. 80 and it was held that an appeal lay.

See Note 1113.

89. Splitting up of offences:—No Magistrate is entitled to split up an offence (over the whole of which he had no jurisdiction) into its component parts for the purpose of giving himself jurisdiction over a part, thereby depriving the prisoner of the right of appeal—Abdool Karim, 4 Cal. 18.

C.—Ordinary and Additional Powers.

36. All District Magistrates, Sub-divisional Magistrates and Magistrates of the first, second and third classes, have the powers hereinafter respectively conferred upon them and specified in the third schedule. Such powers are called their "ordinary powers."

90. Secs. 36 and 107:—Where a person is not sent before the District Magistrate by any other Magistrate under sec. 107 (3), the District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to commit him to custody under sec. 107 (4). Nor can the District Magistrate commit the accused to custody under sec. 36 because this section does not override the provision of sec. 107—Chidambaran, 31 Mad. 315, 7 Cr L J. 360, 3 M.L.T. 311.

91. Ordinary powers:—Power to entertain complaints is not one of the ordinary powers of a first class Magistrate—Loghan v Romer, 34 Mad 343, 12 Cr.L.J. 535, 12 I.C. 303, 1911 M.W.N. 169, 17 Cr L J 293, 35 I.C. 165, 4 L.W. 405. Among the ordinary powers of a Magistrate of the third class specified in Schedule III is power to issue search warrants—Clarke v Brojendra Kishore Roy Chowdhury, 39 Cal. 953 (1964), 16 C.W.N. 863, 13 Cr.L.J. 693, 16 I.C. 501, 16 CLJ. 231, 10 A.L.J. 193, 14 Bom.L.R. 717, 23 M.L.J. 32, 39 I.A. 163 (P.C.).

37. In addition to his ordinary powers, any Sub-divisional Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first, second or third class may be invested by the Provincial Government or the District Magistrate, as the case may be, with any powers specified in the fourth schedule as powers with which he may be invested by the Provincial Government or the District Magistrate.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

38. The power conferred on the District Magistrate by section 37 shall be exercised subject to the control of the Provincial Government.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

D.—Conferment, Continuance and Cancellation of Powers.

39. (1) In conferring powers under this Code the Provincial Government may, by order, empower persons specially, by name or in virtue of their office, or classes of officials generally by their official titles.

(2) Every such order shall take effect from the date on which it is communicated to the person so empowered.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

92. A notification cannot grant criminal powers retrospectively. The notification takes effect from the date on which it is communicated to the person empowered—Gul Mahomed, A.I.R. 1933 Pesh. 97, 1934 Cr.C. 50, 147 I.C. 757.

Where a Magistrate of the second class begins a trial in that capacity and, previous to his passing the sentence, is empowered as a first class Magistrate, he can inflict a sentence in the latter capacity—Pershad, 7 All 414 (F.B.). See also Note 1103.

92A. "Generally" or "specially":—When by a notification of the Government a class of officials is invested with powers to try certain offences, such officials are only "generally" empowered and not specially empowered—Mahomed Kasim, 17 M.L.T. 191, 16 Cr.L.J. 268, 28 I.C. 156, 1915 M.W.N. 269, 2 M.L.W. 233. The term "specially" refers to the empowering of a particular official by name or by virtue of his office. Thus, a notification of the Government which empowers second class Magistrates of certain places to try cases under the Opium Act, is a special empowering of the person holding those offices in virtue of their office—Alaga, 21 Cr.L.J. 846, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 256, 74 I.C. 958.

40. Whenever any person holding an office in the service of Government who has been invested with any powers under this Code throughout any local area is appointed to an equal or higher office of the same nature, within a like local area under the same Provincial Government, he shall, unless the Provincial Government otherwise directs, or has otherwise directed, exercise the same powers in the local area in which he is so appointed.

92B. Change:—The word "appointed" has been substituted for 'transferred' by section 8 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVII of 1923. The object of this amendment is to cover cases of officers going on leave and returning to the same district, and to obviate the necessity of investing them again with their old powers and re-gazetting the same—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914). The amendment will save a great deal of routine work in the Secretariat and in the Government printing press—Leg. Ass. Debates, 15-1-23, page 1047.

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

93. Continuance of powers:—When a Tahsildar is invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the first class, while acting as a Deputy Collector, his powers continue so long as he is a Magistrate, until they are withdrawn by a fresh notification, though he is posted in a less responsible post—In re Hanumanta, 2 Weir 36. A Sub-Registrar invested with third class powers for trial of certain offences in a certain place is competent to exercise, on his transfer to another place, the powers conferred upon him as Sub-Registrar of the place from which he was transferred, unless the Local Government directed him not to exercise them—Veeranna, 15 Mad. 132.

Where a Subordinate Judge is transferred from one place to another, he may or may not be called upon to perform additional duties of a Magistrate. He is not transferred qua Magistrate but qua Subordinate Judge. On transfer, he, to use the words of sec. 40 Cr. P. Code, not "appointed to a post of the same nature" that is to say, a post of a Sub-Judge and Magistrate combined but only to the post of a Sub-Judge. When he is required to perform additional duties of a Magistrate in the place to which he is transferred a fresh notification in that behalf is necessary—Emp. v. Karimbux, A.I.R.

94. Continuance of trials:—Where a Head Assistant Magistrate having almost completed the trial of a case was appointed to the office of a Deputy Magistrate in another place in the same district, and the case was by order of the District Magistrate brought on to his file to the latter place, it was held that the Magistrate could proceed with the case from the point at which he had arrived as Head Assistant Magistrate, and the trial need not be commenced de novo—Karuppana v. Ahobalamatam, 2, Weir 430, 22 Mad. 47; 1906 A.W.N. 201; 4 Cr.L.J. 140, 3 A.L.J. 896.

All cases pending on a file of a Magistrate who had been relieved of the charge of a Sub-division, did not necessarily pass automatically into the hands of his successor merely because the former had been transferred to another local area in the same district. Section 12, Cr. P. Code did not lay down any such automatic rule. To hold otherwise, would be to overlook the provision of sec. 40, Cr. P. Code—Mithani, 9 A.L.J. 448, 13 Cr.L.J. 203, 14 I.C. 203; Chhoti v. Khacheru, 42 All. 649, 18 A.L.J. 758, 21 Cr.L.J. 746, 58 I.C. 250.

But where during a trial the Magistrate is transferred to another district, he cannot continue the trial. See notes under sec. 12.

95. Going on leave:—The Magisterial powers conferred on an officer are kept alive under this section, even though he is absent on leave. (This is now made clear by the present amendment) And so if a Magistrate of the first class takes his leave, and on the expiry of his leave is posted to another district (or posted back to the same district), he does not cease to exercise the powers of a first class Magistrate, and it is not necessary to confer fresh powers on him before he can try an accused as a first class Magistrate—Pritam, 31 Cr.L.J. 1051 (1052), 126 I.C. 521, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 833, 1930 Cr.C. 850. But the case is different if he vacates his office by absenting himself without leave (and thus loses his appointment)—Bai Harku v. Silaram, 2 Bom. L.R. 536. Similarly, if a Magistrate retires from Government service he ceases to be a Magistrate, and his powers come to an end. Consequently, it is necessary to confer Magisterial powers on him afresh before he can be re-appointed as a Magistrate—Hamed Haji, 4 M.L.J. 428, 24 Cr.L.J. 381, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 598 (599), 1923 M.W.N. 288, 17 L.W. 426, 32 M.L.T. 195, 72 I.C. 381.

Resignation:—An honorary magistrate does not cease to hold his office on his resignation, but only when the resignation is accepted—Sudarsana Rao v. Christian Pillai, 45 M.L.J. 798; President, Taluk Board, Hespel v. Chandrappa, 45 Mad. 309 (311).

41. (1) The Provincial Government may withdraw all or any of the powers conferred under this Code on any person by it or by any officer subordinate to it.

(2) Any powers conferred by the District Magistrate may be withdrawn by the District Magistrate.

PART III.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

CHAPTER IV.

OF AID AND INFORMATION TO THE MAGISTRATES, THE POLICE AND PERSONS MAKING ARRESTS.

42. Every person is bound to assist a Magistrate or police-officer reasonably demanding his aid, whether within or without the presidency-towns,—

Public when to assist Magistrates and police.

- (a) in the taking or preventing the escape of any other person whom such Magistrate or police-officer is authorized to arrest;
- (b) in the prevention or suppression of a breach of the peace, or in the prevention of any injury attempted to be committed to any railway, canal, telegraph or public property.

95A. 'Every person':—A police officer charged with the duty of arresting an accused can ask a chowkidar to assist him in arresting the accused or preventing his escape—Manik v. Kenaram, 6 C.W.N. 337.

96. 'Reasonably':—No person is bound to obey an unreasonable order of a Magistrate or Police Officer. Thus, where a Magistrate ordered a landholder to find a clue to a theft within 15 days, it was held that such an order was unreasonable and unwarranted by this section, and the landlord was not bound to perform an act for which the police are appointed and paid. Disobedience by the landlord to such an order is no offence—Bakshi Ram, 3 All. 201. Members of the public are bound to assist a police officer reasonably demanding their aid in the taking of any dacoits or suspected dacoits whom that officer is authorised by law to arrest. The law, however, does not intend that the police officers should have a general power of calling upon the members of the public to join them in arresting a number of unknown persons, whose whereabouts are not known. Refusal to assist the police officer in such a quest is not an offence—Joti Prasad, 42 All. 314, 18 A.L.J. 169, 21 Cr.L.J. 801, 58 I.C. 673.

97. Aid:—The aid that can be demanded under this section is the personal assistance of the person of whom it is demanded, and not the supply of a contingent of men to assist—In re Ramia, 2 Weir 37.

Under this section every person is bound in certain circumstances to assist a Police Officer in the taking or preventing the escape of any person whom the Police Officer is authorized to arrest, but the section contemplates that the Police Officer is himself present to make the arrest. It was never intended that this section should allow the wholesale delegation by the police of their duties. Where, therefore, a Sub-Inspector gives what purported to be a written authority, which in itself contains mis-statements, to a zemindar to arrest a man, whom he states to be a proclaimed offender but who in fact is not so, and relying upon this authority the zemindar's men fall on and beat and bind the man and bring him injured and bound to the Police, the action is illegal and cannot be justified under this section—Murid Dood, 38 Cr.L.J. 1101, 171 I.C. 672, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 234, 10 R.S. 116.

97A. Punishment:—Omission to assist under this section is punishable under sec. 187, I. P. C. See Ambika Prasad v. Emp., 33 CrLJ. 736, A.I.R. 1932 All 506, 139 I.C. 106, 1932 Cr.C. 594, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 527.

43. When a warrant is directed to a person other than a police-officer, any other person may aid in the execution of such warrant, if the person to whom the warrant is directed be near at hand and acting in the execution of the warrant.

44. (1) Every person, whether within or without the presidency-towns, aware of the commission of, or of the intention of any other person to commit, any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code (namely), 121, 121A, 122, 123, 124, 124A, 125, 126, 130, 143, 144, 145, 147, 148, 302, 303, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 456, 457, 458, 459 and 460, shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon the person so aware, forthwith give information to the nearest Magistrate or police-officer of such commission or intention.

(2) For the purposes of this section, the term "offence" includes any act committed at any place out of British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India.

98. Persons bound:—The words "every person" in this section, and the persons bound to give information under sec 45 (b) regarding the occurrence of sudden or unnatural death, do not exclude the main offender himself. Like every other person, the criminal is bound to give information which would convict himself, and in theory he can be punished for omission to give the information, or for giving false information under secs 202 and 203, I P C., or under sec 201 for withholding information to screen himself; but in practice, if he is convicted of the offence itself, no Court will think it worth while to convict him also under secs 201-203, I P. C.—Chunna Gangappa, 54 Mad 68, 32 CrLJ 263 (264, 265), 59 MLJ 677, AIR. 1930 Mad 870, 32 MLW 389, 1930 MWN 489, 129 IC 230, 1930 CrC 1126. No doubt under this section it is the duty of every person to make a report to the police of the commission of certain specified offences, but there is no such duty cast upon a citizen, much less upon a police officer, to make such a report when no facts exist. He would certainly not be acting in pursuance of this section if he concocts a purely false story and then makes a report of such a false story, knowing it to be false—Shiam Lal v Abdul Raof, AIR 1935 All 538 (541), 1935 ALJ 459, 155 IC 131 (FB)

99. Information:—Information sent through chowkidar—Where one of several lambar-dars, to the knowledge to others, directs the chowkidar to report a burglary at the thana, the requirements of this section have been complied with, and the lambar-dar cannot be said to have failed to give information if the chowkidar omits to report it at the thana—Sher Singh, 1889 P.R. 5.

The provisions of this section should not be put in force against one who has omitted to give information to the police of an offence having been committed in cases where the police have actually obtained such information from other sources—Sashi Bhusan Chuckerbutty, 4 Cal. 623; Gopal Singh, 20 Cal. 316; Pandya Nayak, 7 Mad. 436, 1 Weir 102. See Note 100.

No duty after information:—When once the information of a crime reaches the police, the object of this section is fulfilled, and no further duty is imposed upon the persons mentioned in this section to give information—Sada, Ratanlal 674 (675).

Punishment:—Omission to give information under this section is punishable under secs. 118, 176 and 202, I. P. C. For false information, see secs. 177 and 203, I. P. C. See Ramasami Gounden v. Emp., 27 Mad. 271 (289), in this connection.

Omission to report a plot of waging war against the Crown does not amount to abetment of waging war, unless the accused's intention in omitting to report the plot was with a view to aiding the waging of war—Goman, 6 Bur.L.T. 153, 14 Cr.L.J. 610, 21 I.C. 658.

45. (1) Every village headman, village-accountant, village-watchman, village police-officer, owner or

Village-headmen, accountants, land-holders and others bound to report certain matters

occupier of land, and the agent of any such owner or occupier in charge of the management of that land and every officer employed in the collection of revenue or rent of land on the part of the Crown or the Court of Wards, shall forthwith communicate to the nearest Magistrate or to the officer in charge of the nearest police-station, whichever is the nearer, any information which he may possess respecting—

- (a) the permanent or temporary residence of any notorious receiver or vendor of stolen property in any village of which he is headman, accountant, watchman or police-officer, or in which he owns or occupies land, or is agent, or collects revenue or rent;
- (b) the resort to any place within, or the passage through, such village of any person whom he knows, or reasonably suspects, to be a thug, robber, escaped convict or proclaimed offender;
- (c) the commission of, or intention to commit, in or near such village, any non-bailable offence or any offence punishable under section 143, 144, 145, 147 or 148 of the Indian Penal Code;
- (d) the occurrence in or near such village of any sudden or unnatural death or of any death under suspicious circumstances; or the discovery in or near such village of any corpse or part of a corpse in circumstances which lead to a reasonable suspicion that such a death has occurred, or the disappearance from such village of any person in circumstances which lead to a reasonable suspicion that a non-bailable offence has been committed in respect of such person;
- (e) the commission of, or intention to commit, at any place out of British India near such village, any act which, if committed in British India, would be an offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code, namely, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459, 460, 489A, 489B, 489C and 489D;

(f) any matter likely to affect the maintenance of order or the prevention of crimes or the safety of person or property respecting which the District Magistrate, by general or special order made with the previous sanction of the Provincial Government, has directed him to communicate information.

(2) In this section—

(i) "village" includes village-lands; and

(ii) the expression "proclaimed offender" includes any person proclaimed as an offender by any Court or authority established or continued by the Central Government or the Crown Representative in any part of India, in respect of any act which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460.

(3) Subject to rules in this behalf to be made by the Provincial Government, the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may from time to time appoint one or more persons, with his or their consent, to perform the duties of a village-headman under this section, whether a village-headman has or has not been appointed for that village under any other law.

Appointment of village headman by District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate in certain cases for purposes of this section

Change:—The italicised words have been added by section 9 of the Cr P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. The reasons are stated below

By the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, in sub-section (1) the words "the Crown" have been substituted for "Government"; in clause (ii) of sub-section 2 the words "the Central Government or the Crown Representative" have been substituted for "the Governor-General in Council"; and the words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in cl (f) of sub-section (1) and in sub-section (3).

100. Object of Section:—The object of the law is clearly that the earliest information shall be communicated by those who are in the best position to obtain the same, or who from their connection with the land are in some authority and should accordingly be made responsible for this duty in order that an inquest may be held—Matuli, 11 Cal 619 (621). The provisions of this section are not to be worked solely for the purpose of vexation, but for the purpose of ensuring that information be not intentionally withheld by persons whose position renders them liable to give it. Therefore, when information is given to the nearest Magistrate or Police by one of the persons bound to give such information, it is not reasonable that every other person bound to give the information should be prosecuted for not having done so—Sashi Ehusan, 4

Cal. 623; In re Pandya, 7 Mad. 436; Gopal, 20 Cal. 316 (318); Hari Gopal, Ratanlal 778 (779). Where the police are already informed of a fact by the Chowkidar, there is no further obligation upon the village headman to report the same information again to the police—Rampal, 8 O.L.J. 590, 23 Cr.L.J. 162, 65 I.C. 626; 53 Bom. 184

101. Persons bound:—Village headman in Madras means a Village Munsiff or Village Magistrate—Silvar Chetti, 32 Mad. 258. In sending his report under this section the Village Munsiff is not acting in his capacity as Magistrate, being there called specifically a Village Headman, nor is he a public servant removable only by or with the sanction of a Local Government—Pregada Balangu v. Krosuru Kotayya, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 578, 45 M.L.W. 697, 1937 M.W.N. 638, 1937 M.Cr.C. 188, 170 I.C. 481, 38 Cr.L.J. 950. A Zaildar is not a village headman within the meaning of this section—Hari Singh, 25 P.R. 1894; Shah Mahammad, 19 P.R. 1886. Every mukkaddan and Kotwar in C. P. is bound to give information under this section because they have to perform the duties of a village headman—Maniharsingh, 7 N.L.R. 101, 12 Cr.L.J. 441.

The owner or occupier of a house in a village is not the 'owner or occupier of land'. The duty of giving information under this section is cast upon the owner or occupier of land, and not of a house. Where there are houses, it is expected that the place would be populous, and the Police would somehow get the information. But in cases of land in the mofussil there are not always enough policemen available in the locality. Hence, it is necessary that the owner or occupier of the land should give such information to them—Hiru Satua, 53 Bom. 184, 30 Bom.L.R. 1570, 30 Cr.L.J. 172, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 12; Achutha, 12 Mad. 92. Residence in a dwelling house belonging to another is not occupation of land—In re Mudhoo Soodun, 23 W.R. 60. For the meaning of the word 'land' reference may be made to the case of Hossem Abdul Rehman & Co. v. Lakhmi Chan, 49 Bom. 40 (55).

Owner and agent:—The liability of the resident agent arises when the owner is not resident and has no personal knowledge of the fact to be reported. Where the owner has such knowledge, the liability certainly attaches to the owner (and not to the agent)—Mudhoo Soodun, 23 W.R. 60. Under the present law the agent is liable only if he is 'in charge of the management of the land'.

These words have been added on the motion of Mr. Agnihotri who observed:—"The word 'agent' should be qualified and made definite in such way that only such agents be made liable to give information under sec. 45 as may be connected with the land or be in charge of the management of the land the occurrence of which is to be reported. The word 'agent' is very comprehensive and vague, for instance there may be agents for various purposes; they may be for the collection of land revenue, they may be for looking after the cultivation of the land, they may be for the construction of buildings on the land or for conducting and defending suits for title of such land and so on; the word may apply even to servants. And to make such agents liable would be to make the term very wide and troublesome; so it is necessary to restrict it only to such persons as are in charge of the management of the land, and who may be in a better position to know about the occurrences on that land"—Legislative Assembly Debates, January 16, 1923, page 1114.

A Khazanchi of a Zemindar of a village is not an agent. A dewan may be an agent during the absence of his master, but not a dewan who acts only under the orders of his resident master—Achiraj, 4 Cal. 603.

Accused himself:—The persons bound to give information under this section, especially under clause (d) about the occurrence of sudden and unnatural death include the offender himself, i.e. the person who caused the death. See Note 92 under sec. 41.

"Forthwith":—It means "within a reasonable time" (Wharton). The word 'forthwith' must be constructed with reference to the object of the enactment. When a Kulkarni gave information of a suspicious death some 7 or 8 hours after he was aware of the same, held that the information was not given forthwith—Waman, Ratanlal 784 (785).

102. Information:—The persons enumerated in this section are bound to report an information and not a mere rumour—Lachmi, 5 P.L.T. 505, 25 Cr.L.J. 972, 81 I.C. 620, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 181. Where the Zemindar heard of the disappearance of a man from the village and a rumour that he had been murdered, the omission to report such rumour to the police was not an offence—Bhup Singh, 1900 A.W.N. 207. But under clause (d) as now amended, the disappearance of a man under suspicious circumstances must be reported.

"Possess":—This word has been substituted for the word 'obtain'. In 1901 the Madras Government found that the word 'obtain' did not cover information obtained by personal observation because the word undoubtedly meant 'obtain by making inquiries'. There was therefore some difficulty in making certain that information obtained by personal observation, such as for example the discovery of a corpse on the ground, came within the scope of the law. Moreover, the deletion of the word was absolutely necessary, because it implied an obligation to seek the information. In moving the amendment Mr Pantulu observed "The offending portion of the section is that the landlord would be called upon to give information which he may possibly obtain but which he may not have in his possession. Now if we take away the word 'obtain' and substitute the word 'possess,' it comes to this that the landlord is bound to give only the information which he possesses and not information which he may possibly obtain by making inquiries. If any amendment is carried, it will be incumbent upon the prosecution to show that the accused had that information in his possession, and not merely that he might have obtained it. Therefore, I think that if this amendment is carried, the sting will be taken out of the section"—Legislative Assembly Debates, January 16, 1923, page 1116. See also Lachmi (supra).

This section does not make it incumbent on the village chowkidar to communicate to the officer in charge of the Police Station any rumour of any occurrence prevailing in the village. It is only an information which he may himself possess that is to be communicated to the officer in charge of the Police Station. It is noteworthy that the amending Act XVIII of 1923 has substituted the word "possess" in place of the word "obtain" in section 45, making thereby only such information which the informant may possess to his own knowledge fit to be communicated to the officer in charge of the Police Station—Lachmi Singh v Emp, 25 Cr L J 972 (974), 81 I.C. 620, 5 P.L.T. 505, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 691.

103. Clause (b):—Resort to or passage through—The bringing of a suspected robber under arrest to the village and releasing him there, does not amount to the resorting to or the passage through the village of such robber—Malik Daud, 1887 P.R. 30.

Proclaimed offender—These words include persons over and above those to whom the words in their ordinary sense apply—Narpat, 1901 A.W.N. 10. The fact that the offender's property has been attached and sold under the provisions of sec 88 of this Code, does not raise any presumption that he is a proclaimed offender. It is on the prosecution to prove that the proclamation was made in the manner prescribed by sec. 87 of this Code—Pandya Nayak, 7 Mad 436, 1 Weir 102.

The term "proclaimed offender" as used in this section must be taken not in any technical sense but in its obvious general meaning. If a proclamation has been made in respect of an accused person under sec 87, Cr P C, it is sufficient to constitute him a proclaimed offender under this section. The fact that the proclamation was not made strictly in accordance with the terms of sec 87, Cr P C, does not render such person a proclaimed offender any the less—Ram Sarup, 39 Cr L J 154 (157), 172 I.C. 530, 1938 A Cr C. 1, 1938 O L R 8, 1938 O A. 7, 10 R O 182, 1938 O W N. 7, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 80.

104. Clause (c):—The information to be given to the police under clause (c) is the information of the commission of an offence. An information that a certain jewel is missing is not an information that an offence has been committed, and need not be communicated to the police—Vemi Reddi, 5 M.L.T. 257, 9 Cr.L.J. 224. This clause speaks of non-bailable offences; if the offence is a bailable one, the persons enumerated in this section are not bound to give information of it—Malik Daud, 30 P.R. 1887; Sivan Chetti, 32 Mad. 258.

105. Clause (d)—Occurrence of death:—The duty imposed by this section on a village headman, etc., of giving information as to the occurrence of any sudden or unnatural death is intended to apply only when the death takes place at or near the village of which he is the headman, owner, occupier etc.—Mudhoosoodun, 23 W.R. 60.

If a body is found in one's land, the presumption is that the death took place there, and the owner is under an obligation to give information regarding the matter—Matuki, 11 Cal. 619. In this case, Mitter, J. (dissenting) was of opinion that there could be no such presumption; it could be equally presumed that the death took place in another village, and the dead body was thence removed to this village. Under clause (d) as now amended, the finding of a corpse must be reported, without reference to the question of presumption as to whether the death took place in the same village or in another village.

If a dead body is found in a stream, it is enough to give rise to a presumption that the death took place under suspicious circumstances, and the person finding it is bound to report it under this section—Sher Muhammad, 20 P.R. 1887. When a man fell from a tree and died two days afterwards, held that although the death was 'unnatural' in the ordinary sense of the word, still it would not come within the meaning of the word 'unnatural' as used in sec. 45 (d), so as to require to be reported immediately, unless it occurred fairly soon after the cause—Domarsing, 23 Cr.L.J. 345, 66 I.C. 1001, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 87.

106. Punishment:—For omission to give information under this section, see sec. 176, I. P. C. But omission to give information by persons not enumerated in this section is not an offence—Bahadur, 34 P.R. 1882

False information:—A person giving a false information of an offence to a village Magistrate who is bound to pass the information on to the higher authorities under this section, will be guilty of an offence under sec. 211, I. P. C.—Sivan Chetti, 32 Mad. 258. It would be otherwise if the offence complained of is one in regard to which the information need not under this section be passed to the higher authorities—Ibid.

107. Sub-sec. (3):—Appointment of village headman:—An order of a District Magistrate dismissing a person from the office of a headman of a village under the rules framed under this sub-section, is an executive order and is not subject to revision by the High Court—Damma, 29 All. 563, 1907 A.W.N. 16, 5 Cr.L.J. 476

'With his or their consent':—These words were added during the Debate in the Assembly on the motion of Mr. Rangachariar. "My amendment would remove any misconception there may be as to the power of the District Magistrate to appoint persons against their will, and it is for this reason that I have inserted this clause that when they are so appointed it should be with their consent. I know that in the case of enlisting special police, people without their consent are enlisted. This ought not to degenerate into such a provision. It must be a voluntary duty to be performed by people who are given a certain status"—Legislative Assembly Debates, January 16, 1923, page 1117.

Bengal rules for the appointment of headmen:—

(1) In all villages in which Bengal Act VI of 1870 has been introduced, the Magistrate of the District may appoint the principal member of the Chowkidari Punchayat or the collecting member, where there is one, to be village headman.

(2) In villages where Bengal Act VI of 1870 has not been introduced, the Magistrate of the District may appoint the principal resident agent of land-owner, or rent-receiver, or his representative, or the principal resident cultivator, to be village headman.

(3) In the case of a principal or collecting member of a Chowkidari Punchayat, a clause shall be added to the appointment under section 3 of the Chowkidari Act to the effect that he has also been appointed to be village headman under sec. 45 of the Criminal Procedure Code. When a person other than a member of a Chowkidari Panchayat is appointed he shall receive a special sanad from the Magistrate

(4) The Magistrate shall keep a register of all persons who have been appointed village headmen, showing their names and father's names and the village for which they are responsible, and shall take measures to effect mutations in that register from time to time when one headman dies and is succeeded by another—Calcutta Gazette, 26-12-1894.

(N.B.—These rules are in force in the Patna, Dacca, and Orissa Divisions, excepting the Khurda sub-division in the Puri District).

CHAPTER V.

OF ARREST, ESCAPE AND RETAKING.

A.—Arrest Generally.

46. (1) In making an arrest the police-officer or other person making the same shall actually touch or confine the body of the person to be arrested, unless there be a submission to the custody by word or action.

(2) If such person forcibly resists the endeavour to arrest him, or attempts to evade the arrest, such police-officer or other person may use all means necessary to effect the arrest.

(3) Nothing in this section gives a right to cause the death of a person who is not accused of an offence punishable with death or with transportation for life.

108. Warrant:—When a warrant of arrest has been issued, the officer making the arrest must have the warrant in his possession; otherwise the arrest is illegal—Emp v Amar Nath, 5 All 318.

109. Arrest:—An arrest is a restraint of the liberty of the person. Unless there is submission, actual contact is necessary to effect it. Where a bailiff met the accused in the street, showed his staff, told him he was under arrest but did not touch him, and the accused instead of going with him walked away and entered a shop, held that the accused was not arrested at all, and could not be convicted of escape from custody—Aludomal, 9 S.L.R. 141, 17 Cr.L.J. 87.

An arrest by mere oral declaration is insufficient. The person must be arrested by actual touch of his body—Harmohanlal, 30 Cr.L.J. 128, 113 I.C. 288, 11 N.L.J. 259, Ind Rul 1929 Nag. 26. An arrest of a person by a duly authorized officer is accomplished if the officer lawfully touch him; the power of effecting actual capture is not essential—U. Thive v. A. Kim Fee, AIR 1930 Rang 131, 7 Rang 598, 12 I.C. 137.

When a person states that he has done certain acts which amount to an offence he accuses himself of committing the offence, and if he makes the statement to a Police Officer, as such, he submits to the custody of the officer within the meaning of clause (1) of this section, and is then in the custody of a Police Officer within the meaning of section 27 of the Evidence Act—Santokhi, 34 Cr.L.J. 349 (351), 142 I.C. 474, 1.

A man is entitled to know when a Police is arresting him, under what power he is acting and if the police states that he acts under a certain power which the man knows he has not got, he is entitled to object to such arrest and to escape from custody when he is arrested—Appasami Mudaliar v. K.-E., 47 Mad. 442 (444), 81 I.C. 51, 46 M.L.J. 447, 19 M.L.W. 504, 34 M.L.T. 95, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 555, 25 Cr.L.J. 563.

The question whether the officer who effected the arrest was acting within or beyond his powers in making the arrests does not affect the question whether the accused were guilty or not guilty of the offence with which they were charged—Ravalu, 26 Mad. 124. Where a man is in the country and is charged before a Magistrate with an offence under the Penal Code, it will not avail him to say that he was brought there illegally from a foreign country—Wheeler, 29 Cr.L.J. 1089 (1090), 112 I.C. 673, A.I.R. 1928 Sind 161; Vinayak, 10 I.C. 956, 35 Bom. 225, 13 Bom.L.R. 296, 12 Cr.L.J. 356. See also In the matter of Rudolph Stalman, 15 C.W.N. 1053 (1066), 39 Cal. 164, 14 C.L.J. 375, 12 Cr.L.J. 505, 12 I.C. 273. For a charge of escaping from lawful custody under sec 225-B, I. P. C., the legality of the arrest must be established by the prosecution—Appasami Mudaliar, 47 Mad. 442, 81 I.C. 51, 46 M.L.J. 447, 19 M.L.W. 504, 34 M.L.T. 95, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 555, 25 Cr.L.J. 563. If a constable in effecting an arrest specifies certain power which proves to be wanting, resistance to him or escape from his custody constitutes no offence. To hold that sec 54, Cr. P. C., applies in such cases without any intimation to the accused and without any allegation by the constable in his deposition that he proceeded under the section, would be to nullify several salutary provisions contained in Part B of Chapter VI of the Cr. P. Code, relating to the execution of warrants of arrest—Kartik, 33 Cr.L.J. 706, 138 I.C. 844, 13 P.L.T. 135, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 171, 1932 Cr.C. 347, Ind. Rul. 1932 Pat. 190, where Kishun, 98 I.C. 254, 8 P.L.T. 237, 5 Pat. 533, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 424, 27 Cr.L.J. 1310 and K.-E. v. Bhola Bhagat, 72 I.C. 375, 4 P.L.T. 521, 2 Pat. 379, 24 Cr.L.J. 375, 1 Pat.L.R. 248 (Cr.), were distinguished. See also Monsi Lal, 48 I.C. 349; Raja Mia v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 502 and Note 113A.

110. "All means":—Justifiable violence.—The means employed to stop the fugitive should be such as an ordinary prudent man would make use of, who had no intention of doing any serious injury. The wounding of a fugitive thief by a Chowkidar in order to effect his arrest, where there was no other means of capturing the thief, was held to be justifiable under the circumstances—Protap Chowkidar, 2 W.R. 9. Under clause (3) of this section, an Excise officer pursuing an opium-smuggler has no right to fire at him; where he so fired, and the accused cut the Excise officer on his thigh with a sword, but did not cause a severe wound, held that the act of the officer in firing at the accused was illegal, and the latter exercised his right of private defence in wounding the officer with his sword—Nga Nan, 21 Cr.L.J. 97, 54 I.C. 577 (Bur.).

Effect of non-compliance with Ch. V.:—There is no warrant for holding that every trial, which is preceded by a Police investigation, which has failed to comply with Ch. V. of the Cr. P. C., in its entirety, is thereby void—Joseph v. Emp., 26 Cr.L.J. 492 (497), 85 I.C. 236, 3 Bur.L.J. 265, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 122, 3 Rang. 11.

Punishment for resistance to arrest—see secs 224, 225, 225B, I. P. C.

47. If any person acting under a warrant of arrest, or any police-officer having authority to arrest, has reason to believe that the person to be arrested has entered into, or is within, any place, the person residing in, or being in charge of, such place, shall, on demand of such person acting as aforesaid or such police-officer, allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein.

Search of place entered by person sought to be arrested.

111. Scope:—This section is not intended to restrict the powers of the Police to enter the place to be searched. On the contrary, it is a provision compelling householders to afford the police facilities in carrying out their duties; and the next section provides that if difficulties are placed in the way of a Police officer, he may use force to obtain ingress—Romesh Chandra, 41 Cal. 350 (376), 18 C.W.N. 496, 15 Cr.L.J. 385.

Demand:—No precise words are needed, it is enough to give notice that entry is sought under proper authority. Russell on Crimes, p. 745.

48. If ingress to such place cannot be obtained under section 47, it shall be lawful, in any case for a person acting under a warrant and in any case in which a warrant may issue but cannot be obtained without affording the person to be arrested an opportunity of escape, for a police-officer to enter such place and search therein, and in order to effect an entrance into such place, to break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place, whether that of the person to be arrested or of any other person, if after notification of his authority and purpose, and demand of admittance duly made, he cannot otherwise obtain admittance:

Procedure where ingress not obtainable.

Provided that, if any such place is an apartment in the actual occupancy of a woman (not being the person to be arrested) who, according to custom, does not appear in public, such person, or police-officer shall, before entering such apartment, give notice to such woman that she is at liberty to withdraw and shall afford her every reasonable facility for withdrawing and may then break open the apartment and enter it.

112. A Police-officer entering into a building for the purpose of arresting suspected persons will not be liable for trespass—Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore, 36 Cal. 433.

49. Any police-officer or other person authorised to make an arrest may break open any outer and inner door or window of any house or place in order to liberate himself or any other person who, having lawfully entered for the purpose of making an arrest, is detained therein.

Power to break open doors and windows for purposes of liberation.

50. The person arrested shall not be subjected to more restraint than is necessary to prevent his escape.

No unnecessary restraint.

For punishment for unnecessary restraint, see sec. 220, I P. C.

51. Whenever a person is arrested by a police-officer under a warrant which does not provide for the taking of bail, or under a warrant which provides for the taking of bail but furnish bail, and whenever a person is arrested private person under a warrant, and to bail, or is unable to furnish bail, the officer making the arrest or, with a private person, the police-officer to whom the person arrested, may search such person, all articles, other than necessary wearing him.

Under sec 51, Cr. P. Code the police have the power. Considering that a police-officer has the power to arrest necessary that the purpose of the search should always be such as, an incriminating article. The provision is that the custody all articles and seize offensive weapons found upon. This does not mean that he is to shut his eyes to other things take note of anything worthy of attention, such as marks on a witness he may depose to such marks. There is a special women : section 52. These provisions are made in the interest and they are not dependent on the consent of arrested person really done something wrong, consents to his person being searched the police to get, what often would be, the best evidence in the case of search were to be read as subject to the prisoner's consent, and be shut out. Nevertheless, the examination of an arrested person by a doctor, not for the benefit of the prisoner's health, but simply by way of is not provided for by the Code, and in such a case, the doctor may examine the prisoner without his consent. It would be a rule of caution to be noted in the medical report, so that the doctor would be in a position to give consent if called upon to do—Bhondar, 54 CLJ. 499 (504), 35 IC. 1053, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 601, 1931 Cr.C. 753. This case is not the proposition that unless the fact that consent has been obtained in writing, it is to be held that no consent was, in fact, obtained. Oral consent is sufficient—Hanuman v. King-Emperor, 36 C.W.N. 1152 (1155), A.I.R. 1932 Cal 723, 60 Cal. 179.

52. Whenever it is necessary to cause a woman

Mode of searching searched, the search shall be made by another woman, with strict regard to women.

53. The officer or other person making any arrest under this Code may take from the person arrested any offensive weapons which he has on his person, and shall deliver all weapons taken to the Court or officer before which or whom the officer making the arrest is required by this Code to produce the person arrested.

Power to seize offensive weapons.

B.—Arrest without Warrant.

When police may arrest without warrant.

54. (1) Any police-officer may, without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest—

- first*, any person who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made, or credible information has been received, or reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned;
- secondly*, any person having in his possession without lawful excuse, the burden of proving which excuse shall lie on such person, any implement of house-breaking;
- thirdly*, any person who has been proclaimed as an offender either under this Code or by order of the Provincial Government;
- fourthly*, any person in whose possession anything is found which may reasonably be suspected to be stolen property, and who may reasonably be suspected of having committed an offence with reference to such thing;
- fifthly*, any person who obstructs a police-officer while in the execution of his duty, or who has escaped, or attempts to escape, from lawful custody;
- sixthly*, any person reasonably suspected of being a deserter from Her Majesty's Army, Navy or Air Force; * * *
- seventhly*, any person who has been concerned in, or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been concerned in, any act committed at any place out of British India, which, if committed in British India, would have been punishable as an offence, and for which he is, under any law relating to extradition or under the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, or otherwise, liable to be apprehended or detained in custody in British India;
- eighthly*, any released convict committing a breach of any rule made under section 565, sub-section (3); and
- ninthly*, any person for whose arrest a requisition has been received from another police-officer, provided that the requisition specifies the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made, and it appears therefrom that the person might lawfully be arrested without a warrant by the officer who issued the requisition.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta.

Change:—In the fourth clause the word 'and' has been substituted for the word 'or' and the ninth clause has been newly added, by section 10 of the Cr P C, Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. For reasons, see below.

In the sixth clause the words "or Air Force" have been added by the Repealing and Amending Act, 1927 (X of 1927); and the words "or of belonging to Her Majesty", Indian Marine Service and being legally absent from that service" have been omitted by the Amending Act, 1934 (Act XXXV of 1934).

In the third clause the words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

113. Scope:—This section does not give an unqualified power in all cases to any police-officer to arrest, without an authorisation in writing, a person concerned in a cognizable offence. The provisions of this section are limited by those of sec. 56, Cr. P. Code. When a police-officer is acting on his own initiative, or independently in the course of his duty, he can arrest without complying with the formalities mentioned in sec. 56. But where a subordinate police-officer is not acting independently, but is merely deputed by a superior officer to arrest some one concerned in a cognizable offence, a further formality is prescribed in sec. 56, presumably, to prevent abuse of the powers of the police, or to allow the person arrested to know the reason for his arrest and the office of the person arresting him—Mohammad Ismail, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 119, 13 Rang. 754, 37 Cr.L.J. 462, 161 I.C. 459, 1936 Cr.C. 194. See Note 113A

This section gives very wide powers to the police and ought to be rigorously construed—Sandino, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 197 (199), 36 Cr.L.J. 332, 152 I.C. 361, 28 S.L.R. 205, 1934 Cr.C. 1407

The object of the Code is to give the widest powers to the police in cognizable cases and the only limitation is the necessary requirement of reasonability and credibility to prevent the misuse of the powers. The Legislature could have confined the power to officers in charge of a police station as is done in section 55, where matters are dealt with which are not offences but has not thought fit to do so. The suggestion that a police-officer who suspects a man of having committed a cognizable offence may arrest but that he may not arrest when a warrant has been issued, has nothing in the language of the section to support it and would enable a man wanted by the police on a charge of murder, for instance, to defy every police-officer except the one who held the warrant—Ratna Mudali, 40 Mad. 1028 (1030), 18 Cr.L.J. 709.

113A. Any Police-Officer:—Village Chowkidars are not Police-officers within the meaning of this section—Kalai v. Kalu, 27 Cal. 366, 4 C.W.N. 252; Kalu, 3 All 60; Bolai, 35 Cal. 361; Purna Chandra v. Emp., 41 Cal 17 (19); Bhagwan, A.I.R. 1929 All. 935, 52 All. 203, 120 I.C. 205, 31 Cr.L.J. 12, 1929 Cr.C. 663, 1930 A.L.J. 242

The words 'any police-officer' show that where a warrant has been issued for the arrest of certain culprits on a charge of cognizable offence, any police-officer, even though he is not entrusted with the execution of such warrant and has not got the warrant with him, will be justified under this section in making the arrest—Ratna Mudali, 40 Mad. 1028, 18 Cr.L.J. 709

The issue of a written order under sec. 56, Cr. P. Code does not limit the power of a Police-officer conferred by this section—Kishun, 5 Pat. 533, 27 Cr.L.J. 1310, 98 I.C. 254, 8 P.L.T. 237, A.I.R. 1926 Pat 421 The Rangoon High Court took a different view in Mohamed Ismail v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 462, 161 I.C. 459, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 119, 1936 Cr.C. 194, 13 Rang. 754, 8 R.Rang. 480 It has been held that sec. 54, Cr. P. C., does not give an unqualified power in all cases to any Police-officer to arrest without an authorisation in writing a person concerned in a cognizable offence. No doubt any officer to whom information of a cognizable offence has been given, or in whose view such an offence has been committed, or who has reasonable ground to suspect a person of such an offence can effect an arrest without a warrant from a Magistrate or any other authorisation from a superior officer, provided that the officer is acting on his own initiative, or independently in the course of his duty. But where a Subordinate Police-Officer is not acting independently, but is merely deputed by a superior officer to arrest some one concerned in a cognizable offence, a further formality is prescribed, presumably, to prevent abuse of the powers of the police, or to allow the person arrested to know the reason for his arrest and the office of the person arresting him. The provisions of sec. 54, Cr. P. C., are limited by those of sec. 56, Cr. P. C. The Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court preferred the view of the Patna High Court. It has laid down that sec. 56, Cr. P. C., applies to cases where a police-officer is acting not on his own information but on the order of his superior, but where facts exist which do attract the application of sec. 54, Cr. P. C., itself, there appears no reason why a police-officer should not act under that section even if the formalities required by sec. 56, Cr. P. C., are not complied with—Achar Bilawal v Emp, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 308 (309), 172 I.C. 149. The Bombay High Court also followed the view of the Patna High Court in preference to the view of the Rangoon High Court in Keshavlal Hirallal, 38 Bom.L.R. 971, 166 I.C. 632, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 56, I.L.R. 1937 Bom. 127, 38 Cr.L.J. 267, 9 R.B. 249, where Charu Chandra, 44 Cal. 76, 37 I.C. 57, A.I.R. 1917 Cal. 253, 18 Cr.L.J. 73, 20 C.W.N. 1233 and Santabir Lama v. Emp, 63 Cal. 399, 155 I.C. 537, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 122, 1935 Cr.C. 156, 36 Cr.L.J. 794, 39 C.W.N. 285, 7 R.C. 528, were explained and distinguished. In a very recent case the Patna High Court affirmed its views expressed above—Jioo Mian v. Emp, 39 Cr.L.J. 563, 175 I.C. 335, 16 Pat. 763, 1938 P.W.N. 216, 19 Pat.L.T. 247, 4 B.R. 584, 10 R.P. 623, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 229, where Keshavlal Hirallal, supra was relied on and Kartik Chandra Maity v. King-Emp, 13 P.L.T. 135, 138 I.C. 844, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 171, 1932 Cr.C. 347, 33 Cr.L.J. 706, Ind. Rul. 1932 Pat. 190, was distinguished. The Nagpur High Court, however, followed the view of the Rangoon High Court—Maroti v. Emp, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 95 (97), 1939 N.L.J. 101. There is no direct decision of the Calcutta High Court on this point; but see Raja Mia v. Emp, 44 C.W.N. 502 (504). See also Appasami Mudaliar, quoted in Note 109.

Where a complaint has been made against any person in respect of a cognizable offence, any Police-officer may arrest him without warrant even though the Police-officer be not in his uniform—Mahadeo, 21 A.L.J. 791, 25 Cr.L.J. 652.

114. Power of arrest:—The words "may arrest" show that the power of arrest is discretionary. A Police-officer is not always bound to arrest for cognizable offences. If an information of such an offence is brought to him, he ought, if there be circumstances in the case which lead him to suspect the information, to refrain from arresting persons of respectable position and to leave the complainant to go to a Magistrate and convince him that the information justifies the serious step of the issue of a warrant of arrest—Irappa, Ratanlal 795 (797). The powers under this section must be cautiously used. This section gives wide powers to a Police-officer to make an arrest without an order from the Magistrate and without warrant only in certain circumstances limited by the provisions contained in this section, and it is necessary in exercising such large powers to be cautious and circumspect—Charu Chandra, 44 Cal. 76, 20 C.W.N. 1233, 18 Cr.L.J. 73, 37 I.C. 57, A.I.R. 1917 Cal. 253.

Power to detain:—Authority given to arrest under this section implies authority to detain—Ramchandra, Ratanlal 220. But when certain persons were arrested under section 54, Cr. P. Code on suspicion of having been concerned in a dacoity, and afterwards the investigating police-officer reported to the Magistrate that there was no sufficient evidence upon which to charge those persons with participation in the dacoity, the Magistrate ought to discharge those persons and ought not to detain them in order that the police might institute proceeding under sec. 110. If the police believe that those persons were habitual thieves or robbers, they ought to re-arrest them under section 55—Rahu, 43 All. 186, 18 A.L.J. 1114.

In no case other than those provided by sections 54, 55 and 57, Cr. P. Code can a Police-officer arrest a person without warrant. The law being jealous of the liberty of the subject has set wholesome bounds to the power of police to arrest without a warrant. The Cr. P. Code being a complete code defining the powers of the police with regard to arrest, it is not open to a Court to travel outside the Code for finding powers either for the police or for private persons to interfere with the liberty of the subject—Gopal, 46 Mad. 605 (625), 44 M.L.J. 655, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 523.

115. Punishment:—A Police-officer arresting a person unjustifiably or otherwise than on a reasonable ground is guilty of an offence under sec 220, I. P. Code.

A person causing obstruction to a Police-officer making an arrest under this section, is guilty of an offence under sec. 225, I. P. C.—Ratna Mudali, 40 Mad. 1028, 18 Cr.L.J. 709; Gopal Singh, 36 All 6.

116. First Clause—Reasonable complaint or suspicion, credible information:—This clause does not apply to a case of non-cognizable offence—Raghuni, 37 Cr.L.J. 318, 160 I.C. 604, 17 P.L.T. 81, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 249, 1936 Cr.C. 273.

What is a reasonable complaint or suspicion must depend on the circumstances of each particular case, but it must be at least founded on some definite fact tending to throw suspicion on the person arrested, and not a mere vague surmise or information. Still less have the police any power to arrest persons, as they sometimes appear to do, merely on the chance of something being hereafter proved against them—Behary, 7 W.R. 3 (5).

A general definition of what constitutes reasonableness in a complaint or suspicion and credibility of information cannot be given. Both must depend upon the existence of tangible legal evidence within the cognizance of the Police-officer, and he must judge whether the evidence is sufficient to establish the reasonableness and credibility of the charge, information or suspicion—Reg. and Ord., N. W. P., Sec. 10, para 366 (8); Bhawoo v. Mulji, 12 Bom 377. The words 'credible' and 'reasonable' must have reference to the mind of the person receiving the information and such information must afford sufficient materials for the exercise of an independent judgment at the time of making the arrest—Subodh, 52 Cal. 319, 29 C.W.N. 98, 26 Cr.L.J. 625.

If a Magistrate after taking the statement of the complainant respecting an offence under section 406, I. P. Code, issues a warrant for the arrest of the accused, there is a 'reasonable complaint' of the accused being concerned in a cognizable offence; consequently a constable who arrests the accused without a warrant is justified in doing so under this section—Alay Muhammad, 22 Cr.L.J. 758, A.I.R. 1922 All 457, 21 A.L.J. 791, 64 I.C. 278. If a warrant of arrest is issued against the accused on a charge of a cognizable offence by the Police of any other province, it amounts to a credible information that the accused has committed a cognizable offence—Gopal Singh, 36 All. 6, 11 A.L.J. 957.

Where a complaint of a cognizable offence was made to the Magistrate who recorded it under section 200 and directed the police to make investigation and send a report, and the police after making the investigation arrested three persons, it was held that the complaint recorded under sec. 200 was a credible information upon which the police were entitled to arrest under this section, even though the Magistrate had not issued process against the accused—Bhola Bhagat, 2 Pat. 379, 4 P.L.T. 521, 24 Cr.L.J. 375. The police can make an arrest under this section on a complaint of a cognizable offence made before them, without a warrant and even when they are not in uniform—Mahadeo, 21 A.L.J. 791, 25 Cr.L.J. 652, 81 I.C. 140, A.I.R. 1924 All 201.

117. Fourth Clause:—A formal complaint need not be made in order to authorise a police-officer to arrest under this clause any person found with stolen property—Gowree Singh, 8 W.R. 28.

The possession of stolen property must be recent and exclusive—Ibid.

The word 'and' has been substituted for 'or'. Under the old law as it stood before 1923, a police-officer could arrest any person in whose possession anything was found which might reasonably be suspected to be stolen property, even though he might come in possession of that property innocently. The effect of the amendment is that the mere possession of stolen property will not empower a police-officer to arrest the person in possession of it but the person must also be reasonably suspected of having committed an offence in respect of the thing. See the Legislative Assembly Debates, 16th January, 1923, page 1151.

117A. Fifth Clause—Obstruction to Police-Officer:—Where a police constable, after questioning a person carrying bundles of cloth under his arms (suspecting the cloth to be stolen) and receiving unsatisfactory replies, took hold of the pieces of cloth in order to inspect them, but the latter refused to allow the officer to inspect the cloth and scuffled with him, after which the police-officer arrested him, held that the person was legally arrested under the fifth clause of this section, for obstructing a police-officer while acting in the execution of his duty—Bhoucoo v. Mulji, 12 Bom 377.

118. Seventh Clause:—Offence committed out of British India:—By virtue of this clause the ruling in 19 Bom. 72, is no longer good law. This clause authorises the police in British India to arrest without warrant a British subject committing outside British India any of the offences enumerated in the first Schedule of the Extradition Act—Huseinally, 7 Bom LR 463, 2 Cr L.J. 439. An arrest in British India by a police of the Native State of a person suspected to have committed an offence in the Native State is illegal—Debi, 29 All 377.

The wording of this clause indicates that the arresting Police-officer has to exercise his own judgment and form his own opinion as to whether he should or should not act, and to enable him to do so he must have the necessary facts before him. A bare assertion of the commission of an offence does not amount to a reasonable suspicion or a credible information, on the basis of which an arrest can be made under this clause. If there is a credible information of the issue of a warrant by the Foreign State, that would justify an action under this section—Subodh, 52 Cal 319, 29 CWN. 98, 40 CLJ. 489, 26 Cr.LJ 625, AIR 1925 Cal. 278. The expression "liable to be apprehended", etc., contemplates cases in which there is a present liability of apprehension or detention in custody in British India under, the laws of extradition or the Fugitive Offenders Act, or any other law, and not cases in which there may be liability in future for apprehension or detention. The issue of some sort of process under the law would create such a liability, though the process may not have arrived and is not available for execution—Ibid. See also Emp v Kalu, 34 Cr.LJ 679, 144 IC 67, AIR. 1933 Lah. 159, 1933 Cr.C. 301, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 402; Haramohan Patnaik v. Emp., 40 Cr.LJ. 500 (505), 1938 PWN 869, 180 IC 787, AIR 1939 Pat 129, 19 P.L.T. 909, 18 Pat. 121. What is reasonable complaint or suspicion depends on the circumstances of each case but it must be founded on some definite fact or some tangible proof which is sufficient to establish in the mind of a reasonable Police-Officer, the reasonableness or credibility of the charge, information or suspicion. To justify an arrest under this clause there must be in existence, as a fact, as opposed to any belief which may be entertained by any person, a warrant which has been issued under the Extradition Act. Where the only information which the Police had was the warrant issued by the District Magistrate of a Native State, such can hardly be said to be a reasonable complaint or to amount to credible information or to create reasonable suspicion—Haramohan Patnaik v Emp., supra.

A Magistrate has power to grant bail to an accused who has been arrested in pursuance of this clause, and whom the Magistrate has been asked to retain in custody by the District Magistrate of a Native State—In re Sriam Shambhudajal, 26 Bom.L.R. 981, 26 Cr.L.J. 948 (949), AIR 1925 Bom 104.

Credible information includes any information which, in the judgment of the officer to whom it is given, appears entitled to credit in the particular instance and which he believes, and it need not be sworn information—Kada, 7 P.R. 1882 (Cr.) ; Debi, 30 Cr.L.J. 625, 116 IC 455, AIR. 1929 Lah. 720, Ind. Rul. 1929 Lah. 519. There is nothing in this section to suggest that the arresting police-officer is to be the final judge of what is reasonable or credible—Pramila v. Hopkyns, AIR. 1932 Cal. 470 (473), 36 CWN. 669, 1932 Cr.C. 460, 138 IC 358, 33 Cr.LJ 609, 59 Cal. 1440. The "reasonable suspicion" and the "credible information" referred to in this section must relate to definite averments which the Police-officer must consider for himself before he acts under this section. The authority which the section confers is personal

Section 23 of the Extradition Act (XV of 1903) refers to the case of persons arrested under this clause, that is to say, when a person has been arrested not only without warrant but also without an order from a Magistrate. This section is intended to cover those cases where the Police-officer acts on his own responsibility, that is to say, on suspicion or information as based on facts which the Police-officer considered for himself. On the other hand, where the arrest is made in pursuance of an order of a Magistrate, it is the order which must determine the legality or otherwise of the arrest—Santbir, 36 Cr.L.J. 794, 155 I.C. 537, A.I.R. 1935 Cal 122, 39 C.W.N. 285, 1932 Cr.C. 156, 62 Cal 399. See also Charu Chandra, 44 Cal. 76, 20 C.W.N. 1233, 18 Cr.L.J. 73, 37 I.C. 57, A.I.R. 1917 Cal. 253.

119. Ninth Clause:—The first two lines of this clause have been added on the recommendation of the Select Committee in 1916, and the latter portion on the recommendation of the Joint Committee in 1922. As regards the first two lines the Select Committee of 1916 observed: "The Committee are of opinion that an amendment is required in section 54 to meet the case of a requisition from a police-officer to arrest a man at a distance. We think it is clear that there should be power for an investigating officer to require by telegram the arrest of a person who may, perhaps, have absconded from the place where the investigation was taking place. We, therefore, propose to add a clause at the end of section 54." As regards the rest of the clause the Joint Committee (1922) added: "We agree with those critics who desire that some safeguard should be provided and we have therefore proposed to lay down that the requisition should reveal the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made, so that the arresting officer can satisfy himself that the arrest could lawfully have been made without warrant by the officer issuing the requisition."

Before the ninth clause was added, it was held that the 'reasonable suspicion' and 'credible information' in this section must be based upon definite facts which the Police-officer had to consider for himself before he could act under this section. He could not delegate his discretion or take shelter under another person's belief or judgment. Thus, where a Police-officer arrested the accused on receipt of a letter written by an Inspector of Police in which it was stated that the accused committed offences under secs. 409 and 420, I. P. C., and it appeared that the officer effecting the arrest relied solely on the aforesaid letter and had no personal knowledge of the facts of the case, it was held that the arrest of the accused was not proper—Charu Chandra, supra. This ruling is no longer correct in view of this new clause. In cases, however, where clause firstly applies the responsibility is that of the arresting officer himself and the principle laid down in 44 Cal 76 case still holds good. The new clause does not affect the provisions of clause seventhly—Subodh, 29 C.W.N. 98 (103), 52 Cal. 318, 40 C.L.J. 489, 26 Cr.L.J. 625.

120. Arrest without warrant under Special Acts:—See Madras Act VII of 1864, Sec. 24; Madras Act I of 1887, Sec. 4; Arms Act (XI of 1878), Sec. 12; Indian Gambling Act (III of 1867), Sec. 13; Railways Act (IX of 1890), Sec. 132; Cantonments Act (Act II of 1924), Sec. 250; Criminal Tribes Act (Act VI of 1924), Secs. 21, 22, 25; Emigration Act (XXI of 1883), Sec. 12; Indian Explosives Act (IV of 1884), Sec. 13; Forest Act (Act VII of 1878), Sec. 63; European Vagrancy Act (Act IX of 1874), Sec. 19; Assam Labour and Emigration Act (VI of 1901), Sec. 195; Bengal Excise Act (VII of 1878), Secs. 40 and 41; Bengal Cruelty to Animals Act (Bengal Act I of 1920), Sec. 26; Punjab Municipal Act (XX of 1891), Secs. 18, 83; Bombay Gambling Act (IV of 1887), Sec. 12A; Rangoon Tramways Act (XXII of 1883), Sec. 19.

Arrest without jurisdiction:—The question whether the officer who effected the arrests was acting within or beyond his powers in making arrests, does not affect the question whether the accused were guilty or not guilty of the offence with which they were charged—Ravalu, 26 Mad. 124.

Arrest of vagabonds, habitual robbers, etc.

55. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, in like manner, arrest or cause to be arrested—

- (a) any person found taking precautions to conceal his presence within the limits of such station under circumstances which afford reason to believe that he is taking such precautions with a view to committing a cognizable offence; or
- (b) any person within the limits of such station who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself; or
- (c) any person who is by repute an habitual robber, house-breaker or thief, or an habitual receiver of stolen property knowing it to be stolen, or who by repute habitually commits extortion or in order to the committing of extortion habitually puts or attempts to put persons in fear of injury.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta.

121. Object of section:—The powers with which officers in charge of police stations have been armed under the Code for the purpose of restraining bad characters are exceptional powers. They provide very strong remedies and should never be put in force without the greatest deliberation, and except upon convincing evidence. This section was intended for the suppression of habitual bad characters whom an officer in charge of a Police station suddenly finds within his jurisdiction or about whom he has good cause to fear that they will commit serious harm, before there is time to apply to the nearest Magistrate empowered to deal with the case under sec 112—Doulat Sing, 14 All. 45.

122. Illegal arrest:—A person against whom proceedings under Chapter VIII were held by the High Court to be illegal, was re-arrested under this section within the Court precincts after giving him ostensible release, and proceedings against him under Chapter VII were renewed. It was held that the re-arrest was illegal and an unlawful exercise of authority, as it was an attempt in another way to do what had been declared by the High Court to be illegal—Amir Khan, 1883 A.W.N. 223. Similarly, where the Sessions Judge had passed orders for the immediate release of an accused person who had been prosecuted for dacoity, the action of a Police officer or a Magistrate in re-arresting him under this section and subsequently taking proceedings against him is a grave irregularity and wholly without jurisdiction—Maiku, 41 All 483, 17 A.L.J. 458, 20 Cr.L.J. 381.

In order to justify an arrest under clause (c) of this section the prosecution shall have to prove that the man was reputed to be a habitual robber or house-breaker, etc., it is illegal to arrest a person merely on the ground that the police had reason to suspect that he was concerned in several offences—Appasami, 47 Mad. 442 (445), 46 M.L.J. 447, 25 Cr.L.J. 563.

123. Section applies to Calcutta Police:—This section is expressly made applicable to the Police of Calcutta. Therefore, an officer in charge of a Police-station in Calcutta may arrest a person, although there is no declaration by Government declaring a thana or police-station in Calcutta to be a police-station within the meaning of this Code—Madho Dhobi, 31 Cal. 557.

124. Bail:—When the Police arrest under this section, they are bound to give the person arrested the option of bail, and the bond should not be excessive, but in accordance with the position in life occupied by the person arrested—Daulat Singh, 14 All 45 But there is no indication in sec. 55, Cr. P. Code that the police are bound, after arrest, to inform the persons arrested that they are entitled to be released on bail. Nor is it clear that the police are bound to release them on bail any more than persons who had been arrested under sec. 54, Cr. P. Code—Supdt. & Rem. of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Jahir Ali, 63 Cal. 189, 37 Cr.L.J. 1070, 164 I.C. 1007.

125. Clause (a):—Habitual gambler:—Only the persons enumerated here can be arrested under this section. Persons who are suspected of earning their livelihood by unlawful gambling are not liable to arrest by the Police. The proper course is to proceed under sec. 112 of the Code—Kyaw Dun, 3 L.B.R. 94, 3 Cr.L.J. 20.

For the meaning of the word 'believe' see Rango, 6 Bom 402; Suraj Prasad, 118 I.C. 759, 9 O.W.N. 208, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 213, 30 Cr.L.J. 969; Gaya, 32 Cr.L.J. 1184, 134 I.C. 401, 8 O.W.N. 517, Ind Rul. 1931 Oudh 353, where it is laid down that the word 'believe' is much stronger than the word 'suspect' and involves the necessity of showing that the circumstances were such that a reasonable man must have been fully convinced in his mind. These decisions were in connection with sec. 411, I. P. C. See also 1913 M.W.N. 695 For the meaning of the word 'habitual' in clause (3) see Bhubaneswar, 6 Pat. 1 (7) quoted under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code.

126. Sections 55 and 110:—This section is independent of Chapter VIII of this Code, although proceedings under that Chapter might follow on arrest under this section as a natural sequence. A police-officer can therefore arrest or cause to be arrested without a warrant or an order of a Magistrate under Chapter VIII, any person who comes under this section, although proceedings under sec. 110 are contemplated against him—Nepal, 35 All. 407, 14 Cr.L.J. 618, 11 A.L.J. 596, 21 I.C. 666.

A person who can be dealt with under clauses (d) and (e) of sec. 110 is in most cases a person who would fall within one of the categories given in sec. 55. A Police-officer who intends to proceed against a man under sec. 110 can cause him to be arrested under sec. 55 without a warrant. It is not necessary that all the formalities of Chap. VIII are to be observed before he can be arrested, because it would in many cases render proceedings under Chap. VIII useless. If the Police or the Magistrate who are contemplating taking proceedings under that chapter against desperate and dangerous characters or vagabonds and vagrants, are to allow the suspects to remain free until all the formalities of Chap. VIII have been fulfilled and a regular committal order passed against such persons, it would oftentime happen that the offenders would abscond and the proceedings would be wholly infructuous. The police can, therefore, arrest a suspected criminal under sec. 55 and then proceed against him either for the substantive offence or under Chap. VIII—Haradaya, 20 S.L.R. 85, 27 Cr.L.J. 628 (630), A.I.R. 1926 Sind 190.

56. (1) When any officer in charge of a police-station or any police-officer making an investigation under Chapter XIV requires any officer subordinate to him to arrest without a warrant (otherwise than in his presence) any person who may lawfully be arrested without a warrant, he shall deliver to the officer required to make the arrest an order in writing specifying the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made.

The officer so required shall before making the arrest notify to the person to be arrested the substance of the order and, if so required by such person, shall show him the order.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta.

Change:—The italicised words have been added by sec. 11, Cr. P. Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). "We consider that a Police-officer making an investigation should, no less than an officer-in-charge of a police-station, have power to depute a subordinate to effect an arrest under the provisions of sec. 56 (1) and we propose an amendment in this sub-section accordingly"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

The second para of sub-section (1) was added on the motion of Mr. Rangachariar during the debate in the Assembly. See Legislative Assembly Debates, January 17, 1923, page 1186.

127. "Officer subordinate":—These words are not limited to a police-officer as in sec 54 or 57. A chowkidar is an officer subordinate to an officer-in-charge of a police-station—Bahubal, 10 CWN 287, 3 Cr.L.J. 201; Umrao, 26 Cr.L.J. 795.

128. In his presence:—If the arrest is made in the presence of the officer-in-charge of the police-station, the arrest is virtually made by him, and no order in writing is necessary; a verbal order is sufficient—Ehaikh Emoo, 11 W.R. 20.

129. Order in writing:—The order in writing is an authority to a subordinate officer to make an arrest which the superior Police-officer, if present, could himself make on his own responsibility—Basant Lal, 27 Cal 320; 4 CWN 311. The mere writing of the name of the subordinate on the back of the warrant and the signing of that endorsement by the officer in charge of the station does not constitute the warrant an order in writing. But adding the words "arrest the person within named and for the offence within stated" would make it a valid order in writing—Dalip, 18 All. 246.

A Sub-Inspector may arrest persons who fall under certain categories given in sec. 55. If he wishes any other police-constable to arrest such person, he must specify the cause for which the arrest is to be made, i.e., he must state within which category as given in sec. 55 the supposed offender falls. If it is intended that the police officer should arrest a man with the view of taking proceedings under sec. 110, it is strictly and specially necessary that he should specify one of the clauses given in sec. 55—Hardayal, 20 S.L.R. 85, 27 Cr.L.J. 628 (629), A.I.R. 1926 Sind 190.

Section 80 of the Code applies only to warrants and not to orders in writing mentioned in this section; therefore, it was held that a subordinate officer making an arrest under an order in writing was not bound to notify to the person arrested the authority for and the cause of his arrest—Basant Lal, 27 Cal 320 (323). This is no longer good law, because the new second para of this section expressly makes it obligatory on the subordinate officer to notify to the person arrested the substance of the order in writing, and to show him the order, if called upon to do so. Where the subordinate police officer making an arrest under an order in writing under sec. 56, Cr. P. C., did not say that before making the arrest he notified to the person to be arrested the substance of the order, the provisions of sec. 56, Cr. P. C., had not been complied with and the arrest could not be legally made under that section. Nor was the arrest legal under sec. 54, Cr. P. C., as there was no evidence that the subordinate officer had information or suspicion that the person to be arrested was concerned in a cognizable offence—Raja Mia v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 502 (504).

But the provisions of section 56 (requiring a constable to notify the substance of the order to the person to be arrested) do not deprive the constable of his statutory power of arrest under sec. 54 without a warrant. If the person to be arrested falls under sec. 54, the mere fact that a command certificate (order in writing) has been given to the constable under sec. 56 is immaterial, as the constable independently of any such command certificate is entitled to make the arrest. The failure of the constable in such a case to notify the substance of the command certificate to the person to be arrested is not illegal—Kishun Mandar, 5 Pat. 553, 27 Cr.L.J. 1310 (1311), 8 P.L.T. 237. See Note 113A for a detailed discussion on this point.

No form being specified for this section it is sufficient for the police officer in his requisition to specify sec. 55, Cr. P. Code and by so doing he conveys sufficient information to the person to be arrested. There is no section which lays down that there must be an endorsement of the name of the constables who actually go to make the arrest, on the requisitions—Rameshwar, AIR 1934 All 879, 4 A.W.R. 107, 35 Cr L J. 1452, 151 I.C. 834, 1934 Cr C. 1085, 1934 A.L.J. 997.

The subordinate officer making the arrest is not bound on his own initiative to show the accused the order given by the officer-in-charge of the police station, unless he is asked to produce the order—Umrao, 26 Cr.L.J. 795 (796), 86 I.C. 427, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 544.

130. Warrant by a Magistrate:—The issuing of a warrant by a Magistrate for the arrest of a person does not exclude the jurisdiction of the officer in charge of the police-station and prevent him from issuing the order under this section. It might be different if the Magistrate has decided that no warrant should issue and that summons only should issue—Dalip, 18 All. 246 (248).

57. (1) When any person, who in the presence of a police-officer has committed or has been accused of committing a non-cognizable offence, refuses, on demand of such officer, to give his name and residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he may be arrested by such officer in order that his name or residence may be ascertained.

(2) When the true name and residence of such person have been ascertained, he shall be released on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, to appear before a Magistrate if so required:

Provided that, if such person is not resident in British India, the bond shall be secured by a surety or sureties resident in British India.

(3) Should the true name and residence of such person not be ascertained within twenty-four hours from the time of arrest or should he fail to execute the bond, or, if so required, to furnish sufficient sureties, he shall forthwith be forwarded to the nearest Magistrate having jurisdiction.

131. Refusal to give name and address:—A police constable asked a man not to create any disturbance on the public road. Upon the man's declining to do so, the constable demanded his name and address which were not given. Then the constable arrested and dragged him to the police chowky and detained him there till his name and address was ascertained. It was held that the constable had lawfully exercised the powers conferred by this section—Goolab Rasul, 5 Bom L R 597 Where two police-officers arrested without warrant a person who was drunk and creating disturbance in a public street, and confined him in the police station, though one of them knew his name and address, held that the police officers' action was not justified under this section—Gopal Naidu, 46 Mad. 605 (625), 24 Cr.L.J. 599, 32 M.L.J. 352, 1923 M.W.N. 425, 73 I.C. 343, AIR. 1923 Mad. 523 (F.B.).

58. A police-officer may, for the purpose of arresting with-

Pursuit of offenders out warrant any person whom he is authorized to arrest under this Chapter, pursue such person into any place in British India,

132. Pursuit in foreign territory:—A Police may in hot pursuit follow an offender into an independent Native State; if they arrest him there, they must take him at once to the nearest Police authority of that State; if not in hot pursuit, they should ordinarily apply to the nearest Police authorities of the State and request him to effect the arrest of the fugitive—C. P. Pol Man., p 170. For offences committed in British India arrests made at a railway station in an Indian Independent State are illegal—Muhammad, 25 Cal. 20, 24 I.A. 137 (P.C.); Radha Kishan, 21 Cr.L.J. 303, 55 I.C. 351, 1 Lah 406.

59. (1) Any private person may arrest any person who, in his view, commits a non-bailable and cognizable offence or any proclaimed offender, and, without unnecessary delay, shall make over any person so arrested to a police-officer, or, in the absence of a police-officer, take such person or cause him to be taken in custody to the nearest police-station.

Arrest by private persons. Procedure on such arrest.

(2) If there is reason to believe that such person comes under the provisions of section 54, a police-officer shall re-arrest him.

(3) If there is reason to believe that he has committed a non-cognizable offence, and he refuses on the demand of a police-officer to give his name and residence, or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he shall be dealt with under the provisions of section 57. If there is no sufficient reason to believe that he has committed any offence, he shall be at once released.

Change:—The words "or cause him to be taken in custody" have been added by sec 12 of the Cr P Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1922) This amendment gives effect to the ruling in 29 All 575 cited below

133. Principle:—The principle of this section is that "for the sake of preservation of the peace, any individual who sees it broken may restrain the liberty of him whom he sees breaking it, so long as his conduct shows that the public peace is likely to be endangered by his acts"—per Parke B in Timothy v Simon, (1835) 4 L.J. Ex. 81. Thus, if a person is drunk and disorderly and is committing assaults on others, so that his conduct is at that time a grave danger to the public, he may be rightly arrested under this section by a private citizen—Ramaswamy Ayyar, 41 Mad 913, 22 Cr.L.J. 412 This decision was upheld in Gopal, 46 Mad 605, 44 M.L.J. 655, A.I.R. 1923 Mad 523 (F.B.), but on different grounds.

The section is not happily worded, but the intention of the Legislature appears to have been to restrict the right of arrest by a private individual to cases in which a cognizable and non-bailable offence has been committed in the presence of the person who arrests or causes the arrest of the offender. It is not essential that a private individual, in whose presence a non bailable and cognizable offence is committed, should himself physically arrest the offender. He may cause such offender to be arrested by another person—Gouri Prosad v. Chartered Bank, 52 Cal 615 (618), 89 I.C. 642, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 884. In Graham v. Henry Gidney, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 708 (714), 60 Cal 955, Ameer Ali, J., doubted the correctness of the above view and held that he was not convinced that the only defence to civil trespass was to be found in any section of the Criminal Procedure Code.

134. Scope of Section:—The intention of this section is to prevent arrest by a private person on mere suspicion or information and the power of arrest by

No form being specified for this section it is sufficient for the police officer in his requisition to specify sec. 55, Cr. P. Code and by so doing he conveys sufficient information to the person to be arrested. There is no section which lays down that there must be an endorsement of the name of the constables who actually go to make the arrest, on the requisitions—Rameshwar, A I R. 1934 All. 879, 4 A.W.R. 107, 35 Cr.L.J. 1452, 151 I.C. 834, 1934 Cr.C. 1085, 1934 A.L.J. 997.

The subordinate officer making the arrest is not bound on his own initiative to show the accused the order given by the officer-in-charge of the police station, unless he is asked to produce the order—Umrao, 26 Cr.L.J. 795 (796), 86 I.C. 427, A I R. 1925 Oudh 544.

130. Warrant by a Magistrate:—The issuing of a warrant by a Magistrate for the arrest of a person does not exclude the jurisdiction of the officer in charge of the police-station and prevent him from issuing the order under this section. It might be different if the Magistrate has decided that no warrant should issue and that summons only should issue—Dalip, 18 All 246 (248).

57. (1) When any person, who in the presence of a police-officer has committed or has been accused and residence, of committing a non-cognizable offence, refuses, on demand of such officer, to give his name and residence or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he may be arrested by such officer in order that his name or residence may be ascertained.

(2) When the true name and residence of such person have been ascertained, he shall be released on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, to appear before a Magistrate if so required:

Provided that, if such person is not resident in British India, the bond shall be secured by a surety or sureties resident in British India.

(3) Should the true name and residence of such person not be ascertained within twenty-four hours from the time of arrest or should he fail to execute the bond, or, if so required, to furnish sufficient sureties, he shall forthwith be forwarded to the nearest Magistrate having jurisdiction.

131. Refusal to give name and address:—A police constable asked a man not to create any disturbance on the public road. Upon the man's declining to do so, the constable demanded his name and address which were not given. Then the constable arrested and dragged him to the police chowky and detained him there till his name and address was ascertained. It was held that the constable had lawfully exercised the powers conferred by this section—Goolab Rasul, 5 Bom L.R. 597. Where two police-officers arrested without warrant a person who was drunk and creating disturbance in a public street, and confined him in the police station, though one of them knew his name and address, held that the police officers' action was not justified under this section—Gopal Naidu, 46 Mad 605 (625), 24 Cr.L.J. 599, 32 M.L.J. 352, 1923 M.W.N. 425, 73 I.C. 343, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 523 (F.B.).

58. A police-officer may, for the purpose of arresting without warrant any person whom he is authorized to arrest under this Chapter, pursue such person into any place in British India.

person to the nearest police station—Cholu, 33 Cr.L.J. 572, 138 I.C. 95, 13 P.L.T. 321, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 214, 1932 Cr.C. 495, Ind Rul. 1932 Pat. 171.

‘Take such person to the police-station’:—It is not the intention of the Legislature that the person making the arrest should be bound himself to take the arrested person to the police-station—Parsiddhan Sing, 29 All. 575; Pctadu, 11 Mad 480. See also Johri, 23 All. 266. The directions are sufficiently complied with if the person arresting the accused forwards him in charge of a servant or a village servant—Ibid. This is now made clear by the addition of the words “or cause him to be taken.”

A private person making an arrest must either make over the arrested person to a police-officer or take him to the nearest police-station. If he keeps the arrested person in his own custody, he will be guilty of an offence under sec 342, I P. C. (wrongful confinement)—Anant Prasad, 8 P.L.T. 201, 27 Cr.L.J. 1378 (1381), 98 I.C. 594. See also Supdt. & Rembr of Legal Affairs v Bhagnath, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 610, 38 C.W.N. 854, 35 Cr.L.J. 1367, 151 I.C. 662, 59 C.L.J. 482, 1932 Cr.C. 908, 61 Cal 991.

60. A police-officer making an arrest without warrant shall, without unnecessary delay and subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, take or send the person arrested before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or before the officer in charge of a police-station.

Person arrested to be taken before Magistrate or officer in charge of police-station

136. “Send the person”:—On a police-officer arresting a person, the prisoner should not be kept in confinement in any place which the officer might select, but should be sent immediately to the police-station and be placed in the custody of the officer in charge of the station, who is the person entrusted by the Act with the conduct of the enquiry—Tarnee, 7 W.R. 3. Where a policeman arrested a thief, but being himself unable to send or take the accused to a Magistrate, made a report, upon which the Magistrate issued a warrant, it was held under the circumstances that the accused was legally brought before the Magistrate—Mahipya, 5 B.H.C.R. 99.

61. No police-officer shall detain in custody a person arrested without warrant for a longer period than under all the circumstances of the case is reasonable, and such period shall not, in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under section 167, exceed twenty-four hours exclusive of the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Magistrate’s Court.

Person arrested not to be detained more than twenty-four hours

137. Object of section:—The intention of the Legislature, having regard to this section and section 167, is that an accused person should be brought before a Magistrate competent to try or commit, with as little delay as possible—Engadu, 11 Mad. 93; Ponnusami, 6 Mad 69; Narendra, 36 Cal. 166; Nagendra Nath, 51 Cal 402 (412), 38 C.L.J. 388, 81 I.C. 220, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 476. The precautions laid down in sections 60 and 61 seem to be designed to secure that within not more than 24 hours some Magistrate shall have seisin of what is going on and some knowledge of the nature of the charge against the accused, however incomplete the information may be—Dicarkadas v. Ambalal, 28 C.W.N. 850, 25 Cr.L.J. 1203, 82 I.C. 131.

Section 61 does not apply to the Calcutta Police, but the detention of an offender by the Deputy Commissioner of Police in Calcutta for an unlimited period is improper—Panchkari, 52 Cal. 67, 27 C.W.N. 300, 26 Cr.L.J. 782 (792); and an improper exercise of such power may be corrected by the High Court under the suitable provisions such as sec. 491, Cr. P. Code—Srilal, 41 C.L.J. 134, 27 Cr.L.J. 1185 (1185), 97

138. Detention in custody:—Where the accused were not allowed to leave the thana or to go to their homes, held that they were detained in custody within the meaning of this section, and the mere fact of there not being a special guard over them would not alter the nature of their position—Basooram, 19 W.R. 36.

139. Period of detention:—Although this section gives power to a police-officer to detain an accused person for a period of 24 hours, still in no case is a Police-officer justified in detaining a person for a single hour without bringing him before a Magistrate except upon some reasonable ground justified by all the circumstances of the case, and it is for the police-officer to show that he had reasonable grounds. He is not entitled to detain the accused if he can send the accused to a Magistrate at once—Suprosunno, 6 W.R. 88 (89). Even if a person be rightly arrested, it does not rest with the police officer to keep the prisoner in custody where and as long as he pleases. Under no circumstances can he be detained, without the special order of a Magistrate under sec. 167, for more than 24 hours. Unless the special order has been obtained the prisoner must either be discharged or sent on to the Magistrate, and any longer detention is absolutely unlawful—Tamree, 7 W.R. 3.

When the 24 hours' detention and the additional time necessary to bring an accused before a Magistrate allowed by sec. 61 and the fifteen days' additional detention allowed by sec. 167 expire, an accused must either be released by the Police under the provisions of sec. 169, security being taken for his appearance before a Magistrate, if and when required, or the accused must, under the provisions of sec. 170, be forwarded under custody to a Magistrate who is empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon a Police report. The Magistrate must either take cognizance if he has before him the Police report (which ordinarily would be a report in the form laid down in sec. 173) which he thinks makes out a prima facie case or he must release him—Bholanath, 28 C.W.N. 490 (492), 83 I.C. 628, 26 Cr.L.J. 68. The intention of the Legislature, having regard to secs. 61 and 167 and to the requirements of justice generally, is that an accused person should be brought before a Magistrate competent to try, or commit, with as little delay as possible—Nagendra, 38 C.L.J. 388 (393).

The law evidently views with disfavour detention in the custody of the police, and even in the case of an accused person such detention can be allowed only in special cases and for reasons to be stated in writing and not as a matter of course whenever it may be asked for by an investigating police officer. The provisions of the law are most useful and necessary, and they should be strictly complied with by the Subordinate Courts—In re Khairati Ram, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 476, 32 P.L.R. 493, 132 I.C. 519, 1931 Cr.C. 700, 32 Cr.L.J. 913, 12 Lah. 635.

The detention mentioned in this section means continuous detention. This section does not apply to cases where there has not been a continuous detention for more than 24 hours. Thus, where the accused person was brought to the thana at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and was alleged to go (to get bail) at noon the next day, and was not a prisoner in the thana till his return on the morning of the next day and then he was sent up to the sudder station by the evening, held that although the period of detention exceeded 24 hours, there was no continuous detention for more than 24 hours and that the detention was not illegal—In re Indrobeer, 1 W.R. 5.

Time occupied in journey:—The 24 hours of detention are to be counted up to the time when the accused person leaves the police station on the way to the Magistrate. The time occupied in journey to the Magistrate is not to be counted in the 24 hours, but it is the duty of the Magistrate to see that the time so occupied is reasonable, with reference to the distance to be travelled and other local considerations—Circular, Ratanlal 22.

Handcuffs:—In all heinous cases, where a single prisoner is sent in, he should be handcuffed. Where two or more prisoners are sent, they should be handcuffed to each other, two and two. In cases not of heinous nature, the prisoner should not be handcuffed unless violent, and then only by order of the Officer-in-charge of the station not below the rank of Sub-Inspector—Bengal Police Manual, p. 398.

62. Officers in charge of police-stations shall report to the District Magistrate, or, if he so directs, to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, the cases of all persons arrested without warrant, within the limits of their respective stations, whether such persons have been admitted to bail or otherwise.

Police to report apprehensions.

The object of sections 62 and 63 is that the Magistrate should promptly exercise authority, if necessary, with regard to all arrests by the Police, and they seem to have been framed with this view that, as no person can be released without the order of a Magistrate except on bail or recognizance, the Magistrate should be responsible as well as the Police, if a person legally arrested remains unnecessarily in custody—Punjab Cir., p 174

63. No person who has been arrested by a police-officer shall be discharged except on his own bond, or on bail, or under the special order of a Magistrate.

Discharge of person apprehended

64. When any offence is committed in the presence of a Magistrate within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he may himself arrest or order any person to arrest the offender, and may thereupon, subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, commit the offender to custody.

Offence committed in Magistrate's presence.

140. Secs. 64 and 556:—Although this section gives to a Magistrate authority to arrest a person committing an offence in his presence, yet it is clearly not intended to trench upon the general principle embodied in sec 556 of this Code, that no Judge or Magistrate shall try a case in which he is personally interested. Therefore, where a Magistrate, while travelling in a railway carriage, requested the accused who were his fellow passengers to desist from smoking and on their contemptuously refusing to do so, arrested and subsequently tried and convicted them, it was held that the Magistrate was legally and morally disqualified from exercising his judicial functions in relation to the offence imputed—Venkana, Ratanlal 339 (340).

The word "offence" used in sec 64, Cr. P. C., is obviously wide enough to include an offence under sec 171-D, I. P. C., and a Magistrate in whose presence such an offence is committed is fully authorized to arrest the offender and to release him on bail, although cognizance of the offence cannot be taken without the complaint as required by sec 196, Cr. P. C.—Brahma Nand v. Emp., AIR 1939 All. 682 (683), 1939 A.L.J. 779, 41 Cr.L.J. 85, 184 I.C. 662

65. Any Magistrate may at any time arrest or direct the arrest, in his presence, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, of any person for whose arrest he is competent at the time and in the circumstances to issue a warrant.

Arrest by or in presence of Magistrate

141. Under the provisions of sec 6 of the Bombay Gambling Act, IV of 1887, a first class Magistrate has power to give authority, under a special warrant, to a Police-officer to make an arrest and search; those provisions must be read subject to the provisions of secs. 65 and 105 of this Code, that is, the Legislature must be presumed to have intended that the Magistrate should have authority to make the arrest and search himself, if necessary—Fernand, 31 Bom. 438, 9 Bom.L.R. 695, 6 Cr.L.J. 60

66. If a person in lawful custody escapes or is rescued,
Power, on escape, to pursue and retake. the person from whose custody he escaped or was rescued may immediately pursue and arrest him in any place in British India.

67. The provisions of sections 47, 48, and 49 shall apply to arrests under section 66, although the person making any such arrest is not acting under a warrant and is not a police-officer having authority to arrest.
Provisions of sections 47, 48 and 49 to apply to arrest under section 66.

CHAPTER VI.

OF PROCESS TO COMPEL APPEARANCE.

A.—Summons.

68. (1) Every summons issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing in duplicate, signed and sealed by the presiding officer of such Court, or by such other officer as the High Court may, from time to time, by rule, direct.
Form of summons.

(2) Such summons shall be served by a police-officer, or, Summons by whom served. subject to such rules as the Provincial Government may prescribe in this behalf, by an officer of the Court issuing it or other public servant.

(3) This section applies to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" in this section by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

142. Scope:—This section is not limited to service of summons against an accused person only, but provides for the issue of every summons under this Code, and a summons to an assessor must comply with the terms of this section—Sarat Chandra, 1 C.W.N. cxvi.

Application for summons:—Duty of Court—When an application is made for a process to compel the appearance of witnesses, it is the duty of the Court to pass an order either granting the prayer or refusing it. To make a mere order directing the petition to be filed is to leave the matter open and is improper—Bhomas v. Digambar, 6 C.W.N. 548.

Under the law a verbal prayer for summons on the accused is sufficient—Muhammad Gul v. Hazi Fazley Rahim, 33 C.W.N. 446 (449), 56 Cal. 1013

The Code makes no provision for the issue of a summons by a Magistrate requiring a person to appear before a Police-officer—Jogendra, 24 Cal 320 (324).

It is not an offence under sec. 174, I. P. C., to disobey a summons by a British Magistrate directing the person summoned to appear before him at a place outside British territory—Puranga, 16 Mad 463

143. Form and Contents:—A summons should be clear and specific in its terms as to the title of the Court, the place at which and the day and the time of day when the attendance of the person summoned is required; and it should go on to say that such person is not to leave the Court without permission, and if the case in which he has been summoned is adjourned, without ascertaining the date of the adjournment. If these formalities are not duly observed, a conviction for non-attendance in obedience to the summons cannot be sustained—Ram Saran, 5 All 7. Thus, where the summons did not specify the place where the accused or the witnesses were to attend, non-appearance in obedience to such summons was not an offence under sec. 174, I P. C.—Narasaiya, 1 Weir 100; Narayana, 1 Weir 100; Anonymous, 7 M H C R App 14, 1 Weir 81; Anon, 1 Weir 81.

Where a defendant was summoned to appear before a Magistrate on a certain date but the summons did not specify the place at which he was to appear, it was held that the Magistrate was not competent to dispose of the case ex parte on failure of the person to appear before the Magistrate—Anon., 7 M H C R App 43, 2 Weir 38 (39).

Where an accused was summoned to appear at a Court at 10 A.M. and attended the Court at the appointed time but, finding the Magistrate absent, went away staying for two or three minutes only, it was held that he was bound to wait for a reasonable time in the Court and his staying for two or three minutes only was not a compliance with the order—Kisan Bapu, 10 Bom 93, Sutherland, 14 W R 20 (Cr).

A summons should contain the name of the father of the person summoned, his caste or tribe and his residence, so as to place his identity beyond all doubt—See Punj. Cr., Vol II, p 151. In a process issued against a person residing in a large town, the description should contain not merely the name and father's name of the person to whom the process is addressed, and the name only of the town in which such person resides, but should give such further particulars regarding the section or street of the town in which such person resides as can be ascertained and will facilitate his identification—Cal G R & C O, Ch 1, Rule 19

The summons should also state the particulars of the offence charged. Form I of Sch V says "state shortly the offence charged." This statutory requirement cannot be satisfied by a reference to a general omnibus charge, which may include a variety of charges; the Form should state the place where and the date when the accused is supposed to have committed the offence, as well as the precise nature of the offence—Rananjai, 26 A.L.J. 331, 29 Cr.L.J. 357 (359), 108 I C 203, A.I.R. 1928 All. 261; Maiku Lal, 38 Cr.L.J. 326, 166 I C. 978, 1937 O.W.N. 283, 1937 O.L.J. 79; Gajraj Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 All 761, 38 Cr.L.J. 69, 165 I C. 716, 1936 All.L.R. 932, 1936 Cr.C. 1002, 1936 A.L.J. 1011, 1936 A.W.R. 874; Mohammad Hafiz v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 947, 170 I C 476, 1937 O.L.R. 432, 1937 O.W.N. 815, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 444. A summons issued by a Magisterial Court which does not contain in the form prescribed by Statute (sec. 68, Cr. P. Code, read with the form given in Sch. V of the Code), particulars of the place where, the time when, and the nature of the offence charged, may be disregarded by the person summoned, and proceedings taken thereon, if objected to, must necessarily be invalid—Lal Chand, 35 Cr.L.J. 1161, 150 I C. 941, 11 O.W.N. 828, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 370, 1934 Cr.C. 1156.

Reviewing the rulings quoted above the Oudh Chief Court has held that when an accused has attended Court on a defective summons his trial is not vitiated by of that defect. An omission in the summons cannot by itself vitiate a trial. The trial can only be vitiated by a defect in the proceedings at the trial by which the accused is prejudiced. The provisions of sec. 537, Cr. P. C., are perfectly clear and applicable. The question whether the accused has been prejudiced or not should be the sole criterion in such cases—Abdul, 41 Cr.L.J. 92, 184 I.C. 742, 1939 O.W.N. 960, following Muhammad Sadiq v. Delhi Electric Supply & Traction Co., A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 867, 116 I.C. 889, 30 Cr.L.J. 702, 1929 Cr.C. 601, Ind. Rul. 1929 Lah. 601. See also H. B. Spiers v. Johiuddin, 33 Cr.L.J. 549, 138 I.C. 98, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 461, 36 C.W.N. 246, 59 Cal. 113.

Signing :—Every summons should be signed in full by the officer by whom it is issued with the name of his office or the capacity in which he acts—Punj Cir, Vol. II, p. 151. In Bombay a summons may be signed by the clerk of the Court, or where there is no clerk of the Court, by a sheristadar, subject to the order of the presiding Officer of the Court—Bom. H. C. Cr. Cir., p. 10. In Madras, the summons may be signed by the Chief Ministerial Officer—Mad H. C. Cr. Cir., No 1302, dated 29-4-1891.

Signing not by full name but by initials is only an irregularity, and does not affect the validity of the proceedings—Sec. 537, Illustration (under the old law). The illustration to sec. 537 has now been omitted by the 1923 Amendment Act, but the law does not seem to have been changed. See also Janki Prasad, 8 All 293 and Banke Behari, 3 P.L.J. 493, 19 Cr.L.J. 747.

'Sealed' :—A summons which is not sealed is not valid in law, and, therefore, disobedience to a summons not sealed is not an offence—Narasaiya, 1 Weir 100; Abdul Rahim, 37 M.L.J. 588, 21 Cr.L.J. 800, 55 I.C. 528, A.I.R. 1920 Mad 352, 58 I.C. 528, 10 M.L.W. 554.

By whom served :—Under clause (2) of section 68 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has declared that the process issued under that Act shall be served by peons appointed under the rules framed by the High Court under sec. 22 of the Court Fees Act, VII of 1870. Vide Notification, Government of Bengal, the 11th May 1883; Calcutta Gazette, 23 May 1883, p. 426. Similar orders were passed by the Chief Commissioner of Assam; see Assam Gazette, 23rd June, 1883, p. 290.

All dafadars and chaukidars shall be public servants for the purposes of sec. 68 (2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Vide Rule 45, Notification No 2197-P.J., dated the 21st May 1920, made by the Governor of Bengal in Council in exercise of the powers conferred by sub-sec. (1) and clauses (g), (h) and (i) of sub-sec. (2) of sec. 101 of the Bengal Village Self-Government Act, 1919 (Bengal Act V of 1919).

69. (1) The summons shall, if practicable, be served personally on the person summoned, by delivering or tendering to him one of the duplicates of the summons.

Summons how served.

(2) Every person on whom a summons is so served shall, if so required by the serving officer, sign a receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate.

Signature of receipt for summons.

(3) Service of a summons on an incorporated company or other body corporate may be effected by serving it on the secretary, local manager or other principal officer of the corporation, or by registered post letter addressed to the chief officer of the corporation in British India. In such case the service shall be deemed to have been effected when the letter would arrive in ordinary course of post.

This is the only section which provides for the procedure of service of summons, and every summons (e.g., summons to attend as assessor) under this Code must be served in accordance with the provisions of this section. Any other mode (e.g., sending summons by post or under registered cover) is illegal and not justifiable—Sarat Chandra, 1 C.W.N. cxvi.

144. Service how effected:—The mere showing of a summons to the person summoned is not sufficient service. Either the original should be left with the party meant to be served, or should be exhibited to him and a copy of it delivered or tendered to him—Karsanlal, 5 B.H.C.R. 20. See also Kuppan, 11 Mad. 137, 1 Weir 100.

Tender—Refusal to take or sign:—If, however, the person refuses to take the summons, the mere tendering is sufficient service—Sittu Padayachi, 1 Weir 81; Punamalai, 5 Mad 99; Sahadeo, 40 All 577, 16 A.L.J. 453, 19 Cr.L.J. 746, 46 I.C. 522; In re Kuppusami, 28 M.L.J. 504. A refusal to receive a summons is not an offence under section 173, I.P. Code—Punnamalai, 5 Mad 199. A mere refusal to sign a receipt for a summons is not an offence under sec. 173 or sec. 180, I.P.C.—Krishna, 20 Cal. 358; In the matter of Bhoobuneshwar, 3 Cal. 621; Reg. v. Kalya bin Fakir, 5 Bom.H.C.R. Cr.C. 34. What is necessary to the service of summons is that the summons should be delivered or tendered; and if the summons is delivered or tendered, then it is served, whether the person signs a receipt for it or not—Kalya, 5 B.H.C.R. 34; Ganga Ram, 1886 A.W.N. 83.

Under this section, personal service may be made either by delivering or by tendering but the tender must be a real tender of a document which is understood by the person to be served, and he must have voluntarily waived actual delivery and indicated in some way that a tender was sufficient. But if the person to be served runs away and shuts himself in his house, the summons cannot be served on him either by delivery or by tender—Budhu, 26 A.L.J. 107, 29 Cr.L.J. 263 (264), A.I.R. 1928 All 118, 107 I.C. 563.

The fact of a subpoena being entrusted to a process-server does not give him a general right of entry into any house without obtaining the permission of the owner or person in charge. Such a general power to enter any house at any time is not given by any of the provisions of the Code and would be a serious violation of private rights. The mere fact that the owner asked the process-server to go out of his house would not be an offence—Kuppuswami v. Kumaraswami, 39 Mad 561 (564), 16 Cr.L.J. 477, 2 M.L.W. 463, 28 M.L.J. 505, 17 M.L.T. 398, 1915 M.W.N. 365, 29 I.C. 109.

Proof of service—A Magistrate should not accept the written return merely of the serving peon as a sufficient proof of service of his order under cl. (1) of sec. 145, Cr. P. C., when the peon was not examined and there was no affidavit in proof of service—Jogendra Nath Rai v. Abu Shaikh, 8 C.W.N. 719.

70. Where the person summoned cannot by the exercise of due diligence be found, the summons may be served by leaving one of the duplicates for him with some adult male member of his family, or, in a presidency town, with his servant residing with him, and the person with whom the summons is so left shall, if so required by the serving officer, sign a receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate.

145. "Cannot be found":—It must be shown by affidavit of the person entrusted with the service of summons that he made his best endeavours to effect personal service on the accused, and that the accused evaded service or that he could not be found by the exercise of due diligence—Sundar, 1882 A.W.N. 170. Where no attempt has been taken to serve the accused personally and there has been want of reasonable diligence in that behalf, a substituted service of summons (e.g., service on the durwan or a servant in a Presidency Town) is not valid—Mon Mohan Pande, 35

C.W.N. 868 (869), 1932 Cr.C. 10, 33 Cr.L.J. 264, 136 I.C. 135; Jadho v. Manik, 6 N.L.J. 63, 23 Cr.L.J. 739.

If the person summoned cannot be found, the summons may be served on an adult male member of his family; the service of summons on the mother of the accused is not warranted by this section—Sawan Singh, 26 Cr.L.J. 1393, 89 I.C. 705, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 50, 2 Lah. Cas. 59. See also Note 368.

Service on servant:—Outside the Presidency Towns:—A service of summons on a juror cannot be effected on his servant—In re Behari Lal, 1899 A.W.N. 13.

71. If service in the manner mentioned in sections 69 and 70 cannot by the exercise of due diligence be effected, the serving officer shall affix one of the duplicates of the summons to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which the person summoned ordinarily resides; and thereupon the summons shall be deemed to have been duly served.

Procedure when service cannot be effected as before provided.

145A. The procedure which is provided by section 71 cannot be made use of unless service in the manner mentioned in sections 68 and 70 cannot be effected by the exercise of due diligence. It is not enough to show that service could not be effected in the manner provided by sec. 69; it must also be shown that the service could not be effected in the manner provided by sec. 70—Beni Madhub v. Jadu Nath, 31 C.W.N. 148, 43 C.L.J. 113, 27 Cr.L.J. 715 (716), 94 I.C. 907. See also A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 55, 69 I.C. 627, 23 Cr.L.J. 739.

72. (1) Where the person summoned is in the active service of the Crown or of a Railway Company, the Court issuing the summons shall ordinarily send it in duplicate to the head of the office in which such person is employed; and such head shall thereupon cause the summons to be served in manner provided by section 69, and shall return it to the Court under his signature with the endorsement required by that section.

Service on servant of Crown or of Railway Company.

(2) Such signature shall be evidence of due service.

Amendment:—The word "Crown" has been substituted for the word "Government" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Mode of service on Government employees:—See Cal. G. R. & C. O., Ch. I, Rules 14-18; All. R. & O., pages 718; Punj. Cir., Vol. II, pp. 152-153; Madras Rule No. 8 (G. O., 9th April 1875, No. 823).

146. Scope:—This section requiring service of summons to Government servants to be effected through the heads of their departments, is intended to apply only to summons issued by a Court of Justice and not to summons or orders of police-officers investigating a crime under Chap. XIV of this Code. A summons or notice issued by the police may be served directly on the Government servant, and need not be sent through his departmental superior. Therefore, refusal by an amin (a Government servant) to attend at a police investigation in obedience to a summons directly served on him by the police is an offence punishable under sec. 174, I. P. Code—Gumparthi Venkataramia, 18 Cr.L.J. 733 (734), 40 I.C. 733 (Mad.).

Summons to a Sub-Inspector of the Railway Police should be served through the Superintendent of the Railway Police of that district—Gouri Shankar, 6 P.L.T. 215, 26 Cr.L.J. 965 (968), 81 I.C. 421, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 553.

73. When a Court desires that a summons issued by it shall be served at any place outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, it shall ordinarily send such summons in duplicate to a Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person summoned resides or is, to be there served.

Service of summons outside local limits. The Cr. P. Code does not say expressly how a person in England is to be served with summons. In such circumstances the Magistrate may act under the provisions of sec 33 of the Evidence Act—Nga Ba On, 28 CrLJ. 861 (862), 104 I.C. 637, A.I.R. 1927 Rang 248, 6 Bur.LJ. 114.

74. (1) When a summons issued by a Court is served outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, and in any case where the officer who has served a summons is not present at the hearing of the case, an affidavit, purporting to be made before a Magistrate, that such summons has been served, and a duplicate of the summons purporting to be endorsed (in manner provided by section 69 or section 70) by the person to whom it was delivered or tendered or with whom it was left, shall be admissible in evidence, and the statements made therein shall be deemed to be correct unless and until the contrary is proved.

(2) The affidavit mentioned in this section may be attached to the duplicate of the summons and returned to the Court.

B.—Warrant of Arrest.

75. (1) Every warrant of arrest issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing signed by the presiding officer, or, in the case of a Bench of Magistrates, by any member of such Bench; and shall bear the seal of the Court.

(2) Every such warrant shall remain in force until it is cancelled by the Court which issued it, or until it is executed.

147. Grounds for issuing warrants:—A Magistrate should issue a warrant on good and legal grounds. It is essential that he should have a knowledge of the offence having been committed, and that knowledge must be either personal or derived from testimony legally given before him. The report of the Police or any statement which is not on oath and which falls short of actual formal complaint, is not sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction to issue a warrant—Surendra, 13 W.R. 27 (31).

148. Warrants:—Form :—When any Act does not provide a form of warrant, the form to be used is the ordinary one prescribed by this Code—Alter Causman, 18 Bom. 636.

Pardanashin lady :—Until and unless a Magistrate is convinced that there is strong likelihood of the charge being proved, a pardanashin lady of good position should not be ordinarily compelled to appear in person in the first instance—Prem Kuer v. Mai Shan Nath, 1908 P.W.R. 20

General warrants:—The issuing of a general warrant, which means a warrant to apprehend all persons committing a particular offence or offences, is illegal—James Hastings, 9 B.H.C.R. 151. No general warrant for arrest should ever be issued by a Court of Justice. Every warrant should state as shortly as possible the special matter on which it proceeds. A strict adherence to the forms of warrants of arrest prescribed by the Code will tend to prevent their being granted irregularly and without inquiry as to whether the circumstances justify their issue—Punj. Cir., p. 144.

Conditional warrants:—A warrant which directs that in the event of a certain named person not leaving British India forthwith, all officers to whom the warrant is directed are to arrest that person, is invalid—Alter Kaufman, 18 Bom. 636. The proper procedure in this case would be, first to issue an order directing the person to leave British India forthwith, which should be duly served upon him; and then, in case of his refusal or neglect to comply with its terms, there should be a further order by the Governor in Council authorising his arrest and detention in jail—Ibid.

149. Requisites of a valid warrant:—

(a) It must be in writing.

(b) It must be signed; signing not by full name but by initials is a mere irregularity and does not affect the validity of the warrant or vitiate the arrest—Bankey Behary, 3 P.L.J. 493, 19 Cr.L.J. 747; Abdul Sikdar v. Mathu Singh, 5 C.W.N. 447; Janki Prasad, 8 All. 293. [In Abdul Gafur, 23 Cal. 896, it was held that the signing must be by full name. But this does not seem to be correct. See Note 143 under sec. 68.] The signing must be by pen and ink and not by stamp—Subramania Ayyar, 6 Mad. 396. The warrant must be signed by the presiding officer of the Court and not by any other Magistrate. A warrant signed not by the Magistrate who took cognizance of the case but by an Honorary Magistrate who lived in the same town, is invalid, and a person resisting or escaping from an arrest made in pursuance of such warrant does not commit an offence under sec. 353, I. P. C.—Jagpat Koeri, 2 P.L.J. 487, 18 Cr.L.J. 526, 39 I.C. 494. The Presiding Officer who alone can sign the warrant is not necessarily the officer who has taken cognizance of the offence. He must be the officer who presides in the Court at the time when the warrant comes to be signed and not necessarily the Magistrate who has presided in the Court at the time when cognizance was taken of the offence. Where a Magistrate is appointed by the Government with power to take cognizance of offences and to perform the functions of the Sub-divisional Officer while he was away from the station and signs a warrant issued by the latter, when he is on tour, he is the presiding officer within the meaning of this section and can properly sign the warrant—Kartick, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 175, 34 Cr.L.J. 297, 142 I.C. 192, 13 P.L.T. 167, 1932 Cr.C. 351, distinguishing Jagpat Koeri's case.

The fact that it had been the practice for a considerable time for warrants to be signed by the Deputy Nazir cannot make the signing of them by that officer legal when he had not been empowered legally or given any lawful authority to sign such warrants—Subbaramiah, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 206, 66 M.L.J. 408, 1934 Cr.C. 351, 39 M.L.W. 388, 1934 M.W.N. 399, 35 Cr.L.J. 782, 148 I.C. 818.

(c) It must be sealed. An unsealed warrant is void—In re James Hastings, 9 B.H.C.R. 151; Mahajan, 42 Cal. 708 19 C.W.N. 224, 16 Cr.L.J. 336, 28 I.C. 672; Alter Kaufman, 18 Bom. 636. Arrest made under such a warrant is illegal—Ibid. A person offering resistance to the execution of such a warrant commits no offence—9 Cal. 424.

(d) The person named in the warrant must be described with sufficient certainty and particularity—Alter Kaufman, 18 Bom. 636. The warrant must give particulars of the person to be arrested so as to identify him clearly. A warrant which directs the committal of 'James Hastings,' without giving any further description of him is invalid, since it may lead to the arrest of any person bearing that name—James Hastings, 9 B.H.C.R. 151. So also, a warrant containing a wrong description of the accused (e.g., giving a wrong name of his father) is invalid—Debi Sing, 28 Cal. 399.

(e) The warrant must specify the offence. Where a warrant was issued for the arrest of a person on a charge of abduction, it was held that since the act with which the accused was charged did not amount to an offence without a specific intention, the warrant must state the intention with which the offence was committed; otherwise it would be invalid—Bidhoomookhu v. Scenath, 15 W.R. 4.

(f) And lastly, the warrant must contain the name and designation of the police-officer or other person who is to execute it. If the name is left blank, the warrant is invalid—Emp. v. Gaman, 1913 P.R. 16, 18 I.C. 894, 14 Cr.L.J. 142. A warrant not addressed to a bailiff as required by Form 154 of Schedule V of this Code, or to any other person, is not valid—Mahammad Balsh, 1904 P.R. 16.

Language of warrant—A warrant should be written in the language of the District from which it is issued. If sent to another District or Province where a different language is in ordinary use, it should be invariably accompanied by a translation—Cal. G. R. and C. O., p. 3; Bom. H. C. Cr. Cir., p. 10.

Warrant by telegram—A Court should not issue a judicial order or communicate the purport of a warrant or process by telegram—N. W. P. Reg. and Ord., p. 71.

150. 'Shall remain in force'—When the law has not fixed any period limiting the duration of a warrant, the presumption is that it remains valid until it is executed—Alloomiya, 28 Bom. 129.

A warrant on which there is an endorsement for bail to be taken for the appearance of the accused on a particular date, does not lapse on the expiry of that date; after that date, only the direction to take bail lapses, but the warrant continues in force until it is cancelled by the Court which issued it, or until it is executed—Raushan Singh, 13 C.W.N. 1091, 10 Cr.L.J. 479, 4 I.C. 31.

A warrant of arrest does not become invalid on the expiry of the date fixed for return of the warrant, but remains in force until it is cancelled by the Court or is executed. Therefore, an arrest made after expiry of the date fixed is not illegal—Binda Ahir, 7 Pat. 478, 29 Cr.L.J. 1007 (1008), 112 I.C. 223, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 466.

151. Cancellation of warrant—Apparently under sec. 75 (2), Cr. P. C., a warrant can only be cancelled by the Court issuing it—Linton v. Emp., 28 Cr.L.J. 326 (327), 100 I.C. 710, 28 P.L.R. 103, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 744. A Magistrate has discretion, on sufficient cause shown, to cancel a warrant and issue summons instead—Janat, 1 S.L.R. 69, 8 Cr.L.J. 187; Prem Koer v. Mai Sham Nath, 1908 P.W. 20.

Where a warrant is cancelled, it is at an end and cannot be re-issued. Even where a subordinate Magistrate issued warrants for the apprehension of some accused persons for trial and afterwards cancelled the warrants, the District Magistrate had no authority to direct the re-issue of the warrants against the accused—Guru Charan, 1 C.W.N. 650.

A warrant is an order addressed to a certain person directing him to arrest the accused and to produce the accused before the Court. The warrant may have a further provision for admitting the accused to bail. But in each case the warrant is an order directed to someone to arrest a certain accused and bring him before the Court, and the person to whom it is addressed may if he is a Magistrate or police officer endorse the warrant to some one serving under him. When a Magistrate writes to the person to whom the order is addressed asking him to return the warrants unexecuted then it is clear that the warrants were cancelled. Sec. 75 (2), Cr. P. C., does not require that there should be any formal order on the record of cancellation—Jagdish Narain v. Emp., A.I.R. 1910 All. 178 (179), 1940 A.L.J. 104.

76. (1) Any Court issuing a warrant for the arrest of any person may in its discretion direct by endorsement on the warrant that, if such person executes a bond with sufficient sureties for his attendance before the Court at a specified time and thereafter until otherwise directed by the Court, the officer to whom the warrant is directed shall take such security and shall release such person from custody.

Court may direct security to be taken.

(2) The endorsement shall state—

(a) the number of sureties;

(b) the amount in which they and the person for whose arrest the warrant is issued, are to be respectively bound; and

(c) the time at which he is to attend before the Court.

(3) Whenever security is taken under this section, the Recognizance to be officer to whom the warrant is directed shall forwarded. forward the bond to the Court.

152. Scope of section:—In the 1872 Code, there were, instead of the words “for his attendance before a Court” the words “to answer the complaint” which applied only to accused persons—Anon, 2 Weir 39. The wording has been changed, and this section now applies to witnesses as well as to accused persons.

152A. Bond:—Under sec 513, the Court or officer may allow a sum of money or G. P. Notes to be deposited in Court in lieu of executing a bond.

A Magistrate should issue a bailable warrant even in non-bailable cases, when the offence charged borders on the technical (e.g., when the head of a mutt is alleged to have committed robbery in respect of property which he admittedly claims to be his) and the accused is a man of position and respectability—Sivamulu, (1911) 1 M.W.N. 452, 12 Cr.L.J. 430, 11 I.C. 614.

153. Attendance before a Court:—The Magistrate may issue a warrant of arrest for attendance before himself or some other Court; but he has no power to issue a warrant for the arrest and production of a person, in order that he may give evidence before the Police in an investigation under Chap XIV—Jogendra, 24, Cal 320.

153A. Court-fees:—Bail bonds in criminal cases, recognizances to prosecute or give evidence and recognizances for personal appearance or otherwise are not chargeable with any court-fee. Vide sec. 19, cl (XV) of the Court-fees Act (VII of 1870). See also Schedule II, Art. 6 of the said Act which provides that bail bond or other instrument of obligation given in pursuance of an order made by a Court or Magistrate under any section of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, or the Code of Civil Procedure 1908, and not otherwise provided for by the Court-Fees Act is chargeable with a Court-fee of eight annas.

77. (1) A warrant of arrest shall ordinarily be directed to one or more police-officers, and, when Warrant to whom issued by a Presidency Magistrate, shall directed. always be so directed; but any other Court issuing such a warrant may, if its immediate execution is necessary and no police-officer is immediately available, direct it to any other person or persons; and such person or persons shall execute the same.

(2) When a warrant is directed to more officers or persons

Warrant to several than one, it may be executed by all, or by persons. any one or more of them.

154. This section merely directs that a warrant shall be ordinarily directed to one or more Police-officers, but it does not say that the name of that Police-officer should be inserted in the warrant as well as his designation. “It would be extremely difficult to carry on the Police administration of the country if every warrant had to be directed by name to a Police-officer and upon his transfer it were to become incapable of execution till the name of some other officer had been substituted in his place”—

Bankey Behary, 3 P.L.J. 493, 19 Cr.L.J. 747, 46 I.C. 523. See also A.I.R. 1918 Pat. 269, 3 Pat.L.J. 493, 5 Pat.L.W. 117. In Shankar Dayal, 25 O.C.111, 24 Cr.L.J. 14, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 224, 9 O.L.J. 667, 71 I.C. 62, it has been held, however, that a warrant which does not contain the name of the police-officer to whom it was issued and to whom authority to make the arrest was given, is irregular; but it has been conceded that the evidence of the Magistrate who signed the warrant or of the Sub-Inspector who executed it may supply the omission. See also Emp. v. Gaman, 18 I.C. 894, 14 Cr.L.J. 142, 1913 P.R. 16. The Rangoon High Court also holds that if a warrant is directed to a police thana without specifying the name of any officer in the station, it is at most a clerical error and does not invalidate the arrest if the accused has not suffered any prejudice—Ma Kin, 3 Bur.L.J. 182, 26 Cr.L.J. 845, A.I.R. 1924 Rang 383, 86 I.C. 669.

Warrant by Presidency Magistrate.—A warrant issued by a Presidency Magistrate shall always be directed to Police-officers. Where such a warrant was directed to a person other than a Police-officer, though such officer was immediately available, the High Court severely condemned the procedure—Syud Hossain, 8 W.R. 74.

Any other person.—A Magistrate may, under this section, direct a warrant to an unofficial person only when its immediate execution is necessary, and when he cannot immediately obtain the assistance of the Police—Surendra Nath Roy, 13 W.R. 27. In the absence of these conditions, a Court is not justified in entrusting a warrant to a private person (e.g., a Forest officer) for execution—Pasuvathi, 51 Mad. 873, 29 Cr.L.J. 541 (542), A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 624, 1928 M.W.N. 310.

78. (1) A District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may direct a warrant to any landholder, farmer or manager of land within his district or subdivision for the arrest of any escaped convict, proclaimed offender or person who has been accused of a non-bailable offence, and who has eluded pursuit.

(2) Such land-holder, farmer or manager shall acknowledge in writing the receipt of the warrant, and shall execute it if the person for whose arrest it was issued is in, or enters on, his land or farm, or the land under his charge.

(3) When the person against whom such warrant is issued is arrested, he shall be made over with the warrant to the nearest police-officer, who shall cause him to be taken before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, unless security is taken under section 76.

79. A warrant directed to any police-officer may also be executed by any other police-officer whose name is endorsed upon the warrant by the officer to whom it is directed or endorsed.

155. Scope:—This section speaks of a warrant "directed to a police-officer," and has no application to a warrant directed to a private person (e.g., a Forest Officer) under the latter part of sec. 77. Such person cannot endorse the warrant to anybody—Pasuvathi, 51 Mad. 873, 29 Cr.L.J. 541, 55 M.L.J. 220, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 624, 28 M.L.W. 141, 109 I.C. 365, 1928 M.W.N. 310.

Endorsement:—If a warrant directed to a police-officer is executed by another officer without endorsement (e.g., if a warrant addressed to the bailiff of the Court is executed by a naib-nazir and process-server without any endorsement by the bailiff), the execution is illegal—Ghasita, 22 Cr.L.J. 145, 3 Lah.L.J. 346, 59 I.C. 849. The endorsement should be regularly made by name to a certain person, in order to authorise him to make the arrest—Durga Tewari v. Rahman, 4 C.W.N. 85.

Moreover, the endorsement must be made by the Police-officer to whom the warrant is directed. Where a warrant was directed to a Court Sub-Inspector and the endorsement was made by the Court Head Constable, it was held to be invalid—Durga Charan, 27 Cal. 457.

Where one of the endorsements is only by initials but those initials have been identified upon the evidence, the warrant fulfils the requirements of the law. It is desirable, however, that initials should not be allowed in such a case—Abdul Sikdar v. Mathu Singh, 5 C.W.N. 447.

It is immaterial whether the authority to the other police-officer to execute the warrant is given by an endorsement on the warrant itself or by a separate piece of paper, e.g., a letter written separately and intimating that the bearer is authorised to execute the warrant. What is essential under this section is the authority in writing. If the authority is delegated and it appears that the authority is there, the requirements of this section are satisfied—Mangharam, 25 S.L.R. 117, 32 Cr.L.J. 916 (921), A.I.R. 1931 Sind 89, 1931 Cr.C. 489, 132 I.C. 465. See also Zarkhan Nurkhan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pesh. 10.

Where the endorsement on the warrant gave the name only but not the designation of the police-officer, it was held that this section required the name to be endorsed and that Form 2, Sch. V, had no bearing on endorsements under this section and would not have the effect of invalidating the arrest—Kartik, 1932 Pat. 171, 33 Cr.L.J. 706, 138 I.C. 844, 13 P.L.T. 135, 1932 Cr.C. 347.

- 'Any other Police Officer'.—A process-serving peon is not included in the term 'any other police-officer' in the section—Durga Charan, 27 Cal. 457.

156. Warrant under Special Acts:—A special warrant issued under sec. 6 of the Bombay Gambling Act, IV of 1887, cannot be executed by any other officer except the officer therein named—Mithu, 3 S.L.R. 56, 10 Cr.L.J. 3, 2 I.C. 371. Similarly, a warrant under sec. 45 of the Bengal Chowkidari Act (VI of 1870, B.C.) can be executed only by the person named therein—Sheikh Nasur, 37 Cal. 122, 14 C.W.N. 282, 5 I.C. 409, 11 Cr.L.J. 128. The Burma Gambling Act does not contain any provision for endorsement of the warrant issued under sec. 6 of that Act by the officer to whom it is issued, to another officer—Po Thuai, 12 Bur.L.T. 165, 21 Cr.L.J. 79, 54 I.C. 57.

80. The police-officer or other person executing a warrant of arrest shall notify the substance thereof to the person to be arrested, and, if so required, shall show him the warrant.

Notification of substance of warrant.

157. Notify the substance:—Where a Police-officer simply shows the warrant to the accused but does not give an opportunity of reading it, and does not notify its substance to him, the arrest so made is unlawful—Satis Chandra v. Jadunandan, 26 Cal. 748; Abdul Gafur, 23 Cal. 896. But if the Police-officer shows the warrant to the accused and gives him sufficient opportunity of reading the warrant itself, the omission on the part of the officer to explain the particulars of the warrant, does not invalidate the arrest; because, all that this section requires, is that the accused should have reasonable opportunity of knowing on what charge he is being arrested and before what Court he is to appear, so that he may take steps for arranging for his defence—Bankey Behary, 3 P.L.J. 493, 19 Cr.L.J. 747, 46 I.C. 523; Kartik, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 171, 33 Cr.L.J. 706, 138 I.C. 844, 13 P.L.T. 135, 1932 Cr.C. 347. Where a warrant provided for bail, but the constable making the arrest did not give the slightest intimation to the arrested person that bail had been allowed, nor did he ask the prisoner whether he could give the required bail, held that the arrest was illegal—Shyama Charan, 16 C.W.N. 549, 13 Cr L.J. 590 (591).

Where directly the constable arrested a woman i.e., touched her in the sense of sec. 46 (1), Cr. P. C., she began to resist and that resistance on her part and on the part of others created such a disturbance that any further communication by the police was for the moment impossible, the police acted correctly in overcoming the resistance and then in showing the warrant, which was issued for the arrest of the woman, and communicating its substance—Ramjit v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 360 (361), 173 I.C. 734, 10 RA 501, 1938 A Cr C 5, 1938 A L.R. 174, 1937 A L.J. 1334, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 17, A I.R. 1938 All. 120.

158. Show the warrant:—This implies that the arresting officer must have the warrant of arrest in his possession at the time of making the arrest, otherwise, it is illegal—Amar Nath, 5 All 318; see also Ganesh Lal, 27 All 258.

Mere showing is not sufficient. An opportunity should be given to the person to be arrested by showing him the warrant so that he might read it (26 Cal. 748) and see that the person arresting has authority—Abdul Ghafur, 23 Cal. 896; Satish Chandra v. Jadunandan, 26 Cal. 748, 3 CWN 741; Anand Lal, 10 Cal 18; Tulsiram, 13 Bom. 168; Sheikh Nasur, 37 Cal 122; Ayaz Husam, 38 All. 506 (508).

The arresting officer is to show the warrant, if so required. It is not necessary that the officer executing the warrant should in the first instance show the warrant. It is sufficient if he should apprise the person to be arrested of the contents of the warrant and show it if desired—Baroda Kanta, 25 C.W.N. 815, 23 Cr.L.J. 347; Ramjit v. Emp., supra.

A recent Calcutta case has laid down that even though the provisions of sec. 80 are not complied with (i.e., substance of warrant is not notified nor warrant shown), still the arrest is legal in this sense that the police-officer may, under sec 46 (2), use all means necessary to effect the arrest, if the person to be arrested forcibly resists the endeavour to arrest—Darbesh Ali, 56 Cal 831, 33 CWN 284 (285), 49 CLJ 264, 30 Cr L.J. 703, 116 I.C. 723, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 174

Presumption—In absence of evidence compliance with the provisions of this section will be presumed as there is a presumption that all official acts are properly performed—Zarkhan Nurkhan v Emp., A I R 1940 Pesh 10

81. The police-officer or other person executing a warrant Person arrested to be brought before Court without delay of arrest shall (subject to the provisions of section 76 as to security), without unnecessary delay, bring the person arrested before the Court before which he is required by law to produce such person.

159. Further detention:—When the arrested person is brought before the Magistrate, the Magistrate cannot lawfully commit him to prison or remand him without sufficient grounds—Surendra Nath, 13 W.R. 27. The warrant is exhausted as soon as the person arrested is brought before the Court. If the accused is to be further detained, it must be under some fresh warrant or order, such as an order of remand under sec. 244. The warrant for further detention would be one of commitment directed to some jailor or other person having authority to receive and keep the prisoner—In re W. Bourke, 13 W.R. 1, 4 Beng L.R. App. 1.

Arrest of women after child birth:—Women arrested soon after child birth should not ordinarily be removed until they are in a proper condition to travel. They should be allowed to remain under proper charge in the care of their relations or to be sent to the nearest dispensary and suffered to remain in the dispensary until the officer-in-charge certifies that they are sufficiently recovered—Bom. H. C. Cr. Civ., p. 3.

Where warrant may be executed. 82. A warrant of arrest may be executed at any place in British India.

160. Arrest outside British India:—Where the accused was arrested by a constable of the Jeypur State, and was afterwards arrested by a British Constable in the Residency of Jeypur, the arrest was held to be made outside British India—Sheu Bun, 7 Bur.L.R. 83

The arrest of a person at a Railway Station in a Native State (e.g., the Gwalior State) on a charge of an offence committed in British India is illegal. The Gwalior State has ceded to the British Government jurisdiction over the Railway lands for the administration of civil and criminal justice in connection with the Railway, and not in respect of offences not committed on these lands and having no connection with the Railway administration—Radha Kishen, 1 Lah. 406, 21 Cr.L.J. 303. So also, the grant by the Nizam to the British Government of civil and criminal jurisdiction along the line of Hyderabad State Railway, does not justify the arrest of a person on the lands of the State Railway under the warrant of a Magistrate in British India for an offence committed in a British territory and not committed in the Railway nor in any way connected with the administration of the Railway—Mahammad Yusufuddin, 25 Cal. 20 (P.C.), 24 I.A. 137.

83. (1) When a warrant is to be executed outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, such Court may, instead of directing such warrant to a police-officer, forward the same by post or otherwise to any Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a presidency-town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it is to be executed.

(2) The Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner to whom such warrant is so forwarded shall endorse his name thereon, and, if practicable, cause it to be executed in manner hereinbefore provided within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

161. Scope of the Section:—This section contemplates cases where a Magistrate in British India issues a warrant for the arrest of a person in some place in British India outside his jurisdiction. It can have no application to a case where a Magistrate in a Native State issues a warrant for the arrest of a person in British India, even if the Criminal Procedure Code has been adopted by the State authorities. Therefore a Magistrate of a Native State cannot issue a warrant directing the Police or Officials in British India to arrest a person accused of committing a crime within a Native State—Haramohan Patnaik v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 500 (502), 180 I.C. 787, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 129, 19 P.L.T. 909, 1938 P.W.N. 869, 18 Pat. 121; Tahilram Khanchand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Sind 46, 173 I.C. 322, 39 Cr.L.J. 298, 12 S.L.R. 134, 10 R.S. 203

The provisions of this section read with sec. 5 apply to a warrant issued under the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act. Therefore, a Magistrate cannot refuse to execute within his district a warrant issued by a Magistrate of another district under that Act—Chatu, 1898 P.R. 11; Kattayan, 20 Mad. 235; Muthya, 20 Mad. 457; Gouri Shankar v. Mata Prosad, 20 All. 124. That Act has been repealed.

84. (1) When a warrant directed to a police-officer is to be executed beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, Warrant directed to police-officer for execution outside jurisdiction. he shall ordinarily take it for endorsement either to a Magistrate or to a police-officer not below the rank of an officer in charge of a station, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed.

(2) Such Magistrate or police-officer shall endorse his name thereon and such endorsement shall be sufficient authority to the police-officer to whom the warrant is directed to execute the same within such limits, and the local police shall, if so required, assist such officer in executing such warrant.

(3) Whenever there is reason to believe that the delay occasioned by obtaining the endorsement of the Magistrate or police-officer within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed, will prevent such execution, the police-officer to whom it is directed may execute the same without such endorsement in any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it.

(4) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta.

85. When a warrant of arrest is executed outside the district in which it was issued, the person Procedure on arrest of person against whom warrant issued. arrested shall, unless the Court which issued the warrant is within twenty miles of the place of arrest or is nearer than the Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a presidency-town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the arrest was made, or unless security is taken under section 76, be taken before such Magistrate or Commissioner or District Superintendent.

86. (1) Such Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner shall, if the person arrested Procedure by Magistrate before whom person arrested is brought. appears to be the person intended by the Court which issued the warrant, direct his removal in custody to such Court:

Provided that, if the offence is bailable, and such person is ready and willing to give bail to the satisfaction of such Magistrate, District Superintendent or Commissioner, or a direction has been endorsed under section 76 on the warrant and such person is ready and willing to give the security required by such direction, the Magistrate, District Superintendent or Commissioner shall take such bail or security, as the case may be, and forward the bond to the Court which issued the warrant.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a police-officer from taking security under section 76.

C.—Proclamation and Attachment.

87. (1) If any Court has reason to believe (whether after taking evidence or not) that any person against whom a warrant has been issued by it has absconded or is concealing himself so that such warrant cannot be executed, such Court may publish a written proclamation requiring him to appear at a specified place and at a specified time not less than thirty days from the date of publishing such proclamation.

(2) The proclamation shall be published as follows:—

- (a) it shall be publicly read in some conspicuous place of the town or village in which such person ordinarily resides;
- (b) it shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which such person ordinarily resides or to some conspicuous place of such town or village; and
- (c) a copy thereof shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the Court-house.

(3) A statement in writing by the Court issuing the proclamation to the effect that the proclamation was duly published on a specified day shall be conclusive evidence that the requirements of this section have been complied with, and that the proclamation was published on such day.

162. Scope:—This section read with section 88 shows that even in summons-cases and against witnesses, a proclamation may be issued. But to lay a foundation for the issue of a proclamation under this section with an accompanying order for attachment under sec. 88, it is necessary strictly to comply with the provisions of law relating to the issue of a warrant, in a case where a summons is the ordinary mode of enforcing attendance—Yasin Khan, 5 N.L.R. 125, 10 Cr.L.J. 306

163. Conditions precedent to proclamation:—The processes of attachment and proclamation are not to issue whenever a warrant fails of its effect. Before issuing a proclamation, the officer sent to serve the warrant must be examined as to the measures adopted by him to serve it. If, on his evidence or in any other manner, the Magistrate is satisfied that the accused is absconding or concealing, then and then only the processes of proclamation and attachment may be issued—Bishonath, 3 W.R. 63; Po Ni, 3 L.B.R. 116; Ramkishore, 19 W.R. 12; Yasin Khan, 5 N.L.R. 125, 10 Cr.L.J. 306, 3 I.C. 575.

The previous issue of a warrant against the person whose attendance is required before the Court is a necessary condition. Therefore, if the Court has no authority or jurisdiction to issue a warrant, an order for the issue of proclamation and a subsequent order for attachment are illegal—Kanwar Singh, 15 P.R. 1893; In re Ramjibai, 14 Bom.L.R. 889, 13 Cr.L.J. 796, 17 I.C. 540.

164. Absconding:—The Magistrate must be satisfied that the accused was absconding or concealing himself for the purpose of avoiding the service of the warrant.

The mere fact that the Sub-Inspector could not find the accused is not enough under this section—Shevdyal v. Griban, 6 W.R. 73 (74) ; Ram Kishore, 19 W.R. 12 (13).

The term "abscond" does not necessarily imply change of place. Its etymological and ordinary sense is "to hide oneself", and it matters not if a person departs from his place or remains in it, if he conceals himself. In either case he is said to 'abscond'. Moreover, the term does not apply to the commencement of concealment. If a person having concealed himself before process issues, continues to do so after it is issued, he is said to abscond—Srinivasa Aiyengar, 4 Mad. 393.

To be deemed an absconder, one need not be proclaimed as such under this section. But an absent person should not be too readily assumed to be an absconder without due inquiry and notice—2 Weir 40

A man who files a petition against an order issuing the warrant and takes steps to procure the order of a superior Court that he should be allowed to remain on bail after such warrant has been issued, cannot be said to be absconding or concealing himself, and a Magistrate is not justified in proceeding under this section—Qamardin, 1922 P.L.R. 66, 23 Cr.L.J. 454, 67 I.C. 726, A.I.R. 1922 Lah 475.

165. Mode of publication:—The procedure laid down in this section for the publication of the proclamation seems to indicate that it was the intention of the Legislature that the accused person should have the means of deriving information through his friends or family, or in some other direct way, when the warrant or the direct order to attend cannot be served upon him; and that the Legislature has distinctly determined a sufficient time (30 days) to allow such indirect notice to reach him and for him to attend the Court in consequence of that notice—Ramkishore, 19 W.R. 12 (14, 15).

The provisions of sub-sec (2) as to the mode of publishing a proclamation are perfectly clear and explicit in their terms, and failure to comply with the rules will vitiate the subsequent attachment and sale—Mian Jan v. Abdul, 27 All 572 Where the provisions of clause (a) were not complied with at all, and although the provisions of clauses (b) and (c) were complied with, the proclamation did not specify a place and a time for the appearance of the absconder, held that the proclamation was not made according to law—Abdullah v. Jitu, 22 All 216 (218), 1900 A.W.N. 28 ; Abdul v. Kazim, 1904 A.W.N. 159 (cited in 27 All. 572 at p 573).

But where the proclamation was made and was read and published in the places where the absconders were most likely to hear of them, but a copy was not affixed to the Court-house, the flaw would in no way prejudice the proceedings, and would be cured by sec 537—Malli, 39 P.R. 1917, 18 Cr.L.J. 979

The most important part of the publication is the publishing of the proclamation in the accused's place of residence, and it is from the date of such publication that the 30 days should be counted—Mala Singh, 6 P.R. 1917, 17 Cr.L.J. 414 (416), 35 I.C. 974 ; Subbarayar, 19 Mad 3

Burden of Proof.—It is on the prosecution to prove that the Proclamation was made in the manner prescribed by this section—Pandya Nayak, 7 Mad. 436

166. Thirty days' time:—The period of thirty days is to be counted not from the date of issuing the proclamation, but from the 'date of publishing such proclamation' i.e. from the date of the complete publication by doing all that is required under sub-sec. (2) of this section—Ram Kishore, 19 W.R. 12 (14), 10 B.L.R. App. 14 The rules prescribed by this section with regard to time and place are imperative, and if the date fixed for the appearance of the accused is less than 30 days from the date of publishing the proclamation, it is illegal and all subsequent proceedings (attachment and sale) will also be invalid and must be quashed—Mullan Singh, 1919 P.R. 32, 21 Cr.L.J. 210, 54 I.C. 994 ; Subbarayar, 19 Mad. 3, 1 Weir 86 ; Subba Naicken, 17 M.L.J. 438, 6 Cr.L.J. 332

Where the proclamation did not comply with this section in that thirty days were not given to appear as enjoined by it, held that the failure to give this notice did not amount to more than an irregularity which can be cured by an application under sec. 537, Cr. P. C., unless the applicant had been prejudiced by the error or omission—Hans Raj, 36 Cr.L.J. 457, 153 I.C. 954, 36 P.L.R. 262, 1934 Cr.C. 1391, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 987, 16 Lah. 466.

167. Disobedience to proclamation:—An accused person against whom a proclamation has been issued must, until he has surrendered, be regarded as in contempt, and the Court will not entertain any application on his behalf. He must appear before the Magistrate and apply to him to be discharged on the ground that the warrant is informal or offer some explanation by way of purging his contempt, and at the same time application may be made for the release of his property. It will then be the duty of the Magistrate to determine judicially whether the warrant was valid, and when he has done so, the person against whom and against whose property the warrant was respectively issued may, if he be so advised, apply for the revision of the proceedings—Bisheshur, 2 N.W.P.H.C.R. 441; Womesh Chandra, 5 W.R. 71.

168. Statement in writing:—Where there is no endorsement or statement in writing made by the Court validating the proclamation, the proclamation is not made according to law, and the subsequent attachment and sale are invalid—Mian Jan v. Abdul, 27 All 572; Abdulla v. Jitu, 22 All 216. The Magistrate ought to take particular care to preserve the proclamation, and there must be records in the Court to show that the formalities were strictly observed. Where such records were lost (e.g., where neither the proclamation nor its copy was forthcoming), the High Court set aside the proclamation and attachment, and restored the property of the owner—Jina Badhar, 14 Bom.L.R. 163, 13 Cr.L.J. 293 (294), 14 I.C. 757, 1 Bom.Cr.C. 104. See also Shewdyal v. Griban, 6 W.R. 73.

The statement in writing should state clearly that the proclamation was duly published, and should also mention the date of publishing the proclamation. Where the validating order merely stated that the proclamation was duly published, but omitted to specify the date of the publication, held that it could not be considered as a conclusive evidence that the requirements of sec. 87 had been complied with—Multan Singh, 32 P.R. 1919, 21 Cr.L.J. 210, 54 I.C. 994. The provision of sec. 87, cl. (3) is only applicable when a statement in writing by the Court specifies the date on which the proclamation was published. Where this is not done, the recording of such an order will not suffice to take the place of direct evidence of publication and service of the proclamation. Raghuni, 37 Cr.L.J. 318, 160 I.C. 604, 17 P.L.T. 81, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 249, 1936 Cr.C. 273.

Some vague materials on the record merely to show that a proclamation was perhaps issued, are insufficient; so also, a vague admission by one of the accused persons that a proclamation of some undescribed sort at some unspecified time issued, has no value—Jina Badhar, supra.

88. (1) The Court issuing a proclamation under section 87 may at any time order the attachment of any property, moveable or immoveable, or both, belonging to the proclaimed person.

Attachment of property of person absconding.

(2) Such order shall authorize the attachment of any property belonging to such person within the district in which it is made; and it shall authorise the attachment of any property belonging to such person without such district when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within whose district such property is situate.

(3) If the property ordered to be attached is a debt or other moveable property, the attachment under this section shall be made—

- (a) by seizure; or
- (b) by the appointment of a receiver; or
- (c) by an order in writing prohibiting the delivery of such property to the proclaimed person or to any one on his behalf; or
- (d) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit.

(4) If the property ordered to be attached is immoveable, the attachment under this section shall, in the case of land paying revenue to the Provincial Government, be made through the Collector of the district in which the land is situate, and in all other cases—

- (e) by taking possession; or
- (f) by the appointment of a receiver; or
- (g) by an order in writing prohibiting the payment of rent or delivery of property to the proclaimed person or to any one on his behalf; or
- (h) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit.

(5) If the property ordered to be attached consists of live-stock or is of a perishable nature, the Court may, if it thinks it expedient, order immediate sale thereof, and in such case the proceeds of the sale shall abide the order of the Court.

(6) The powers, duties and liabilities of a receiver appointed under this section shall be the same as those of a receiver appointed under Chapter XXXVI of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.*

(6A) If any claim is preferred to, or objection made to the attachment of, any property attached under this section within six months from the date of such attachment, by any person other than the proclaimed person, on the ground that the claimant or objector has an interest in such property and that such interest is not liable to attachment under this section, the claim or objection shall be inquired into, and may be allowed or disallowed in whole or in part:

Provided that any claim preferred or objection made within the period allowed by this sub-section may, in the event of the death of the claimant or objector, be continued by his legal representative.

* See now Order XL of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (Act V of 1908).

(6B) Claims or objections under sub-section (6A) may be preferred or made in the Court by which the order of attachment is issued or, if the claim or objection is in respect of property attached under an order endorsed by a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2), in the Court of such Magistrate.

(6C) Every such claim or objection shall be inquired into by the Court in which it is preferred or made:

Provided that, if it is preferred or made in the Court of a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate, such Magistrate may make it over for disposal to any Magistrate of the first or second class or to any Presidency Magistrate, as the case may be, subordinate to him.

(6D) Any person whose claim or objection has been disallowed in whole or in part by an order under sub-section (6A) may, within a period of one year from the date of such order, institute a suit to establish the right which he claims in respect of the property in dispute; but subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive.

(6E) If the proclaimed person appears within the time specified in the proclamation, the Court shall make an order releasing the property from the attachment.

(7) If the proclaimed person does not appear within the time specified in the proclamation, the property under attachment shall be at the disposal of the Provincial Government; but it shall not be sold until the expiration of six months from the date of the attachment and until any claim preferred or objection made under sub-section (6A) has been disposed of under that sub-section, unless it is subject to speedy and natural decay, or the Court considers that the sale would be for the benefit of the owner, in either of which cases the Court may cause it to be sold whenever it thinks fit.

Change:—Sub-sections 6A to 6E, and the italicised words in sub-section (7) have been added by sec. 13 of the Cr. P. C., Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. The reasons are stated below in proper places.

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the word "Government" in this section by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

169. Proclamation and attachment:—Having regard to the words 'at any time,' a Magistrate may issue a simultaneous order of proclamation (under sec 87) and attachment (under this section)—Bhai Lal, 29 Cal. 417, 6 C.W.N. 680. Since the object of attachment is to enforce the appearance of the absconder, the attachment must immediately follow the proclamation, and it is unnecessary or even illegal to wait till the time specified in the proclamation has run out and then to order attachment because the proclamation has not been obeyed—Mulchand, 6 C.P.L.R. 38. It is true that a warrant under sec. 88, Cr. P. C., cannot be issued unless a proclamation has already been issued under sec. 87, Cr. P. C., but when a warrant under sec. 88 has been issued, it is to be presumed that a proclamation under sec. 87 has already been issued, the presumption of law being that the acts of a Court must be presumed to have been duly performed—Shib Charan v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 570, 11 L.R. 1938 All. 386, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 124, 1938 A Cr.C. 13, 1938 A.L.J. 137, 174 I.C. 861, 1938 A.L.R. 337, 10 R.A. 634, A.I.R. 1938 All. 220.

An attachment of property under this section is not authorised in a district other than that of the issuing Magistrate except when the order of attachment has been endorsed by the District Magistrate within whose district the property to be attached is situate—Ganu, 31 Cr.L.J. 491, 123 I.C. 397, 11 P.L.T. 402, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 347.

The action of the Police officers, who executed a warrant of attachment under this section, in digging the walls or floors to remove door-frames cannot be held to be technically correct and resistance to it does not amount to an offence under sec. 332, I. P. C.—Ramji, 31 Cr.L.J. 937, 125 I.C. 784, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 387. It is not for the Sub-Inspector of Police or Officers of a Court to demand that they shall not be bound to execute a warrant unless they are satisfied that the Court which issued the warrant was acting properly within its jurisdiction and had a legal right in the circumstances to issue the warrant. All that the officer executing a warrant has to see is that it is on the face of it a legal warrant executed by a person who has authority to issue warrants of that nature. If such a warrant is delivered to an officer of the Court, he is bound to execute it and he is certainly acting in accordance with his duty. If he is attacked while executing the warrant, the person attacking can be convicted under sec. 353, I. P. C.—Shib Charan v. Emp., supra.

There are some essential differences between an attachment by a Civil Court in execution of a money decree and an attachment contemplated by this section. When once the property under attachment is declared to be at the disposal of Government under this section, it would be open to the Government to sell the property, or to dispose of the property in any other manner, or to be itself in possession of the property. The position is at the least analogous to the case where a receiver is appointed for the possession and management of immoveable properties. The Government is, therefore, a necessary party to a suit under O 34, r 1, C. P. C., in respect of the attached property—Alagammal v. Sadasiva Padayachi, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 1017, 60 M.L.J. 72, 1930 M.W.N. 1021, 32 M.L.W. 843, 129 I.C. 47.

Where the land is attached under sec. 88, Cr. P. C., and actual possession is taken by posting a constable on the spot, a person removing standing crops from such land is guilty of an offence under sec. 379, I. P. C.—Bande Ali Sheikh, (1939) 2 Cal. 419, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 163, 41 Cr.L.J. 396, 187 I.C. 125.

This section provides a complete Code for the attachment of the property of absconding person, and claims by persons other than the absconder to the property attached but this attachment ceases when the absconder surrenders or is arrested and in any case comes to an end when the subsequent attachment under sec. 386, Cr. P. C., is effected—Suraj Narain, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 181 (182), 15 P.L.T. 57, 13 Pat. 317, 1934 Cr. C. 370, 148 I.C. 321, 35 Cr.L.J. 682.

170. Property:—According to the Madras High Court the undivided interest of a co-parcener of a joint Hindu family, or any portion thereof, can be attached under this section—Sey of State v. Rangasamy, 39 Mad. 831 (834) (F.B.), 31 M.L.J. 84, 17 Cr.L.J. 295, 35 I.C. 168 (overruling Chinnian, 2 Weir 43); Umayan, 2 Weir 43 (Footnote). The Patna High Court took a different view in Bisi Bihari, 42 I.C. 781, 18 Cr.L.J. 1037. The Lahore High Court holds that with regard to ancestral lands all that can be attached is the interest of the absconder, but on his death the lands must be released in favour of his heirs—Shah Muhammad, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 629, 7 Lah.L.J. 40, 26 Cr.L.J. 1148, 26 P.L.R. 395, 88 I.C. 460; Sadhu Singh v. Secretary of State, 18 P.R. 1908, 156 P.L.R. 1908, 19 P.W.R. 1908; Niamat Ali v. Secretary of State, 52 P.R. 1915, 30 I.C. 71.

The unascertained share of a partner in the assets of the partnership which were then in the hands of a Receiver under a winding-up order, was not attachable, such share not being "property belonging to the defendant"—Abbot v. Abbot, 5 B.L.R. 382. But the share of a judgment-debtor in partnership with another person who alone was in possession of the property at the time of attachment was liable to attachment; but the attachment must be by prohibitory order and not by actual seizure—Thama Singh v Kalidas, 5 B.L.R. 386.

171. Sub-section (6A)—Claims of third parties:—Before the addition of this sub-section by the Amendment Act of 1923, it was held in a number of cases that secs 88 and 89 did not provide for the investigation by a Magistrate of the claims of third parties whose property had been attached as the property of the accused; the remedy of the claimant was by way of a civil suit, as the question was one more for the Civil Court than for the Magistrate—Sheodihal, 6 All. 487; Kissoree Pater, 7 W.R. 35; Su We, 4 L.B.R. 109; Kandappa Goundan, 20 Mad. 88; Gaman, 8 P.R. 1911. These rulings are now rendered obsolete, and the new sub-section (6A) provides for the investigation by the Magistrate of claims and objections preferred by third parties.

The proviso to the sub-section provides for the continuance of proceedings by the legal representative of a claimant or objector who may die pending the inquiry into his claim or objection

Sub-section (6B):—"We have provided for the case of claims to property in another district from that in which the order of attachment was made"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

Sub-section (6C):—"The sub-sections which the Bill adds to section 88 imply that the Court which issues an order of attachment or endorses the same under sub-section (2) is to investigate and determine a claim or objection. We think that a limited power to transfer claims and objections for disposal to subordinate Magistrates would be useful, and we have, therefore, provided that the District Magistrate may transfer such cases to Magistrates not below the rank of second class Magistrates, and the Chief Presidency Magistrates may likewise transfer cases to Presidency Magistrates subordinate to them"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

172. Sub-section (6D):—"We have provided a period of limitation within which proceedings in a Civil Court to establish a claim which has been disallowed by a Magistrate, must be instituted"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916 Compare O. XXI, rule 63, C P. Code.

A civil suit is maintainable by the real owner against the Government and the person at whose instance the criminal proceedings were instituted, to recover possession of the property attached, with mesne profits and damages done to the property while it was at the disposal of the Government—Secretary of State v. Jagat Mohini, 28 Cal. 540.

There is nothing in this section which compels a person who claims an interest in the absconder's property to prefer his claim before the Magistrate, issuing the order of attachment. All that the section says is that if any claim is preferred to or objection made to the attachment of any property, such claim or objection shall be inquired into. The right of the aggrieved person to prefer a suit without going to the Magistrate under this section has not been taken away. It is true that it is provided that if a person claiming an interest prefers a claim before the Magistrate and that claim is negatived, he can institute a suit to establish his right in a Civil Court within one year from the date of the Magistrate's order. That however does not mean that an independent suit by that person is not maintainable. So long as the property has not been sold by Government or otherwise disposed of, and so long as Government have continued to remain in possession of the attached property, it would be open to any party claiming an interest in it to obtain a decree of a Civil Court declaring his right in the property, and if he succeeds in obtaining such a decree before Government have finally disposed of the property, the decree would be binding against Government, and the property could be disposed of subject to the rights established under such decree—Secretary of State v. Ahalyabai Narayan Kulkarni, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 321 (323), I.L.R. 1938 Bom. 451, 40 Bom.L.R. 422, 176 I.C. 453, 11 R.B. 41. Sub-section (6D) does not prevent a person from filing a suit to establish his title to attached property without first filing a claim or objection under sub-section (6A)—Recmah Ezekiel v. Province of Bengal, (1939) 2 Cal 52 (57), A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 746, 41 Cr.L.J. 134, 185 I.C. 214.

See also Note 176.

173. No revision of order passed on a claim:—It was held in Sheodihal, 6 All. 487, Kissoree Paler, 7 W.R. 35, Abdulla v. Jitu, 22 All. 216, and Kandappa Goundan, 20 Mad. 88, that since the Code did not contain any provisions for the investigation of claims of third parties to the attached property, the orders of Magistrates passed on claims of third parties were not 'judicial proceedings' and, therefore, they were not open to revision under secs. 435-439 of the Code.

Under the present law also, though the claim-proceeding held by the Magistrate would be a judicial proceeding, still the Magistrate's order in such a proceeding allowing or disallowing a claim in whole or in part under sub-section (6A) is not liable to revision, because the words "subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive" show that the order is not liable to be contested in appeal or revision.

Sub-section (6E)—Release of property:—The High Court can interfere in revision with an order passed by a Magistrate under sub-section (6E) refusing to release the property from attachment—Santa Singh, 25 Cr.L.J. 82, 76 I.C. 18 (Lah.).

174. Sub-section (7)—Property shall be at the disposal of the Provincial Government:—The mere seizure of property of an absconder by the police does not confer any right on the Government unless and until proceedings are taken under secs 87 and 88 of this Code. Therefore, where the Police seized certain property of an absconder in August 1911 but no proceedings were taken under secs. 87 and 88 until December, an attachment of the property in October 1911 made by a creditor of the absconder in a civil suit would prevail, and the refusal of the Magistrate to hand over the property in obedience to the order of the Civil Court was held to be wrong—Subramanyam, 6 L.B.R. 57, 13 Cr.L.J. 568, 15 I.C. 984. The words "shall be at the disposal of Government" do not mean that from the moment the absconder fails to appear on the date fixed, all his right, title and interest in the property immediately pass over to the Government. It has that effect only from the date of attachment. This is evident from the very words of the section, "property under attachment." In other words, while the right and power of Government to attach begin from the time for appearance specified in the proclamation, the exercise of the power must begin with the attachment. Therefore, where the property was attached by the Civil Court prior to the attachment by the Magistrate, the attachment of the Civil Court prevailed—Narayan v. Govind, 31 Bom.L.R. 345, 116 I.C. 271, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 200. But when proceedings have been taken under these sections, and the property has been at the disposal of the Government, no title can be conferred by an attachment and sale subsequently made in execution of a money decree by the Civil Court—Golam Abed v. Toolseeram, 9 Cal. 861.

When the property has been declared to be at the disposal of the Government, the title of the accused to the property is put at end to, the Government can re-grant the property (which consists of vatan lands) to some other person; such grant does not confer on the accused any right to institute a suit to recover the property from such person—Dattaji v. Narayan, 25 Bom.L.R. 228, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 198. The possession of the Government is not merely that of an attaching decree-holder nor that of an agent of the absconder; on the other hand, the Government holds the property as against the absconder. It would be open to the Government to sell the property, to dispose of it in any other manner, to be itself in possession of the property or to grant a lease thereof. The position of the Government is analogous to that of a receiver. If the property had been mortgaged by its owner before it was attached by Government, the Government (or in case the property was sold by Government, the purchaser) would be a necessary party to a suit for sale afterwards brought by the mortgagee—Alagammal.

v. Sadasiva, 60 M.L.J. 72, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 1017 (1020), 129 I.C. 47; Bindeswari Prasad v. Lal Mungari Lal, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 642, 172 I.C. 198, 10 R.P. 315, 1937 P.W.N. 762, 18 P.L.T. 814. Under the Hindu Law, if a co-parcener takes the property of another deceased co-parcener by survivorship, he takes it with the burden of maintaining the widow and unmarried daughters of the deceased co-parcener. They have got an interest in the property, attached by the Government under this section as the surviving coparcener was absconding after being charged with a criminal offence. Besides, such an interest is not liable to attachment because, although it may not be a legal charge, Government acting under this section are not in the same position as a purchaser for value. The holder of such interest for maintenance amounting as it does to a burden on the property is entitled as a matter of right to ask the Court to create a formal charge, and that being so, it cannot be attached by Government who are only concerned with confiscating the absconder's right, title and interest in the property—Secretary of State v. Ahalyabai Narayan Kulkarni, 40 Bom.L.R. 422, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 321, I.L.R. 1938 Bom. 454, 176 I.C. 453, 11 R.B. 41.

Time :—The law does not lay down any express time when the order of forfeiture should be made; if by mistake it has not been passed before the accused appears, it may be passed after he has appeared, if he does not satisfy the Court that he has not been evading justice—Bishonath, 3 W.R. 63. But it has been held in Ramkishore, 19 W.R. 12 (14), that if an order of forfeiture has not been made before the person has come in or has been brought in, it ought not to be made at all after he has appeared, because its purpose has been effected by the appearance of the accused.

Power to restore property .—Property which has been declared to be at the disposal of the Government can be restored to its owner only by the Government and not by the Court—Government of Bengal v. Mir Sarwarjan, 18 W.R. 33; even the High Court has no power to make any order with respect to that property—Government of Bengal, Petitioner, 9 L.B.R. 342.

175. Sale :—Property which is sold is the property of the accused and if the accused has before sale under this section transferred any interest in the property, that interest cannot obviously be sold—Bindeswari Prasad v. Lal Mungari Lal, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 642, 172 I.C. 198, 10 R.P. 315, 1937 P.W.N. 762, 18 P.L.T. 814. So where the land was subject to a lease, the sale should be subject to the right of the lessee to remain in possession until the expiry of the lease—Ilam Din, 9 P.R. 1908, 8 Cr.L.J. 260, 3 P.W.R. Cr. 81.

Sale of revenue-paying land should be done by the Collector and the procedure laid down in the C. P. Code for execution sale should be strictly followed. See Cal G. R. and C. O., p. 6.

See also Note 170.

176 Setting aside of sale :—Where the publication of the proclamation was not in accordance with law, and the accused applied in revision to have the sale set aside and to have the purchase-money refunded to the purchasers, held that whatever irregularities there might have been in the publication of the proclamation, when a sale has taken place and the purchasers have acquired some sort of title, it is not open to the High Court in exercising its revisional power to pass an order affecting the title of persons (purchasers) who are strangers to the legal proceedings in which the order is made—Abdulla v. Jitu, 22 All. 216. But the Punjab Chief Court held that it was within the revisional powers of that Court to set aside an attachment on the ground of illegality of the proclamation or defect in its publication—Malli, 1917 P.R. 39, 18 Cr.L.J. 979; Multan Singh, 1919 P.R. 32.

Suit to set aside sale :—The accused can institute a suit in a Civil Court for setting aside the sale and for recovery of his property from the purchaser, if it turns out that the proclamation (and the sale) was a nullity—Abdul Kazim, 1904 A.W.N. 159 (cited in 27 All. 572 at p. 574); Mia Jan v. Abdul, 27 All. 572. In Secy. of State v. Loun Karan, 5 P.L.J. 321 (327), 21 Cr.L.J. 475, 56 I.C. 507, 1 P.L.T. 451; Mullick, J., has expressed an opinion (obiter) that secs 88 and 89 debar an absconder from suing for the recovery of his property. The Lahore High Court is of opinion that the proclaimed person has no right to bring a civil suit for the restoration of the property sold on the ground of irregularity in the proclamation, attachment or sale. But he can get his remedy by invoking the revisional powers of the High Court under sec. 439, or its inherent powers to secure the ends of justice now expressly recognized by sec. 561A—Deva Singh v Fazal Dad, 10 Lah 338, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 562, 111 I.C. 508

See also Note 172.

89. If, within two years from the date of the attachment, any person whose property is or has been at the disposal of the Provincial Government under sub-section (7) of section 88, appears voluntarily or is apprehended and brought before the Court by whose order the property was attached or the Court to which such Court is subordinate, and proves to the satisfaction of such Court that he did not abscond or conceal himself for the purpose of avoiding execution of the warrant, and that he had not such notice of the proclamation as to enable him to attend within the time specified therein, such property, or, if the same has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale, or, if part only thereof has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale and the residue of the property, shall, after satisfying thereout all costs incurred in consequence of the attachment, be delivered to him.

Amendment:—The words "the Provincial Government" have been substituted for the word "Government" in this section by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937

177. Scope:—This section prescribes a remedy where there has been a good and legal publication of proclamation under sec 87, but offers no facility for the contesting of the legality of the proclamation. In the latter case the person aggrieved has his remedy by a civil suit—Adulla v. Jitu, 22 All 216 (219), 1900 A.W.N. 28; Abdul v. Karim, 1904 A.W.N. 159; Mala Singh, 6 P.R. 1917, 17 Cr.L.J. 414 (417), 35 I.C. 974. See also Hans Raj, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 987, 16 Lah. 466, 36 P.L.R. 262, 153 I.C. 954, 1931 Cr.C. 1391

But in two other cases the Punjab Chief Court has held that it cannot be said that the person aggrieved by an illegal attachment has no remedy except by a civil suit, for the Chief Court has revisional powers which it would employ to annul such an attachment—Malli, 39 P.R. 1917, 18 Cr.L.J. 979 (disapproving Mala Singh, supra); Multan Singh, 32 P.R. 1919, 21 Cr.L.J. 210, 57 P.L.R. 1919, 54 I.C. 994

178 "Two years":—An application under sec 89 not made within two years from the date of attachment is not entertainable—Mala Singh, 6 P.R. 1917, 17 Cr.L.J. 414, 35 I.C. 974. See also 26 Bom.L.R. 719.

"And proves", etc.:—The phrase "within two years" qualifies not only the word 'appears' but also the word 'proves'; therefore, it is not enough that the accused person appears within two years; it is also necessary that the proof that the accused has not been absconding should be offered within two years—In re Nilkanth, 15 Bom.L.R. 175, 14 Cr.L.J. 237, 19 I.C. 333; Buta Singh, 27 P.L.R. 823, 27 Cr.L.J. 1025 (1026), 95 I.C. 977, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 662, 8 Lah.L.J. 608.

In order that the applicant may have the property restored to him, it is necessary for him to show that he had not absconded and that he had not proper notice of the proclamation; it is not sufficient to show merely that he did not abscond—Buta Singh.

27 Cr.L.J. 1025 (1026), 27 P.L.R. 825, 96 I.C. 977, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 662, 8 Lah L.J. 608. See also Arab Gul, 38 Cr.L.J. 99, 165 I.C. 602, 9 R.Pesh. 51.

179. Restoration of property:—For the purpose of this section it is not necessary that the absconding accused should himself personally apply for the restoration of the property; the application can be made by any one on his behalf. But it is essential that the absconding accused should appear and prove the facts required, viz., that he did not abscond or conceal himself for the purpose of avoiding the arrest and that he had not notice of the proclamation—In re Nilkanth, 15 Bom L.R. 175, 14 Cr.L.J. 237, 19 I.C. 333.

After the sale of the property of an absconding accused, if an application by him for restoration is allowed, all that he can get is the nett sale-proceeds and not the property itself—Fazaldad, 24 Cr.L.J. 573, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 420, 73 I.C. 269.

Where land is attached regarding which no warrant has been issued, the High Court may, in the exercise of its inherent powers to rectify a grave irregularity under the provisions of sec. 530 (a) read with sec. 439, release the property from attachment, where it cannot do so under the strict provisions of sec. 89—Buta Singh, 27 P.L.R. 825, 27 Cr.L.J. 1025 (1026).

180. No civil suit:—Where the accused did not appear within two years of the attachment and the property was ordered to be sold, and there was no illegality in the proclamation and sale, no civil action could lie to set aside the sale—Bhukhooree v. Govt., 8 W.R. 207 (civil). See also Note 176

Appeal:—An order refusing restoration of property is appealable; see sec. 405.

D.—Other Rules regarding Processes.

90. A Court may, in any case in which it is empowered by this Code to issue a summons for the appearance of any person other than a juror or assessor, issue, after recording its reasons in writing, a warrant for his arrest—

(a) if, either before the issue of such summons, or after the issue of the same but before the time fixed for his appearance, the Court sees reason to believe that he had absconded or will not obey the summons; or

(b) if at such time he fails to appear and the summons is proved to have been duly served in time to admit of his appearing in accordance therewith, and no reasonable excuse is offered for such failure.

181. Scope:—This section applies to witnesses as well as to the accused. But witnesses brought up under arrest should be dealt with not as criminals but simply as persons arrested on civil process—Cal. G. R. & C. O., p. 7.

This section empowers the Court to issue a warrant only in cases in which it is empowered to issue summons, and not in a case in which it has no power to issue the latter. Therefore, where no case is found against the accused and he is discharged by a Magistrate under sec. 253, it is not in the power of the District Magistrate to issue a warrant for his arrest for a retrial, until the order of discharge is set aside and the case is taken to his own file—Kanwar Singh, 15 P.R. 1893.

182. Recording of reasons:—A Magistrate ought not to issue a warrant, either in lieu of or in addition to summons, in a summons case, unless he has previously recorded his reasons for so doing—Yasin Khan, 5 N.L.R. 125, 10 Cr.L.J. 306; Bela Singh, 1918 P.L.R. 50, 19 Cr.L.J. 443, 44 I.C. 971, 7 P.W.R. 1918 (Cr.). Where an accused person has been let out on his own bond, a warrant issued under this section without recording reasons is illegal. The recording of reasons is a necessary preliminary to the issue of warrant; and omission to do so vitiates the warrant; such omission cannot be overlooked, and cannot be cured by sec. 537—Kuruthan Ambalam, 38 Mad. 1088, 33 I.C. 308, 17 Cr.L.J. 132. In Mahar Singh, 18 A.L.J. 1149, 22 Cr.L.J. 111, 59 I.C. 415, the omission by the Magistrate to record reasons for the issue of a warrant in the first instance was held by the Allahabad High Court to be a mere irregularity and not an illegality.

The Calcutta High Court also holds that the provisions as regards the recording of reasons are merely directory and not mandatory. Therefore, in a case in which the Magistrate had materials before him sufficient to justify the issue of a warrant and to which the Magistrate did apply his judicial discretion, and the warrant was good and valid on the face of it, and the Magistrate stated in the warrant the reasons upon which he relied, the warrant was not invalid by reason of the fact that the Magistrate omitted to record separately in his order-sheet the reasons which actuated him in issuing the warrant—Govt. of Assam v. Sahebulla, 51 Cal. 1, 38 C.L.J. 77, 75 I.C. 129, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 1, 27 C.W.N. 857, 24 Cr.L.J. 881 (F.B.), (overruling Sukhewar Phukan, 38 Cal. 789). See also Maingal Singh v. Ghulam Mohammad, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 280 (282). Magistrates should record their reasons specifically in writing in the warrant (though not necessarily in the order-sheet) before issuing the warrant, and should not be satisfied with merely signing their names to warrants in the form given in the schedule—51 Cal. 1 (at p. 21).

183. Issue of warrant in the first instance—Grounds:—In the absence of special grounds mentioned in this section, the Court ought to issue a summons—Yasin, 5 N.L.R. 125, 10 Cr.L.J. 306; Po Ni, 3 L.B.R. 116. Great care should be taken that a warrant which implies personal arrest and restraint never goes forth when a summons to attend would be sufficient for the ends of justice, and any attempt to coerce or restrain a party who has been summoned only should be checked and punished—Punj. Cir., Chap. XLI, p. 144.

A warrant cannot be issued to enforce the attendance of a witness unless the Magistrate is first satisfied that the witness will disobey or has disobeyed the summons served on him—Sutherland, 14 W.R. 20; or unless he believes that the witness will not give evidence voluntarily—In re Bourke, 13 W.R. 1; or unless it is proved that summons has been duly served, and in spite of it the witness did not appear—Abdoor Rahman, 7 W.R. 37; Po Ni, 3 L.B.R. 116.

Where in proceedings under sec. 498, I.P.C., the complainant stated on oath that a warrant should be issued for the attendance of the abducted woman, or else the accused would remove the woman from their house, held that the Magistrate was justified in issuing a warrant for the arrest of the woman—Mahar Singh, 18 A.L.J. 1149, 22 Cr.L.J. 111, 59 I.C. 415.

It is true that a summons should ordinarily issue in the first instance to a person who is alleged to have committed an offence under sec. 323 or an offence under sec. 426 I.P.C., but under sec. 90, Cr. P.C., if the Court finds it necessary in some circumstances to issue a warrant, it may do so—Lachhmi Narain v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 283, 179 I.C. 899, A.I.R. 1939 All. 156, 1938 A.L.J. 1229, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 63.

184. Clause (b):—Proof of service of summons:—A warrant ought not to issue unless due service of summons is proved. But a report by the station-writer that he served the summons is no evidence of service of summons under clause (b) of this section—Po Ni, 3 L.B.R. 116.

Bail:—A Magistrate is competent to admit to bail a recalcitrant witness arrested under this section—H. C. Proceedings, 2 Weir 39.

There is nothing in this section which says that a warrant issued under it must be accompanied by a direction under sec. 76, Cr. P.C. Whether such a direction is given or not is entirely in the discretion of the Court. There is nothing in the Code anywhere which says that a warrant issued under this section to a person who is charged with a bailable offence must contain an endorsement under sec. 76—Lachmi Narain v. Emp, 40 Cr.L.J. 283, 179 I.C. 899, A.I.R. 1939 All. 156, 1938 A.L.J. 1229, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 63.

91. When any person, for whose appearance or arrest the officer presiding in any Court is empowered to issue a summons or warrant, is present in such Court, such officer may require such person to execute a bond, with or without sureties for his appearance in such Court.

Power to take bond for appearance.

185. Scope:—This section is only applicable to persons who are present in Court and cannot authorise the Magistrates to go to the houses of persons and compel them to execute bonds for appearance in Court—Ajodhya Prasad v. Municipal Committee, Khurai, 37 Cr.L.J. 837, 163 I.C. 413, 18 N.L.J. 320, 9 R.N. 1.

Bond by Mukhtar:—A bond by a mukhtar by which he undertook to produce a witness when called upon was held to be sufficient, although no security for appearance had been taken from the witness herself—Kazim Husain—1901 A.W.N. 35

Power to lock up:—Even though a Magistrate may suspect that the witness who is present may in future be kept out of the way by the accused, still it will not justify the Magistrate in arresting the witness and placing her in lock-up—Ibid.

92. When any person who is bound by any bond taken under this Code to appear before a Court, does not so appear, the officer presiding in such Court may issue a warrant directing that such person be arrested and produced before him.

Arrest on breach of bond for appearance.

186. Scope:—Section 92 has reference to the case of a person who is bound by a bond to appear in Court. It provides for a warrant only in case the person does not appear at the time when he is bound by the bond to appear; but it does not apply to a case where prior to the time for appearance, arrest by warrant is sought to be effected. Such a case falls under sec. 90—Karuthan Ambalam, 38 Mad. 1088, 17 Cr.L.J. 132, 33 I.C. 308.

93. The provisions contained in this Chapter relating to a summons and warrant, and their issue, service and execution, shall, so far as may be, apply to every summons and every warrant of arrest issued under this Code.

Provisions of this Chapter generally applicable to summonses and warrants of arrest.

CHAPTER VII.

OF PROCESSES TO COMPEL THE PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENT AND OTHER MOVEABLE PROPERTY AND FOR THE DISCOVERY OF PERSONS WRONGFULLY CONFINED.

A.—Summons to produce.

94. (1) Whenever any Court, or in any place beyond the limits of the towns of Calcutta and Bombay, ^{Summons to produce document or other thing.} any officer in charge of a police-station, considers that the production of any document or other thing is necessary or desirable for the purposes of any investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code by or before such Court or officer, such Court may issue a summons, or such officer a written order, to the person in whose possession or power such document or thing is believed to be, requiring him to attend and produce it, or to produce it, at the time and place stated in the summons or order.

(2) Any person required under this section merely to produce a document or other thing shall be deemed to have complied with the requisition if he causes such document or thing to be produced instead of attending personally to produce the same.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, sections 123 and 124, or to apply to a letter, postcard, telegram or other document or any parcel or thing in the custody of the Postal or Telegraph authorities.

187. Scope:—No doubt the language of this section is very wide. If it were to be taken quite literally, it might appear that anything whatever which is capable of being produced, i.e., anything tangible and moveable, might be ordered to be produced if the Court chose to consider its production necessary or desirable for the purposes of any proceeding before it. But no such absolute discretion can be contemplated. The Court's discretion must be exercised judicially. Anything which may reasonably be regarded as forming part of the evidence in the case may, of course, be ordered to be produced, and that is the primary object of these provisions. Some things not necessary for evidentiary purposes may also come within them if there is any direct connexion between the thing and the subject-matter of the proceeding, for instance, if the thing forms part of the proceeds of an offence. There is nothing to prevent an order being made under this section for the production of a thing in anticipation of an order to be made under sec. 517, Cr. P. C., at the conclusion of the trial, and there may be cases in which it is very proper to make such an order. But before doing so, the Court obviously ought to consider the nature of the order which it will be in a position to make under sec. 517, Cr. P. C. It would be futile to order the production of a thing, not required as evidence for the purposes of the inquiry or trial itself, if the only order which the Court can make with respect to it will be that it should be returned to the person producing it.—In re Lloyds Bank Ltd., A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 74 (76), 35 Bom.L.R. 88, 35 Cr.L.J. 1028, 149 I.C. 1005, 58 Bom. 152, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 199. See also Nizam of Hyderabad v. Jacob, 19 Cal. 52 (65), where the question whether the order under this section can be made with a view to or in anticipation of a proceeding under sec. 517, Cr. P. C., was raised but not decided. It was, however, observed that a proceeding under sec. 517, Cr. P. C., was not wholly independent of, or unconnected with, the enquiry or proceeding referred to in this section.

The general sec. 94, Cr. P. C., would apply to all cases, including summons cases, and it also gives the Magistrate discretion about the production of documents—Chhotey Miyan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 250, 1936 Cr. C. 1042.

Court:—It was held in Brojendra Kishore v. Clarke, 12 C.W.N. 973, Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore, 36 Cal. 433, and In re Harilal, 22 Bom. 949 that if there were no proceedings pending before a Magistrate, he was not a 'Court' within the meaning of this section, and could not issue an order under sec. 94 or 96. But the Privy Council in the case of Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore, 39 Cal. 953 (at p. 966), 13 Cr.L.J. 693, 16 I.C. 501, 39 I.A. 163 (P.C.) has laid down that the words "Court" and "Magistrate" are convertible terms, and that Sch. V, Form VIII contemplates the issue of a search warrant before any proceedings are initiated, and in view of an inquiry to be made.

188. Document:—The word 'document' has not been defined in this Code. For its definition reference may be made to sec. 3 of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897), sec. 3 of the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) and sec. 29 of the Indian Penal Code (XLV of 1860).

This section deals with documents forming the subject of a criminal offence as also with documents which are or can be used only as evidence in support of a prosecution—In re Lakhmidas, 5 Bom.L.R. 980. The words 'documents or thing' are general and seem to cover any document, the production and inspection of which are necessary or desirable or will serve the ends of justice. When the premises to be searched are those of the accused person, the warrant issued under sec. 96 need not be only for the document or thing in respect of which an alleged offence has been committed—Municipal Committee, Jhang v. Md. Hayat, 1914 P.R. 36, 16 Cr.L.J. 225. See also 8 A.L.J. 517. The word 'thing' is specially mentioned in this section and that would not include a configuration of a wall, or the inspection of any place inside a house for purposes of investigation—Jagannath, 29 Cr.L.J. 272, 107 I.C. 688, 26 A.L.J. 410, A.I.R. 1928 All. 185. See notes under the heading "Inspection" in Note 191.

The document or thing must be clearly specified; see Prankhan, 16 C.W.N. 1078, 13 Cr.L.J. 764, 17 I.C. 76.

The Magistrate has the power to cause production, under this section of the statements made by witnesses at the enquiry—20 M.L.W. 745.

Under this section the accused can call for the original statements made by witnesses to the Inspector of Excise at his enquiry and can use them under sec. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act—Michael, 1933 M.W.N. 1270. But where in a case under sec. 34 of the C. P. Excise Act, the trial Court went fully into the question and refused to allow the production of departmental inquiry papers asked for by the accused as being not relevant and the lower Appellate Court found that the discretion was exercised judicially by the Magistrate, the High Court refused to interfere in revision—Chhotey Miyan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 250, 1936 Cr.C. 1042.

See also Note 502B, last paragraph.

189. Necessary or desirable:—Before the Magistrate can order for the production of any document, he must judicially consider whether the production of the document is necessary or relevant for the purpose of the trial—Lakhmi Das, 5 Bom.L.R. 980. The Magistrate cannot call for anything and everything from anybody and everybody. The document or thing called for must have some relation to or connection with the subject matter of the investigation or the inquiry, or throw some light on the proceeding, or some link in the chain of evidence—Nizam of Hyderabad v. Jacob, 19 Cal. 52 (64). Before a person can be punished for the non-production of a document, it is necessary to show that its production was material for the decision of the case in which the document was called for—Damri Ram, 4 P.L.W. 63, 19 Cr.L.J. 271. A document is a necessary document even though it is necessary as a mere piece of evidence only—Lakhmi Das, 5 Bom.L.R. 980. It may be that the thing called for may turn out to be wholly irrelevant to the inquiry; but so long as it is considered to be necessary or desirable for the purpose of the inquiry, the power is there—Nizam of Hyderabad v. Jacob, 19 Cal. 52 (64). Where the keys of a church were in possession of the members of the congregation who were ordered to produce them in Court with a view to give possession of the keys to the party, the Court considered entitled to them, held that it would impose an undue strain on the language of this section to hold that the order was legal—Emp. v. Akarkswami, 35 Cr.L.J. 991, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 142.

Whether the documents are necessary for the inquiry is a matter to be decided by the Magistrate at the time of issuing a summons under this section or a search warrant under sec. 96—Mahomed Jackariah v. Ahamed Mahomed, 15 Cal. 109. In a murder case, the accused has a right to a copy of the statements made by the witnesses at the inquest inquiry, and if the record of the inquest proceeding is in the Court, the Magistrate has power under this section to call for it to be produced by the Police—In re Chanlet, 20 L.W. 745, 26 Cr.L.J. 426, 85 I.C. 42.

190. Person in possession:—The person called upon to produce need not be a party to the proceedings. The Magistrate can order the production of things in the possession of the solicitor—Nizam v. Jacob, 19 Cal. 52 (64). When a complainant can, under this section, be ordered by the Court to produce documents belonging to him, his Solicitor or Attorney may also be ordered to produce them if they are in his possession, and this regardless of whether he has a lien upon them or not. In case of lien when the Court has finished with them, they must be returned to the Attorney and not to the complainant—Allen E. Ker v. Promotha, 39 C.W.N. 917, 62 Cal. 1037.

Person whether includes 'accused':—The provisions of this section apply to an accused, and it is competent for the Magistrate to issue summons to an accused to produce a document or other thing (e.g., a stolen article), the production of which might incriminate him—Khonda Reddi, 37 Mad. 112, 13 Cr.L.J. 493, 15 I.C. 493; Mahomed Jackariah v. Ahmed, 15 Cal. 109; Nizam v. Jacob, 19 Cal. 52. The Magistrate has the power of issuing a search warrant under sec. 96 to obtain documents in the possession of the accused (Bisser Missar, 41 Cal. 261, 17 C.W.N. 1209, 14 Cr.L.J. 405, 20 I.C. 229) and the issue of summons is a milder means of attaining the same end—Khonda Reddi v. Emp., 37 Mad. 112. Contra—Ishwar Chandra, 12 C.W.N. 1016, 8 Cr.L.J. 224, 8 C.L.J. 320 and Bajrang Gope, 38 Cal. 304, 13 C.L.J. 659, 15 C.W.N. 343, where it is held that this section does not refer to stolen articles or to any incriminating document or thing in the possession of an accused person. The law does not empower a Police officer to search an accused's house for anything but the specific article which has been or can be made the subject of summons or warrant to produce. A general search for stolen property is not authorized and the law cannot be got over by using such an expression as "stolen property relevant to the case"—Prankhang, 16 C.W.N. 1078, 13 Cr.L.J. 764, 17 I.C. 76.

191. Order for production:—The order for production must be made on sufficient materials. Where a complaint was made against a certain person before the Chief Presidency Magistrate who examined the complainant and directed a local investigation, and an application was made thereafter by the complainant for summons under this section, and was granted by the Court after his further examination thereon, held that there were sufficient materials on which an order under this section could properly be made and that it was properly made—T. R. Pratt, 47 Cal. 617, 24 C.W.N. 410, 21 Cr.L.J. 577.

Seizure of account books by police:—A Magistrate, on taking cognizance of a complaint under sec. 477, I. P. Code, may issue a summons under this section for the production of account books, or a search warrant under sec. 96, but is not competent to pass an order directing the police to take possession of account books forming the subject of the charge—Hari Charan v. Girisb, 38 Cal. 68 (72), 11 Cr.L.J. 525, 7 I.C. 747, 13 C.L.J. 43.

Inspection:—The jurisdiction of the Magistrate to order the production of a document or thing carries with it the jurisdiction to allow the prosecution the right of inspection. But the Magistrate can order for production in Court: he cannot allow the prosecution to inspect the entries in the account book kept by the accused in his solicitor's office. They must be first produced in Court where they can be inspected—Lakhmidas, 5 Bom.L.R. 980. Once the articles are brought before the Court in execution of the search warrant, inspection thereof may be allowed to the complainant—Mahomed Jackariah v. Ahmed, 15 Cal. 109; Ajay Krishna v. S. G. Pose, 33 C.W.N. 370, 30 Cr.L.J. 705; Muhammad Rahim, 36 Cr.L.J. 581 (588), 154 I.C. 762, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 13, 1935 Cr.C. 124. But there is no justification whatever for the suggestion that when a Magistrate makes an order for production under this section which he can do whenever he thinks such an order necessary or desirable for the purposes of the proceedings before him, he thereby commits himself to the proposition that inspection of all the documents production of which is ordered must necessarily follow. Usually inspection should only be given of particular documents shown to be relevant, and not of documents in bulk. The Legislature has endowed the Courts with wide powers of ordering production of documents necessary for the determination of matters before the Court, and for directing inspection of those documents; but it must always be borne in mind that an order directing a person to produce or give inspection of his books in a dispute to which he is not a party involves a serious inroad upon his natural rights as a citizen, and the Courts have always set their faces against anything in the nature of a roving or fishing commission to inspect documents. If the Courts were to make orders for inspection of books merely on an allegation that certain facts are true, the practice would be open to very serious abuse, and the Court might easily become something of a menace to a mercantile community. It is not the practice to allow inspection of banker's books under the Banker's Book's Evidence Act (XVIII of 1891) unless a prima facie case is made out for thinking that there is some matter on which the books of the Bank are bound to be relevant—Central Bank of India v. Shamdasani, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 33, 39 Bom.L.R. 1187, I.L.R. 1938 Bom. 31. Section 5 of the Banker's Book's Evidence Act does not prevent the police from inspection of the books of the Bank even without the order of a Court—A. F. G. Price v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 160, 17 Lah. 593, 38 P.L.R. 1042, 167 I.C. 555, 38 Cr.L.J. 435.

See also Note 199.

Putting it in evidence:—On production of a document, the accused has no right to insist upon the prosecution putting it in evidence. The prosecution is entitled to determine whether it is to be put in evidence or not—Mahomed Jackariah v. Ahmed, 15 Cal. 109; Lakhmi Das, 5 Bom.L.R. 980.

Security for production:—Where a Magistrate thinks that there are articles in a person's possession, the production of which is necessary, he can issue a summons under this section or a search-warrant under sec. 96; there is no section to enable him to demand security from the person for the production of the articles when required, instead of issuing a summons under sec. 91 or a warrant under sec. 96—Purna Chandra v. Sashi Bhushan, 7 C.W.N. 522. But after a warrant has been issued against a person for search of certain articles in his premises, if such person offers an undertaking to produce the articles before the Court whenever required, the Magistrate may stay execution of the warrant conditionally on the execution of the bond by such person for production of the articles in Court whenever called upon—Kishori Mohan v. Hari Das, 47 Cal. 164, 21 Cr.L.J. 391.

Lien:—The mere fact that the person in possession of the articles has a lien over them, does not affect the power of the Magistrate to order their production—Nizam of Hyderabad v. Jacob, 19 Cal. 52 (61); Allen E. Ker v. Promotho, 39 C.W.N. 917, 37 Cr.L.J. 825, 163 I.C. 224, 62 Cal. 1037.

Application when can be made:—Under this section any party to an inquiry, trial or other proceeding under the Code may at any stage apply to the Court to call for the production of a document or other thing and is entitled to its production if he satisfies the Court that such production is necessary or desirable for the purposes of such inquiry, trial or other proceeding. Under sec. 257, Cr. P. C., an accused person is entitled at the particular stage of his trial specified in the section to apply to the Court to call for the production of any document or thing, and the Court shall cause such production unless it considers that application should be refused on the ground that it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice. Sections 257 and 94, Cr. P. C., are not antagonistic; they are inter-dependent—Muhammad Rahim, 36 Cr.L.J. 581 (587), 154 I.C. 762, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 13, 29 S.L.R. 92, 1935 Cr.C. 124 (F.B.).

191A. Sub-section (3):—Under this section a Court has power, if it considers that the production of any document is necessary, to issue a summons or a written order to the person in whose possession or power such document is, to produce it at the time and place stated. In terms the section would apply to a person who is absent at the time and who is called upon to attend the Court and produce the document in his possession. It is significant that sub-section 3, which contains an exception only, exempts documents which are protected under secs. 123 and 124, Evidence Act, i.e., documents relating to affairs of State and official communications, and not sec. 126, Evidence Act, which applies to professional communications made to legal advisers. Thus, in a criminal case, even the protection under sec. 126 cannot be availed of. The omission to comply with the formality of getting a summons issued, when the person is actually present in the Court room, is a trivial irregularity. The Court has inherent jurisdiction to call upon a person present in the Court room to produce a document which is in his possession at the time. When he is not present in the Court room, a summons has to be issued; but even that is not absolutely necessary, for if the Court is of the opinion that the document may not be produced, a search warrant may be issued instead of a summons—Ganga Ram v. Habib Ullah, A.I.R. 1936 All. 212 (214, 215), 1935 A.W.R. 1152, 1935 A.L.J. 1176, 1935 All.L.R. 1140, 159 I.C. 524, 37 Cr.L.J. 113, 1936 Cr.C. 233, 58 All. 364.

This sub-section does not exempt documents protected under sec. 126, Evidence Act, and the production of such documents is incumbent under sec. 162, Evidence Act, notwithstanding any objection which there may be to the production or admissibility. The validity of the objection has to be decided by the Court after production and the dismissal of the application for issue of summons for production is unsustainable—Public Prosecutor, Madras v. M. S. Menoki, A.I.R. 1939 Mad 914, 1939 M.Cr.C. 125, 50 M.L.W. 428, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 634, 1939 M.W.N. 1127, 41 Cr.L.J. 186, 185 I.C. 419.

Revision:—The High Court has power to interfere in revision with the Magistrate's order for production of a document or thing, or the Magistrate's order refusing to direct the production, in any case where he has passed such order of production in an improper manner or on improper grounds, or has improperly refused to pass such order—Nizam v. Jacob, 19 Cal. 52 (60). See also Chhotey Miyan v. Emp., in Note 188.

Punishment:—Omission to produce the document or thing is punishable under sec. 175, I.P.C. See 5 I.C. 17, 11 Cr.L.J. 20 and 19 Cr.L.J. 217, 43 I.C. 793 in this connection.

95. (1) If any document, parcel or thing in such custody is, in the opinion of any District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate, High Court or Court of Session, wanted for the purpose of any investigation, inquiry, trial, or other proceeding under this Code, such Magistrate or Court may require the Postal or Telegraph authorities, as the case may be, to deliver such document, parcel or thing to such person as such Magistrate or Court directs.

(2) If any such document, parcel or thing is, in the opinion of any other Magistrate or of any Commissioner of Police or District Superintendent of Police, wanted for any such purpose, inspection. But the Magistrate can order for production in Court: he cannot allow the prosecution to inspect the entries in the account book kept by the accused in his solicitor's office. They must be first produced in Court where they can be inspected—Lakshmidas, 5 Bom.L.R. 980. Once the articles are brought before the Court in execution of the search warrant, inspection thereof may be allowed to the complainant—Mahomed Jackariah v. Ahmed, 15 Cal. 109; Ajay Krishna v. S. G. Bose, 33 C.W.N. 370, 30 Cr.L.J. 705; Muhammad Rahim, 36 Cr.L.J. 581 (588), 154 I.C. 762, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 13, 1935 Cr.C. 124. But there is no justification whatever for the suggestion that when a Magistrate makes an order for production under this section which he can do whenever he thinks such an order necessary or desirable for the purposes of the proceedings before him, he thereby commits himself to the proposition that inspection of all the documents production of which is ordered must necessarily follow. Usually inspection should only be given of particular documents shown to be relevant, and not of documents in bulk. The Legislature has endowed the Courts with wide powers of ordering production of documents necessary for the determination of matters before the Court, and for directing inspection of those documents; but it must always be borne in mind that an order directing a person to produce or give inspection of his books in a dispute to which he is not a party involves a serious inroad upon his natural rights as a citizen, and the Courts have always set their faces against anything in the nature of a roving or fishing commission to inspect documents. If the Courts were to make orders for inspection of books merely on an allegation that certain facts are true, the practice would be open to very serious abuse, and the Court might easily become something of a menace to a mercantile community. It is not the practice to allow inspection of banker's books under the Banker's Book's Evidence Act (XVIII of 1891) unless a prima facie case is made out for thinking that there is some matter on which the books of the Bank are bound to be relevant—Central Bank of India v. Shamdasani, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 33, 39 Bom.L.R. 1187, I.L.R. 1938 Bom. 31. Section 5 of the Banker's Book's Evidence Act does not prevent the police from inspection of the books of the Bank even without the order of a Court—A. F. G. Price v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 160, 17 Lah. 593, 38 P.L.R. 1042, 167 I.C. 555, 38 Cr.L.J. 435.

See also Note 199.

Putting it in evidence :—On production of a document, the accused has no right to insist upon the prosecution putting it in evidence. The prosecution is entitled to determine whether it is to be put in evidence or not—Mahomed Jackariah v. Ahmed, 15 Cal. 109; Lakshmi Das, 5 Bom.L.R. 980.

Security for production :—Where a Magistrate thinks that there are articles in a person's possession, the production of which is necessary, he can issue a summons under this section or a search-warrant under sec. 96; there is no section to enable him to demand security from the person for the production of the articles when required, instead of issuing a summons under sec. 94 or a warrant under sec. 96—Purna Chandra v. Sashi Bhushan, 7 C.W.N. 522. But after a warrant has been issued against a person for search of certain articles in his premises, if such person offers an undertaking to produce the articles before the Court whenever required, the Magistrate may stay execution of the warrant conditionally on the execution of the bond by such person for production of the articles in Court whenever called upon—Kishori Mohan v. Hari Das, 47 Cal. 164, 21 Cr.L.J. 391.

Lien :—The mere fact that the person in possession of the articles has a lien over them, does not affect the power of the Magistrate to order their production—Nizam of Hyderabad v. Jacob, 19 Cal. 52 (61); Allen E. Ker v. Promotho, 39 C.W.N. 917, 37 Cr.L.J. 825, 163 I.C. 224, 62 Cal. 1037.

Application when can be made :—Under this section any party to an inquiry, trial or other proceeding under the Code may at any stage apply to the Court to call for the production of a document or other thing and is entitled to its production if he satisfies the Court that such production is necessary or desirable for the purposes of such inquiry, trial or other proceeding. Under sec. 257, Cr. P. C., an accused person say, not for the search of particular documents or things, is illegal—M. I. Mamsa v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 983 (1984), 170 I.C. 870, A.I.R. 1937 Rang 206, 10 R.Rang. 111, following V. S. M. Maidcen Brothers v. Eng. Thaung & Co., 9 L.B.R. 45, 36 I.C. 591, A.I.R. 1917 L.B.R. 31, 17 Cr.L.J. 543. Where a Magistrate issued a general search warrant without reference to any complaint and proceeded merely on suspicions as regards the nature of the petitioner's business and the assurance given by the Police that a general search was necessary, held that the procedure was unjustifiable in the circumstances and illegal—Chazi & Co., 31 Cr.L.J. 272, 121 I.C. 499, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 837. But see General Relief Association, Lahore, 33 Cr.L.J. 678, 138 I.C. 751, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 534, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 581, 33 P.L.R. 824, 1932 Cr.C. 809. An order under this section cannot be made to further a police investigation which may or may not result in an inquiry. The Magistrate is to form his own opinion upon the materials placed before him. He is not relieved from his duty by stating that he believed that the officer holding the investigation for the purposes of which the documents or things were required, had formed a correct opinion—Jagannath, 24 C.W.N. 405, 21 Cr.L.J. 573, 57 I.C. 93.

The third clause of sec 96 (1), Cr. P. C., has nothing whatsoever to do with an investigation. It does not provide for any step to be taken in aid of an investigation but it provides for something which the Magistrate may do for the purposes of serving an inquiry, trial or other proceeding under the Code. The word "investigation" is omitted in this clause. In sec 94, Cr. P. C., which provided for the issue of summons to produce a document, the words used are "investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding". It is clear therefore from this omission of the word "investigation" that the legislature did not provide for action under the third clause of sec. 96 (1) for the purposes of an investigation. A Magistrate who utilises this clause with a view to help in the investigation of an offence does something which the Code does not sanction. He cannot act under this clause unless after consideration he is satisfied that the purposes of an inquiry or trial or other proceeding will be served by a general search. He cannot issue the warrant to help investigation by the police and the Custom authorities. This clause (3) of sec 96 (1) does not empower him to do—K. Hoshide v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 82 (87), A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 97, 41 Cr.L.J. 329, 186 I.C. 486.

Record :—Although there is no express provision requiring the Magistrate to make a record or keep notes of the examination of the person on whose application he issues the search-warrant, still some record ought to be kept to enable the High Court to form an opinion as regards the materials upon which the Magistrate acted—Jagannath, supra.

194. Court :—It means Magistrate. 'Court' and 'Magistrate' are convertible terms, and it is not necessary that the Magistrate in order to issue a search warrant should sit as a Court, or that some proceeding should have been initiated before him—Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore, 39 Cal. 953 at p. 966 (P.C.), overruling Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore, 36 Cal. 433. See also Notes in paragraph 187.

195. Person :—The word 'person' includes the accused—Municipal Committee, Jhang v. Muhammad Hayat, 1914 P.R. 36, 16 Cr.L.J. 225, 27 I.C. 897. A search can be made for a stolen article or incriminating document in the possession of the accused person—Bissar Misser, 41 Cal. 261. See Note 190 under sec. 94. See also Notes given in paragraph 190.

196. Who can make the search :—The Magistrate who is competent to issue a search warrant is also competent to conduct the search himself; see sec. 105; Ganeshi, 1884 A.W.N. 213; Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore, 36 Cal. 433, on appeal, 39 Cal. 953 (P.C.).

197. Only specific articles can be searched for :—The search must be for a specific article or thing and not for stolen property generally—Bissar Misser, 41 Cal. 261, 17 C.W.N. 1209. The law does not authorise a search for anything but specified articles which have been or can be made the subject of summons or warrant to produce—Pram inspection. But the Magistrate can order for production in Court: he cannot allow the prosecution to inspect the entries in the account book kept by the accused in his solicitor's office. They must be first produced in Court where they can be inspected—Lakhmidas, 5 Bom.L.R. 980. Once the articles are brought before the Court in execution of the search warrant, inspection thereof may be allowed to the complainant—Mahomed Jackariah v. Ahmed, 15 Cal. 109; Ajay Krishna v. S. G. Pose, 33 C.W.N. 370, 30 Cr.L.J. 705; Muhammad Rahim, 36 Cr.L.J. 581 (588), 154 I.C. 762, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 13, 1935 Cr.C. 124. But there is no justification whatever for the suggestion that when a Magistrate makes an order for production under this section which he can do whenever he thinks such an order necessary or desirable for the purposes of the proceedings before him, he thereby commits himself to the proposition that inspection of all the documents production of which is ordered must necessarily follow. Section 5 of the Banker's Book's Evidence Act does not prevent the police from inspection of the books of the Bank even without the order of a Court—A. F. G. Price v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 160, 17 Lah. 593, 38 P.L.R. 1042, 167 I.C. 555, 38 Cr.L.J. 435.

Security for production :—Where a Magistrate thinks that there are articles in a person's possession, the production of which is necessary, he can issue a summons under this section or a search-warrant under sec. 96; there is no section to enable him to demand security from the person for the production of the articles when required, instead of issuing a summons under sec. 94 or a warrant under sec. 96—*Purna Chandra v. Under sec. 257, Cr. P. C., an accused person material the High Court will always interfere. It is undoubtedly the duty of Magistrates to aid to the utmost the authorities engaged in the detection and investigation of crime but such aid must be given in accordance with the provisions laid down by the law. Magistrates should also constantly bear in mind that they have an equally important duty to the public to see that no one is subjected to avoidable hardship and inconvenience and they should take no measures which would cause such hardship and inconvenience unless such measures are imperatively necessary for the purposes of the detection, prevention or punishment of crime—K. Hoshide v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 82 (88), A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 97, 41 Cr.L.J. 329, 186 I.C. 486

A Magistrate cannot issue a warrant under this section unless there is a proceeding under the Code pending before him, of which he has taken cognizance under sec. 190, Cr. P. C.—In re Harlal Buch, 22 Bom. 949. This case must be read subject to the observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Clarke v. Brojendra, 39 I.A. 163, 16 I.C. 501, 39 Cal. 953, 13 Cr.L.J. 693, 16 C.W.N. 865, 16 C.L.J. 231, 1912 M.W.N. 760, 12 M.L.T. 171, 10 A.L.J. 193, 23 M.L.J. 32, 14 Bom.L.R. 717 (P.C.). Lord Macnaghten, delivering the judgment of their Lordships, has laid down that a warrant may be issued under the third clause of sec. 96 (1) before any proceedings are initiated and "in view of an enquiry about to be made". See also Rashbehari, 35 Cal. 1076. The first two clauses of this section relate back to sec. 94, Cr. P. C., but clause (3) apparently does not. It is independent of the provisions of sec. 94. A warrant may, therefore, be issued for the purposes of an inquiry about to be made, provided it is an inquiry under the Code, but not for the purpose of an inquiry either being made or about to be made otherwise than under the Code—In re Mahomed Tahir, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 104, 35 Cr.L.J. 1024, 149 I.C. 1021, 36 Bom.L.R. 96, 1934 Cr.C. 364; M. I. Mamsa v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 983, 170 I.C. 870, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 206, 10 R.Rang. 111. For a Magistrate to use his powers under clause (3) of sec. 96 (1), Cr. P. C., it is not necessary that there should be an inquiry, trial or other proceeding pending at the time the search warrant is issued. A Magistrate can use his powers under this clause in anticipation of such inquiry or trial—K. Hoshide v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 82 (87), A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 97, 41 Cr.L.J. 329, 186 I.C. 486

The warrant must be in writing and must contain all matters that the law requires to be stated therein—Public Prosecutor v. Subramania, 36 Cr.L.J. 799, 155 I.C. 496, 1934 M.W.N. 1170, 68 M.L.J. 421, 41 M.L.W. 679. A faulty description of the premises by number or locality is not fatal, if the description is nevertheless sufficient to identify the premises named in the warrant—Emp. v. Krishna, 6 Bom.L.R. 52, 1 Cr.L.J. 5; Emp. v. Abasbhai, 50 Bom. 344, 28 Bom.L.R. 272, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 195, 27 Cr.L.J. 503, 93 I.C. 967; Emp. v. Jhunni, 2 Cr.L.J. 243, 1905 A.W.N. 105, In re P. R. Subbier, 154 I.C. 741, 36 Cr.L.J. 566, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 98, 40 M.L.W. 841, 1935 Cr.C. 151, 1935 M.W.N. 249

This section is applicable to the production of documents or things and has no application to a case where a warrant is issued on the complaint of a husband for the production of his wife who had gone to the house of her father with certain property of his—Bisu, 11 C.W.N. 836, 6 C.L.J. 127, 6 Cr.L.J. 38

The breach of a hire-purchase agreement is not a criminal matter at all. The complainant firm have their rights under the contract into which the accused entered with them, and those rights can be enforced in the ordinary way by an action in the Civil Court. The Court will not permit the use of the processes of the Criminal Court in order to enforce a purely civil right to get possession of the bus—Hrishikesh Ghosh v. R. P. Michael, 67 C.L.J. 569

Conditions precedent—Duty of Magistrate:—

(a) Before issuing the search warrant the Magistrate must have before him some information or evidence that the document is necessary or desirable for the purpose of inquiry before him—Moiden Brothers v. Eng. Thang, 9 L.B.R. 45, 10 Bur.L.T.

(b) The Court issuing the search warrant must have reason to believe the person against whom the search warrant is issued, is not likely to . . .

document or thing in his possession in pursuance of a mere summons or order under sec. 94 or a requisition under sec. 95 (1)—In re Manekji Sorabji, 5 Bom L.R. 1032. The issue of a search-warrant is a judicial act, and it is the duty of the Magistrate before issuing such warrant to satisfy himself by inquiry that summons may not have the desired effect. Where, without such inquiry, the Magistrate issued a search warrant on the mere application of the complainant, the order was ultra vires—Iyavoo Chetty v. Jehangir, 1917 M.W.N. 494, 6 L.W. 287, 44 I.C. 661, 18 Cr.L.J. 837; Piyare Lal v. Thakur Dat, 17 Cr.L.J. 60 (61), 12 P.W.R. 1916, 32 I.C. 652; Clarke v. Brojendra, 39 Cal 953 (967) (P.C.).

(c) A search warrant ought to be issued only after judicial inquiry and on proper materials—Mahomed Jackariah v. Ahmed, 15 Cal. 109; In re Harilal, 22 Bom 949; Rash Behary, 12 C.W.N. 1075, 35 Cal. 1076; Clarke v. Brojendra, 36 Cal. 433 (476), 13 C.W.N. 458; Lakmidas, 5 Bom.L.R. 980 (982). The application on which the search warrant is issued should disclose the offences committed by the accused, but it is not necessary that definite particulars of the offences should be given or that sections of the Penal Code under which the said offences would come should be mentioned. Once the Magistrate takes cognizance of the offence he is quite within his powers to issue search warrants—Ajoy Krishna v. S. G. Bose, 33 C.W.N. 369 (370), 30 Cr.L.J. 705, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 176, 49 C.L.J. 164, 116 I.C. 721. Before ordering a search, the Magistrate would have to take cognizance of the offence by examining the complainant—Ibid. Of course, it is not obligatory on a Magistrate to wait until a preliminary inquiry is held and all the witnesses for the prosecution are examined and cross-examined; the Magistrate is entitled to act upon information which he considers credible, provided that there is a complaint before him and the complainant is examined by him on oath or solemn affirmation—Mahant of Tirupati, 13 Mad. 18; Sinagurunatha Pillai, 1910 M.W.N. 818, 8 M.L.T. 416, 11 Cr.L.J. 535, 7 I.C. 895. If a complaint is laid before a Magistrate, a search-warrant issued on the complaint without examining the complainant is irregular. If the Magistrate is about to issue a search-warrant on the strength of information as distinguished from a complaint, the Court should, if feasible, examine the informant on oath, and if evidence cannot be taken on oath, the Court should act with a due appreciation of the fact that it is taking upon itself the responsibility of issuing, upon the basis of that information, an order of a very serious nature involving the invasion and search of a man's house—Mulchand, 8 A.L.J. 517, 12 Cr.L.J. 175, 9 I.C. 991. The statement of a counsel who is appearing for the prosecuting complainant is not information on which a Magistrate is entitled to issue a search-warrant—Mulchand, supra. A telegram received by the Police is not a good ground for issuing a search warrant—Hari Lal, 22 Bom. 919.

The provision of the law requiring the sanction of a Magistrate before the issue of a search-warrant, means that the Magistrate should apply his mind to the facts and ought not to issue a search-warrant simply because a Police-officer asks him to do so. When there is no inquiry or trial or other proceeding under the Code, a general search-warrant cannot be issued under this section. Thus, in the course of an investigation which was being made by a Police-officer appointed by the Government to inquire into the dealings with the Munitions Board, a petition was presented by that officer to the Chief Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta stating that certain offences appeared to have been committed in connection with the dealings with the Munitions Board, and praying for a search-warrant against the firm of one T. R. Pratt. There was nothing in the petition to connect T. R. Pratt with those offences. It was held that there was no material before the Magistrate on which he could decide that a search-warrant should be issued—T. R. Pratt, 47 Cal. 597, 55 I.C. 473, 31 C.L.J. 315, 21 Cr.L.J. 313, 21 C.W.N. 403. The issue of a warrant for a general search or inspection can only be done under paragraph 3 of this section and that does not apply where an investigation is in progress and not an inquiry. Therefore when an investigation, and not an inquiry, is proceeding, the issue of search-warrants in general terms, that is to say, not for the search of particular documents or things, is illegal—M. I. Mamsa v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 983 (1984), 170 I.C. 870, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 206, 10 R.Rang. 111, following V. S. M. Moideen Brothers v. Eng. Thaung & Co., 9 L.B.R. 45, 36 I.C. 591, A.I.R. 1917 L.B.R. 31, 17 Cr.L.J. 543. Where a Magistrate issued a general search warrant without reference to any complaint and proceeded merely on suspicions as regards the nature of the petitioner's business and the assurance given by the Police that a general search was necessary, held that the procedure was unjustifiable in the circumstances and illegal—Chazi & Co., 31 Cr.L.J. 272, 121 I.C. 499, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 837. But see General Relief Association, Lahore, 33 Cr.L.J. 678, 138 I.C. 751, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 534, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 581, 33 P.L.R. 824, 1932 Cr.C. 809. An order under this section cannot be made to further a police investigation which may or may not result in an inquiry. The Magistrate is to form his own opinion upon the materials placed before him. He is not relieved from his duty by stating that he believed that the officer holding the investigation for the purposes of which the documents or things were required, had formed a correct opinion—Jagannath, 24 C.W.N. 405, 21 Cr.L.J. 573, 57 I.C. 93.

The third clause of sec 96 (1), Cr P C, has nothing whatsoever to do with an investigation. It does not provide for any step to be taken in aid of an investigation but it provides for something which the Magistrate may do for the purposes of serving an inquiry, trial or other proceeding under the Code. The word "investigation" is omitted in this clause. In sec 94, Cr P C., which provided for the issue of summons to produce a document, the words used are "investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding". It is clear therefore from this omission of the word "investigation" that the legislature did not provide for action under the third clause of sec 96 (1) for the purposes of an investigation. A Magistrate who utilises this clause with a view to help in the investigation of an offence does something which the Code does not sanction. He cannot act under this clause unless after consideration he is satisfied that the purposes of an inquiry or trial or other proceeding will be served by a general search. He cannot issue the warrant to help investigation by the police and the Custom authorities. This clause (3) of sec 96 (1) does not empower him to do—K. Hoshide v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 82 (87), A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 97, 41 Cr.L.J. 329, 186 I.C. 486.

Record.—Although there is no express provision requiring the Magistrate to make a record or keep notes of the examination of the person on whose application he issues the search-warrant, still some record ought to be kept to enable the High Court to form an opinion as regards the materials upon which the Magistrate acted—Jagannath, supra.

194. Court:—It means Magistrate. 'Court' and 'Magistrate' are convertible terms, and it is not necessary that the Magistrate in order to issue a search warrant should sit as a Court, or that some proceeding should have been initiated before him—Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore, 39 Cal. 953 at p. 966 (P.C.), overruling Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore, 36 Cal. 433. See also Notes in paragraph 187.

195. Person:—The word 'person' includes the accused—Municipal Committee, Jhang v. Muhammad Hayat, 1914 P.R. 36, 16 Cr.L.J. 225, 27 I.C. 897. A search can be made for a stolen article or incriminating document in the possession of the accused person—Bissar Misser, 41 Cal. 261. See Note 190 under sec 94. See also Notes given in paragraph 190.

196. Who can make the search:—The Magistrate who is competent to issue a search warrant is also competent to conduct the search himself; see sec. 105; Ganeshi, 1884 A.W.N. 213; Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore, 36 Cal. 433, on appeal, 39 Cal. 953 (P.C.).

197. Only specific articles can be searched for:—The search must be for a specific article or thing and not for stolen property generally—Bissar Misser, 41 Cal. 261, 17 C.W.N. 1209. The law does not authorise a search for anything but specified articles which have been or can be made the subject of summons or warrant to produce—Pren

Khan, 16 C.W.N. 1078, 13 Cr.L.J. 764; Moideen Brothers v. Eng. Thaung, 9 L.B.R. 45, 36 I.C. 591, A.I.R. 1917 L.B.R. 31, 17 Cr.L.J. 543; M. I. Mansa v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 983 (1984), 170 I.C. 870, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 206, 10 R.Rang. 111, quoted in Note 193.

A search ought not to be conducted for fishing out evidence. The section contemplates the production of a specified or distinct thing which may be deemed essential for the conduct of the inquiry and the conviction of the accused, and for that purpose a specified house or place may be searched. It does not empower police officers or other underlings to make harassing domiciliary visits to inquire into the private concerns of individuals, and to seize any papers under the bare chance of finding something tending to conviction—Syad Hossain, 8 W.R. 74; Moideen Brothers v. Eng. Thaung, 9 L.B.R. 45, 17 Cr.L.J. 543, 36 I.C. 591. Therefore, where a Magistrate issued a search warrant for the search and seizure of all letter-books, letters, bills and books of account in a man's house for the purpose of inquiry as to whether he had used or sold articles with a counterfeit trade mark, it was held that the issue of such a search warrant was a gross perversion of the law—Moideen Brothers v. Eng. Thaung, 9 L.B.R. 45; Piyare Lal v. Thakur Dal, 17 Cr.L.J. 60 (61); 12 P.W.R. 1916. See also Notes given above in paragraph 190.

198. Extent of search:—In taking action under this section, the Court is authorised to go as far as is physically possible in the search. The accused can, perhaps, defeat the Court by concealing or destroying the document or by having it concealed or destroyed, taking, of course, the consequences of such action, just as the accused in the dock can, when questioned under sec. 312, thwart the Court in its search for truth by answering falsely or refusing to answer. But the mere fact that the accused can so defeat or thwart the Court, is no reason for holding that the Court is debarred from going as far as the section specifically allows—Municipal Committee, Jhang v. Muhammad Hayat, 1914 P.R. 36, 16 Cr.L.J. 225. The Magistrate has power to issue a search warrant for the production of copies of the infringing books, proofs, plates, printed and set-up matters, together with letters and orders with reference to the book, for the purpose of making an order under sec. 10 of the Copyright Act—Kishori Mohan v. Hari Das, 47 Cal. 164, 21 Cr.L.J. 391.

199. Miscellaneous:—Taking possession—Power to search given by this section includes also the power to take possession of the document or thing—Mahomed Jackariah v. Ahmed Mahomed, 15 Cal. 109; In re Bhanji, Ratanlal 677.

Inspection:—When documents and other things seized upon the premises of an accused by virtue of a search warrant are brought before the Court, the Magistrate would have the power to allow the prosecution an inspection thereof. They stand, when they are brought to the Court, precisely in the same position as documents or things found upon the person of a prisoner at the time of his arrest—Mahomed Jackariah v. Ahmed, 15 Cal. 109; Ajoy Krishna v. S. G. Bose, 33 C.W.N. 369 (370), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 176, 49 C.L.J. 164, 116 I.C. 721, 30 Cr.L.J. 705; Lakshmi Das, 5 Bom.L.R. 980. The word "inspect" must contemplate a step to be taken after the seizure of the documents or things concerned has been effected. In the context in which it occurs it implies a capacity to scrutinize the materials seized for the purposes of an inquiry, trial or other proceedings under the Code. There are no words which limit scrutiny to the purposes of a trial already launched. Indeed when documents or things are involved, the effective prosecution of a criminal trial would generally be impossible unless the prosecution were permitted to examine the documents or things at a very early stage, and it is only reasonable to assume that the legislature was alive to such a consideration—K. Hoshide v. Emp., 41 C.W.N. 82 (92), A.I.R. 1910 Cal. 97, 41 Cr.L.J. 329, 185 I.C. 485, but he is not entitled to examine it all; e.g., in case of account books, the Court should restrict the examination to the particular book or portions of the books relating to the subject matter under inquiry or trial—Mahomed Jackariah v. Ahmed, 15 Cal. 109. See also Note 191.

Seizure without search warrant:—An order of the Magistrate to seize certain account books without issuing a summons under sec. 94 or warrant under this section is illegal—Hari Charan v. Girish, 38 Cal. 68

Search warrant when to be executed :—A search warrant should be executed between sunrise and sunset. If for special reason it is executed between sunset and sunrise, such reasons must be reported to the D. S. P. for the information of the Magistrate—Bengal Police Manual, 2nd Ed., p. 402

Issue of search warrant must be prompt —Where in a case of criminal trespass and theft, the complainant at the time of applying for process prayed for the issue of a search warrant, but the Magistrate after repeated applications made an order for the issue of warrant more than three weeks after, it was held that although the procedure was not contrary to the actual letter of secs 96 and 98, still it was so dilatory that it could only tend to defeat the very object for which such a warrant was issued—Bilas v. Ram Gopal, 22 C.W.N. 719, 19 Cr L.J. 707

Illegality of the warrant :—There is no authority for the proposition that if a search warrant is illegal, then what is found as a result of that search, cannot be put in evidence in a criminal case—Emp v. Abasbhai, 27 Cr L.J. 503, 93 I.C. 967, 28 Bom L.R. 272, A.I.R. 1926 Bom 195, 50 Bom 344; Emp v. Allahabad Khan, 19 I.C. 332, 35 All 358, 14 Cr L.J. 236, 11 A.L.J. 442 Where the requirements of the law regarding searches have been ignored, it may throw some doubt upon whether the thing which is said to have been found was actually found in the possession of the accused but it has never been held that merely because the search was faulty the thing itself cannot be used in evidence—M. I. Mamsa v. Emp, 38 Cr L.J. 983 (1985), 170 I.C. 870, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 206, 10 R.Rang. 111. When things have been illegally seized and among them there have been found documents or things which incriminate the persons in whose possession they were found, they should not be returned because the warrant was issued on a faulty basis—M. I. Mamsa v. Emp, supra, distinguishing V. S. M. Moideen Brothers v. Eng. Thaung & Co., 9 L.B.R. 45, 36 I.C. 591, A.I.R. 1917 L.B.R. 31, 17 Cr L.J. 513 and Clarke v. Brojendra, 39 Cal. 953, 16 I.C. 501, 13 Cr L.J. 693, 39 I.A. 1613, 1912 M.W.N. 760, 12 M.L.T. 171, 10 A.L.J. 193, 16 C.L.J. 231, 16 C.W.N. 865, 23 M.L.J. 32, 14 Bom L.R. 717 (P.C.) But see T. R. Pratt, 47 Cal. 597, 55 I.C. 473, 31 C.L.J. 345, 21 Cr L.J. 313, 24 C.W.N. 403 and 36 I.C. 591, 9 L.B.R. 45 Any irregularity or illegality in the search can neither vitiate the trial nor affect a conviction—Emp v. Ali Ahmad Khan, 46 All. 86, 81 I.C. 615; Rure Mal, 31 Cr L.J. 35, 120 I.C. 266, A.I.R. 1929 All 937, 1930 A.L.J. 229 See also Emp v. Sayeed Ahmed, 35 All. 575 Where the search is illegal, a person can be convicted if the evidence against him is conclusive—Emp v. Kutru, 47 All. 575

Where the warrant was illegal and was treated as a nullity the accused were not deprived of the right of private defence under section 99, I.P. Code—Biru, 11 C.W.N. 836, 6 C.L.J. 127, 6 Cr L.J. 38 But an irregularity in making the search cannot give such a right—Q. E. v. Pukot, 19 Mad. 349

A warrant which is in form one under sec. 96, Cr P.C., cannot be taken to be under sec. 98, Cr P.C., by the operation of sec. 537, Cr P.C. It does not seem possible to read sec. 537 as giving a legal effect to a defective warrant, as its highest effect is to validate a finding, sentence or order which is defective for an antecedent defect in procedure—Rash Behari, 12 C.W.N. 1075 (1079), 35 Cal. 1076, 8 Cr L.J. 235.

200. Stay of execution of warrant on security:—Where the person against whom a search warrant was issued, prays for the stay thereof and offers an undertaking not to sell copies of the infringing book but to produce them before the Court whenever required, the Magistrate has jurisdiction to stay execution of the warrant conditionally on the execution of a bond to produce the copies in Court—Kishori Mohan v. Hari Das, 47 Cal. 164, 21 Cr L.J. 391, 55 I.C. 999 (See this case cited in Note under section 94).

97. The Court may, if it thinks fit, specify in the warrant the particular place or part thereof to which only the search or inspection shall extend; and the person charged with the execution of such warrant shall then search or inspect only the place or part so specified.

98. (1) If a District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, upon information and after such enquiry as he thinks necessary, has reason to believe that any place is used for the deposit or sale of stolen property, or for the deposit or sale or manufacture of forged documents, false seals or counterfeit stamps or coin, or instruments or materials for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging, or that any forged documents, false seals or counterfeit stamps or coin, or instruments or materials used for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging are kept or deposited in any place, or, if a District Magistrate, Sub-Divisional Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate, upon information and after such inquiry as he thinks necessary, has reason to believe that any place is used for the deposit, sale, manufacture or production of any obscene object such as is referred to in section 292 of the Indian Penal Code or that any such obscene objects are kept or deposited in any place, he may by his warrant authorize any police-officer above the rank of a constable—

- (a) to enter, with such assistance as may be required, such place, and
- (b) to search the same in manner specified in the warrant, and
- (c) to take possession of any property, documents, seals, stamps or coins therein found which he reasonably suspects to be stolen, unlawfully obtained, forged, false or counterfeit, and also of any such instruments and materials or of any such obscene objects as aforesaid, and
- (d) to convey such property, documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials or such obscene objects before a Magistrate, or to guard the same on the spot until the offender is taken before a Magistrate, or otherwise to dispose thereof in some place of safety, and
- (e) to take into custody and carry before a Magistrate every person found in such place who appears to have been privy to the deposit, sale or manufacture or keeping of any such property, documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials or such obscene objects, knowing or having reasonable cause to suspect the said property to have been stolen or otherwise unlawfully obtained, or the said documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials to have been forged, falsified or counterfeited, or the said instruments or materials to have been or to be intended to be used for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging, or the said obscene objects to have been or to be intended to be sold, let to hire, distributed, publicly exhibited, circulated, imported or exported.

(2) The provisions of this section with respect to—

- (a) counterfeit coin,
- (b) coins suspected to be counterfeit, and
- (c) instruments or materials for counterfeiting coin, shall, so far as they can be made applicable, apply respectively to—

- (a) pieces of metal made in contravention of the Metal Token Act (I of 1889) or brought into British India in contravention of any notification for the time being in force under section 19 of the Sea Customs Act (VIII of 1878),
- (b) pieces of metal suspected to have been so made or to have been so brought into British India or to be intended to be issued in contravention of the former of those Acts, and
- (c) instruments or materials for making pieces of metal in contravention of that Act.

Change:—The italicised words have been added by the Obscene Publications Act (VIII of 1925).

200A. Secs. 96 and 98:—The Calcutta High Court has made a distinction between secs 96 and 98, and laid down that sec. 96 contemplates the existence of a judicial proceeding in the course of which alone the Magistrate can issue a search warrant, but that sec. 98 does not require a criminal proceeding as a condition precedent to the issue of a search warrant—Rash Behary, 35 Cal. 1076, 12 C.W.N. 1075, 8 Cr.L.J. 235. But see Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore, 39 Cal 953 (P.C.) which lays down that it is not necessary that there should be any proceeding before the issue of any search warrant. See Note 194.

201. Search without warrant:—If there is no search-warrant under this section, the search is illegal and the occupiers of the house have a legal right of private defence in resisting it—Bajrangi Gope, 38 Cal 304 (306), 15 C.W.N. 343, 9 IC. 64, 12 Cr.L.J. 8, 13 CLJ. 639. But a police-officer investigating a charge is entitled to search, without warrant, a house which he suspects to contain ; in such a case his right to search is incidental to his right to investi 43 All. 67 (68), 17 A.L.J. 1047, 20 Cr.L.J. 695.

99. When, in the execution of a search-warrant at any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued the same, any of the things for which search is made are found, such things, together with the list of the same prepared under the provisions hereinafter contained, shall be immediately taken before the Court issuing the warrant, unless such place is nearer to the Magistrate having jurisdiction therein than to such Court, in which case the list and things shall be immediately taken before such Magistrate; and, unless there be good cause to the contrary, such Magistrate shall make an order authorizing them to be taken to such Court.

Power to declare certain publications forfeited, and to issue search warrants for the same.

99A. (1) Where—

- (a) any newspaper, or book as defined in the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, or
- (b) any document, wherever printed, appears to the Provincial Government to contain any seditious matter or any matter which promotes or is intended to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects and maliciously intended to outrage such class by insulting the religion or that is to say, any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 124A or section 153A or section 295A of the Indian Penal Code, the Provincial Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, stating the grounds of its opinion, declare, every copy of the issue of the newspaper containing such matter, and every copy of such book or other document, to be forfeited to His Majesty, and thereupon any police-officer may seize the same, wherever found in British India, and any Magistrate may by warrant authorize any Police-officer not below the rank of Sub-Inspector to enter upon and search for the same in any premises where any copy of such issue or any such book or other document may be or may be reasonably suspected to be.

(2) In sub-section (1) "document" includes also any painting, drawing or photograph, or other visible representation.

Amendments:—Sections 99A to G have been added by Act XIV of 1922 (Indian Press Law Repeal and Amendment Act).

The words "or Majesty's subjects" have been added by the Cr P C (Third Amendment) Act, XXXVI of 1926. "Section 99A empowers the Local Government to search for and confiscate all copies of newspapers, books or documents which appear to contain seditious matter. There is no provision which enables similar action to be taken against publications calculated to promote feelings of hatred or enmity between different classes of His Majesty's subjects. The publication and circulation of such documents have the effect of spreading and intensifying feelings of communal bitterness and hatred, and as the law now stands, even if a prosecution is launched under section 153A of the Indian Penal Code, there is no effective power to check circulation. The experience of the last few months has emphasized the importance of amending the law so as to provide this power. The Bill is accordingly intended to bring all documents which offend against sec 153A, I. P. Code, within the scope of the power of forfeiture conferred in respect of seditious documents by sec. 99A of the Code of Criminal Procedure"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1926, Part V, p. 139).

Consequential amendments have been made in sections 99B, 99D and 99E below. Further, the words "or which is deliberately . . . that class" have been added by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1927 (XXV of 1927).

In clause (b) the words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937

202. Seditious matter:—The mere fact that a document is only an advertisement of a forthcoming book is not sufficient to protect it from forfeiture under sec. 99A, if it contains seditious matter; but in considering whether it is seditious or not, the advertisement must be considered on its merits and not in the light of the forthcoming book. The intention of an advertisement of a forthcoming book is primarily merely to further the sale of the book, and although it may be intimately connected with the book and though it may be considered desirable to forfeit all documents connected with and intimately associated with a book that has been found to be seditious, there is no provision of law either under sec. 99A, Cr P C, or under sec 124A, I P. C., to forfeit the advertisement for such reason alone—Saigal, 52 All 775, 31 Cr L J 840 (842), 1930 A.L.J 713, 1930 Cr C 625 (F B)

Sec. 153A:—In order to justify the forfeiture of a book under sec 99A on the ground that it contains matter punishable under sec 153A, I P Code, it is necessary for the Government Advocate to satisfy the Court that on the evidence produced by the prosecution a conviction could have been had under sec 153A, I P C—Lajpat Rai, 9 Lah 663, 29 P L R. 385, 29 Cr L J 899 (S B)

Intention:—The scope of sec 99A, Cr P C, is wider than that of sec 153A, I P C, because "intention" falls short of "attempt" and has in addition been made an alternative ground (Per Sulaiman, C J) When the Government acts under sec 99A and suppresses a publication, it does so in the public interest and it is not concerned with the intention of the author of the publication. The powers given to the Government by sec 99A were clearly for the purpose of enabling the Government to take steps to avoid trouble which such publication might possibly cause (Per Thom, J.). M L C Gupta, AIR 1936 All 314, 1936 A L J 165, 1936 A W R 227, 1936 All L R. 436, 1936 Cr C 480, 162 I C 507, 37 Cr L J 599, 58 All 849

Section 99A, Cr P C, shows that even if there be no intention of the author to promote and no attempt on his part to promote feelings of enmity or hatred, forfeiture can be ordered if the matter does promote such feelings of enmity or hatred. To make the section applicable, two things are necessary; (1) promotion of feelings of enmity or hatred, and (2) between different classes of the subjects. Everything done which may have a remote bearing on promoting feelings of hatred or enmity would not be an offence. There should either be the intention to promote such feelings or such feelings should be promoted as a result of such publications. Again feelings of enmity and hatred should be aroused between two classes of His Majesty's subjects, that is to say, between two sections of the people which can be classified as two groups opposed to each other. A vague indefinite and nameless body, even though given one name, may not in certain circumstances be considered as a class by itself, particularly if individuals overlap indiscriminately. But it is not necessary that classes should be so distinct and separate as to make it easy to put an individual in one class or the other—M. L

The intention of the writer has to be judged not only from the words used in certain parts of the book but from the book taken as a whole—Iswari Prasad Sharma v. K-E., 46 C.L.J. 161 (155), A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 147.

The question as to the intention of the writer must be judged primarily by the language of the book itself, though it is permissible to receive and consider external evidence either to prove or to rebut the meaning ascribed to it in the order of forfeiture. If the language is of a nature calculated to produce feelings of enmity or hatred, the writer must be presumed to intend that which his act was likely to produce—Kali Charan Sharma v. Emp., 29 Cr.L.J. 968 (970), 112 I.C. 56, 49 All. 856, A.I.R. 1927 All. 619 (F.B.).

Where the words naturally, clearly and indubitably have an intention to promote enmity between classes, it must be presumed that the writer intended the natural result of the words employed. The intention is to be collected in most cases from the internal evidence of the words themselves. It is, however, permissible to take into consideration the persons for whom it was written and the state of feeling between the two communities at the time of publication. A compilation consisting of extracts from certain sources may be seditious though the extracts considered in relation to their own proper contents may not in themselves be of a seditious nature. It does not matter that the statements in the book are supported by authority—Chamupathi v. Emp., A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 99, 1932 Cr.C. 119, 13 Lah. 152, 33 P.L.R. 431, following P. K. Chakravarti v. Emp., A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1133, 97 I.C. 738, 27 Cr.L.J. 1154, 54 Cal. 59, Bajinath Kedia, A.I.R. 1925 All. 195, 86 I.C. 55, 26 Cr.L.J. 679, 47 All. 298 and Kalicharan Sharma, A.I.R. 1927 All. 619, 49 All. 856, 29 Cr.L.J. 968, 112 I.C. 56.

99B. Any person having any interest in any newspaper, book or other document, in respect of which an order of forfeiture has been made under section 99A, may, within two months from the date of such order, apply to the High Court to set aside such order on the ground that the issue of the newspaper; or the book or other document, in respect of which the order was made, did not contain any seditious or other matter of such a nature as is referred to in sub-section (1) of section 99A.

202A When an application is made to the High Court under this section, the High Court is precluded by sec. 99D from considering any other point than the question whether in fact the matters contained in the Book were seditious or not. The High Court cannot enter into the question as to whether the Government Notification declaring all copies of the book to be forfeited, complied with the requirements of sec. 99A (e.g. whether the grounds of forfeiture were set out in the Notification)—Bajinath, 47 All. 298, 23 A.L.J. 1, 26 Cr.L.J. 679, A.I.R. 1925 All. 195, 86 I.C. 55 (F.B.).

When an application is made under sec. 99B to have an order of forfeiture set aside on the ground that the matter published does not fall within the mischief of sec. 153A, I P. Code, it is for the applicant to convince the Court that the order is a wrong order. It does not lie on the Government to establish that the order was justified by law—Kalicharan, 49 All. 856, A.I.R. 1927 All. 619, 112 I.C. 56, 29 Cr.L.J. 968 (F.B.). But in Bajinath's case the Full Bench were inclined to think that having regard to the framework of sec. 99, the onus is cast upon the Local Government, but added that the question of construction was not free from difficulty, and that the matter was not of any great practical importance. These two views were sought to be reconciled in a third Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court, where it was held that the Bench were in complete agreement with the proposition laid down in Bajinath's case that the question of onus of proof, after both the parties had been fully heard, was of little or no practical importance and considered that it was manifestly most convenient that the Government Advocate should begin and state the case in support of the Local Government's order—Saigal, A.I.R. 1930 All. 401, 1930 Cr.C. 625, 125 I.C. 470, 31 Cr.L.J. 840, 52 All. 775, 1930 A.L.J. 713 (F.B.). In a very recent case the same High Court has held that there is nothing in the framework of the section or its language which would suggest that the initial burden of proof is on the Government, and that, therefore, the Crown Counsel must open the case and support the order of the Local Government, and then have the final right of reply. On the other hand, the language clearly indicates that it is the applicant who has to make out a case in his favour—M. L. C. Gupta, A.I.R. 1936 All. 314, 1936 A.L.J. 165.

Where during the pendency of a case under sec. 153A, I P. C., the Local Government proscribed the book under sec. 99A, Cr. P. C., and the accused adopted the shorter course under sec. 99B, Cr. P. C., which permitted any person having any interest in a book, in respect of which an order of forfeiture has been made under sec. 99A, Cr. P. C., to apply to the High Court to set aside such order on the ground that the issue of the book, in respect of which the order was made, did not contain any matter which promoted, or was intended to promote, feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects and the High Court definitely held that the book contained matter which promoted, or was intended to promote, feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects, the judgment of the High Court was relevant under secs 11 and 13 of the Indian Evidence Act in the trial for the offence under sec 153A, I P. C., and the trial Court was perfectly correct in shutting out all further evidence after the order of the High Court was passed as no Court would be able to decide otherwise—Kali Charan Sharma v Emp., 28 Cr.L.J. 785, 104 I.C. 225, A.I.R. 1927 All. 654, 25 A.L.J. 846, 50 All. 157.

99C. Every such application shall be heard and determined

Hearing by Special Bench. by a Special Bench of the High Court composed of three Judges.

99D. (1) On receipt of the application, the Special Bench shall, if it is not satisfied that the issue of the newspaper, or the book or other document, in respect of which the application

Order of Special Bench setting aside forfeiture has been made, contained seditious or other matter of such a nature as is referred to in sub-section (1) of section 99A, set aside the order of forfeiture.

(2) Where there is a difference of opinion among the Judges forming the Special Bench, the decision shall be in accordance with the opinion of the majority of those Judges.

The meaning of sec. 99D is that if the High Court is left in doubt, after hearing the application, it should set aside the order (although it is contrary to the ordinary practice in an appeal in a civil suit)—Kali Charan, 49 All. 856, A.I.R. 1927 All. 7.

The intention of the writer has to be judged not only from the words used in certain parts of the book but from the book taken as a whole—Iswari Prasad Sharma v. K.-E., 46 C.L.J. 154 (155), A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 147.

The question as to the intention of the writer must be judged primarily by the language of the book itself, though it is permissible to receive and consider external evidence either to prove or to rebut the meaning ascribed to it in the order of forfeiture. If the language is of a nature calculated to produce feelings of enmity or hatred, the writer must be presumed to intend that which his act was likely to produce—Kali Charan Sharma v. Emp, 29 Cr.L.J. 968 (970), 112 I.C. 56, 49 All. 856, A.I.R. 1927 All 649 (F.B.).

Where the words naturally, clearly and indubitably have an intention to promote enmity between classes, it must be presumed that the writer intended the natural result of the words employed. The intention is to be collected in most cases from the internal evidence of the words themselves. It is, however, permissible to take into consideration the persons for whom it was written and the state of feeling between the two communities at the time of publication. A compilation consisting of extracts from certain sources may be seditious though the extracts considered in relation to their own proper contents may not in themselves be of a seditious nature. It does not matter that the statements in the book are supported by authority—Chamupathi v. Emp, A.I.R. 1932 Lah 99, 1932 Cr.C. 119, 13 Lah. 152, 33 P.L.R. 431, following P. K. Chakravarti v. Emp, A.I.R. 1926 Cal 1133, 97 I.C. 738, 27 Cr.L.J. 1154, 54 Cal. 59, Bajinath Kedia, A.I.R. 1925 All. 195, 86 I.C. 55, 26 Cr.L.J. 679, 47 All. 298 and Kalicharan Sharma, A.I.R. 1927 All 649, 49 All. 856, 29 Cr.L.J. 968, 112 I.C. 56.

99B. Any person having any interest in any newspaper, book or other document, in respect of which an order of forfeiture has been made under section 99A, may, within two months from the date of such order, apply to the High Court to set aside such order on the ground that the issue of the newspaper, or the book or other document, in respect of which the order was made, did not contain any seditious or other matter of such a nature as is referred to in sub-section (1) of section 99A.

202A When an application is made to the High Court under this section, the High Court is precluded by sec. 99D from considering any other point than the question whether in fact the matters contained in the Book were seditious or not. The High Court cannot enter into the question as to whether the Government Notification declaring all copies of the book to be forfeited, complied with the requirements of sec. 99A (e.g. whether the grounds of forfeiture were set out in the Notification)—Bajinath, 47 All. 298, 23 A.L.J. 1, 26 Cr.L.J. 679, A.I.R. 1925 All 195, 86 I.C. 55 (F.B.).

When an application is made under sec. 99B to have an order of forfeiture set aside on the ground that the matter published does not fall within the mischief of sec. 153A, I P. Code, it is for the applicant to convince the Court that the order is a wrong order. It does not lie on the Government to establish that the order was justified by law—Kalicharan, 49 All. 856, A.I.R. 1927 All. 649, 112 I.C. 56, 29 Cr.L.J. 968 (F.B.). But in Bajinath's case the Full Bench were inclined to think that having regard to the framework of sec. 99, the onus is cast upon the Local Government, but added that the question of construction was not free from difficulty, and that the matter was not of any great practical importance. These two views were sought to be reconciled in a third Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court, where it was held that the Bench were in complete agreement with the proposition laid down in Bajinath's case that the question of onus of proof, after both the parties had been fully heard, was of little or no practical importance and considered that it was manifestly most convenient that the Government Advocate should begin and state the case in support of the Local Government's order—Saigal, A.I.R. 1930 All. 401, 1930 Cr.C. 625, 125 I.C. 470, 31 Cr.L.J. 840, 52 All. 775, 1930 A.L.J. 713 (F.B.). In a very recent case the same High Court has held that there is nothing in the framework of the section or its language which would suggest that the initial burden of proof is on the Government, and that, therefore, the Crown Counsel must open the case and support the order of the Local Government, and then have the final right of reply. On the other hand, the language clearly indicates that it is the applicant who has to make out a case in his favour—M. L. C. Gupta, A.I.R. 1936 All. 314, 1936 A.L.J. 165.

Where during the pendency of a case under sec 153A, I P C., the Local Government proscribed the book under sec 99A, Cr. P. C., and the accused adopted the shorter course under sec. 99B, Cr. P. C., which permitted any person having any interest in a book, in respect of which an order of forfeiture has been made under sec. 99A, Cr. P. C., to apply to the High Court to set aside such order on the ground that the issue of the book, in respect of which the order was made, did not contain any matter which promoted, or was intended to promote, feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects and the High Court definitely held that the book contained matter which promoted, or was intended to promote, feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects, the judgment of the High Court was relevant under secs 11 and 13 of the Indian Evidence Act in the trial for the offence under sec. 153A, I P C., and the trial Court was perfectly correct in shutting out all further evidence after the order of the High Court was passed as no Court would be able to decide otherwise—Kali Charan Sharma v. Emp, 28 Cr.L.J. 785, 104 I.C. 225, A.I.R. 1927 All. 654, 25 A.L.J. 846, 50 All. 157.

99C. Every such application shall be heard and determined

Hearing by Special Bench. by a Special Bench of the High Court composed of three Judges.

99D. (1) On receipt of the application, the Special Bench

shall, if it is not satisfied that the issue of the newspaper, or the book or other document, in respect of which the application has been made, contained seditious or other matter of such a nature as is referred to in sub-section (1) of section 99A, set aside the order of forfeiture.

(2) Where there is a difference of opinion among the Judges forming the Special Bench, the decision shall be in accordance with the opinion of the majority of those Judges

202B Where the applicant is alleged to have published a series of seditious books, the whole series must be looked to, in order to determine whether the passages contained therein are seditious—Bajinath, 47 All. 298, 26 Cr.L.J. 679, 86 I.C. 55, 23 A.L.J. 1, A.I.R. 1925 All. 195. It was also decided in this case that the High Court were precluded by this section from considering any other point than the question whether in fact the matters contained in the document were seditious or not, and came within the mischief aimed at by sec. 124A, I P C., and that having regard to the framework of the section, the onus was cast upon the Local Government to prove that the publication of the document was seditious.

The meaning of sec. 99D is that if the High Court is left in doubt, after hearing the application, it should set aside the order (although it is contrary to the ordinary practice in an appeal in a civil suit)—Kali Charan, 49 All. 856, A.I.R. 1927 All.

(F.B.). Where a passage is open to two interpretations and the matter is in doubt, the High Court would not be satisfied that the matter is objectionable and must, therefore, set aside the order of forfeiture—M. L. C. Gupta, A I R. 1936 All. 314, 1936 A.L.J. 165, 1936 A.W.R. 227, 1936 All.L.R. 436, 1936 Cr.C. 480, 162 I.C. 507, 37 Cr L.J. 599, 58 All. 849. See also Saigal, A I R. 1930 All. 401, 1930 Cr.C. 625, 125 I.C. 470, 31 Cr L.J. 840, 52 All. 775, 1930 A.L.J. 713 (F.B.).

99E. On the hearing of any such application with reference to any newspaper, any copy of such newspaper may be given in evidence in aid of the proof of the nature or tendency of the words, signs or visible representations contained in such newspaper in respect of which the order of forfeiture was made.

99F. Every High Court shall, as soon as conveniently may be, frame rules to regulate the procedure in the case of such application, the amount of the costs thereof and the execution of orders passed thereon, and until such rules are framed, the practice of such Courts in proceedings other than suits and appeals shall apply, so far as may be practicable, to such applications.

Costs:—As regards costs, the practice of the High Court in proceedings other than suits and appeals, i.e., in miscellaneous civil proceedings, must be followed. According to that practice, if a seditious matter published in vernacular is filed by the applicant as an exhibit, he must cause it to be translated by a competent High Court translator. If he fails to do so, the translation may be made by the opposite party (the Local Government) and the costs incurred therefor should be paid by the person to whose action the incurring of those costs was due, i.e., by the applicant—Saigal, 52 All 775, 31 Cr L.J. 840 (843, 844), 1930 A L J. 173, 1930 Cr C. 625, 125 I.C. 470 (F.B.).

99G. No order passed or action taken under section 99A shall be called in question in any Court otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of section 99B.

C.—Discovery of Persons wrongfully confined.

100. If any Presidency Magistrate, Magistrate of the first class or Sub-divisional Magistrate has reason to believe that any person is confined under such circumstances that the confinement amounts to an offence, he may issue a search-warrant, and the person to whom such warrant is directed may search for the person so confined; and such search shall be made in accordance therewith and the person, if found, shall be immediately taken before a Magistrate, who shall make such order as in circumstances of the case seems proper.

203 Duty of Magistrate:—When a Magistrate has an application before him containing the allegations mentioned in this section, and asking him to issue a search-warrant, it is incumbent on him to satisfy himself by holding an inquiry that there is foundation for the application. He cannot act merely upon the allegation of the petitioner—Abdul Aziz, 1910 P.R. 34, 17 Cr.L.J. 491 (495). But the Patna High Court holds that the Magistrate may issue a warrant under this section merely on the application of the complainant; otherwise, it would necessitate almost in every case that the Magistrate would have to try out the case before he could determine the question whether it was a bona fide application. The only question is whether the Magistrate was of the belief that a person had been detained, and he may be of that belief by reason of the petition itself or for any other reason that may be brought before him—Chepa Mahton, 30 Cr.L.J. 175, 11 P.L.T. 31, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 550, 113 I.C. 578.

Search-warrant :—This section applies where a search-warrant has been issued. Where no such warrant was issued, and the person was brought before the Court by the other party of his own accord, this section could not apply—Chagan v. Hera Lal, 24 C.W.N. 104 (105), 20 Cr.L.J. 729, 29 C.L.J. 729, 52 I.C. 889.

Arrest of ward :—The powers conferred on a first-class Magistrate under this section may be exercised by a District Judge in arresting a ward removed from the custody of the guardian. See section 25 (3) of the Guardians and Wards Act.

On an application for the recovery of a boy by his adoptive mother from the natural father, the health or safety of the boy in his being allowed to live with his natural parents, should be a paramount consideration for the Court—Chagan v. Hera Lal, supra.

Power of Police-officer :—Where a warrant issued under this section directs the police officer to find out the detained person from a particular house, the police officer when endorsing the warrant to another officer cannot authorise that officer to execute the warrant in some other place. Such a direction would amount to altering the warrant itself—Chepa Mahton, 30 Cr.L.J. 175, 11 P.L.T. 31, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 550, 113 I.C. 578.

204. Wrongful confinement :—The Magistrate is not bound to issue a search warrant under this section unless he has reason to believe that the confinement is wrongful, i.e., amounts to an offence. The jurisdiction conferred by this section is not as wide as that conferred by sec. 491—Muktabai, Ratanlal 839. Where a boy was taken away by the natural father from the house of the alleged adoptive father, alleging that no adoption had really taken place, and the alleged adoptive father applied for recovery of the boy, held that this section did not apply, as it was doubtful whether the confinement of the boy by the natural father amounted to an offence—Chagan v. Hera Lal, 24 C.W.N. 104 (105), 20 Cr.L.J. 729, 29 C.L.J. 729, 52 I.C. 889.

Where the information before the Magistrate was that a woman was living in her mother's house and there was not even a suggestion that she was being detained by her mother against her will, there was no jurisdiction to issue a warrant under this section and the subsequent order directing what amounted to detention in custody of the person arrested under that warrant was clearly also without jurisdiction—Thakamani Debi v. Nepal Chandra Bhattacharjya, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 704, 178 I.C. 405, 40 Cr.L.J. 58, 43 C.W.N. 363.

The words "so confined" in this section should be taken in the context in which they occur, and should be taken to imply "believed to be so confined". This section, which in this respect is not happily worded, lays down that it is for the Magistrate to find whether there are reasons for believing that any person is in wrongful confinement; and if he is so satisfied and issues a search warrant, the police officer to whom the warrant is addressed, has merely to execute it according to its tenor. He must search for the person believed by the Magistrate to be unlawfully detained. The officer charged with the execution of the warrant is not expected to disregard the finding of the Magistrate and to refrain from executing the warrant if he finds that the person in question is not confined so as to make the confinement an offence. All that he is to do is to search for the person in question and to take him to the Magistrate—Kallan Beg, A.I.R. 1936 All. 306 (308), 1936 A.L.J. 468, 37 Cr.L.J. 548, 162 I.C. 539, 1935 A.L.R. 425, 8 R.A. 862, 1936 Cr.C. 459.

Complaint against husband :—In the case of a complaint being made against the husband that he was keeping his wife in confinement, a Magistrate cannot make a summary order, but is bound to hear both sides, and after making necessary inquiry he should pass such order as may seem right. If he finds that the confinement amounts to an offence, he should let the wife go and warn the husband against interfering with her except through a Civil Court. If, on the other hand, he arrives at the conclusion that such is not the case, he should advise the wife to go home with her husband, warning the husband at the same time against using any coercion in taking the wife with him—Sher Sha v. Sakina Begum, 1910 P.W.R. 29, 11 Cr.L.J. 450, 7 I.C. 354; see also In the matter of Shoibalini, 2 C.W.N. cccxxxiii.

205. Form of warrant :—There being no prescribed form of warrant under this section, a Magistrate who has to issue one under this section, may adapt a form under sec. 96 to the provisions of this section by altering the figures, and by drawing up the warrant in terms required by this section—Mozam Molla, 45 Cal. 905, 20 Cr.L.J. 47, 28 C.L.J. 47, 48 I.C. 687 (dissenting from Bisu Haldar, 11 C.W.N. 836, 6 C.L.J. 127, where it was held that if a warrant was issued purporting to be under sec. 96, while it ought to be under sec. 100, the warrant was illegal).

A form under sec. 98 also may be lawfully used for a warrant under this section with necessary alterations—Gora Mian v. Abdul Majid, 39 Cal. 403, 16 C.W.N. 336, 13 Cr.L.J. 186, 13 I.C. 1002.

D.—General Provisions relating to Searches.

101. The provisions of sections 43, 75, 77, 79, 82, 83 and 84 shall, so far as may be, apply to all search-warrants issued under section 96, section 98, section 99A or section 100.

Direction, etc., of search-warrants.

The words "section 99A" in this section have been added by Act XIV of 1922 (Indian Press Law Repeal and Amendment Act).

206. Sec. 79—Endorsement :—A search warrant issued under the Gambling Act (III of 1867) is governed by the provisions of this Code, and consequently the search warrant may be endorsed by the Police officer to whom it is originally directed, to another officer of equal rank—Kashi Nath, 30 All. 60. This section has no application to warrants issued under sec. 6 of the Burma Gambling Act—P. Thwai, 21 Cr.L.J. 9, 54 I.C. 57, 12 Bur.L.T. 165. A search warrant issued under sec. 98 can be endorsed over to any other Police officer of similar rank for execution—Mithu, 3 S.L.R. 56, 10 Cr.L.J. 3.

102. (1) Whenever any place liable to search or inspection under this Chapter is closed, any person residing in, or being in charge of, such place shall, on demand of the officer or other person executing the warrant, and on production of the warrant, allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein.

Persons in charge of closed place to allow search.

(2) If ingress into such place cannot be so obtained, the officer or other person executing the warrant may proceed in manner provided by section 48.

(3) Where any person in or about such place is reasonably suspected of concealing about his person any article for which search should be made, such person may be searched. If such person is a woman, the directions of section 52 shall be observed.

Sections 102 and 103, Cr. P. C., do not apply to a search under the Excise Act (Beng Act V of 1909), Chapter IX of which deals with it—Harbhanjan, 31 C.W.N. 667 (669), 54 Cal. 601, 102 I.C. 547, 28 Cr.L.J. 579, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 527.

103. (1) Before making a search under this Chapter, the officer or other person about to make it shall call upon two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality in which the place to be searched is situate to attend and witness the search, and may issue an order in writing to them or any of them so to do.

Search to be made in presence of witnesses

(2) The search shall be made in their presence, and a list of all things seized in the course of such search and of the places in which they are respectively found shall be prepared by such officer or other person and signed by such witnesses; but no person witnessing a search under this section shall be required to attend the Court as a witness of the search unless specially summoned by it.

(3) The occupant of the place searched, or some person in his behalf, shall, in every instance, be permitted to attend during the search, and a copy of the list prepared under this section, signed by the said witnesses, shall be delivered to such occupant or person at his request.

Occupant of place searched may attend.

(4) When any person is searched under section 102, subsection (3), a list of all things taken possession of shall be prepared, and a copy thereof shall be delivered to such person at his request.

(5) Any person who without reasonable cause refuses or neglects to attend and witness a search under this section when called upon to do so by an order in writing delivered or tendered to him, shall be deemed to have committed an offence under section 187 of the Indian Penal Code.

The italicised words have been added by sec 14 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). For reasons, see below

Object:—The provisions of this section are enacted for greater certainty and security and not because the statements of certain officers can, under no circumstances, be accepted—Emp v Ma Thein, AIR 1936 Rang 15 (17), 37 Cr.L.J. 331, 169 I.C. 816, 1936 Cr.C. 21. In this case the evidence of two Excise officers, which was supported by the documentary evidence, was accepted in preference to the evidence of search-witnesses.

The object of the Legislature in requiring the presence of witnesses of the locality is to guard against possible chicanery on the part of the officers entrusted with search-warrants, a thing incriminating which may be said to have been found and was not introduced by the men—Abdullah v Emp, 27 Cr.L.J. 73, 91 I.C. 249, 1 Lah.Cas. 746, 8 I.C. 988, 3 Bur.L.T. 143 in Note 209. The object of that searches are conducted fairly and squarely and that if articles by the police—Wun Na, 28 Cr.L.J. 701, 103 I.C. 5 and in order, and that no wrong doing such as 'planting' of articles by the Police in the house searched should take place—Kwe Haw, supra; Wun Nu, 5 Rang. 291, 28 Cr.L.J. 701 (702); Balai Ghosh, 50 C.L.J. 518, 31 Cr.L.J. 667 (669); Abdullah, 27 Cr.L.J. 73, 91 I.C. 249, 1 Lah. Cas. 5; and that no false evidence may be fabricated—Sit Nyein, 3 Bur.L.T. 143, 11 Cr.L.J. 746, 8 I.C. 988.

It is true that where it could be shown that the witnesses were not respectable or were not persons of the locality, a search has been held not to have been carried out in accordance with law. But where there were several senior officers of police in the police party it may be concluded, in the absence of any suggestion to the contrary, that the witnesses were properly chosen—Boon Chin, A.I.R. 1935 Rang 233, 1935 Cr.C. 934, 157 I.C. 798, 36 Cr.L.J. 1228.

A respectable person is a person who would be impartial and on whom the owner or occupier of the premises searched can prima facie rely—Ti Ya, 7 Bur.L.T. 143, 15 Cr.L.J. 441 (446) (F.B.). The word 'respectable' means 'respectable and independent'—Khan Taw, 4 Bur.L.T. 91 (F.B.); Sher Ali, 23 Cr.L.J. 609 (Lah.), 68 I.C. 833. Respectability does not connote any particular status or wealth or anything of that kind. Any person is entitled to claim respectability provided he is not disreputable in any way, that is, if he is not a thief or a criminal of some kind or a person perhaps of grossly immoral habits. Being a prosecution witness is not sufficient to deprive one of one's title to respectability—Ashfaq v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 1108, 165 I.C. 25, A.I.R. 1936 All 707, 1936 A.L.J. 958, 1936 Cr.C. 893, 1936 A.L.R. 886, 9 R.A. 247. Where one of the witnesses was a friend of the Sub-Inspector and lived two miles away, and the other witness lived a mile away, held that the search was illegal—Ma Htway, 4 Bur.L.J. 2, 26 Cr.L.J. 827, 89 I.C. 475, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 205. Where both the search witnesses were found on their own admission to have been previously convicted for criminal offences and one of them further admitted that he had a civil suit with the accused, it was held that the search was conducted in a manner which amounted to violation of the law—Haradhan Maity v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 701, 178 I.C. 409, 40 Cr.L.J. 52. A dismissed Constable can hardly be regarded as a respectable man—Indar Datt, 32 Cr.L.J. 818 (825), 132 I.C. 185, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 408, 1931 Cr.C. 648. The mere fact that one of the search witnesses was found nearly half a mile away from the house that was searched, is no ground for suspicion—Hari Narayan, 29 Cr.L.J. 49 (56), 106 I.C. 545, 46 C.L.J. 368, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 27.

A man who has been twice convicted of serious crimes is altogether unsuitable as a search witness—Ram Chandra, 36 Cr.L.J. 551, A.I.R. 1935 All. 520, 154 I.C. 635.

If no respectable witnesses are available in the locality, evidence to that effect must be given at the trial—Balai Ghosh, 50 C.L.J. 518, 31 Cr.L.J. 667 (669), A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 141, 121 I.C. 486, 1930 Cr.C. 141.

210. 'Of the locality':—A person living in a quarter within a part of the place to be searched may reasonably be regarded as an inhabitant 'of the locality', even if a river flows between—Sit Nyein, 3 Bur.L.T. 143, 11 Cr.L.J. 746. The word 'locality' does not mean the same quarter of the town as the place to be searched—Ah Sein, 4 Bur.L.T. 222, 12 Cr.L.J. 479. Where the witnesses lived in a quarter exactly half a mile west of the house searched in Rangoon, held that the witnesses lived within easy reach and in the same locality within the meaning of this section—As Pok, 18 Cr.L.J. 1009. But witnesses who live a mile or 2 miles away, are not inhabitants of the locality—Ma Htway, 4 Bur.L.J. 2, 26 Cr.L.J. 827. But see Mast Ram, infra.

It has been held in some cases that the fact that the witnesses are not men 'of the locality' is immaterial if they are 'respectable' men; the important point is that the men called in as witnesses should be persons of some standing, whose word can be believed, and not that they should be persons living within a stone's throw of the house which is to be searched. The stress is on the word 'respectable' and not on the word 'locality'—Sit Nyein, 3 Bur.L.T. 143, 11 Cr.L.J. 746, 8 I.C. 988 (989); Ah Pok, 18 Cr.L.J. 1009; Ghandalal, 36 Cr.L.J. 701, 154 I.C. 1038, 28 S.L.R. 41, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 159, 1931 Cr.C. 1261; Gopi, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 66, 10 Pat. 821, 13 P.L.T. 62, 1932 Cr.C.

99, 136 I.C. 60, 33 Cr.L.J. 233; and failure to call inhabitants of the locality as witnesses does not make a search illegal—Raman, 21 Mad. 83; Satagopacharlu v. Satrugna, 23 M.L.J. 445, 1912 M.W.N. 1111, 13 Cr.L.J. 763, 17 I.C. 75. The fact that the panchas were not local people is an irregularity which could be cured under sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Raghunath, 33 Cr.L.J. 733, 139 I.C. 281, 34 Bom.L.R. 901, 1932 Cr.C. 868, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 610, Ind. Rul. 1932 Bom. 481. The fact that the witnesses are not persons of the locality does not render the search illegal, specially where the search is conducted and witnessed by responsible and respectable officers in the presence of a Magistrate, and a satisfactory explanation for not inviting the neighbours to witness the search has been furnished—Abdullah, 27 Cr.L.J. 73, 91 I.C. 249, 1 Lah. Cas. 5. Thus, where in view of the attitude of the men who had assembled on the scene the police officer did not consider it worth while to call upon any of them to witness the search but asked two other respectable persons who had come with him from another village to act as search-witnesses, held that under these circumstances the failure of the police-officer to secure search witnesses from the locality was no more than an irregularity—Gopi Mahto, 10 Pat. 821, 13 P.L.T. 62, 33 Cr.L.J. 233 (234).

If respectable persons cannot be found in the immediate vicinity, it is not illegal to bring witnesses from villages within 3 or 4 miles from the accused's village. The word "locality" is comprehensive enough to include villages within 3 or 4 miles from the village where the search is to be conducted—Mast Ram, 8 O.W.N. 128, 32 Cr.L.J. 699 (700), 131 I.C. 441, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 115, 6 Luck. 472, 1931 Cr.C. 275, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 201; Mahadeo, 35 Cr.L.J. 397, 147 I.C. 317, 11 O.W.N. 62, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 90 (91), 1931 Cr.C. 260, 1934 O.L.R. 108. Where respectable persons can be found in the neighbourhood, and the Police officer making a search takes with him persons whose respectability is questionable or who come from a distant locality, the inference is that he was prompted by a desire to have such witnesses as would be easily persuaded to support any story which he might put forward—Sadhu, 36 Cr.L.J. 742, 155 I.C. 406, A.I.R. 1931 All. 374, 1931 Cr.C. 438.

The failure to comply with the provisions regulating searches may cast doubt upon the bona fides of the officers conducting the search. But when once the evidence has been believed it is obviously no defence to say that the evidence was obtained in an irregular manner. There is nothing in the law which makes such evidence inadmissible—Bana Mali Bhattacharyya v. Emp. (1939) 1 Cal. 210, A.I.R. 1910 Cal. 85.

211. Right of occupant to be present:—The language of sub-section (3) is that the occupant of the place shall be permitted to attend during the search, and it means that he is to be given the option of being present, and not that he is to be allowed to be present only if he demands it. Therefore, when the occupants of the house, who were inside the room searched by the Police, were, after the discovery in their presence of a gun and after search of their persons, arrested and sent out of the room, and the search was continued, it was held that the exclusion of the occupants during the search was not a technical but a substantial violation of the law enunciated in this sub-section—Ramesh Chandra 41 Cal. 350 (370, 377), 23 I.C. 986, 18 C.W.N. 496, 15 Cr.L.J. 385. But this case has been dissented from in the very recent case of Harinarayan, 46-C.L.J. 368, 106 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 27, 29 Cr.L.J. 49 (57), where Cammiae, J., holds that the word "permitted" in this clause cannot be taken to mean that the "occupant shall be present and must be given the option of being present".

The word "occupant" is not intended to cover every person who may happen to be in the place at the time; but it refers back to the person mentioned in sec. 102, i.e. a person residing in or being in charge of the place—Ramesh Chandra, 41 Cal. 350 (377), 23 I.C. 986, 18 C.W.N. 496. See also Bhikur quoted in Note 215.

212. Search-list:—A search-list prepared under this section is a proper evidence as to the matter contained therein, i.e. the articles found and the place where they were found—Anon., 2 Weir 47. After a search-list has been prepared and signed, it is not proper to make additions thereto subsequently; but such additions will not

and in order, and that no wrong doing such as 'planting' of articles by the Police in the house searched should take place—Kwe Haw, supra; Wun Nu, 5 Rang. 291, 28 Cr.L.J. 701 (702); Balai Ghosh, 50 C.L.J. 518, 31 Cr.L.J. 667 (669); Abdullah, 27 Cr.L.J. 73, 91 I.C. 249, 1 Lah. Cas. 5; and that no false evidence may be fabricated—Sit Nyein, 3 Bur.L.T. 143, 11 Cr.L.J. 746, 8 I.C. 988.

It is true that where it could be shown that the witnesses were not respectable or were not persons of the locality, a search has been held not to have been carried out in accordance with law. But where there were several senior officers of police in the police party it may be concluded, in the absence of any suggestion to the contrary, that the witnesses were properly chosen—Boon Chin, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 233, 1935 Cr.C. 934, 157 I.C. 798, 36 Cr.L.J. 1228.

A respectable person is a person who would be impartial and on whom the owner or occupier of the premises searched can prima facie rely—Ti Ya, 7 Bur.L.T. 143, 15 Cr.L.J. 441 (446) (F.B.). The word 'respectable' means 'respectable and independent'—Khan Taw, 4 Bur.L.T. 91 (F.B.); Sher Ali, 23 Cr.L.J. 609 (Lah.), 68 I.C. 833. Respectability does not connote any particular status or wealth or anything of that kind. Any person is entitled to claim respectability provided he is not disreputable in any way, that is, if he is not a thief or a criminal of some kind or a person perhaps of grossly immoral habits. Being a prosecution witness is not sufficient to deprive one of one's title to respectability—Ashfaq v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 1108, 165 I.C. 25, A.I.R. 1936 All. 707, 1936 A.L.J. 958, 1936 Cr.C. 893, 1936 A.L.R. 886, 9 R.A. 247. Where one of the witnesses was a friend of the Sub-Inspector and lived two miles away, and the other witness lived a mile away, held that the search was illegal—Ma Htway, 4 Bur.L.J. 2, 26 Cr.L.J. 827, 89 I.C. 475, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 205. Where both the search witnesses were found on their own admission to have been previously convicted for criminal offences and one of them further admitted that he had a civil suit with the accused, it was held that the search was conducted in a manner which amounted to violation of the law—Haradhan Maity v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 701, 178 I.C. 409, 40 Cr.L.J. 52. A dismissed Constable can hardly be regarded as a respectable man—Indar Datt, 32 Cr.L.J. 818 (825), 132 I.C. 185, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 408, 1931 Cr.C. 648. The mere fact that one of the search witnesses was found nearly half a mile away from the house that was searched, is no ground for suspicion—Hari Narayan, 29 Cr.L.J. 49 (56), 106 I.C. 545, 46 C.L.J. 368, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 27.

A man who has been twice convicted of serious crimes is altogether unsuitable as a search witness—Ram Chandra, 36 Cr.L.J. 551, A.I.R. 1935 All. 520, 154 I.C. 635.

If no respectable witnesses are available in the locality, evidence to that effect must be given at the trial—Balai Ghosh, 50 C.L.J. 518, 31 Cr.L.J. 667 (669), A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 141, 124 I.C. 486, 1930 Cr.C. 141.

210. 'Of the locality':—A person living in a quarter within a part of the place to be searched may reasonably be regarded as an inhabitant 'of the locality', even if a river flows between—Sit Nyein, 3 Bur.L.T. 143, 11 Cr.L.J. 746. The word 'locality' does not mean the same quarter of the town as the place to be searched—Ah Sein, 4 Bur.L.T. 222, 12 Cr.L.J. 479. Where the witnesses lived in a quarter exactly half a mile west of the house searched in Rangoon, held that the witnesses lived within easy reach and in the same locality within the meaning of this section—As Pok, 18 Cr.L.J. 1009. But witnesses who live a mile or 2 miles away, are not inhabitants of the locality—Ma Htway, 4 Bur.L.J. 2, 26 Cr.L.J. 827. But see Mast Ram, infra.

It has been held in some cases that the fact that the witnesses are not men 'of the locality' is immaterial if they are 'respectable' men; the important point is that the men called in as witnesses should be persons of some standing, whose word can be believed, and not that they should be persons living within a stone's throw of the house which is to be searched. The stress is on the word 'respectable' and not on the word 'locality'—Sit Nyein, 3 Bur.L.T. 143, 11 Cr.L.J. 746, 8 I.C. 988 (989); Ah Pok, 18 Cr.L.J. 1009; Ghandalal, 36 Cr.L.J. 704, 154 I.C. 1038, 28 S.L.R. 41, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 159, 1931 Cr.C. 1261; Gopi, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 66, 10 Pat. 821, 13 P.L.T. 62, 1932 Cr.C.

99, 136 I.C. 60, 33 Cr.L.J. 233; and failure to call inhabitants of the locality as witnesses does not make a search illegal—Raman, 21 Mad 83; Satagopachariu v. Satrugna, 23 M.L.J. 445, 1912 M.W.N. 1111, 13 Cr.L.J. 763, 17 I.C. 75. The fact that the panchas were not local people is an irregularity which could be cured under sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Raghunath, 33 Cr.L.J. 733, 139 I.C. 281, 34 Bom.L.R. 901, 1932 Cr.C. 868, A.I.R. 1932 Bom 610, Ind Rul 1932 Bom 484. The fact that the witnesses are not persons of the locality does not render the search illegal, specially where the search is conducted and witnessed by responsible and respectable officers in the presence of a Magistrate, and a satisfactory explanation for not inviting the neighbours to witness the search has been furnished—Abdullah, 27 Cr.L.J. 73, 91 I.C. 249, 1 Lah. Thus, where in view of the attitude of the men who had assembled on the scene the police officer did not consider it worth while to call upon any of them to witness the search but asked two other respectable persons who had come with him from another village to act as search witnesses, held that under these circumstances the failure of the police-officer to secure search witnesses from the locality was no more than an irregularity—Gopi Mahto, 10 Pat. 821, 13 P.L.T. 62, 33 Cr.L.J. 233 (234).

If respectable persons cannot be found in the immediate vicinity, it is not illegal to bring witnesses from villages within 3 or 4 miles from the accused's village. The word 'locality' is comprehensive enough to include villages within 3 or 4 miles from the village where the search is to be conducted—Mast Ram, 8 O.W.N. 128, 32 Cr.L.J. 699 (700), 131 I.C. 441, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 115, 6 Luck 472, 1931 Cr.C. 275, Ind. Rul 1931 Oudh 201; Mahadeo, 35 Cr.L.J. 397, 147 I.C. 317, 11 O.W.N. 62, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 90 (91), 1934 Cr.C. 260, 1934 O.L.R. 108. Where respectable persons can be found in the neighbourhood, and the Police officer making a search takes with him persons whose respectability is questionable or who come from a distant locality, the inference is that he was prompted by a desire to have such witnesses as would be easily persuaded to support any story which he might put forward—Sadhu, 36 Cr.L.J. 742, 155 I.C. 406, A.I.R. 1934 All. 374, 1934 Cr.C. 438.

The failure to comply with the provisions regulating searches may cast doubt upon the bona fides of the officers conducting the search. But when once the evidence has been believed it is obviously no defence to say that the evidence was obtained in an irregular manner. There is nothing in the law which makes such evidence inadmissible—Bana Mahi Bhattacharjya v. Emp. (1939) 1 Cal 210, A.I.R. 1940 Cal 85.

211. Right of occupant to be present:—The language of sub-section (3) is that the occupant of the place shall be permitted to attend during the search, and it means that he is to be given the option of being present, and not that he is to be allowed to be present only if he demands it. Therefore, when the occupants of the house, who were inside the room searched by the Police, were, after the discovery in their presence of a gun and after search of their persons, arrested and sent out of the room, and the search was continued, it was held that the exclusion of the occupants during the search was not a technical but a substantial violation of the law enunciated in this sub-section—Ramesh Chandra 41 Cal. 350 (370, 377), 23 I.C. 986, 18 C.W.N. 496, 15 Cr.L.J. 385. But this case has been dissented from in the very recent case of Harinarayan, 46 C.L.J. 368, 106 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1928 Cal 27, 29 Cr.L.J. 49 (57), where Cammide, J., holds that the word "permitted" in this clause cannot be taken to mean that the "occupant shall be present and must be given the option of being present".

The word "occupant" is not intended to cover every person who may happen to be in the place at the time; but it refers back to the person mentioned in sec. 102, i.e., a person residing in or being in charge of the place—Ramesh Chandra, 41 Cal. 350 (377), 23 I.C. 986, 18 C.W.N. 496. See also Bhikugir quoted in Note 215.

invalidate the whole search, nor is the omission of unimportant articles a circumstance invalidating the search—Htaung, 7 Bur L.T. 163, 15 Cr.L.J. 523, 24 I.C. 835, 7 L.B.R. 275. It is competent for the Court to receive evidence other than the search-list regarding the things seized in course of the search and the places in which they were found. The provisions of sec. 91 of the Evidence Act do not apply to the case of a search-list prepared under this section—Solas Naik, 34 Mad. 349, 11 Cr.L.J. 576, 8 I.C. 178, 8 M.L.T. 451, 21 M.L.J. 281 (F.B.), overruling 2 Weir 515; Sarabu, 33 Mad. 413, 9 M.L.T. 135, 11 Cr.L.J. 716, 8 I.C. 809, 2 Weir 776; Elamathan, 33 Mad. 416. See also Bachna in Note 213.

Non-signing of search-list—Refusal by a witness to sign the search-list is not punishable under sec. 187, I P. Code (intentional omission to assist a public servant in the execution of his duty) because the 'assistance' referred to in sec. 187, I. P. C., must have some direct personal relation to the execution of the duty of the police-officer. The signing of the list is an independent duty cast upon the witness, whereas the word 'assistance' in sec. 187, I. P. C., implies that the party who assists is doing something which in ordinary circumstances the party assisted could do for himself—Ramaya Naika, 26 Mad. 419, 1 Weir 136. The amendment of 1923 has made it penal by cl (5) of sec. 103, Cr P C., for a witness to refuse when asked in writing to attend and witness a search. In other words, assisting a search officer by attending and witnessing a search has been made ejusdem generis by the Legislature with the kind of assistance referred to in the second part of the section. But again it is the refusal to attend and witness the search that has been made penal and not the signing of the search-list. The effect of the decision of the Madras High Court in Ramaya Naika is not in the least touched by the amendment of sub-cl. (5) inserted in 1923 in sec. 103, Cr. P. C.—Ram Prasad v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 796, 17 Pat. 632, 176 I.C. 787, 11 R.P. 107, 4 B.R. 772, 1938 P.W.N. 477, 19 P.L.T. 461, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 403 (F.B.) (per Varma and Manohar Lal, JJ; Chatterji, J., dissenting).

In Ana Dewa Sing, 4 L.B.R. 134, 7 Cr.L.J. 411, it has been laid down that unless the search-list is signed by witnesses, the search would not be legal. But a more reasonable view has been taken in Solas Naik, 34 Mad. 349 cited above.

213. Duty of prosecution to summon search-witnesses:—The police-officer who made the search may be called as a witness at the trial, but he cannot be deemed to be a satisfactory witness for the purpose of proving the search. It is, therefore, incumbent on the prosecution to call the search witnesses to prove the search—Balai Ghosh, 50 C.L.J. 518, 31 Cr.L.J. 667 (669), 124 I.C. 486. The prosecution is in duty bound to call search witnesses at the trial, unless it is of opinion that they would misrepresent facts and would misstate what happened. The fact that the prosecution thought that these persons had formed an opinion unfavourable to the prosecution story regarding the search, is no reason why those persons should not be called by the prosecution, in as much as what these persons would be required to state in their deposition was what they observed and not what they thought—Munni Sonar, 2 Cr.L.J. 176, 9 C.W.N. 438. But it has been held in a later case that no duty is cast on the prosecution to put the search witnesses into the witness-box, because sub-section (2) expressly lays down that no person witnessing a search shall be required to attend the Court as a witness unless specially summoned. The reason of this provision is obvious. Many persons would be unwilling to attend searches, if as a matter of course they had to attend Court at the trial of the case, possibly two Courts if the case is committed to the Sessions. The discretion is, therefore, left to the Court to require or not the attendance of witnesses. And evidence of the search ought not to be disbelieved by reason of the fact that some of the search witnesses were not called at the trial—Hari Narayan, 46 C.L.J. 368, 106 I.C. 545, 29 Cr.L.J. 49 (57), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 278, dissenting from Munni Sonar, supra. See also Mosaddi, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 100, 11 Pat. 807, 112 I.C. 841, 31 Cr.L.J. 427, 13 P.L.T. 702, 1933 Cr.C. 253, where it has been held that the statute lays it upon the prosecution to explain why it desires the search witnesses to be called and does not lay it upon the prosecution to explain why it does not call the search witnesses. If there were no respectable inhabitants in the locality, and persons were called in from the cultivator class to witness the search, all those witnesses must be produced at the trial to prove the search. The calling of one witness only is not proper—Balai Ghosh, supra. See also Rustum, 33 Cr.L.J. 389 (391), 136 I.C. 868, 34 Bom.L.R. 267, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 181, 1932 Cr.C. 240, Ind. Rul. 1932 Bom. 228.

The mere fact that the search-witnesses have not been examined in the case would not render the search itself illegal. If the list cannot be proved, the contents of the list can be proved by other evidence—Bachna, 28 Cr.L.J. 17 (18), A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 149, 99 I.C. 49. See also Solas Naik in Note 212.

The search lists and the search witnesses should invariably be produced by the prosecution, and they would be guilty of suppression of material evidence if they did not produce the same. The prosecution can also prove the recovery of the incriminating articles by other evidence as well—Muhammad Bashir, 33 Cr.L.J. 943, 140 I.C. 246, 1932 A.L.J. 104, A.I.R. 1932 All. 185, 1932 Cr.C. 201, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 634.

Sub-section (2) of this section suggests that while the rendering of assistance in making the search is imperative on the persons called upon to assist, they are not compellable by the Inspector to attend the Court to give evidence without a summons in that behalf—In re Ippili Inagatha, 38 M.L.J. 27, 21 Cr.L.J. 33.

If a police officer conducts a search in company of panchas he may give evidence of that fact. He may say "I searched the premises in company of two independent persons whose names were so and so." But if he desires that the evidence of the panchas is to be used to fortify his own evidence and show that his evidence as to search is correct, then, he must call these panchas. He is not entitled to put in a signed panchnama and rely on that as evidence that the panchas agree with his evidence. Putting in panchanams signed by panchas as part of the evidence of the police officer is worthless, except to corroborate the evidence of that officer that panchas were employed, and to show that the provisions of sec. 103 (1) and (2), Cr.P.C. have been complied with. If the evidence of the panchas is sought to be relied upon, then the panchas must be called and the accused must have an opportunity of cross-examining them. The last words in sec. 103 (2), Cr.P.C., do not negative this right—R. C. Lam v. Emp., A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 181 (183), 34 Bom.L.R. 267, 1932 Cr.C. 240, 136 I.C. 868, 33 Cr.L.J. 389.

214 Refusal to attend and witness search:—See sub-section (5). This clause has been added "to prevent the frustration of searches by the unreasonable refusal of witnesses to attend, which, we understand, is by no means uncommon"—Report of the Select Committee, 1916.

This sub-section adds a condition, namely, that an order in writing must have been tendered to the person requisitioned to attend the search. See the last line of Sub-section (1). "We accept the proposal of the Bill to penalise an unreasonable refusal or neglect to attend as a search witness, but would make it a condition precedent that the person in question should have been required to attend by an order in writing from the police-officer. In order to make this clear, we have, in addition to the new sub-section (5), made a small amendment at the end of sub-section (1)"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

215. Irregular search:—A search is irregular if it is conducted in violation of the police rules relating thereto, such as the omission to make at the time a note of the articles found and where found, the permitting of unauthorised persons to go in and out of the place searched, the omission to send up the articles found as soon as possible to the Magistrate, or the exclusion of the occupant of the place during the search. But the effect of such irregularities is only to necessitate a careful scrutiny of the evidence of search, and if in spite of such irregularities it is found that no advantage was taken of them by the public, they have no further effect (i.e., the search does not become illegal)—Ramesh Chandra, 41 Cal. 350 (358-371), 25 Cr.L.J. 1112, 18 C.W.N.

496; Muhammad Basir, 33 Cr.L.J. 943, 140 I.C. 246, 1932 A.L.J. 104, A.I.R. 1932 All 185, 1932 Cr.C. 201, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 634. See also Local Government v. Nainsukh Teli, A.I.R. 1933 Nag 99, 34 Cr.L.J. 721, 144 I.C. 240, 1933 Cr.C. 364, 29 N.L.R. 67. A search is not illegal when there is a failure to call respectable inhabitants of the locality to witness the search—Satagopalacharlu, 13 Cr.L.J. 763, 23 M.L.J. 445, 1912 M.W.N. 111, 117 I.C. 75; Raman, 21 Mad. 83, 2 Weir 46, 374 and 503; Abdullah, 27 Cr.L.J. 73, 91 I.C. 249, 1 Lah. Cas. 5. A search made without the presence of any witness is irregular, but such irregularity does not entitle the occupants of the place to exercise their right of private defence by assaulting the police-officer, when it was not shown that the officer was acting maliciously and otherwise than in good faith—Pukot Kotu, 19 Mad. 349. Where the police-officer made a search without a warrant and in the presence of only one witness, and a constable entered the house to be searched by scaling a wall, held that the search was grossly irregular, but the occupants had no right of private defence, and any assault committed by them on the police was punishable under section 323 (though not under sec. 332), I. P. C.—Mukhtor Ahmed, 37 All 353, 13 A.L.J. 439. In a later Allahabad case, however, it has been held that a search without witness is absolutely illegal, and the occupant of the house is entitled to exercise his right of private defence by assaulting the police-officer so as to prevent him from entering the house—Nirmal Singh, 42 All. 67, 17 A.L.J. 1047, 20 Cr.L.J. 695, 52 I.C. 663. The occupant is also not guilty under sec. 332, I. P. C., when he attempts to enter into his house to be present during search and causes hurt to a Police officer when the latter offers physical resistance to him—Bhikugir, 34 Cr.L.J. 439, 142 I.C. 790, 1932 A.L.J. 530, A.I.R. 1932 All 449, 1932 Cr.C. 570.

If for any reason the officer making the search is unable to get two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality, and a search is effected in the presence of one or more men available at the time, leading to the discovery of an excisable article, the accused who is found in possession of that article can all the same be convicted under the Excise Act, if the Court is satisfied from the evidence that an offence has been committed. The irregularity in the search would not mitigate the offence or operate as a bar to the conviction of the accused—Abdul Hafiz, 24 A.L.J. 173, A.I.R. 1926 All 188, 27 Cr.L.J. 265; Emp. v. Bachcha, 36 Cr.L.J. 362, 153 I.C. 742, A.I.R. 1934 All. 873, 1934 Cr.C. 1082, 57 All. 256. See also Bana Mali Bhattacharyya v. Emp., (1939) 1 Cal. 210, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 85. The conviction cannot be set aside merely because the search did not comply with the provisions of this section. Persons who make a search illegally render themselves liable to be sued for damages, but their illegal action does not affect the question whether the person whose house was legally searched has committed an offence—Maung San, 7 Rang. 771, 31 Cr.L.J. 303 (305), (dissenting from Mo Htway, 4 Bur.L.J. 2, 26 Cr.L.J. 827); Mi Hauk, 4 I.B.R. 121, 7 Cr.L.J. 87; Solai Naik, 34 Mad. 349, 8 I.C. 178, 8 M.L.T. 451, 21 M.L.J. 281, 11 Cr.L.J. 576, 1910 M.W.N. 677; Chwa Hun Htwe, 34 Cr.L.J. 652, 143 I.C. 824, 11 Rang. 107, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 146, 1933 Cr.C. 736, Ind. Rul. 1933 Rang. 77; Ali Ahmad Khan, 46 All. 86, A.I.R. 1924 All. 214; Rute Mal, A.I.R. 1929 All. 937 (939), 120 I.C. 266, 31 Cr.L.J. 35, 1930 A.L.J. 229, 1929 Cr.C. 665. So also, the mere fact that the witnesses were not present throughout the search and did not witness every detail of it, would not be enough in itself to justify the setting aside of the conviction. But a conviction cannot be sustained where the failure to comply with the provisions of this section has left the evidence in an unsatisfactory condition, so that there is a reasonable doubt as to whether the article found was really in the possession of the accused—Dinkar Nhanu, 51 Bom. 471, 32 Bom.L.R. 344, 31 Cr.L.J. 927 (931), A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 169, 125 I.C. 713, 1930 Cr.C. 515, Ind. Rul. 1930 Bom. 377.

What would otherwise be relevant does not become irrelevant because it was discovered in the course of a search in which the provisions of the Code were disregarded—Barindra, 37 Cal. 467 (500), 11 Cr.L.J. 453, 14 C.W.N. 1114, 7 I.C. 359.

215A. Proof:—When there are several search lists in each of which several items of property are mentioned the prosecution ought to prove their case with regard to the different items severally, and the different items of property or different groups thereof mentioned in a search list ought to be separately and consecutively numbered either by letters or figures or by some other distinguished marks and the same numbering should be followed while recording the evidence of witnesses relating to the searches to which those search lists refer. If that procedure is adopted there will be no difficulty on the part of the Court in appreciating the evidence that is adduced in respect of the searches—Rafiqueuddin Ahmad, 39 C.W.N. 368, 36 Cr.L.J. 808, 155 I.C. 687, 1935 Cr.C. 241, A.I.R. 1935 Cal 184 (187), 62 Cal 572.

PART IV.

PREVENTION OF OFFENCES.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF SECURITY FOR KEEPING THE PEACE AND FOR GOOD BEHAVIOUR.

A.—Security for keeping the Peace on Conviction.

106. (1) Whenever any person accused of rioting, assault or other offence involving a breach of the peace, or of abetting the same, or of assembling armed men or of taking other unlawful measures with the evident intention of committing the same, or any person accused of committing criminal intimidation, is convicted of such offence before a High Court, a Court of Session or the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class, and such Court is of opinion that it is necessary to require such person to execute a bond for keeping the peace.

such Court may, at the time of passing sentence on such person, order him to execute a bond for a sum proportionate to his means, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace during such period, not exceeding three years, as it thinks fit to fix.

(2) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, the bond so executed shall become void.

(3) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court including a Court hearing appeals under section 407 or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision.

106. (1) Whenever any person accused of offence punishable under Chapter VIII of the Indian Penal Code, other than an offence punishable under section 143, section 149, section 153A or section 154 thereof, or of assault or other offence involving a breach of the peace, or of abetting the same, * * or any person accused of committing criminal intimidation, is convicted of such offence before a High Court, a Court of Session or the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class, and such Court is of opinion that it is necessary to require such person to execute a bond for keeping the peace, _____

Change:—The words “or of assembling committing the same” in the old sub-section (1) have been omitted, and the italicised words have been added, by sec 15 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). The reasons are stated below in their proper places.

218. Object of this Chapter:—The object of this Chapter is the prevention and not the punishment of offences, and its provisions are aimed at persons who are a danger to the public by reason of the commission by them of certain offences—Vaman Sakharam, 11 Bom LR 743; Murli, 1885 P.R. 53; Hari Telang, 27 Cal. 781 (781). This Chapter gives a certain amount of discretion to the Magistrates, and the High Court must always be slow to interfere with that discretion unless there is an error of law—Raoji, 6 Bom LR 34; Umbica Prosad, 1 CLR 268. But the Magistrate should exercise this preventive jurisdiction under this Chapter with cautious discrimination and watchful care, and see that the administration of this branch of criminal law does not become harsh and oppressive—Nga On, LBR (1893-1900) 223.

219. Offences under Ch. VIII, I. P. C.:—The words “or of assembling armed men or of taking other unlawful measures with the evident intention of committing the same” which occurred in the old section have now been omitted, because these offences are covered by Chapter VIII of the Indian Penal Code, and specific mention of them is unnecessary. The offence of assembling armed men is an offence under Chapter VIII of the I P Code; therefore, this section applies where armed men were assembled with the intention of committing a breach of the peace and an order for beating men was given, although no breach of the peace actually took place because the assembly did not go so far—Srikant v Lakhani, 5 C.W.N. 250. So also, the offence of being an armed member of an assembly (sec 144, I P. C.) or joining such assembly after it has been commanded to disperse (sec 145, I P. C.) is an offence under Chapter VIII of the I P Code and brings an accused under this section. The case of Yar Mahammad, 1890 PR 3, in which the contrary view was held is no longer good law.

A security can be demanded on a conviction for an offence under sec 147, I P C.—Maharaj Singh, 20 Cr L.J. 760 (Nag), or on a conviction for rioting—Marimuthu, 33 MLT 315, 17 L.W. 577. See also Note 221A.

The amendment to sec 106 by the Act XVIII of 1923 has made an order under sec 106 impossible where the only section under which the accused are convicted is a section of the Penal Code which is read with sec 149. The amendment is not very happily worded for it speaks of an offence punishable under sec 149. Now no offence is punishable under sec 149 alone there must be some substantive offence charged to be read with sec 149. The meaning clearly seems to be that the section has no application to cases where a person has been convicted of a substantive offence read with sec 149, I P C. The principle underlying might well be that where a person is made constructively liable for an offence by calling in the aid of the provisions of sec. 149, it is not proper to take action against him under sec 106, Cr P Code—Chhedi Singh, 85 IC 42, 3 Pat 870, AIR 1925 Pat 117, 26 Cr L.J. 426, 6 PLT 330; Saun Pande, 35 Cr L.J. 1159, 150 IC 915, AIR 1934 Oudh 279, 1934 Cr C 775, 11 OWN 992. But the Madras High Court has held that where the conviction of the accused persons was under sec 147 and secs. 324, 325 and 342 read with sec 149, I P Code the view that sec. 106, Cr P C., is inapplicable to the case is untenable—Mekraj Ali Sahib, AIR 1939 Mad 787, 184, IC 452, 12 RM 456, 50 MLW. 918, 1939 MWN. 609, (1939) 2 MLJ 36. See also Note 221A.

220. “Other offence involving a breach of the Peace”:—(a) Allahabad High Court—The word “involve” connotes the inclusion, not only of a necessary, but also of a probable feature, circumstance, antecedent condition or consequence. The object of the section is to prevent breaches of peace taking place and not merely to follow up breaches of the peace which have taken place. That is, an offence “involving a breach of the peace” does not mean only an offence which necessarily involves a breach of the peace or of which a breach of the peace forms an ingredient, but includes an offence such as the removal of a landmark (punishable under sec. 448, I. P. C.) which, as a matter of common experience, is often followed by serious riots and loss of life. Therefore, where the evidence shows that the accused were prepared to commit the act of removal of a landmark by a breach of peace, and were only prevented from doing so by the other side running away, held that the offence came within the terms "involving a breach of the peace"—Manik Lal, 33 All. 771 (dissenting from 30 Cal. 93, 30 Cal. 336, 35 Cal. 315 and 29 Mad. 190). So also, upon a conviction of criminal trespass, where the intention of the trespass is to commit a breach of the peace, an order under sec. 106 may lawfully be passed. Thus, where the accused came armed with lathies to assault the complainant and aimed a blow at him which missed, whereupon the complainant took refuge in his house, but the accused pushed the door open and assaulted the complainant inside the house, held that a breach of the peace was a necessary ingredient of the offence committed by the accused (criminal trespass with intent to cause hurt, sec. 452, I. P. C.) and an order for security was proper—Dharam Raj, 42 All. 345, 18 A.L.J. 300, 21 Cr.L.J. 388. Using abusive language and being generally disorderly at a Railway station, amounts to a breach of the peace—Raja Ram, A.I.R. 1936 All. 140, 37 Cr.L.J. 385, 160 I.C. 1088, 1936 A.L.J. 82, 1936 Cr.C. 139.

(b) Bombay High Court—The phrase "other offences including a breach of the peace" includes offences which are offences because a breach of the peace is likely to occur—Emp v Sayad Yacoob, 43 Bom. 554, 21 Bom.L.R. 270 (dissenting from 30 Cal. 366 and 26 Mad. 469).

(c) Calcutta High Court—Having regard to the object underlying this section which is prevention of offences, a wider interpretation should be put on the clause "offences involving a breach of the peace" and it must be held that this clause includes not only offences of which a breach of the peace is a necessary ingredient and in which a breach of the peace has actually occurred but includes also cases of offences in which an evident intention to commit a breach of the peace is expressly found—Abdul Gafur v. Mohammad Mirza, 33 Cr.L.J. 82, 134 I.C. 1187, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 645, 35 C.W.N. 1150, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 67, 1931 Cr.C. 845, 59 Cal. 659, following Abdul Ali Chowdhury, 34 I.C. 961, 43 Cal. 671, 17 Cr.L.J. 241, 20 C.W.N. 197, 23 C.L.J. 108 and Jag Lal Gir v Jagmohan Pal, 26 Cal. 576. See also Rafatulla v. Rajek, 132 I.C. 96, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 646, 1930 Cr.C. 1068, 32 Cr.L.J. 828, 34 C.W.N. 988, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 528. A contrary view was, however, taken in Asoka, 129 I.C. 413, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 802, 1930 Cr.C. 1087, 34 C.W.N. 651, 32 Cr.L.J. 459, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 189, following Arun, 30 Cal. 366; see also 30 Cal. 93 and 35 Cal. 315.

The case of Abdul Gafur v. Mohammad Mirza, supra, was not followed in Ankulal Saha v. Sadhan Chandra Mandal, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 484, 43 C.W.N. 867, 40 Cr.L.J. 836, 183 I.C. 672, 1 I.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 261, 69 C.L.J. 565, 12 R.C. 177, where Henderson, J., observed: "Now I am bound to say that in a matter of this kind I should expect the words 'other offences involving a breach of the peace' to refer to the actual definition of an offence in the substantive law, that is to say, the commission or intention to commit a breach of the peace must be one of the elements which would go to make up the offence. Supposing a man were convicted of defamation and there was a finding of fact that he intended to commit a breach of the peace, it could hardly be said that defamation is an offence involving a breach of the peace."

(d) Lahore High Court:—The words "offence involves a breach of the peace" mean an offence in which a breach of the peace is an ingredient and not merely an offence provoking or likely to lead to a breach of the peace. Where, therefore, the conviction was not for an offence of criminal intimidation but for an offence under sec. 279, I. P. C., an order under this section was illegal—Abdulla v. Crown, 2 Lah. 279, 22 Cr.L.J. 709, 63 I.C. 869 following 30 Cal. 366. Such was the case where the conviction was only under sec. 452, I. P. C.—Santosh, 27 Cr.L.J. 571, 94 I.C. 139,

A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 675 See also Hayat Khan, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 435, 13 Lah. 336, 33 P.L.R. 588, 1932 Cr.C. 581, 139 I.C. 127, 33 Cr.L.J. 746.

(e) Madras High Court—The words “involving a breach of the peace” in this section, require that a breach of the peace should be an ingredient of the offence proved, and before the section can be put into force there must be a finding that a breach of the peace has occurred—Muthiah Chetti, 29 Mad 190, 3 Cr.L.J. 461, following Baidya Nath v Nibaran, 30 Cal 93 and Kannockraran, 26 Mad 469. The words “other offence” in this section are those ejusdem generis with the offences against public tranquillity and of assault which are mentioned in the section. Under this section offence must involve a breach of the peace. It applies when the offence amounts to or constitutes a breach of the peace, in other words, when breach of the peace is a component part or an ingredient of the offence. The facts constituting an offence must be looked at for determining whether the offence comes within the section or not. Wrongful confinement per se is not an offence involving a breach of the peace. Where the offender using violence seizes another, ties his hand and is convicted under sec. 342, I P.C., the offence as proved does involve a breach of the peace—Kuppa Reddiar, 47 Mad 846, 81 I.C. 920, 20 M.L.W. 481, A.I.R. 1924 Mad 808, 25 Cr.L.J. 1096, 47 M.L.J. 232 dissenting from In re Thurmal Reddy, 30 M.L.T. 348, 76 I.C. 966, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 133, 25 Cr.L.J. 294.

(f) Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court—This Court seems to have followed the view expressed by the Allahabad High Court in Emp v Manik, 11 I.C. 589, 33 All 771, 8 A.L.J. 925, 12 Cr.L.J. 405. Vide Nanka v. Kanhayalal, 25 Cr.L.J. 71, 75 I.C. 983, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 118.

(g) Oudh Chief Court—This Court adopted the narrower view of the meaning of the words, “offence involving a breach of the peace,” that was taken at Calcutta, Madras and Lahore in preference to the wider interpretation that found favour at Allahabad and Bombay—Lodha Ram, 33 Cr.L.J. 193, 135 I.C. 691, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 33, 8 O.W.N. 1286, 1932 Cr.C. 65, 7 Luck 573; Bans Gopal v Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 45, 1938 O.W.N. 1361, 1939 O.L.R. 19, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 11, 40 Cr.L.J. 183, 179 I.C. 269, 14 Luck 360, 11 R.O. 156. The view of the Calcutta High Court was, however, changed in Abdul Gafur v Muhammad Mirza, quoted above which was again not followed in the recent case of Anukul Saha v Sadhan Chandra Mandal, supra.

(h) Patna High Court—This Court followed the view of the Allahabad High Court in Emp v. Manik, quoted above. Lal Mohammad, A.I.R. 1931 Pat 337, 131 I.C. 539, 32 Cr.L.J. 739, 12 P.L.T. 556, 1931 Cr.C. 785. Where the incidents which form the transaction for which the offenders have been convicted under secs. 143 and 379, I P.C., do in themselves come within the terms of sec. 106, Cr.P.C., that is to say, to form an unlawful assembly and by means of that unlawful assembly to overawe and intimidate other persons, preventing them from doing what they are legally entitled to do and compelling them to abandon their property which they are entitled to keep, does actually amount to a breach of the peace of a serious nature, an order under sec. 106, Cr.P.C., is legal—Ibid.

(i) Rangoon High Court.—The words “involving a breach of the peace” and the expression “breach of the peace” itself have been the subject of numerous and conflicting decisions. The words themselves are vague and susceptible of more than one interpretation. The matter has been dealt with in four old rulings of the Chief Court of Lower Burma and of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, Upper Burma, all under the Code of 1898. In 1 L.B.R. 262, (Crown v Wei Taung) the question was considered whether a person convicted of an offence under sec. 504, I.P. Code could be ordered to keep the peace under this section. It has been held that such an offence may, but does not necessarily, involve a breach of the peace and that even if a breach of the peace occurs, it is not the person accused under sec. 504, I.P. Code who is guilty of it. This ruling was briefly followed in 2 L.B.R. 125 (King-Emp v Ma Hla Bon) a case where a bond had been ordered on a conviction under sec. 291,

I. P. Code. It has been laid down there that obscene abuse does not necessarily involve a breach of the peace. In 1 U.B.R. 4, 1 Cr.L.J. 555 (King-Emp. v. Ni Kun Ya) an offence under sec. 291, I. P. Code has been discriminated from one under sec. 504, I. P. Code and it has been held that uttering obscene abuse in a public place to the annoyance of others could amount to a breach of the peace if there was a finding to that effect. The public peace could be broken by angry words as well as by blows or deeds. An older ruling (1893-1900) L.B.R. 50 (Queen-Emp. v. Nga So Pe) to the opposite effect was not referred to. In a very recent case it has been held that the words "involving a breach of the peace" denote offences where either a breach of the peace was a necessary ingredient in the offence committed, or where a breach of the peace has actually been committed during the course of the commission of the offence of one party or the other. The mere use of abusive language in a public place is not of itself a breach of the peace, though of course it is likely to lead to one. It is not one of the offences affecting the public tranquillity mentioned in this section. The section itself provides for cases where threatening words amount to criminal intimidation, or where threatening gestures amount to an assault. The words "breach of the public peace" have not only in popular usage but in law, the significance of a disturbance of the peace by something more than mere abusive or obscene words, that is to say, by resort, if not to actual violence, to threats of it. In other words, the word 'peace' is used as a synonym for security rather than for tranquillity. Therefore where an accused person is convicted of an offence under sec. 291, I. P. Code an order under this section cannot be made unless there is a finding that active criminal intimidation or assault, etc., have actually occurred in consequence of the obscene abuse—Maung Kyi Nyo, A.I.R. 1910 Rang. 50, 41 Cr.L.J. 421, 187 I.C. 149. The words "offences involving a breach of the peace" mean offences in which a breach of the peace is an ingredient and not offences provoking or likely to lead to a breach of the peace—Maung Po Aung v. The King, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 95 (96), 41 Cr.L.J. 495, 187 I.C. 609, following Arun, 30 Cal. 366.

(j) Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court.—This Court has not clearly decided this point but disposed of the case where it arose, on the wider interpretation of these words—Haroon v. Sumri, 33 Cr.L.J. 713, 139 I.C. 130, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 87, 26 S.L.R. 18, 1932 Cr.C. 383, Ind. Rul. 1932 Sind 98.

There is, therefore, a conflict of opinion on this point. The view of the Allahabad and Bombay High Courts.

221. Findings:—(a) When a person is convicted of offences which do not, in themselves and apart from any other incidents, come within the terms of this section, it is incumbent on the Magistrate to record a clear finding with respect to the facts which, in his opinion, makes the section applicable to the case—Baidya Nath v. Nibaran, 30 Cal. 93. Unless the offence is one which necessarily involves a breach of the peace there must be an express finding by the Court that the offence did in fact involve a breach of the peace—Rafatulla v. Rajek, 31 C.W.N. 988, 32 Cr.L.J. 828, 132 I.C. 96, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 646; Abdul Gafur v. Muhammad Mirza, 35 C.W.N. 1150, 33 Cr.L.J. 82, 131 I.C. 1187, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 645, 59 Cal. 659, 1931 Cr.C. 845, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 67; Jib Lal v. Jagmohan, 26 Cal. 576; Sheo Bhajan v. Moswai, 27 Cal. 983; Abdul Ali, 43 Cal. 671, 23 Cr.L.J. 108, 20 C.W.N. 197, 17 Cr.L.J. 211, 31 I.C. 951; Haroon v. Sumri, 33 Cr.L.J. 713, 139 I.C. 130, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 87; 26 S.L.R. 18, 1932 Cr.C. 383, Ind. Rul. 1932 Sind 98; Rajaram v. Gotinda, 25 Cr.L.J. 1064, 81 I.C. 888, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 36; Bans Gopal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 45, 1938 O.W.N. 1361, 1939 O.L.R. 19, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 11, 40 Cr.L.J. 183, 179 I.C. 269.

(b) Section 323, I. P. C.:—Where the accused is convicted under sec. 323, I. P. C., (hurt) he cannot be bound down to keep the peace merely on the ground that the parties were on bad terms. There must be a further finding that a breach of the peace was involved in the occurrence—Md. Rahim, 89 I.C. 1025, 23 A.L.J. 1053, 26 Cr.L.J. 1157, A.I.R. 1925 All 111; Emp. v. Atma Ram, 99 I.C. 120, 49 All. 131, 28 Cr.L.J. 88, A.I.R. 1927 All 157. These two cases were dissented from in Nazir-ud-din, 31

Cr.L.J. 859, 144 I.C. 954, A.I.R. 1933 All. 609, 1933 A.L.J. 1315, 1933 Cr.C. 981, where the following principles of law were enunciated. By the words "assault or other offence involving a breach of the peace" the Legislature clearly intended to convey that the offence of assault did involve a breach of the peace, and a fortiori the offence of actually causing hurt to a person must also involve a breach of the peace. It is not necessary that the public should be assaulted or hurt, or that the offence should take place in public. The offence itself is a breach of the peace whether it takes place in a private room or in the open street. There is no justification for the view that a breach of the peace necessarily means a breach of the public peace. It follows that the offences of assault and of causing hurt necessarily involve a breach of the peace. Consequently, if a Magistrate finds that an offence of causing hurt has been committed, it is not necessary for him to come to a separate finding that a breach of the peace was involved. See also Abdulla v. Crown, 63 I.C. 869, 2 Lah. 279, 22 Cr.L.J. 709; K.E. v. Ramani, 99 I.C. 353, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 101, 3 O.W.N. 11 (Sup.), 28 Cr.L.J. 144, dissenting from Dubri, 71 I.C. 691, 8 O.L.J. 318, 24 Cr.L.J. 227 and Durga, 72 I.C. 955, A.I.R. 1923 Oudh 37, 24 Cr.L.J. 421; Hayat Khan, 33 Cr.L.J. 746, 139 I.C. 127, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 435, 13 Lah. 336, 33 P.L.R. 588, 1932 Cr.C. 581, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 554; Emp. v. Jafar, 46 All. 105, 25 Cr.L.J. 906, 81 I.C. 412, A.I.R. 1924 All. 306; Surajpal v. Kamta, 35 Cr.L.J. 281, 146 I.C. 918, 10 O.W.N. 1228. Though in all ordinary cases of conviction under sec. 323, I. P. C., there is a conviction for an offence involving a breach of the peace, still the desirability of taking security must depend upon how far the circumstances indicate that a breach of the peace is likely to occur—Mewa Lal, 51 All. 540, 30 Cr.L.J. 686 (837), 115 I.C. 789, A.I.R. 1929 All. 349, Ind. Rul. 1929 All. 613, 1929 A.L.J. 340. Where the offence of hurt was committed under such circumstances that it clearly implies the use of violence and a breach of the peace (e.g., assaulting a prosecution witness in a public place), the order for security was not improper—Ramastwami Thevan, 21 Cr.L.J. 455, 41 M.L.J. 485.

(c) Section 504, I. P. C.:—An offence punishable under sec. 504, I. P. C., does not necessarily involve a breach of the peace. It involves only an intention to prove a breach of the "public peace," or knowledge that the provocation given is likely to cause a breach of the "public peace." Such an offence cannot be said to be one "involving a breach of the peace" and if a conviction takes place under sec. 504, I. P. C., and no other section, an order under sec. 106, Cr. P. C., cannot properly be made—Lodha Ram, 33 Cr.L.J. 193, 135 I.C. 691, 8 C.W.N. 1286, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 33, 7 Luck 573, 1932 Cr.C. 65, Ind. Rul. 1932 Oudh 51. A contrary view was, however, taken by the Bombay High Court in Emp. v. Sayad Yacob, 43 Bom. 554, 21 Bom.L.R. 270. Where the Court not only finds the accused guilty under sec. 504, I. P. C., but clearly holds in addition that the accused had the intention to break the peace, an order under sec. 106, Cr. P. C., is legal—Abdul Gafur v. Mahmud Mirza, 33 Cr.L.J. 82, 131 I.C. 1187, 35 C.W.N. 1150, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 615, 59 Cal. 659, 1931 Cr.C. 845, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 67. See also Note 230.

(d) Appellate Court:—Where an Appellate Court in affirming a conviction for theft, thought proper to add to his judgment an order under sec. 106, Cr. P. C., binding the accused to keep the peace, without an express finding that the accused committed an offence within the terms of sec. 106, the order under sec. 106, Cr. P. C., is without jurisdiction. The fact that there was evidence on record, which if accepted, would have shown that such an offence had been committed, was not enough to justify the order—Kinoo Sheik, 6 C.W.N. 678, 29 Cal. 393. See also Thirumal Reddy, 25 Cr.L.J. 294, 76 I.C. 966, 30 M.L.T. 348, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 133.

221A. Offences involving no breach of the peace:—(a) Merely being a member of an unlawful assembly (sec. 143, I. P. C.)—Abdulla, 2 Lah. 279; Jib Lal v. Jagmohan, 26 Cal. 576; Raj Narain v. Bhagabat, 35 Cal. 315; Kannaokaran, 26 Mad. 469; Shro Bhajan v. Mesawi, 27 Cal. 983; Abdul Ali, 43 Cal. 671, 20 C.W.N. 197; an offence under sec. 143, I. P. C., is now expressly excluded from this section by the present amendment; where a person is made constructively liable for an offence by calling in the aid of the provisions of sec. 149, I. P. C., it is not proper to take action under this section—Saun Pande v. Emp., A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 279, 1934 Cr.C. 775, 150 I.C. 945, 35 Cr.L.J. 1159, 11 O.W.N. 992; *Manni Lal v. C. 14, 10 R.O. 222, 39 Cr.L.J. 341, 1938 O.W.N. 218, 1939 O.L.R. 117; but such an order can properly be made if he is convicted under secs. 147 and 323, I. P. C., both of which involve a breach of the peace—Manni Lal v. Emp., supra; see also Note 219;

(b) criminal trespass with intent to have illicit intercourse with the complainant's wife—Subal v. Ramkanai, 25 Cal. 628; it is not correct to say that an order under sec. 105, Cr. P. C., might follow a conviction under sec. 452, I. P. C.—Jung Bahadur Misir v. Mahadeo Shaw, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 320, 40 Cr.L.J. 721, 182 I.C. 850, 12 R.C. 112;

Code does not involve a breach of the peace and the order under this section cannot be sustained in case of a conviction under that section—Maddukuri Subba Rao, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 55, 1939 M. Cr. C. 9, 1939 M.W.N. 1012, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 750, 50 M.L.W. 511, 41 Cr.L.J. 235, 185 I.C. 753. But see Rafatulla v. Ranjit, quoted in Note 221;

(d) house trespass with intent to commit theft—Morali, 4 L.B.R. 277; house-trespass after preparation to commit hurt, assault, etc. (sec. 452, I. P. C.)—Santosh, 27 Cr.L.J. 571 (Lah.);

(e) robbery—Muthurakka, 18 M.L.T. 121, 16 Cr.L.J. 611;

(f) offence under sec. 297, I. P. C.—Abdulla, 2 Lah. 279;

(g) wrongful confinement—Md. Afzal, 24 Cr.L.J. 271 (Lah.); but if the accused is found to have violently seized another person, tied his hands and wrongfully confined him in an open garden, then it amounts to an offence involving a breach of the peace—Kuppa Reddiar, 47 Mad. 846 (849), 47 M.L.J. 232, 25 Cr.L.J. 1096;

(h) defamation (even though the person defamed was provoked to commit a breach of the peace)—Syad Yacoob, 43 Bom. 554 (557), 21 Bom.L.R. 270; see Ankulal Saha v. Sadhan Chandra Mandal in Note 220;

(i) attempt to seduce married women and behaving indecently and immodestly towards them—Arun, 30 Cal. 366;

(j) an offence under sec. 3 (12) of the Madras Towns Nuisance Act (III of 1889). Appachi Goundan, 1937 M. Cr. C. 316. For contra see District Magistrate of Coimbatore v. Dasappa Naicken, 1933 M.W.N. 548 and Balian, 40 Cr.L.J. 165, 179 I.C. 169, 1938 M.W.N. 588, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 152, 48 M.L.W. 138, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 795.

222. "Convicted of such offences":—This section refers only to parties convicted of rioting, assault, etc. Therefore, where a person was acquitted of a charge of unlawful assembly and trespass, etc., the Magistrate would be in error in demanding security from him on the same evidence—Diloo Singh v. Ootin Singh, 22 W.R. 9. So also, where the Magistrate only found that the accused threatened to beat the complainant, but did not convict the accused for assault or criminal intimidation, an order under this section was illegal—Subal v. Ramkanai, 25 Cal. 628. The conviction must be for an offence specified in this section. Therefore, where the accused was charged with criminal intimidation, but was convicted of theft or unlawful assembly (sec. 143, I. P. C.) an order under this section was not legal—Kishore Sarkar, 8 C.W.N. 517; Raj Narain v. Bhagabat, 35 Cal. 315; Abdulla, 2 Lah. 279 (280), 22 Cr.L.J. 709.

Summary trial.—An order under this section may be made even if the conviction takes place in a summary trial, provided the Magistrate has jurisdiction—Meghu, 7 O.C. 338; Lachman, 1886 A.W.N. 181.

223. Magistrate empowered:—Since section 18 confers full powers of a Presidency Magistrate on an Honorary Presidency Magistrate, the latter can take action under this section—Hassan v. Yas Kubar, 7 Bom L R 833, 2 Cr L J. 770. If any Bench of Magistrates has first class powers, the Bench is competent to pass an order under this section—See sec. 15 (2). A Sub-Divisional Magistrate is expressly mentioned in this section; such a Magistrate, even though he is a Magistrate of the second class, can pass an order binding over a person to keep the peace for a period exceeding six months. The fact that the order carries with it an alternative sentence of imprisonment in case the security is not furnished, which will be beyond his ordinary powers under sec. 32, cannot have the effect of limiting the powers conferred on him under this section. Such powers are independent of his powers in the matter of passing substantive sentences of imprisonment—Raja Singh, 37 A L J 230, 13 A L J. 268, 16 Cr L J 350, 28 I C 734.

224. "At the time of passing sentence":—The order for security is to be made at the time of passing the sentence. Where a second class Magistrate convicted a person for assault and sentenced him to a fine, but ordered the sentence to be in abeyance pending the order of the District Magistrate for binding over the person, and the District Magistrate ordered the accused to furnish security, held that the order of the District Magistrate was bad in law—Nura, 22 P R 1901. If a Magistrate of the 2nd or 3rd class is of opinion that the accused should be bound down under this section, he must refer the whole case to a superior Magistrate under section 349, without passing any sentence himself—Rahimuddi, 35 Cal 1093. The second or third class Magistrate when referring a case under sec. 349 cannot even convict the accused. Section 106 contemplates that before an order requiring security can be passed under it, the accused shall have been convicted by a Magistrate who is not inferior to a Magistrate of the first class. Reading sections 106 and 349 together, it follows that the conviction and order under section 106 must be passed by one and the same officer, and when a second or third class Magistrate refers a case to a superior Magistrate for an order under sec. 106, the conviction and sentence must be passed by the superior Magistrate and not by the Magistrate of the 2nd or 3rd class. Therefore, where a third class Magistrate convicted the accused and then submitted the case to the District Magistrate with a recommendation that the accused should be bound over to keep the peace, and the District Magistrate ordered security under this section, the order was ultra vires and illegal—Mahmudi v. Ali Sheikh, 21 Cal 622.

A second-class Magistrate ought not to pass any sentence at all, if he refers the case to a superior Magistrate for an order under sec. 106. Where a second class Magistrate convicting the accused under secs. 147 and 325, I P C., sentenced him under sec. 147, I P C., but passed no sentence under sec. 325, I P C., and forwarded the proceedings to the Sub divisional Magistrate in order that the accused should be bound down under sec. 106 of this Code, held that the action of the 2nd class Magistrate was wrong. If he thought that the binding down was necessary, he should have forwarded the whole case to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, without passing any part of the sentences (i.e., the sentence under sec. 147, I P C.) himself—Rahimuddi, 35 Cal 1093.

An order for recognizance or for security, under this section must be passed at the time of deciding the original case. If no such order is then made, the only procedure open to the Magistrate is to take subsequent proceedings under section 107—Ram Adin 21 A L J 839, 25 Cr L J 965.

An appellate Court can pass an order for security on confirmation of the sentence passed by the original Court. If the appellate Court sets aside the sentence passed by the original Court, but passes no sentence itself, and makes an order for security, the order is illegal—Nura, 1901 P R 22; Bhaskar 3 B H C R 1.

225. Order for security:—An order under this section can only be made in the presence of the accused. An order made at the instance of the prosecutor, behind the back of the accused, is bad in law—Bhaskar 3 B H C R. 1. The security ordered under this section must be for keeping the peace. An order for furnishing security for good behaviour under this section is bad in law—Mahabir, 16 A L J 280, 19 Cr L J

439. The security must be in addition to an award of punishment; therefore, a Magistrate cannot order security in lieu of other punishment—Nura, 1901 P.R. 22.

Who can be bound down:—Only the accused person can be asked to give security, but not the complainant (in a case under sec. 323, I. P. C.). If the Magistrate considers it necessary to demand security from the complainant, he must record a separate proceeding and give the complainant an opportunity to be heard under secs 117 and 118—Kallu, 1902 P.R. 3. The Magistrate is not competent to take security from a witness for the defence on the ground that his evidence in the trial proved that he was one of the rioters—Kadar Khan, 5 Mad 380.

'Proportionate to his means'—The provision for taking security being a preventive measure intended to preserve future good conduct, it should not be made an instrument of punishment by demanding excessive security disproportionate to the means of the person and thus making him undergo further imprisonment—Rama, 16 Bom 372; Kala Chand, 6 Cal. 14; Wasya, 1901 P.R. 28; Ali, 1900 P.R. 17; Ram Singh, 1883 P.R. 1; Jayava, 1890 P.R. 30; Raza Ali, 23 All 80. See Note 293 under sec. 118.

226. Cases when order should not be made:—Perhaps, it was not contemplated that an order to furnish security under this section would be coupled with a non-appealable sentence. It should rarely, if ever, be necessary to do this, and it should certainly not be done until it has been ascertained that the accused is able to furnish security—Emp v. Nga Tun Lu, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 363, 13 Rang 287. An order for security should not be made when a sentence of transportation or imprisonment for a long time is passed—Kyaw Wa, 8 L.B.R. 34, 2 I.C. 531, 10 Cr.L.J. 69; or when such an order would prevent the party bound down from exercising his lawful right—Nanda Kumar, 11 C.W.N. 1128 (1132), 6 Cr.L.J. 321. Thus, where upon the complainant trying to take possession of the land in the possession of the accused, the latter used more force than was necessary to prevent the complainant from taking possession, and the accused was punished for rioting, it was held that he should not be bound down under this section as such order would have the effect of preventing him from resisting any further attempt by the complainant to take possession of his land—Nahar, 11 C.W.N. 840 (841), 6 Cr.L.J. 40. In Bepin v. Pranakul, 11 C.W.N. 176 (177), it has been held that if it is necessary, in order to prevent a breach of the peace, to bind down the party entitled to possession, and if the effect of such order is to prevent him from taking possession of the property, it is desirable that the other party should also be bound down under sec. 107.

It is ordinarily objectionable, when the accused is convicted only of some petty offences under the Madras Towns Nuisance Act (III of 1884), that he should also be bound over for a considerable time under this section, for this binding over would involve a far more serious punishment than the main sentence. Those guilty of disorderly and riotous conduct are usually poor men who may not be able to find security, in which case they would be liable to be imprisoned for a substantial period. This section should, therefore, be very sparingly invoked where the offence committed is a petty one—Balian, 40 Cr.L.J. 165, 179 I.C. 169, 1938 M.W.N. 588, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 152, 48 M.L.W. 138, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 795.

227. Sub-section (3)—Power of Appellate Court to direct security:—The words "including a Court hearing appeals under sec. 407" (added in this sub-section by the Amendment Act of 1923) show that an Appellate Court can direct security even though the original Court (e.g., a 2nd or 3rd class Magistrate) was not empowered to pass order. "It has been held in some cases that an Appellate Court cannot pass an order under sub-section (3) unless the person convicted has been sentenced by a Court not inferior to that of a first class Magistrate. This result does not appear to have been intended, and it is proposed to remove the restriction"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914). This amendment gives effect to the following rulings: Solai Gounden, 37 Mad. 153; Doraisami, 30 Mad. 182; Dharam Das, 33 All. 48; Bhansingh, 33 Bom. 33; Talak Rai, 43 All. 372; Bachan, 2 P.L.J. 21; Hasan Beg, 25 Cr.L.J. 657, 81 I.C. 145, 19 N.L.R. 154, A.I.R. 1921 Nag. 49.

In view of this Amendment, certain Calcutta and Punjab decisions (which it is unnecessary to cite) are rendered obsolete

There is nothing in sub-section (3) to limit the time when the order can be made by the Appellate Court. That Court has power to order a bond, even after disposal of the appeal and confirmation of the sentence passed by the trial Court—Hussein Gulam, 30 Bom L.R. 373, 29 Cr L J 502 (503). An Appellate Court can require the accused to furnish security even after the working out of the substantive punishment passed by the original Court, and such an order would not amount to an enhancement of punishment under sec. 423 (1) (b)—Miran, 1905 P.R. 21; Maharaj Singh, 20 Cr L J. 760 (Nag).

An Appellate Court can cancel an order of security passed by the original Court, while upholding the sentence—Abdul v Amiran, 30 Cal 101. But if the conviction and sentence are cancelled by the Appellate Court, the order of security is also cancelled ipso facto under sub-section (2), and it is not competent to the Appellate Court to order the security to be continued—Chajju Mal, 1895 A.W.N. 141

A Court of Appeal, while passing an order under this section which was not passed by the Trial Court, need not issue notice on the appellant to show cause why such an order should not be passed—Ram Adhin, 25 Cr L J 965, 81 IC 613, 21 A.L.J. 839, A.I.R. 1924 All 230. But see Jai Singh, 27 Cr L J 1112, 97 IC 424, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 37. But in Dewan Singh, 37 Cr L J 63, 159 IC 246, 16 P.L.T. 793, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 36, the view expressed in Ram Adhin's case was adopted

228. Revision:—This section gives a discretion to the Magistrate to pass an order for security, and the High Court is reluctant to interfere upon a mere question of discretion, unless the order is on the face of it such an improper exercise of discretion as to require interference—Dharam Raj, 42 All 345 (346), 18 A.L.J. 300, 21 Cr L J 288. The High Court in revision set aside an order under sec 106, where the findings did not sufficiently and clearly show that the acts for which the accused were convicted necessarily involved a breach of the peace—Abdul Ali, 43 Cal 671, 20 C.W.N. 197, 17 Cr L J. 241.

Appeal:—No sentence which would not otherwise be liable to appeal shall be appealable merely on the ground that the person convicted is ordered to find security to keep the peace, vide sec 415, Cr P C. There is no general provision in the Code for allowing an appeal from an order of imprisonment in default of furnishing security under sec. 123, Cr P C—Emp v Nga Tun Lu, A.I.R. 1935 Rang 363, 13 Rang 287

228A. Court-fee:—Under sec 35 of the Court-fees Act, VII of 1870, the Governor-General in Council has been pleased to remit fees chargeable on security-bonds for the keeping of the peace by, or good behaviour of, persons other than the tenants. (Vide Notification No 4650, dated the 10th September, 1889, published in the Gazette of India, 1889, Part I, p 506)

B.—Security for keeping the Peace in other Cases and Security for Good Behaviour

7. (1) Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is informed that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace, or to disturb the public tranquillity, or to do any wrongful act which is likely to probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity, the Magistrate, if in his opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding, may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace for such period not exceeding one year as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

(2) Proceedings shall not be taken under this section unless either the person informed against or the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended, is within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and no proceeding shall be taken before any Magistrate, other than a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, unless both the person informed against and the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended, are within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction.

(3) When any Magistrate not empowered to proceed under sub-section (1) has reason to believe that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity, and that such breach of the peace or disturbance cannot be prevented otherwise than by detaining such person in custody, such Magistrate may, after recording his reasons, issue a warrant for his arrest (if he is not already in custody or before the Court), and may send him before a Magistrate empowered to deal with the case, together with a copy of his reasons.

(4) A Magistrate before whom a person is sent under this section may in his discretion detain such person in custody until the completion of the inquiry hereinafter prescribed

(4) A Magistrate before whom a person is sent under sub-section (3) may in his discretion detain such person in custody pending further action by himself under this Chapter.

Change:—This section has been amended by sec. 16 of the Cr P. Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923).

The words "if in his opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding" have been added with the object of preventing the Magistrate from proceeding upon any and every information. The words "is informed" in this section are too wide and the amendment, therefore, makes it incumbent on Magistrates to be satisfied, by some sort of inquiry, whether private or public, or by taking evidence whether in camera or in open Court, about the correctness and veracity of that information before they take any action. See the Legislative Assembly Debates, January 18, 1923, pp 1246-1254.

"We also recommend an amendment of section 107 (4), as we think that the powers conferred by the sub-section as it stands are unnecessarily wide. We think that it will be sufficient that the Magistrate should have power to detain the accused in custody 'pending further action by himself under this Chapter,' and we have made this change."
—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

229. Object of section:—The intention of this section is preventive and not penal—Mahabir Gope v. Samratih Singh, A.I.R. 1910 Pat. 252, 1910 P.W.N. 52. The object of this section is the prevention and not the punishment of offences.

It is intended, not to punish persons for anything that they have done in the past, but to prevent them from doing in the future something that may probably occasion a breach of the peace. Therefore, where offences have been committed the proper procedure is to institute regular trials for those offences, under the Penal Code, and not to take proceedings under this section—Srikanta, 1 C.L.J. 616, 2 Cr.L.J. 554, 9 C.W.N. 898; Jiwan Singh, 124 I.C. 706 AIR 1930 All. 408, 1930 Cr.C. 565, 1930 A.L.J. 866, Ind. Rul. 1930 All. 562, 52 All. 593, 31 Cr.L.J. 710; Shadi Lal, 12 Lah. 457, 32 Cr.L.J. 1207 (1210), 134 I.C. 585, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 191, 32 P.L.R. 138, 1931 Cr.C. 311, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 969; Sett Sukhlal Karnani, 39 Cr.L.J. 992, 178 I.C. 52, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 583, 66 C.L.J. 564; Babu Ram, AIR 1932 Lah. 101 (103), 1932 Cr.C. 121, 33 P.L.R. 370. See also Maruthapali Goundar, AIR. 1937 Mad. 356, 1937 M.W.N. 48, 169 I.C. 97, 9 R.M. 685, 38 Cr.L.J. 699, 45 M.L.W. 308.

Proceedings under this section are proceedings for the preservation of the peace and not for the preservation of morals—Om Radhe v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Sind 238 (240), 183 I.C. 460, 40 Cr.L.J. 803, 12 R.S. 55

Before a person is called upon to show cause why he should not execute a bond, it must be established, (a) that he is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or (b) to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity. It is the individual who is contemplated in the section and it is the individual act that must be brought home to him. The only case in which a person can be punished for the wrongs done by others is where he abets or instigates the offence. Failing that, no person in the world can be visited with any penalty for acts done by others on whom he has no control, and for whose conduct he cannot be held responsible. A person who holds a respectable position in the community and wields an enormous influence with its members, cannot be proceeded against under this section for acts done by the members of his community unless it is shown that he himself is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion the breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity—Mr. Abdul Qayum, AIR. 1939 Lah. 363, 41 P.L.R. 318, 40 Cr.L.J. 901, 184 I.C. 279, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 554, 12 R.L. 196

230. Information:—The information must be of a clear and definite kind, directly affecting the person against whom process is issued, and should disclose tangible facts and details, so that it may afford notice to such person of what he is to come forward to meet—Jai Prakash, 6 All. 26; Prankrishna, 8 C.W.N. 180; Ainuddin, 24 Cr.L.J. 230 (Cal.) When a Magistrate receives verbal communication from certain persons, he should make inquiry into the truth of the matter before he proceeds to take action thereupon. He cannot draw up proceedings under this section upon vague and general statements which do not amount to any direct accusation or allegation—Grant, 2 P.L.T. 669, 22 Cr.L.J. 745; Nutanund, 3 Lah.L.J. 480. The Oudh Chief Court, however, holds that there is nothing in this section which specifies what the nature of the information should be. Undoubtedly, a prudent Magistrate would not take action, unless the information gave sufficient details against the person in question; but there is nothing in this section laying down any quantum of information as a necessary condition for the Magistrate to take action. If he receives information of the barest kind to the effect that a certain person is a habitual thief, it is within his powers to take action under this chapter, and the legality of his action cannot be questioned—Ram Ghulam, 2 Luck. 157, 23 Cr.L.J. 744, AIR. 1927 Oudh 306

A Magistrate ought not to act under this section upon a statement by a private person not made on oath or solemn affirmation—Jianji, 6 B.H.C.R. 1; Chamrao v. Kashi, 8 W.R. 85; or upon hearsay evidence—Mohan, 21 Cr.L.J. 560 (Nag.); or upon conversation out of Court with persons, however, respectable—Bahua, 6 All. 132; or upon personal knowledge of certain facts which he obtains from sources outside the record—Mathura, 14 A.L.J. 769, 17 Cr.L.J. 484. But in acting under secs. 107, 108, 109, or sec. 110 of the Code the Magistrate does not, so long as he does not record an order in writing in accordance with sec. 112 of the Code calling upon any person to show cause, act judicially. In those sections complete discretion is given to the Magistrate either to act or not to act on the information received by him. The discretion to issue a notice under sec. 112 in pursuance of an information received by him is absolute and uncontrolled by any conditions whatsoever. It is nowhere provided that the information contemplated by those sections must be information gathered from legal evidence, nor is there any provision as to the source from which the information may be received. The information may be conveyed to the Magistrate by a private individual or by an Officer of the Police. But in either case he is given a discretion to issue or not to issue a notice to the person against whom he has received the information to show cause why he should not furnish security for keeping the peace or to be of good behaviour—Laxmi Narain, 34 Cr.L.J. 42 (44), 140 I.C. 536, A.I.R. 1932 All. 670, 1932 A.L.J. 880, 1932 Cr.C. 822, 54 All. 1036, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 668. The information which leads to action under sec. 107 may be of the most varied kind. It may be oral, sworn or not sworn, and need not be in writing. It may be from any source, official or unofficial, formal or informal. It may be derived from the Magistrate's own knowledge. He is not bound to disclose the source or the nature of the information received—Anantapadmabhabhai, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 975 (976), 54 Mad. 422, 1930 M.W.N. 1100, 32 M.L.W. 784, 59 M.L.J. 914, 129 I.C. 70, 1930 Cr.C. 1191, 32 Cr.L.J. 217.

A police report is in itself a sufficient information on which a Magistrate may issue a summons, but it is in no sense evidence upon which he can determine under sec. 118 whether it is necessary to take a bond to keep the peace or for good behaviour—Behari v. Mahomed, 12 W.R. 60; Brindaban, 10 W.R. 41. A report of a subordinate Magistrate is credible information to authorise a Magistrate to pass a preliminary order under this section—Jai Prakash, 6 All. 26 (F.B.); but if unsupported by other evidence, it cannot form a sufficient ground for final adjudication under sec. 118—Jivanji, 6 B.H.C.R. 1; Dalpatram, 5 B.H.C.R. 105.

Where on the basis of a police report the Magistrate issued warning notices on both parties, it cannot be said that he, by issuing the warning order, became functus officio and could not pass an order for drawing up proceedings under this section against one party on the basis of the same police report because there is no provision in the Criminal Procedure Code whereby such warning order can be passed by him—Abdul Mannaf v. Mahammad Nurulla Chaudhury, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 506, 31 Cr.L.J. 58, 120 I.C. 256.

But the Magistrate is not entitled to initiate proceedings upon facts and information which had already been the subject of inquiry under sec. 107, or in connection with charges under the Penal Code brought against the same persons, and which had ended in favour of the accused. Thus, where there has been a number of cases and proceedings going on for a long time between the parties, and in all these cases the persons accused of the offences were either discharged or acquitted and the proceedings under sec. 107 fell through, the Magistrate cannot initiate fresh proceedings under sec. 107 upon the same facts and information—Konda Reddy, 41 Mad. 246, 41 I.C. 990, 18 Cr.L.J. 878. See also Satwaji, 1933 M.W.N. 915; Kutti Goundan, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 189 and Rangaswami, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 842 (844), 118 I.C. 504, 30 Cr.L.J. 931, 2 M. Cr. C. 287, 1929 Cr.C. 610.

Inquiry:—Apart from the provisions of sec. 202, Cr. P. C., a Magistrate proceeding under Chap. VIII has the right to call for a report from the police before issuing a notice under sec. 112, Cr. P. C.—Sanjivi Reddy v. Koneri Reddy, 93 I.C. 8, 49 Mad. 315, 23 M.L.W. 327, 50 M.L.J. 460, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 521; Laxmi Narain, 34 Cr.L.J. 42, 140 I.C. 536, A.I.R. 1932 All. 670, 1932 A.L.J. 880, 1932 Cr.C. 882, 54 All. 1036, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 668; Egambera Mudali v. Murugappa Chetti, 2 Weir 51. For contra see Hari Singh v. Jagta, 111 I.C. 450, 29 Cr.L.J. 866, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 691, 29 P.L.R. 666. There is nothing in the Code which forbids a Magistrate before whom information has been lodged for taking proceedings under this section, to refer the matter to the police for preliminary enquiry and the contrary view taken in Hari Singh v. Jagta, supra, cannot be supported either on principle or authority—Ismail v. Jagat Singh, 40 Cr.L.J. 193, 179 I.C. 353, AIR 1938 Lah 861, 40 P.L.R. 579, 11 R. 1938 Lah. 640. Apart from the provisions of sec. 203, Cr. P. C., if a Magistrate is satisfied in the case of an application under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., after making an inquiry himself or through some other agency that the apprehension of a breach of the peace complained of does not exist, he need not make an order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., and must refuse the application—Shams-ud-din v. Ram Dayal, 25 Cr L J 89, 76 I.C. 25, AIR 1924 Lah. 630.

231. "Likely to commit breach of the peace":—The information regarding past acts alone would not be enough to justify an order requiring a person to show cause why he should not be directed to furnish security for keeping the peace. Something more is necessary, viz., the likelihood of the commission in the near future of a particular breach of the peace or a wrongful act likely to lead to a breach of the peace—Maruthapali Goundar, AIR 1937 Mad 356, 1937 M.W.N. 48, 169 I.C. 97, 9 R.M. 685, 38 Cr L J 699, 45 M.L.W. 308; Kumarappa Chettiar, AIR 1938 Mad 213, 1937 M.W.N. 1072, 1937 M. Cr. C. 314. The information must contain evidence of some specific conduct on the part of the accused from which a reasonable and immediate inference can be drawn that the accused is likely to commit a breach of the peace, and it is only on information of this character that the Magistrate should initiate proceedings under this section—Shadi Lal, 12 Lah 457, AIR 1931 Lah. 191, 1931 Cr.C. 311, 134 I.C. 585, 32 P.L.R. 138, 32 Cr L J 1207 (1209); Shimbu, 21 P.R. 1888. Following the principle it was held that it was not sufficient to justify action against a person under this section when he caused mental excitement, without anything more, to a crowd, which was in an excited mood, by raising certain objectionable shouts—Suraj Prakash, 32 Cr L J 693, 131 I.C. 205, AIR 1931 Lah. 184, 1931 Cr.C. 304, Ind Rul 1931 Lah 445. The mere finding that the accused is a bad character and that it is not right in any way to leave him without a guarantee, is wholly insufficient to justify an order under this section—Shimbu, 21 P.R. 1888. Where the evidence on the record disclosed reliable statements that persons who were ordered to furnish security to keep the peace were men who had shown by their acts and general behaviour that their object was to disturb the public tranquillity (e.g., by wounding the religious feelings of the Muhammadans of a certain locality) it was held that the Magistrate was justified in making such order—Chuni Lal, 14 A.L.J. 430, 17 Cr L J 301.

The information must shew that there is a strong and reasonable probability of a breach of the peace and not merely a bare possibility—Abdul Haq 20 W.R. 57; Malik Sultan v. Bano, 1903 P.L.R. 115, Chanbasawa 6 Bom.L.R. 862. The act likely to cause a breach of the peace must be an impending one and not one likely to happen at some future time; it must be shewn to be in contemplation at the time of the information given; and the fact that a person has done a wrongful act in the past should not give rise to the inference that he is likely to do the same again—Skutaram, 6 Bom.L.R. 663, Basdeo, 26 All 190; Shadi Lal, supra; Zaffar Beg, AIR 1927 Pat 231, 103 I.C. 607, 28 Cr L J 719, 8 P.L.T. 370, Mid Abdul Qayum, AIR 1939 Lah 363, 41 P.L.R. 318, 40 Cr L J 901, 184 I.C. 279, 11 R. 1939 Lah 551, 12 R.L. 196. The act of which information is given and in respect of which security is required must be an act which is shown to be in contemplation at the time of the information given and not merely one a repetition of which may be expected or apprehended from past misconduct of the kind without anything further—Maruthapali Goundar, AIR 1937 Mad. 356, 1937 M.W.N. 48, 45 M.L.W. 308, 1937 M. Cr. C. 95, 169 I.C. 97, 38 Cr.L.J. 699, 9 R.M. 685, following Queen v. Keder Khan, 5 Mad. 380, 2 Weir 49. What must be proved in order to justify an order under this section is that the persons complained against are likely to break the peace in future. Mere proof of certain acts of violence in the past is not sufficient—Kumarappa Chettiar, AIR 1938 Mad 213, 1937 M.W.N. 1072, 1937 M. Cr. C. 314. The mere existence of enmity between two persons or factions is no ground for instituting proceedings under this section against one or both the parties. In order to bring a case within this section it must be established that a breach of the peace is imminent—Parman Ram, 29 Cr.L.J. 417, 108 I.C. 517, A.I.R. 1928 Lah 243, 10 Lah L.J. 72, 29 P.L.R. 434. Thus, the mere fact that certain persons had made preparation for disturbing the specific tranquillity on the occasion of the last Muharram festival would afford no ground, after the festival has passed without the public tranquillity having been disturbed, for inferring that they would be likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity at the next Muharram, and would not be a sufficient ground for binding them over—Basdeo, 26 All 190; Zulfakar, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 231, 8 P.L.T. 370, 103 I.C. 607, 28 Cr.L.J. 719. But security should be taken in a case where, though the occasion on which the ill-feeling between the parties (Hindus and Mussalmans) first came to a head, had passed without any actual disturbances, there still remained the probability of a recurrence of it in the near future, in fact at any moment—Ayodha Prasad, 8 A.L.J. 1080, 12 Cr.L.J. 493. All those cases referred to apprehensions of a breach of the peace arising out of religious differences between Hindu and Mahomedan communities. The decisions seem to have proceeded on their own facts and as pointed out by Das, J., in Zulfakar, supra, no hard and fast rule can be laid down in cases of this nature. It often happens that religious enthusiasm though acute at a particular moment subsides and no danger of breach of the peace remains. But the principle that to support an order for security it is incumbent on the Crown to show not only that there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace at some time past, but that this likelihood continued to the present date, does not apply to cases where claims are to immovable property and there is no indication that the party of the accused are likely to abandon their claims or to give up the intention of using violence in support of them—Mahabir Gope v. Samrathi Singh, A.I.R. 1940 Pat 252 (253), 1940 P.W.N. 52.

Under this section, it is sufficient to prove that there was some act committed by the accused from which there was a danger of a breach of the peace; it is not necessary to prove that the accused were guilty of some overt act towards a breach of the peace. An overt act causing a breach of the peace would be a substantive offence to be dealt with under the Indian Penal Code—Jwan Singh, 52 All 593, 1930 A.L.J. 866, 31 Cr.L.J. 710. For contrary view see Joti Sarup, 27 Cr.L.J. 1002, 96 I.C. 858, A.I.R. 1926 Lah 689, in which Lachmi Singh, 59 I.C. 374, 1 P.L.T. 681, 12 Cr.L.J. 86 and Mohammad Yakub, 6 I.C. 454, 32 All 571, 11 Cr.L.J. 355, 7 A.L.J. 644 were followed.

232. "Wrongful acts that may occasion breach of the peace":—

A person is liable to be dealt with under sec. 107 not only when he himself is likely to commit a breach of the peace, but also where for any wrongful act on his part other persons may do things which would probably occasion a breach of the peace—Satindra Nath Sen, 32 C.W.N. 477, 29 Cr.L.J. 844, 47 C.L.J. 441, 111 I.C. 396.

There are two distinct sets of circumstances in which a Magistrate may take action under sec. 107; first, where it appears that a person is likely himself to commit a breach of the peace or to disturb the public tranquillity, that is to say, by a direct act, e.g., by committing an assault; and secondly, where a person may be the indirect cause of a breach of the peace or the disturbance of the public tranquillity by doing a certain act; but in the latter case the Magistrate may only take action where the act anticipated is a wrongful act. This section does not authorise action against a person who is expected to do an act which may cause a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity unless that act is wrongful; and the mere fact that the doing of a lawful act by certain persons may lead to the commission of a breach of the peace by other persons, does not authorise the Magistrate to take action against the persons intending to do the lawful act, unless they are themselves likely to commit a breach of the peace or to disturb the public tranquillity—Nga Ti v. Maung Kyaw, 11 Bur L.T. 59, 18 Cr.L.J. 512; Muhammad Yakub, 32 All 571 (575), 6 I.C. 451, 11 Cr.L.J. 355, 7 A.L.J. 649; Shadi Lal, 12 Lah 457, AIR. 1931 Lah. 191, 134 I.C. 585, 32 P.L.R. 138, 32 Cr.L.J. 1207 (1209); Khazan, 7 Lah. 482, 27 Cr.L.J. 1063, 97 I.C. 39, AIR. 1926 Lah. 683, 27 P.L.R. 810; Md. Abdul Qayum, AIR. 1939 Lah 363, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 554, 12 R.L. 196, 41 P.L.R. 318, 41 Cr.L.J. 901, 184 I.C. 279; Babu Ram, AIR. 1932 Lah. 101 (103), 1932 Cr.C. 121, 33 P.L.R. 370; Desikachari, AIR 1915 Mad 81, 25 I.C. 989, 15 Cr.L.J. 661; Dindyal Mozumdar, 34 Cal 935, 11 C.W.N. 1002, 6 Cr.L.J. 230. "Wrongful act" must mean some act wrongful according to some law. This section cannot be intended to authorize a Magistrate to take action to prevent lawful acts which may result in a breach of the peace because of the wrongful or unlawful acts of others. Clearly, the purpose of the section is to allow the law-abiding to follow their lawful avocations in peace and to prevent the law-breakers from committing wrongful acts. This section is intended to be applied against the wrong-doers and not also against the wronged. It was never the intention of the section that the wrong-doers and the wronged should be classed together as wrong-doers and made the subjects of a common complaint and common action. The collection or the acquiescing of collection of women for the purpose of religious instruction, discourse or songs, the meeting together of men and women for a joint satsang or meeting is no offence under the law nor is the education of children. The provisions of Chap VIII, Cr. P. C., are not intended and are not appropriate for the purpose of dealing with such a case—Jasoda Lekhrao v. Emp., AIR 1939 Sind 167 (169), 40 Cr.L.J. 703, 182 I.C. 698, I.L.R. 1939 Kar 662, 12 RS 31.

Threats of violence are sufficient to indicate an intention to commit a breach of the peace and justify an order under this section—Surya Kanta, 31 Cal 350; Kallu, 27 All 92. So also, illegal collection of tolls accompanied with acts of violence and threats of violence in case of non-payment of tolls—Bepin Behari, 21 Cr.L.J. 651 (Cal); an abetment by instigation of the offence of voluntarily causing hurt in a public place is a wrongful act justifying an order under this section—Barnes, 23 Cr.L.J. 391 (Nag).

If disturbance is anticipated regarding holding of rival hats, the proper procedure would be to act under this section. See Note 373.

The words 'wrongful act' mean an act forbidden or declared to be penal or wrongful by the criminal law, and not a mere improper act. The killing of a dedicated bull for the sake of his meat is not a 'wrongful' act—Pir Ali, 21 Cr.L.J. 453, 56 I.C. 437, AIR. 1920 Pat 550. See also Romesh Chunder Sanjal v. Hiru Mondal, 17 Cal. 852.

Under certain limitations the slaughtering of kine by Muhammadans is not illegal. It is the legal right of every person to make such use of his own property as he may think fit, provided that in so doing he does not cause real injury to others or offend against the law, even though he may thereby hurt the susceptibilities of others. The right of Muhammadans to slaughter kine is one to which they are entitled irrespective of custom, and it is only when they abuse the right that its exercise can be interfered with—Shahbaz Khan v. Umrao Puri, 30 All 181 (187). The fact that a Mahomedan in the exercise of his legal right to kill cows may perhaps give offence to his Hindu neighbours and induce them to commit a breach of the peace is no ground for binding over Mahomedans. Where, therefore, two cows were sacrificed so quietly and secretly in a mosque and in a private house that the Hindus did not know of them until the report was made, the Mahomedans concerned were held to be not liable to be bound down—Mahomed Yaqub v. Emp., 32 All 571, 6 I.C. 454, 11 Cr.L.J. 355, 7 A.L.J. 649. But where a cow was sacrificed within sight of the abads of a village in an open space and under a pipal tree near a public thoroughfare within sight of the non-Muslim inhabitants, although there was a slaughter-house in the neighbourhood which was not availed of, with the deliberate intention of wounding the religious feelings of the non-Muslim inhabitants, the act was certainly a wrongful act provoking a breach of the peace—Ibrahim v. Emp., AIR 1937 Lah. 717, 39 P.L.R. 179, 171 I.C. 950.

If there is a dispute between the parties regarding the performance of Puja of an Idol leading to a breach of the peace, proceedings may be drawn up under this section—Surendra v. Shoshi, 42 C.L.J. 127 (130), 52 Cal. 959, 92 I.C. 223, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 437, 27 Cr.L.J. 239

The blowing of a conch in connection with ceremonial acts of worship in accordance with established usage, in a place fixed for the occasional or periodical performance of such ceremonies or worship, will not as a rule be a wrongful act, even though there may be persons within hearing of the sound who find their religious feelings hurt in consequence. Where the Hindus commenced to perform ceremonies involving the blowing of a conch in a place in no way set apart for the purpose, and where no such ceremonies had hitherto been performed, and they did it with the deliberate intention of triumphing over, insulting and wounding the religious feelings of their Muhammadan neighbours, their acts were wrongful and this section applied—Emp v. Murl Singh, 33 All. 775, 13 I.C. 922, 13 Cr.L.J. 170. See also Ibrahim v. Emp, supra. The fact that a person does a lawful act in a lawful manner and if by so doing he has injured the susceptibilities of a person of a different faith, would not in itself be sufficient to warrant proceedings against him under this section—Nihal Chand, 120 I.C. 427, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 138, 31 Cr.L.J. 75; Ind. Rul 1930 Lah. 59; Babu Ram, 34 Cr.L.J. 478, 142 I.C. 796 A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 101, 1932 Cr.C. 121, 33 P.L.R. 370, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 301.

The following are not 'wrongful acts' under this section:—

(a) Singing of ballads in open streets, although leading to an obstruction in the street by crowds collecting to hear the same is not a wrongful act—Ghulam Nabi, 1889 P.R. 13;

(b) the grant of leases to tenants by the owner who is entitled to possession but is wrongfully kept out of possession, and the taking of possession by the lessee peacefully and without using violence, are not wrongful acts—Driver, 25 Cal. 708;

(c) use of the word 'Amen' in a loud voice in prayers in a mosque—Khuda Baksh, 1902 P.R. 15; Ramzan, 7 All. 461; Ataulla v. Azimulla, 12 All 494; Jangu v. Amanulla, 13 All 419; Abdur Rahman, 8 O.L.J. 282, 22 Cr.L.J. 590, 62 I.C. 830;

(d) stopping the services of village barber and washerman being rendered to the complainant—Sk. Jinaut v. Sk. Rhusen, 7 C.W.N. 32; see also Kashiram Hazari v. Asaram, A.I.R. 1929 Nag 328, 31 Cr.L.J. 20, 1929 Cr.C. 532, 120 I.C. 215;

(e) the opening of a cattle market by persons on their own land not far from an already existing cattle market—Mahu, 16 A.L.J. 279, 19 Cr.L.J. 437;

(f) mere use of idle threats and bombast—Chinnathambi, 9 M.L.T. 271, 12 Cr.L.J. 104;

(h) drawing water from the public well by chamars inspite of opposition—Khazan Chand, 97 I.C. 39, A.I.R. 1926 Lah 683, 27 Cr.L.J. 1063, 7 Lah 482, 27 P.L.R. 810.

(i) boycotting servants of zamindar by tenants when they did nothing from which it might be apprehended that they were likely to cause a breach of the peace—19 I.C. 334, 14 Cr.L.J. 238.

The Magistrate should have tangible evidence that some definite wrongful act is contemplated, which act, if committed, is likely to occasion a breach of the peace; therefore, the fact that the accused had attempted to get up false cases and that he would probably continue to do so, is not a ground of action under this section—Badhaua, 64 P.R. 1887. So also, merely being on bad terms with others (Balajee, 7 C.P.L.R. 9) or being a quarrelsome, head-strong and contumacious person (Shimbhu, 21 P.R. 1888) is neither a definite wrongful act, nor an act likely to cause a breach of the peace. So also, the mere fact that enmity exists between two parties does not entitle the

233. Acts which amount to an exercise of lawful rights are not to be treated as wrongful acts necessitating an order under this section—Din Dayal, 34 Cal 935; Bepin, 21 Cr L J. 651 (Cal). The preventive jurisdiction of a Magistrate under this section must be exercised with caution. Where its exercise may undoubtedly lead to the infringement of an undoubted civil right, where an obligation which the law of the country imposes, becomes incapable of being enforced owing to the exercise of such a jurisdiction, and where the breach of the peace apprehended by the Magistrate is a likely result of the enforcement of his legal right by a party in a legal way and the illegal denial of the corresponding obligation by the other party, the Magistrate ought not to bind down the party who has the legal right in him—Din Dayal, 34 Cal 935 (938); Nga Ti v Maung Kyaw, 11 Bur L T. 59, 18 Cr L J 512; Thaker Singh, 8 Lah 98, 27 P L R 599, 27 Cr L J. 1094.

If a person considers himself entitled to get immediate possession of lands and goes there to take possession, then his action is perfectly lawful and in a case of this nature it would not be right to take action against him under sec. 107, Cr P Code. But, on the other hand, if with a view to take possession, he goes to the lands taking with him an armed body of men, and threatens the tenants and forces them to pay rent to him, the Magistrate is certainly within his jurisdiction to take proceedings against him under this section—Nisar Husain, 35 Cr L J 809, 148 IC 899, 11 OWN 501, A I R 1934 Oudh 148, 1934 Cr C 575 A I R 1934 Oudh 179, 9 Luck 651.

Where the act which a person intends to commit, is lawful in itself, there is no reason for demanding security from him under sec. 107, even though his act is likely to induce his opponents to commit a breach of the peace. In such a case, it would be more reasonable to take proceedings against those who are expected to commit the breach of the peace and offer violence to law-abiding citizens—Khazan Chand, 7 Lah 482, 27 P L R 810, 27 Cr L J 1063. Thus, it is not unlawful for a chamar to draw water from a public well, and he cannot be called upon to give security simply because his act of drawing water from the well is objected to by certain persons and is likely to lead to a breach of the peace—Khazan Chand (supra). The right of protection of lawful possession is a lawful right which may properly be exercised not only to resist any lawful attempt to interfere with the possession but also to defend oneself, if it becomes necessary in the process. Where, therefore, the lawful possession of the accused had more than once been threatened by a show of armed force, and he had collected a body of men armed with lathis and posted them on the property to resist any violence or interference with his possession, it was held that as the intention was to maintain an existing right, the accused was justified in adopting measures for the defence of his possession, and that as there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace from his side, there was no reason either for punishing him or binding him over in security—Janki Prasad, 18 A L J 157, 21 Cr L J 337. Since a joint owner is entitled to improve the joint property, no security can be demanded from him on the ground that his persistence in improving the joint property is likely to lead to a breach of the peace, it being probable that such breach will be committed by his brothers—Thaker Singh, 8 Lah 98, 27 L L R 599, 27 Cr L J 1094 (1095). Where a party has the right to take a procession along a particular road, he cannot be bound down under this section because other persons object to his doing so and he insists on taking the procession along that road. The proper course is to bind down the other persons—Feroze Ali, 12 C W N 703, 7 Cr L J 504. See also Nihal Chand, 120 IC 127, A I R 1929 Lah. 138, 31 Cr L J 75, Ind. Rul. 1930 Lah. 59. But see Satindra Nath Sen, 32 C W N. 477, 29 Cr L J 844, 47 C L J 441, 111 IC. 395. See also Note 373A.

Where one of several co-sharer landlords sought to make a measurement of land contrary to the provisions of secs. 90 and 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the other co-sharer landlords would be justified in objecting to the survey, and where no force was used by them they ought not to be bound down to keep the peace—Bhabataran v. Bankutesh, 9 C.W.N. 618. Where there was already a cattle-market and certain persons intended to open another cattle-market on their own land, not far from the old market, and the Magistrate apprehending that there would be a breach of the peace consequent thereon, bound over those persons to keep the peace, the order of the Magistrate was illegal—Mahu, 16 A.L.J. 279, 19 Cr.L.J. 437.

But where there are doubts as to the existence of the respective rights and obligations of the parties (i.e., as to who is acting legally in the exercise of his rights and who is not) the proper procedure is to bind down both parties (until their rights and obligations have been determined by a proper tribunal), so that the order of the Magistrate may not be detrimental to either—Dindayal, 34 Cal. 935 (938); Musaheb Soudagar v. Nidhi Ram, 8 P.L.T. 645, 28 Cr.L.J. 605. Where, however, no doubt exists, the party in the wrong should be bound down and prevented from illegally exercising an alleged claim. An attempt to ascertain legal rights of parties should always be made by the Magistrate before he binds down one or the other party under this section—Din Dayal, 34 Cal. 935 (938).

234. Dispute relating to immoveable property:—Where there is a dispute relating to possession of immoveable properties, the proper procedure is to take action under sec. 145 and to decide the dispute as to possession once for all so far as the Criminal Courts are concerned—Raghunath v. Prem Narain, 12 P.L.T. 535, 32 Cr.L.J. 1014 (1016), Ind. Rul. 1931 Pat. 321, 133 I.C. 161, 1931 Cr.C. 795 A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 347; Balajit v. Bhoju, 35 Cal. 117 (119); Mahadeo v. Bishu, 25 All. 537; Baishnab Das, 12 C.W.N. 606; Muthia, 36 Mad. 315 (321); Driver, 25 Cal. 798; Amanat Ali, 10 P.L.T. 639, 30 Cr.L.J. 492, 115 I.C. 545. But the mere fact that the dispute relates to possession of immoveable property, does not preclude the Magistrate from taking proceeding under sec. 107. The Magistrate has a discretion to proceed under sec. 107 or under sec. 145—Sheoraj v. Chatter, 32 Cal. 966 (968); Abbas v. Emp., 39 Cal. 150, 14 C.L.J. 429, 12 Cr.L.J. 569, 12 I.C. 833, 16 C.W.N. 83 (88) (F.B.); Thakur Pande, 34 All. 449 (451), 9 A.L.J. 582, 13 Cr.L.J. 526, 15 I.C. 798; Raghunath v. Prem Narain, supra; Muthia, 36 Mad. 315 (320); Ramacharlur, 26 Mad. 471 (472). But at the same time it should be borne in mind that if the Magistrate proceeds at all under sec. 107, the proper order is to bind down both the parties, so as not to give an unfair advantage to one party as against the other—Raghunath v. Prem Narain, supra; Musaheb v. Nidhi Ram, 102 I.C. 781, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 314, 8 P.L.T. 645, 28 Cr.L.J. 605; Baishnab Das, 12 C.W.N. 606, 7 Cr.L.J. 403; Amanat Ali, 10 P.L.T. 639, 30 Cr.L.J. 492, 115 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 67. It is not proper to proceed against one of the parties and bind him down, leaving the other party free without determining the question of possession. The proper course is to bind down the party who is proved not to be in possession—Amanat Ali, supra; Raghunath v. Prem Narain, supra; Dolegobind v. Dhanu, 25 Cal. 559; Driver, 25 Cal. 798; Muthia, 14 Cr.L.J. 559, 21 I.C. 159, 36 Mad. 315 (320); Din Muhammad, 35 Cr.L.J. 963, 148 I.C. 1078 A.I.R. 1934 Pesh. 21, 1934 Cr.C. 522. See also 49 I.C. 612, 63 I.C. 829, 95 I.C. 465 and 7 A.L.J. 1161 (1163).

In the case of a bona fide dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace existing between two parties relating to a fishery right, the proper section to proceed under for preventing a breach of the peace is sec. 145, Cr. P. Code and not sec. 107. The words of sec. 145 are mandatory while those of sec. 107 are discretionary—Balajit v. Bhoju, 35 Cal. 117, 12 C.W.N. 487, 6 Cr.L.J. 398, 6 C.L.J. 697, following Dole Govind v. Dhanu, 25 Cal. 559. The provisions of sec. 145, Cr. P. Code offers the Magistrate the best means of settling the dispute between the two parties. But in view of the Full Bench decision in the case of Abbas v. Emp., it is not open to the High Court to say that the Magistrate must proceed under sec. 145 and not under sec. 107, Cr. P. Code—Amulya Charen v. Amrita Lal, 24 C.W.N. 1075 (1076).

If the dispute relating to possession of land is not bona fide, i.e., if one party is clearly in possession of property and another party wrongfully and without any claim to possession seeks to eject him by force from the possession of the land and a breach of the peace is imminent, there cannot be said to be a bona fide dispute about possession within the meaning of sec 145, and the Magistrate is justified in taking action under sec. 107—Rambaran, 28 All 406; Lachmi, 1 P.L.T. 681, 22 Cr.L.J. 86; Shama Churn, 6 P.L.T. 766, 26 Cr.L.J. 1562, A.I.R. 1925 Pat 610, 90 IC 442; Saddique v. Mohd, 32 Cr.L.J. 208, 129 IC. 85, A.I.R. 1930 Pat 556, 1930 Cr.C 1110, Ind Rul 1931 Pat 69. When one party is clearly in the wrong and threatens to usurp the rights of another, who is in actual possession of the land in dispute, the proper remedy is an order under section 144 or 107, Cr. P. Code. In such a case section 145, Cr P Code has no application as there is no dispute as to the possession of land—Shebalak Singh v. Kamaruddin Mandal, 2 Pat 94 (104) (FB), following Kali Prasad Gope v. Dodhai Gope, 62 IC 590 and Nandkishore Sao v. Bikan Singh, 65 IC. 856. Where one of the parties threatens to use violence to the other party if the latter should go upon the land of which the latter is in possession, an order under sec 107 binding down the former would be proper—Jafar v. Jaribulla, 9 CWN 551. If it is probable that the parties to a land dispute will break the King's peace before the decision of the Civil Court can be given, that danger can be guarded against by an order under sec 107 in an appropriate case—Mallappa, 28 Bom LR 488, 27 Cr.L.J. 734 (735), 95 IC 62. A Magistrate has discretion when there is an apprehension of a breach of the peace to choose either sec 145 or sec 107. It must be left to his discretion which particular section he chooses. Generally speaking, if the dispute arises immediately after the delivery of possession by the Civil Court and is between the parties to that delivery of possession, the more appropriate step will be to bind down under sec 107 Cr P Code the party who has been dispossessed by the Court. But if the delivery of possession is an old one or the dispute is between a man who has been given possession and a man who was not dispossessed by the Court, a proceeding under sec 145 Cr P Code will be more suitable—Rajendra Narayan v. Chintamani, A.I.R. 1939 Pat 151 (152), 1938 PWN 526, 19 PLT 632, 40 Cr.L.J. 339, 180 IC 322.

The High Court should be astute not to interfere with the exercise of his discretion by the District Magistrate in respect of the powers conferred on him by statute, enabling him to ensure the peace of his district, he should exercise in a particular case. He is necessarily in a better position to say which of those powers is called for by the situation confronting him at the crucial moment. It is enough that the action which he is taking is not illegal or definitely improper. The High Court ought not to quash proceedings under sec 107, Cr P C, even if it should be possible to predicate later on (as opposed to initiation months ago) that a proceeding under sec 145, Cr P Code might eventually give better results—Hanhar, 36 Cr.L.J. 257, 152 IC 1050, A.I.R. 1934 Pat 463, 1934 Cr.C 1069.

An order under sec 107 is no bar to a subsequent proceeding under Chapter XII—Bainsab v. Gatmath, 39 Cal 469, 16 CWN 384, 13 Cr.L.J. 142, 13 IC 830, Ram Lochun, 36 All 143, 12 A.L.J. 162; Nasiruddin v. Gofuruddin, 21 CWN 160, 18 Cr.L.J. 129, 37 IC 481. Whether, after proceeding under sec 107, it would be proper for a Magistrate to act under sec 145 must depend upon the circumstances of each case as it arises—Abbas, 39 Cal 150, 12 IC 833, 16 CWN 83 (88) (FB). Where a Sub-divisional Magistrate has instituted proceedings under Chap VIII, Cr P Code it is open to his successor to order these proceedings to be kept pending and to institute proceedings under Chap XII, which he considers more appropriate to the facts and circumstances of the case as they exist at the time when he makes the order—Lachmandas Sanualdas v. Sahibdas Budho Chhara, 37 Cr.L.J. 1035 164 IC 912, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 147, 29 S.L.R. 443. Similarly an order under sec. 145 is no bar to the passing of an order under sec. 107, on the same facts, if the Magistrate is satisfied that notwithstanding the order under sec 145, one of the parties is likely to take the law into his own hands—Muthia 36 Mad 315 (321), Bardi 21 OC 21, 22 Cr.L.J. 381. But there cannot be simultaneously two proceedings, one under sec.

107 and the other under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., upon the same materials—Udit Narayan, 1917 Pat.H.C.C. 216

But it is illegal to institute proceedings under one section and to pass an order under another. Thus, where the Magistrate instituted proceedings under sec. 145, and apprehending a disturbance of the peace, ordered a party to furnish security under sec. 107, it was held that the order was illegal and without jurisdiction—Sat Deo, 14 A.L.J. 791, 17 Cr.L.J. 527. Similarly, where a Magistrate proceeded under sec. 107 and concluded the proceedings thereunder but subsequently passed an order under sec. 145, held that the order of the Magistrate was ultra vires—Mahadeo v. Bisu, 25 All 537 (540); Sahdeb v. Jumon, 19 Cr.L.J. 320 (Pat.).

If, owing to a dispute relating to immoveable property, proceedings are taken under sec. 107, instead of under sec. 145, the Magistrate cannot pass an order of attachment of property (which order can be passed only under sec. 146)—Ram Sarup, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 345, 25 Cr.L.J. 350; Emp v. Arakswami, 35 Cr.L.J. 991, 30 N.L.R. 298, 149 I.C. 429, A.L.R. 1934 Nag. 147, 1934 Cr.C. 571, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 142.

See Notes 388 and 437.

235. Who can be bound down:—Only the person who is himself likely to cause a breach of the peace (and no other) can be bound down under this section; it is illegal and contrary to the provisions of this section to take recognisance from the person in order to prevent another from committing a breach of the peace—Ram Coomar v. Rajagopal, 17 W.R. 54; Kashi Chandra v. Hur Kishore, 19 W.R. 47. Thus, the mere fact that a dispute exists between two rival Zemindars, would not justify proceedings being taken against all their officers and servants, unless there are materials to show that they are all likely to commit a breach of the peace. It may be that they are all interested in the dispute between their masters—and in one sense all the members of the Zemindar's family are interested in a dispute relating to a property comprised in the zemindary—but that by itself would be no ground for taking proceedings against them all—Ainuddin, 24 Cr.L.J. 230, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 97, 71 I.C. 694. Where there were old standing feuds between the parties, but the Magistrate finding no evidence against them, discharged them but bound down their servants, held that the order was illegal and without jurisdiction—Din Dayal, 23 A.L.J. 300, 26 Cr.L.J. 981, A.I.R. 1925 All. 413. In whatever capacity persons might have done wrongful acts which might probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity, they are liable to be proceeded against under this section, and cannot escape the liability for their acts by pleading or showing that they acted as servants in obedience to the orders of their employer and not as individual member of society—Srikantha, 9 C.W.N. 898 (909), 2 Cr.L.J. 554. But see Hari Telang, 27 Cal. 781, 4 C.W.N. 531.

The mere fact that the patwari threatened to use violence does not justify the Magistrate in starting proceedings against the proprietor and manager on the presumption that the latter must have acquiesced in the action of the patwari—Grant, 2 P.L.T. 669, 22 Cr.L.J. 745, 61 I.C. 137. But the master would be liable if he actually acquiesced in the servant's acts. Thus, where the master, a panda of Gaya, used to send his servant, always armed with a lathi, to the Railway station for procuring pilgrims, and this led to a contest with a rival panda resulting in disturbance of the public peace, it was held that this was sufficient to make the master liable under this section. The fact that master himself did not go to the Railway station but always remained in his house, was no bar to the application of this section—Balalal, 1 P.L.J. 361, 18 Cr.L.J. 374.

236. Evidence:—A Magistrate dealing with proceedings under this section must base his judgment upon evidence relevant to the case. He should not rely upon his knowledge of certain facts which he obtains from sources outside the record—Mathura, 14 A.L.J. 769, 17 Cr.L.J. 481. Where the order is passed against more persons than one, there must be definite evidence in the case of any and every person that there is a danger of a breach of the peace by him. The mere fact that a collective body of persons are indulging in feelings of hostility against another body of persons is insufficient—Shambhu, 38 All 468, 14 A.L.J. 656, 17 Cr.L.J. 400.

Where the trial Court has admitted as evidence of the past conduct of accused and their disposition to use violence santhas or reports made by several of the prosecution witnesses on various dates in the absence of the accused, it is no doubt correct to say that these santhas are not substantive evidence of the matters mentioned in them, but they are admissible under sec. 157, Evidence Act, to corroborate what the witnesses have testified to in Court—Mahabir Gope v Samratu Singh, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 252, 1940 P.W.N. 52.

Defence witness—In a case under this section it has been held that the Magistrate must issue summonses for the attendance of the witnesses for the defence unless he takes the responsibility of recording his ground for refusing the application for any of the reasons specified in sec 257, Cr P C—Nand Lal, 32 Cr.L.J. 620, 130 IC 816, A.I.R. 1931 Lah 56, 31 P.L.R. 949, 1931 Cr.C. 120.

Consent of accused to be bound down—The fact of likelihood of a breach of the peace must be established by independent evidence. In the absence of evidence to prove that the accused was likely to commit a breach of the peace, the accused's own statement before the Magistrate that he is willing to give security, would not justify an order being passed under this section—Jagdat, 21 Cr.L.J. 176, 51 IC 784 (All.); Sheodan, 1915 P.R. 24, 16 Cr.L.J. 784, 31 IC 384 A.I.R. 1915 Lah 82; Prem Singh, 1917 P.R. 27, 18 Cr.L.J. 847, 41 IC 671, A.I.R. 1917 Lah 304; Ujagar, 10 Lah 155, A.I.R. 1929 Lah 504, 30 Cr.L.J. 839, Palaniappa Asari, 34 Mad 139, 6 IC 682, 11 Cr.L.J. 393; Mulchand, 26 IC. 653, 37 All 30, 12 A.L.J. 1262, 16 Cr.L.J. 61; Ram Charan, 27 Cr.L.J. 370, 92 IC 882, 24 A.L.J. 317 A.I.R. 1926 All 614, Joti, 25 Cr.L.J. 710, 81 IC 198, A.I.R. 1925 Lah 135, 20 Cr.L.J. 105; Prabhudas, 21 Cr.L.J. 656 (Nag), 57 IC. 672; Karam, 23 C.L.J. 175, 65 IC 639 (Lah), Ram Chandra, 35 Cal 674, 8 Cr.L.J. 628; Chandra Sekhar, 21 Cr.L.J. 59, 54 IC 411 (All). In recent Allahabad cases it has been held (dissenting from the above rulings) that where the persons called upon to furnish security appeared in Court and expressed their willingness to be bound over, whereupon the trial Court took no evidence and passed an order against them, the consent of the accused must be taken to be a plea of guilty and the order for security was rightly passed—Ghariba, 46 All 109, 21 A.L.J. 882, 25 Cr.L.J. 750; Nasir Ahmad, 50 All 120, 25 A.L.J. 819, 102 IC 897, A.I.R. 1927 All 509, 28 Cr.L.J. 609; Kishan Narain, 112 IC 774, 26 A.L.J. 312 Ind. Rul. 1927 P.W. 73, A.I.R. 1928 All 270, 50 All 599, 30 Cr.L.J. 6 (9); Sadhu 36 Cr.L.J. 1212, 157 IC 755, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh 116, 1935 Cr.C. 931. The view taken in Nasir Ahmad case seems to be sound—32 C.W.N. cvv. But in one case an expression of guilt was to give security amounts to a plea of guilty. Where the accused in their joint written statement clearly admitted that the complainant had apprehension that the accused would commit a breach of the peace and that they were willing to give security and the Magistrate took further precaution and examined each accused separately and asked him if the allegations made by the complainant against him were correct and the reply given by each accused was that he admitted his guilt and was willing to give security and execute a bail bond, this itself was evidence on which a Magistrate could convict. When an accused called upon to give security for keeping the peace, says in terms that no prosecution evidence may be recorded and is willing to give security, it is sufficient proof that this is necessary for keeping the peace that he should execute a bond. The Magistrate had previous information on which he issued notice under sec 107 Cr P. Code and the willingness of the accused to give a bond substantiated that information and proved its truth. This is a full enquiry as laid down in sec 117, cl (2) Cr P Code in the manner directed in Chap XX of the Code—Dukhi v Emp., 38 Cr L J 302, 166 I.C. 850, 1937 O.W.N. 133, 1937 O.L.R. 62, 9 R.O. 341, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 289, 1937 A.Cr C 31.

See also Notes under para 286

Reference to Sub-Magistrate or to Police:—The power to taking action under sec 107 is a discretionary power, and there is nothing irregular to a Magistrate calling for a report from a subordinate Magistrate before issuing notice under sec. 112, especially if he doubts whether the information before him is reliable—Egambara v. Murugappa, 2 Weir 51. It is open to a Magistrate to refer a petition under sec 107 to a police-officer for investigation—Sanjivi v. Koneri, 49 Mad 315, 50 M.L.J. 460, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 521.

237. Sub-section (2)—Local jurisdiction:—In order to give the Magistrate jurisdiction over a person, it is not necessary that such person should permanently or habitually live within his jurisdiction. It is sufficient if at the time when the Magistrate receives information and takes proceedings under this section, the person temporarily resides within his jurisdiction—Shama Churn v. Katu Mandal, 1 C.W.N. 129, 24 Cal 314; Ullah Khan, 22 Cr L J 109, 59 I.C. 413 (All.). Under the clear wording of the section proceedings cannot be taken against the accused unless they are within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction. So that it is clear that when proceedings are initiated, it must be shown that the accused were within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. It would be quite sufficient if they were temporarily present within the jurisdiction at the time the proceedings were taken. Temporary presence merely at the time of occurrence would not give jurisdiction to a Magistrate. But sub-sec. (2) of this section is obviously intended to provide for cases where the accused, although living outside the jurisdiction, is alleged to have come temporarily within the jurisdiction in order to commit offences. In such cases the proper course as to initiating proceedings under this section is that they should be initiated by the District Magistrate—Hriday Nath Roy v. Emp., 41 C.W.N. 1091 A.I.R. 1937 Cal 520, 171 I.C. 335, 66 C.L.J. 177, 38 Cr L J. 1078. See also Syed Ali v. Emp., 39 Cr L J. 810, 176 I.C. 784, 11 R.N. 79, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 448. The terms of this sub-section do not authorise a Magistrate to bind over a person residing outside the limits of his district, concerning whom he has received information that such person is likely to commit a breach of the peace within his district—Jaiprakash, 6 All. 26 (F.B.); Abdul Aziz, 14 All 49; Rajendra, 11 Cal 737; Dinonath v. Girija, 12 Cal. 133; Krishnaji, 23 Bom. 32; Mahangu Lal, 36 Cr L.J. 580, 154 I.C. 873, A.I.R. 1935 Pat 131, 1935 Cr.C. 331. The proper course in such a case is to cause information to be given to the Magistrate within whose district that person resides, in order that proceedings might be taken by that Magistrate—Rajendra, 11 Cal. 737; Pratap Sing, 35 P.L.R. 341.

A person may be within the limits of Magistrate's jurisdiction and yet he may not have residence within such limits. At the same time to hold that a person 'is' within the local limits of a Magistrate's jurisdiction only because he is present in Court when the Magistrate draws up his order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., having appeared in obedience to a summons issued by the Magistrate, is to make the section nugatory—Hamid Hasan, 33 Cr.L.J. 230, 136 I.C. 72, 54 All 341, A.I.R. 1932 All. 162, 1932 Cr.C. 172, 1932 A.L.J. 211, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 120. But even a stay for a day would justify proceedings under this section—In re S. R. Varadarajulu Naidu, 35 Cr.L.J. 626, 148 I.C. 226, 39 M.L.W. 215, 6 R.M. 449, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 255, 66 M.L.J. 420, 1934 M.L.W.N. 404, 1934 Cr.C. 475, following Krishnaji Pandurang Joglekar, 23 Bom. 32 (35).

If, however, a Magistrate proceeds under this section against a person not residing within the local limits of his jurisdiction, and no objection is taken in the trial Court to his jurisdiction and no prejudice is caused, the irregularity is cured by sec. 531—Ram Deo, 27 Cr.L.J. 1132, 97 I.C. 652, A.I.R. 1926 All 767, 25 A.L.J. 44, 49 All 228.

When a proceeding under this section in the Court of a Sub-divisional Magistrate is transferred to the Court of a first class Magistrate at Sadar, he can include in the proceeding names of persons who were not included by the Sub-divisional Magistrate in the proceeding and who did not reside in the Sadar jurisdiction—Golam Rahiman v. Kals pada, 33 Cr.L.J. 858, 139 I.C. 850, 36 C.W.N. 796, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 861, 1932 Cr.C. 888, 59 Cal 1484, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 663.

Special powers of Chief Presidency and District Magistrate—Sub-section (2) gives special powers to Chief Presidency and District Magistrates to proceed against persons outside jurisdiction. Therefore, where a District Magistrate is satisfied that a breach of the peace is apprehended within the local limits of his district, the fact that the accused is living outside such limits in a Native State does not take away his jurisdiction to pass an order under this section—Sheo Baran, 20 A.L.J. 523, 23 Cr.L.J. 396. But the District Magistrate cannot delegate this special power to a subordinate Magistrate. Thus, a Sub-divisional Magistrate cannot, on the direction of a District Magistrate, draw up proceedings under this section against a person residing in another jurisdiction; in such a case the proceedings must take place and be brought to a conclusion before the District Magistrate himself—Nirbeekar, 13 C.W.N. 580, 9 Cr.L.J. 148, 1 I.C. 78. A District Magistrate is not competent to make over the initiation of proceedings under this section to a first class Magistrate who has no local jurisdiction over the matter—Konda Reddy, 41 Mad 246. But after proceedings have been initiated by a District Magistrate against persons residing outside jurisdiction, he can transfer the proceedings to a subordinate Magistrate otherwise qualified to complete the proceedings. This section only restricts the initiation of the proceedings against persons living outside the jurisdiction of the District Magistrate, but does not prevent him from transferring such proceedings, after initiation to a subordinate Magistrate, though such Magistrate had no local jurisdiction to initiate the proceedings—Surja Kanta, 31 Cal. 350, Munna, 24 All 151; Rakhad Mandal, 27 C.L.J. 314; Kalia Gourdan, 59 M.L.J. 887, 32 M.L.W. 320, 1930 M.W.N. 698, 127 I.C. 652, 32 Cr.L.J. 27 (28). But the District Magistrate cannot make over the case to a Magistrate incompetent to try the case, e.g. a 2nd class Magistrate—Gobind, 37 All 20, 12 A.L.J. 1136.

European British Subjects—The provisions of section 443 Cr. P. Code are not applicable to proceedings under sec. 107, Cr. P. C.—Christy v. Christy A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 1019, 1933 Cr.C. 1556.

239. Sub-section (4):—Power to detain in custody—Only in the special circumstances referred to in clauses (3) and (4) does the law empower the Magistrate to detain a person against whom proceedings have been instituted under this section—Raghunandan, 32 Cal 80. Therefore, where an accused was not sent before a District Magistrate by another Magistrate acting under clause (3) so as to bring the case under clause (4), such District Magistrate's order detaining the accused in custody was illegal—Chidambara, 31 Mad 315 (F.B.).

240. Bail:—Even when the person has been arrested under clause (3), unless there are special circumstances, he should be admitted to bail. When a Magistrate on the report of the D. S. P. directed the re-arrest of persons (whom he had previously admitted to bail on their appearance) and remanded them to custody, it was held that the re-arrest and remand were illegal, as none of the special circumstances mentioned in clause (3) existed in the case, and the Magistrate was bound under sec. 496 to release them on bail—Raghuandan, 32 Cal. 80. But the Madras High Court holds that the Magistrate may in his discretion detain such persons in custody, according to the clear words of sub-section (4); these words cannot be qualified by sec. 496; that section does not give an absolute right of bail but must be read along with any other provision giving to the Court a special power of detention, and sub-section (4) of this section gives such power—Narayanaswami, 36 Mad. 474.

A person proceeded against under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., is entitled as of right to bail. If the Magistrate considers that immediate measures are necessary for the prevention of a breach of the peace during the pendency of the enquiry, he can direct the applicant to execute a bond with or without sureties, for keeping the peace until the completion of the enquiry. If the applicant refuses to execute a bond or fails to furnish security as directed, then he can be kept in custody until the completion of the inquiry—U Gandama, 145 I.C. 314, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 164, 1933 Cr.C. 763, 6 R. Rang. 41, 34 Cr.L.J. 950; Maung Saw Hlaing, 34 Cr.L.J. 1195, 146 I.C. 23; A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 165, 1933 Cr.C. 764, 6 Rang. 70. Section 496, Cr. P. Code authorises the Magistrate conducting an enquiry under sec. 117, Cr. P. Code to release the person concerned in the enquiry on bail with or without surety to ensure his attendance in Court—Karbala Hussain, 41 Cr.L.J. 155, 185 I.C. 318, 1939 N.L.J. 537, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 75, I.L.R. 1940 Nag. 61. See also Note 1308.

In the absence of any special form prescribed by law with reference to the preventive sections of the Cr. P. Code there is nothing to suppose that the use of the printed form prescribed under sections 496 and 499 would be illegal and therefore invalid. Where the bond makes it clear what the nature of the proceedings was and in what Court the person concerned in the enquiry was to appear, the surety cannot be heard to say that he was in any way misled by the terms of the bond which he had executed. Having signed the form he must be presumed to know that he had given security for the attendance of the person concerned in the enquiry in the Court—Karbala Hussain, supra.

As for the powers of the Appellate Court to grant bail, see the notes given below under the heading "Appeal".

Further inquiry:—See Notes 250B, 249 and 295A.

Appeal:—Section 406, Cr. P. C., makes provision for an appeal by a person ordered to give security for keeping the peace or for good behaviour.

In the case of a person against whom an order is made under sec. 118, Cr. P. C., there is no offence and no trial, he is not 'a person convicted on a trial' nor is he 'a convicted person'. Sec. 426, Cr. P. C., has no application to such a case. The Appellate Court cannot, therefore, grant bail to the appellant pending an appeal against the order directing him to execute a bond—Charan Mahto, 125 I.C. 792, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 274, 11 P.L.T. 261, 9 Pat. 131, Ind. Rul. 1930 Pat. 568, 31 Cr.L.J. 958, 1930 Cr.C. 455. No such narrow or restricted meaning should be given to the words "convicted person" in sec. 426, Cr. P. C. It cannot be said that a person against whom an order has been passed under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., has been convicted of an offence. There is, however, no reason to suppose that he cannot be said to have been convicted. Consequently, the Appellate Court has power to suspend the order relating to the furnishing of security. Even supposing sec. 426, Cr. P. C., did not apply, the Appellate Court can pass such an order under sec. 423 (1) (d), Cr. P. C. In view of the provisions of sec. 498, Cr. P. C., the Appellate Court can also grant bail to the appellant in such a case—Kalkarao, 33 Cr.L.J. 731, 139 I.C. 141, 1932 A.L.J. 621, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 523, A.I.R. 1932 All. 680, 54 All. 861, 1932 Cr.C. 856; Darsu, A.I.R. 1934 All. 845, 4 A.W.R. 76, 152 I.C. 785, 1934 Cr.C. 1031, 36 Cr.L.J. 177, 57 All. 264; Emp v. Masuria, 37 Cr.L.J. 155, A.I.R. 1936 All. 107, 159 I.C. 804.

In a case of an appeal from an order other than an order of acquittal or conviction the Appellate Court can alter or reverse such an order under sec. 423 (1) (c), Cr. P. Code and can make any consequential order that may be just or proper under sec. 423 (1) (d), Cr. P. Code. The Appellate Court cannot order a de novo inquiry—In re Narappa Reddy, 34 Cr.L.J. 947, 145 I.C. 306, 1933 M.W.N. 241; Emp. v. Bhagwat Singh, 48 All 501.

240A. Revision:—See Notes 291 and 295A.

An order of a Magistrate refusing to take action under sec. 107 cannot be set aside by the superior Court in revision. The object of this section is rather administrative than judicial. If the Magistrate who is responsible for the administration of a subdivision is not satisfied that there is any need to take proceedings under this chapter, a superior judicial tribunal cannot interfere with the exercise of his discretion—Ram Lal v. Bankateshar, 28 O.C. 44, 1 O.W.N. 359, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 138, 25 Cr.L.J. 1149; Phani Bhusan v. Kunja, 25 Cr.L.J. 679, A.I.R. 1925 Cal 262. See also Note 475.

Persons who come to the High Court in revision against an order under sec. 107 should do so with the utmost promptitude, and at any rate within 30 days of the order against which they complain—Ram Deo, 27 Cr.L.J. 1132, 49 All 228, 25 A.L.J. 44, A.I.R. 1926 All. 767, 97 I.C. 652.

241. Nature of proceedings under this chapter:—There is no unanimity of opinion among the various Courts as to whether proceedings under this Chapter are of a criminal nature, or as to whether the persons proceeded against under this Chapter are 'accused' persons. In Wajid Ali, 41 Cal 719, Ramaswami, 27 Mad. 510, Desikachari, 39 Mad 539, Lalit Mohan v. Suryakanta, 28 Cal 709, Mathura Prasad, 3 O.C. 247, and Md. Niaz v. Jai Ram, 41 All 503, it is held that proceedings under this chapter are of a criminal nature; therefore, a person who brings a proceeding under sec. 107 from malicious motives is liable to an action for malicious prosecution if the proceeding terminates in favour of the person against whom the allegation is made—Md. Niaz Khan v. Jai Ram, 41 All 503, Churanji v. Dharam Singh, 43 All 402; whereas in Ahmed, 1914 P.R. 5, 15 Cr.L.J. 563, and Rehmani, 1916 P.L.R. 78, it has been held that the proceedings under sec. 110 are not criminal proceedings, and the Chief Court has no power to direct the transfer of such proceedings under sec. 526 from one Magistrate's Court to another. (But the word 'criminal' has now been omitted from sec. 526).

In the following cases it has been held that persons proceeded against under this chapter are in the position of 'accused' persons—Hopcroft, 36 Cal 163; Mutsaddi, 21 All. 107; Gokha Singh v. Chetu, 1905 P.R. 33; Ida, 1900 P.R. 15; Nakki Lal, 27 Cal. 656; Jhojha Singh, 23 Cal 493; Mona Puna, 16 Bom 661, Venkatachinnaya, 43 Mad. 511 (F.B.); and further inquiry can be ordered in case of such persons under sec. 437 (now 436)—Mutsaddi, 21 All 107; Fyazuddin, 24 All 148; Gokha v. Chetu, 1905 P.R. 33. (But see sec. 436 as now amended in 1923)

But in Rameshwar, 36 All. 262, Basya, 5 Bom.L.R. 27, Raghunandan, 32 Cal. 80, it has been held that such persons are not accused persons within the meaning of sec. 167; nor are they accused persons within the meaning of sec. 437 (now 436)—Md. Khan, 1905 P.R. 42; Imam Mandai, 27 Cal 662; Dayanath, 33 Cal 8; Velu v. Chidambara, 33 Mad 85; Narain v. Durga, 1911 P.R. 6. A person bound down under sec. 107 is not "convicted" of an offence—Bhagwat, 48 All 501, 27 Cr.L.J. 945; and, therefore, he cannot be released on bail by the Appellate Court under sec. 426 pending an appeal against the order directing him to execute a bond—Charan Makto, 9 Pat. 131, 31 Cr.L.J. 958 (959). An application to take proceedings under this chapter is not an accusation of an offence—Md. Khan, 1905 P.R. 42, 2 Cr.L.J. 697; Natha Singh v. Pala Singh, 1896 P.R. 4; and, therefore, compensation cannot be awarded under sec. 250 to the person against whom proceedings under this chapter have been dropped, such proceedings not being proceedings in a case in which a person is 'accused of an offence'—In re Govind, 25 Bom 48; Crown v. Kaura, 1902 P.R. 33, Q-E v. Lakshpat, 15 All. 365; Mannu Khan v. Chandi, 20 A.L.J. 624, 23 Cr.L.J. 474; Ram Badan v.

Janki, 45 All. 363, 21 A.L.J. 207, 24 Cr.L.J. 228; Bindachal v. Lal Behari, 36 All. 382. A person required to give security for good behaviour is not guilty of an offence; consequently, if such person when being arrested resists apprehension and escapes, he cannot be convicted under sec. 224 or 225, I. P. Code—Kandhaia, 7 All. 67 (72). A person called upon to give security is not an accused within the meaning of sec. 342 nor is he guilty of any offence; therefore, omission to examine him under that section is not an illegality—Benode Behari, 50 Cal 985. Although a person may be committed to prison under sec. 123 in default of furnishing security, such imprisonment stands on quite a different footing from a sentence of imprisonment passed on a conviction in respect of an offence—Charan Mahto, 9 Pat 131, 31 Cr.L.J. 958 (961), 11 P.L.T. 261, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 274. The order made under sec. 118, Cr. P. Code is not a conviction for an offence—Chandra Benode Das, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 808, 152 I.C. 943, 59 C.L.J. 410, 1934 Cr.C. 1278.

There are certain indications to show that it is not the intention of the Legislature to treat the person proceeded against under this chapter as accused persons or as persons guilty of an offence.—First, the Legislature has studiously avoided the use of the word 'accused' in sections 107-126, and has deliberately used such expressions as "the person," "such person," "the person informed against" (sec. 107), "the person called upon to show cause" (sec. 116), etc.; whereas in the chapters relating to inquiries and trials (Chapters XVIII, XX—XXIII) the word "accused" has been used throughout. And during the debate in the Assembly, the Law Member stated that the word 'accused' was really a misnomer in security cases (Leg Ass Debates, 18-1-23, p. 1253). Secondly, in the similar case of a proceeding under Chapter XXXVI, the word 'accused' has now been replaced by the words 'any person'. This is significant. Thirdly, in sec. 340, the words "against whom proceedings are instituted under this Code" have now been added in order to make it clear that the words "a person accused of an offence" occurring in that section do not include a person proceeded against under Chapter VIII. Fourthly, in section 436 the words 'person accused of an offence' have been substituted for the words 'accused person'; this shows that the person proceeded against under the present chapter is not a person accused of an offence, and that sec. 436 does not apply to such person.

108. Whenever a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, or a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class specially empowered by the Provincial Government in this behalf, has information that there is within the limits of his jurisdiction any person who, within or without such limits, either orally or in writing or in any other manner, intentionally disseminates or attempts to disseminate, or in anywise abets the dissemination of,—

- (a) any seditious matter, that is to say, any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, or
- (b) any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 153A of the Indian Penal Code, or
- (c) any matter concerning a Judge which amounts to criminal intimidation or defamation under the Indian Penal Code, such Magistrate, if in his opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding, may (in manner hereinafter provided) require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

No proceedings shall be taken under this section against the editor, proprietor, printer or publisher of any publication registered under, and edited, printed and published in conformity with, the rules laid down in the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867 [XXV of 1867] with reference to any matter contained in such publication, except by the order or under the authority of the Provincial Government or some officer empowered by the Provincial Government in this behalf.

Change:—The italicised words have been added by sec. 17 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

'Or in any other manner'—“This amendment is to provide for the contingency where the matters covered by sec 108 have been disseminated by other means than either orally or in writing, e.g., by gramophone records”—Statement of Objects and Reasons, (1914)

'Intentionally'—This word has been added during the debate in the Assembly on the motion of Mr Rangachariar “so that innocent agents may not be proceeded against; for instance, boys who handle newspapers without knowing the contents and such other persons who are merely ignorant tools in the hands of other persons should not be proceeded against”—Legislative Assembly Debates, January 18, 1923, page 1279.

'If proceeding'—For reason of the addition of these words, see Notes to sec 107, under heading “Change”.

'And edited'.—“In view of the recent amendments made in the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, regulating the editing of newspapers, we have made a consequential amendment here. We also think that the protection given by the last clause of sec. 108 should only extend to newspapers which are edited, printed and published in conformity with that Act”—Report of the Select Committee (1922)

'With reference publication'—“This amendment is merely designed to make the intention of the Legislature clearer as regards the proceedings which require sanction prior to their institution”—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

The words “Provincial Government” and “by the Provincial Government” have been substituted respectively for “Local Government” and “by the Governor-General in Council” and the words “the Governor-General in Council or” have been omitted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937

Information:—The burden of maintaining public peace and tranquillity has been laid upon Magistrates and the police, and it is only right that they should be allowed wider latitude in carrying out the provisions of these preventive sections than when trying ordinary crimes. The whole object of preventive action would be frustrated if Magistrates were expected to hold elaborate investigations about the accuracy and reliability of these informations. When therefore sec 108, Cr P Code provides that Magistrate may act on information which states that a person of the nature contemplated by that section is within the local limits of his jurisdiction, and it is clear from his order that he has believed the information and acted on it, it is in the last degree undesirable that the High Court should go behind the information, and substitute a conclusion reached after elaborate enquiry and arguments for a discretion which the Magistrate was expected to exercise on the spot as soon as he conveniently could—Narsingh Prasad v. Emp., AIR, 1937 Nag. 70 (72), 19 N.L.J. 183, I.L.R. 1936 Nag 200, 167 I.C. 738, 38 Cr.L.J. 447.

Local Jurisdiction:—When a person proceeded against under this section was not within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Magistrate when the order was passed, although it was not denied that he ordinarily resided within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, the order was not illegal because he acted on information which stated that he was within the limits of his jurisdiction. Section 531, Cr. P. Code meets just such a case. It provides, among other things, that no order of any Criminal Court shall be set aside on the ground that the proceedings in the course of which it was passed took place in a wrong district, sub-division or other local area, unless it appears that such error has in fact occasioned a failure of justice—Narsingh Prasad v. Emp., supra

A Magistrate proceeded under this section against a person who was not then in his jurisdiction upon information given to him by police and passed a preliminary order under sec. 112, Cr. P. Code. On transfer of the case to another Court, de novo trial was started by passing second preliminary order in presence of the accused on the basis of original information. The accused contended that his presence within the jurisdiction of the second Magistrate should be ignored as he appeared and continued to attend in obedience of summons issued by the first Magistrate. Held that the second Magistrate had power after the transfer either to continue the proceedings or to start them afresh, that is to hold a de novo trial, that there could be no doubt about the accuracy of the information, for the person proceeded against was there before him in Court and that his proceedings were therefore valid—Narsingh Prasad v. Emp., supra.

242. Essentials of the section:—In a proceeding under this section it must be shown that the accused was connected with the dissemination of the seditious matter. Thus, the mere writing of a seditious matter is not a sufficient ground for proceeding against the author under this section unless it is shown that he was connected with the publication or the subsequent dissemination thereof. So also, in the case of a printer, although it must be assumed that by printing the seditious matter he abets the dissemination thereof, still in order to make him liable under this section it must be shown that he had a knowledge of the contents of the matter printed, especially in case of a big press which is managed by an independent staff such as manager, clerks and others, where it is not possible for the owner of the press to scrutinize personally every detail of the concern. As regards the publisher, he is liable under this section because as publisher he must be presumed to have knowledge of the contents of the matter and he, therefore, 'disseminated' or at least 'abetted the dissemination of' the matter within the meaning of this section—Pitre, 47 Bom 438, 25 Bom L.R. 97, 25 Cr L.J. 150, 76 I.C. 294, A I R 1923 Bom 255.

It is illegal to initiate proceedings under this section against a person where all that is proved against him is the commission of only one particular offence under sec. 153A, I. P. Code, at one particular time, and there is no evidence of his having done so before or of his having an intention of doing so in the immediate future—Chitanji Lal, 50 All 851, 30 Cr.L.J. 216 (217), A.I.R. 1928 All 344, 114 I.C. 48, 26 A.L.J. 813; Chandra Bhan Gupta, 35 Cr L.J. 562, 147 I.C. 1082, 11 O.W.N. 26, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 70, 1934 Cr.C. 236, 9 Luck. 344.

The petitioner joined the processions and meetings arranged by the Congress Committee in which seditious outcries were raised. He had, however, had no hand in organising them. Held that mere joining the processions could not make him liable to be dealt with under sec. 108, Cr. P. C. This section is one of the preventive sections in the Code, and is intended to be applied to persons who either orally or in writing or in any other manner intentionally disseminate or intend to disseminate or in any way abet the dissemination of seditious matter. This implies that the person concerned is in the habit of intentionally disseminating or intends to disseminate seditious matters, in other words, it must be shown that there is danger of his continuing his seditious activities unless he is prevented from doing so under this section. It may be fair to assume that a person who habitually does something is likely to continue to do so but then the habitual nature of his activities sought to be prevented, must be clearly proved—Jagan Nath, 32 Cr L J 1172 (1174), 134 I.C. 486, AIR 1932 Lah. 7, 1932 Cr C 17, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 934, following Chiranji Lal, supra. Where the petitioners are alleged to have engaged in a continuous seditious propaganda and to have organised a branch of an All-India Association known as the Hindustan Sewa Dal, the mere fact that the branch was closed—apparently owing to police searches—would not necessarily show that the petitioners would not have, if left to themselves, resumed their activities. The order under this section was justified in their case—Ramphul Singh, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 236, 1933 Cr C 356, 35 P L R 157.

The principles of law laid down in Chiranji Lal's case, which were followed in the above mentioned cases, were dissented from by the Patna High Court in Gudri Chaudhury, 33 Cr L J. 711, 100 I.C. 88, 13 P L T. 275, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 213, 1932 Cr.C. 494, Ind Rul 1932 Pat 195, where Wort, J., observed: "It is quite clear in my judgment that the Legislature has used the words "disseminates or attempts to disseminate" as not referring to the number of acts performed but rather having reference to whether the evidence showed that there was something to show that a repetition of the offence was probable. This, of course, depends on the facts of each case"

The mere fact that sec 108 may have been applicable, does not necessarily make sec. 110 inapplicable—Monindra, 23 C.W.N. 193 (197), 28 CLJ 25 (31), 46 Cal. 215 (234).

Proceedings under this section are unjustifiable, where the object of such proceedings is to avoid the trouble and possible refusal of Government to prosecute under sec. 153A, I P Code—Chiranji Lal, supra

243. Seditious matter:—The test under this section is whether the person proceeded against has been disseminating seditious matter, and whether there is a fear of the repetition of such offence. In every case it is a question of fact which will have to be determined with reference to the antecedents of the person and other surrounding circumstances—Vaman, 11 Bom L R 743, 10 Cr L J 379, 3 I.C. 776. The preaching of swaraj, which means nothing more than Home rule under the present Government by constitutional means, does not amount to dissemination of seditious matter and does not, therefore, justify an order under this section—Venu Bhushan, 31 Cal 991, 6 CLJ. 699, 11 C.W.N. 1050; Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 19 Bom.L.R. 211, 18 Cr.L.J. 567, 39 I.C. 807. It is essential under clause (a) of this section that the matter disseminated must be seditious—Bal Gangadhar Tilak, supra

Every speech must be read as a whole and a fair construction must be put upon it and more attention should be paid by the Court to the general facts than any isolated words or passages—Secy. High Court Bar Association, 33 Cr L J 831 (834), 139 I.C. 696, AIR 1932 Lah. 559, 1932 Cr C 713, Ind Rul 1932 Lah. 606, 33 P L R 911 following Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 39 I.C. 807, 19 Bom L R 211, 18 Cr L J 567 and Prithvi Dass Sharma, 132 I.C. 889, 12 Lah. 345, AIR 1931 Lah. 283, Ind Rul. 1931 Lah. 713, 32 Cr.L.J. 997, 32 P L R 676. See also Maniben, AIR. 1933 Bom. 65 (66), 141 I.C. 780, 34 Cr L J 231, 57 Bom. 253. The interpretation of the speech cannot be treated merely as a question of fact—Secy. High Court Bar Association, supra. For the purpose of revision, findings of facts arrived at by the Courts below are not usually interfered with and unless it can be shown that there was no evidence at all against any of the petitioners or at least no evidence which could reasonably be accepted by any Court of law as sufficient to justify an order under sec. 108, Cr P C., the High Court will not interfere—Ramphul Singh, AIR 1933 Lah. 236 (238), 1933 Cr.C. 356, 35 P L R 157.

Where there is a series of speeches or lectures on one topic, all delivered within a short period of time, one may be considered for the purpose of throwing light on the real meaning and intent of another, and on the state of mind of the speaker with reference to the object-matter of the speeches. This principle is recognised in illustration (e) to sec. 14 of the Indian Evidence Act—Chidambaram Pillai, 32 Mad. 3 (14), 1 I.C. 36, 9 Cr.L.J. 130, following Q-E. v. Jogendra, 19 Cal. 35 (46), Emp v. Phanindra, 35 Cal. 945 and Q-E. v. Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 22 Bom. 112. In an action under this section against a person on the complaint regarding certain speeches punishable under sec. 153A, I. P. Code, the state of mind reflected in the previous speeches would be highly material in determining the speaker's intention in delivering the questioned speeches. The previous speeches are relevant and ought not to be excluded from evidence. They are admissible in evidence under sec. 14, Evidence Act—Jagannath Prasad v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Nag 134 (136, 137), 1940 N.L.J. 31, following Om Prakash v. Emp., A.I.R. 1930 Lah 867, 1930 Cr.C. 911, 127 I.C. 209, 31 Cr.L.J. 1182; Chamupati v. Emp., A.I.R. 1932 Lah 99, 1932 Cr.C. 119, 142 I.C. 792, 34 Cr.L.J. 473, 13 Lah. 152, 32 P.L.R. 431 and Chidambaram Pillai, supra and dissenting from Secy., High Court Bar Association, supra and Narain Kashinath Vaidya, A.I.R. 1918 Nag 248, 1 N.L.J. 225.

Under a democratic constitution freedom of speech is a cherished privilege of every citizen but, it must not be overlooked, that freedom is meant to be enjoyed in a manner consistent with the maintenance of peace and order which are the primary conditions of the very life of the body politic. It is therefore incumbent on every speaker, however ardent in the propagation of his political or other views, to bear in mind the obligation which he owes to himself as a citizen. He has therefore to eschew such mode of expression as is likely to inflame human passions which, when aroused in the sphere of communal controversies are proved by experience to result in clashes and broken heads. Freedom unrestrained by discipline spells its own ruin—Jagannath Prasad v. Emp., supra. See also Note 373B.

243A. Amount of Security:—Sec. 108, Cr. P. C., embodies a preventive and not a punitive provision of law. It is not the object of this section to demand an excessive amount as security which leaves the man concerned no option, even if he wanted to furnish security, and practically amounts to sending him to jail under a summary procedure without his having been tried and convicted for an offence—Secy., High Court Bar Association, 33 Cr.L.J. 831 (835), 139 I.C. 696, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 559, 1932 Cr.C. 713, Ind Rul 1932 Lah. 606, 33 P.L.R. 911. See Note 293.

244. Promoting enmity between classes:—To sustain an order under sec. 108, it is not sufficient that the language used was highly offensive to one community; it must also be shown that the accused intended to provoke feelings of hatred or enmity between communities. But it is not necessary that he should have succeeded in provoking such feelings, if deliberate intention to do so can be inferred—Dhammaloka, 4 Bur.L.T. 84. In Sital Prasad, 43 Cal. 591, 20 C.W.N. 199, 23 C.L.J. 105, 17 Cr.L.J. 254, 34 I.C. 974, on the other hand, it has been held that to justify an order under sec. 108, one has only got to find that the words used in the leaflet or the matters complained of are likely to promote feelings of hatred or enmity, and there is no necessity under this section of finding intention, such as would be necessary if the person were placed on his trial under sec. 153A, I. P. C. This decision seems to be no longer correct; because the word "intentionally" has been newly added. See P. K. Chakravarty, 54 Cal. 59, 30 C.W.N. 953, 27 Cr.L.J. 1151, 44 C.L.J. 772 ('Forward' Case).

244A. Appeal:—See section 406.

244B. Revision:—Unless it can be shown that there was no evidence at all against any of the petitioners or at least no evidence which could reasonably be accepted by any Court of law as sufficient to justify an order under this section, interference in revision will not be justified—Ramphal, A.I.R. 1933 Lah 236 (238), 1933 Cr.C. 356, 35 P.L.R. 157.

109. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class received information—

Security for good behaviour from vagrants and suspected persons.

- (a) that any person is taking precautions to conceal his presence within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and that there is reason to believe that such person is taking such precautions with a view to committing any offence, or
- (b) that there is within such limits a person who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself,

such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

245. Scope and object:—This section provides for taking security, not from persons suspected of a particular offence, but from persons lurking within the Magistrate's jurisdiction, who have no ostensible means of subsistence, or cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves—Bhuja, Ratanlal 63.

Magistrates are empowered to put in force the provisions of this section whenever they have credible information that the accused has no ostensible means of livelihood or is unable to give a satisfactory account of himself, and is within the local limits of his jurisdiction—Madho Dhobi, 31 Cal. 557; Mahadco, 6 A.L.J. 253. Honorary Magistrates can act under this section—Mahadco Dhobi, 31 Cal. 557, 7 C.W.N. 661.

This section is one restrictive of liberty and must be applied only when strictly applicable—Ganpati v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 807, 176 I.C. 820, 11 R.N. 708, A.I.R. 1938, Nag 465.

An order under this section cannot be made on the ground that it is not safe in the interest of justice to allow the accused unrestricted personal liberty—Kalipada Das v. Emp., 42 C.W.N. 816.

Where a person has already been tried and convicted of an offence under sec. 411, I P. C., he should not be proceeded against also under sec. 109, Cr. P. C., in respect of the very incident, in absence of any other evidence against him—Lal v. Emp., 29 Cr.L.J. 1043, 112 I.C. 467, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 928.

246. Within the Magistrate's jurisdiction:—The expression "within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction" is an adverbial clause modifying the word "conceal" and not an adjectival clause qualifying the noun "presence", and on a correct interpretation of the section, if a man is taking precautions anywhere in order to conceal his presence, and that concealing is to be effected within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, the Magistrate has power to demand security even though the residence of the person within the jurisdiction is well known—Phuchai, 50 All. 909, 30 Cr.L.J. 145, A.I.R. 1929 All. 33, 113 I.C. 417, 26 A.L.J. 1257 (F.B.), overruling Bharon, 49 All. 240, 25 A.L.J. 94, 27 Cr.L.J. 1116, A.I.R. 1927 All. 50, 97 I.C. 428. In the latter case it was held that the passage 'within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction' in clause (a) was part of the predicate "to conceal his presence" and the offence contemplated was that of a person probably, although not necessarily, coming from outside the jurisdiction into the Magistrate's jurisdiction for some nefarious purpose and taking precautions to conceal the fact that he was present in that jurisdiction, and that clause (a) was not intended to apply to a habitual resident or a person well known in the neighbourhood trying to conceal himself. This case was followed in Himayatullah, 49 All. 844, 25 A.L.J. 679, 28 Cr.L.J. 567 (568), which also must be treated as overruled by the above Full Bench decision.

It is not necessary that the accused person should have a residence within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction—Narsimkappa, 2 Weir 53. The fact that the accused was arrested from a place outside the Magistrate's jurisdiction and that the

- (a) that any person is taking precautions to conceal his presence within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and that there is reason to believe that such person is taking such precautions with a view to committing any offence, or

such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

245. Scope and object:—This section provides for taking security, not from persons suspected of a particular offence, but from persons lurking within the Magistrate's jurisdiction, who have no ostensible means of subsistence, or cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves—Bhujia, Ratanlal 63.

Magistrates are empowered to put in force the provisions of this section whenever they have credible information that the accused has no ostensible means of livelihood or is unable to give a satisfactory account of himself, and is within the local limits of his jurisdiction—Madho Dhobi, 31 Cal 557; Mahadeo, 6 A.L.J. 253. Honorary Magistrates can act under this section—Mahadeo Dhobi, 31 Cal 557, 7 C.W.N. 661.

This section is one restrictive of liberty and must be applied only when strictly applicable—Ganpati v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 807, 176 I.C. 820, 11 R.N. 708, A.I.R. 1938, Nag. 465.

An order under this section cannot be made on the ground that it is not safe in the interest of justice to allow the accused unrestricted personal liberty—Kalpada Das v. Emp., 42 C.W.N. 816.

Where a person has already been tried and convicted of an offence under sec. 411, I. P. C., he should not be proceeded against also under sec. 109, Cr. P. C., in respect of the very incident, in absence of any other evidence against him—Lal v. Emp., 29 Cr.L.J. 1043, 112 I.C. 467, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 928.

246. Within the Magistrate's jurisdiction:—The expression "within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction" is an adverbial clause modifying the word "conceal" and not an adjectival clause qualifying the noun "presence", and on a correct interpretation of the section, if a man is taking precautions anywhere in order to conceal his presence, and that concealing is to be effected within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, the Magistrate has power to demand security even though the residence of the person within the jurisdiction is well known—Phuchai, 50 All 909, 30 Cr.L.J. 145, A.I.R. 1929 All 33, 113 I.C. 417, 26 A.L.J. 1257 (F.B.), overruling Bhairon, 49 All. 240, 25 A.L.J. 91, 27 Cr.L.J. 1116, A.I.R. 1927 All. 50, 97 I.C. 428. In the latter case it was held that the passage 'within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction' in clause (a) was part of the predicate "to conceal his presence" and the offence contemplated was that of a person probably, although not necessarily, coming from outside the jurisdiction into the Magistrate's jurisdiction for some nefarious purpose and taking precautions to conceal the fact that he was present in that jurisdiction, and that clause (a) was not intended to apply to a habitual resident or a person well-known in the neighbourhood trying to conceal himself. This case was followed in Himayatullah, 49 All 814, 25 A.L.J. 679, 28 Cr.L.J. 567 (568), which also must be treated as overruled by the above Full Bench decision.

It is not necessary that the accused person should have a residence within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction—Narsimkappa, 2 Weir 53. The fact the accused was arrested from a place outside the Magistrate's jurisdiction an arrest was illegal would not oust the Magistrate's jurisdiction to proceed under this section—Madho Dhobi, 31 Cal. 557, 7 C.W.N. 661 (following Ravalu, 26 Mad. 124, 1 Wier 630).

When a person gives a satisfactory account of his presence within the limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction, he cannot be called upon by such Magistrate to give an account of his presence in any other jurisdiction—Satis Chandra, 39 Cal. 456, 16 C.W.N. 499, 13 Cr.L.J. 161, 15 C.L.J. 396, 13 I.C. 913.

247. Concealing presence with a view to commit offence:—This section penalises the taking of precautions to conceal whether these precautions are successful or not—Ganapati v Emp, 39 Cr.L.J. 807 (808), 11 R.N. 708, 176 I.C. 820, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 465

Where a person's presence or residence within the Magistrate's jurisdiction was well-known and there was no attempt to conceal the same, his mere attempt to conceal his presence at a particular spot at a particular time or his inability to give a satisfactory explanation of what he was doing at a particular place at a particular time, does not bring his case within sec. 109, and he cannot be ordered to give security for good behaviour. This section refers to a continuous act and does not apply to a case where there is a momentary effort at concealment to avoid detection or arrest. Therefore, the facts that the petitioner who is by profession a kabiraj and a dealer in cocoons was found at about midnight in a lane in a town in association with two others who had in their possession house-breaking implements, that on being discovered he fled, that when arrested he remained silent, and that the explanation subsequently offered to the Magistrate of his presence at the time and place in question is false, do not bring the petitioner within provisions of either clause (a) or clause (b) of this section—Reshu Kaviraj, 22 C.W.N. 163, 27 C.L.J. 382, A.I.R. 1918 Cal. 887, 41 I.C. 649, 18 Cr.L.J. 825. The petitioners were all proceeding together towards a place along a railway line. The Sub-Inspector questioned them and some of them gave an account of where they were going, and for what reason, which was in some particulars demonstrated to be false, whereupon the story changed. They were then all asked their names and what village they came from, to which they replied with correct information. Three of them gave a confused and shifting explanation of where they were going and others gave replies of an extremely improbable and suspicious nature. One of them had a bottle of kerosene oil, a piece of bamboo and some rags, and the explanation regarding these was said to be shifty, and in certain respects demonstrated to be false. Held, following Reshu Kaviraj's case, that the petitioners could not be bound down under this section—Gobra Badia, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 729, 50 C.L.J. 181, 1929 Cr.C. 365, 31 Cr.L.J. 408, Ind. Rul 1930 Cal. 231, 122 I.C. 295; Sheikh Piru, 26 Cr.L.J. 812, 86 I.C. 666, 41 C.L.J. 142, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 616. It is an entire mistake to read clause (1) of this section as applying to any person who takes steps to conceal himself, in the sense of concealing his presence in the way in which a criminal conceals his presence when he goes in the dark or by a deserted road, or by some other secret means to commit a crime in his own neighbourhood—Gagan Chandra, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 775, 123 I.C. 747, 31 Cr.L.J. 569, Ind Rul 1930 Cal. 379, 1929 Cr.C. 519, 34 C.W.N. 191, 57 Cal. 919, following Emp v Bhairon, 97 I.C. 428, 26 A.L.J. 91, A.I.R. 1927 All. 50, 49 All. 210, 27 Cr.L.J. 1116. See also Lattu, 17 A.L.J. 891, 20 Cr.L.J. 572, 52 I.C. 60.

In Emp v. Phuchai, A.I.R. 1929 All. 33, 26 A.L.J. 1257, 50 All. 909, 113 I.C. 417, 30 Cr.L.J. 145, the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court did not accept the narrow construction placed on this section in the cases of Reshu Kaviraj and Sheikh Piru, supra, and overruled the cases of Emp v. Bhairon, 49 All. 240, A.I.R. 1927 All. 50, 97 I.C. 428 and Emp v. Himayatullah, 49 All. 811, A.I.R. 1927 All. 592, 102 I.C. 503. In Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Isabali, 39 Cr.L.J. 617, 175 I.C. 722, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 409, I.L.R. (1938) 2 Cal. 221, 42 C.W.N. 588, 11 R.C. 1, Patterson, J., was inclined to agree with the view expressed by the majority of the Judges of the Allahabad Full Bench but Jack, J., preferred the view adopted by Boys, J., in that case that persons arrested under sec. 55, Cr. P. Code did not necessarily come under sec. 109 (a) but might come under the provisions of sec. 109 (b) and in interpreting sec. 109 (a), the ordinary meaning of the words should be followed. Jack, J., also held that sec. 109 (a) referred to continuous concealment and not to an isolated act of concealment by a person taking precautions to conceal his presence within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. In order to attract the provisions of clause (a) of this section it is necessary to show that the person concerned was concealing his own presence for the purpose of committing the offence—in other words, that the act which was to help him to commit the offence was the concealment of his own presence or identity and not the impersonation of another. Where, therefore, the applicant who was the son of a blind beggar, represented to a Raja that he was a Maharaj-Kumar of another place, having influence to help the Raja to make a rich marriage and to arrange for loans at low rates of interest, the provisions of clause (a) of this section did not cover the case—Kanshi Nath, 35 Cr L.J. 442, 147 I.C. 368, 1933 A.L.J. 1061, A.I.R. 1934 All 45, 56 All 314.

The Patna High Court, however, is of opinion that in order to bring a case under this section it need not be proved that the accused has followed a continuous course of conduct in taking precautions to conceal his presence—Rambirich, 27 Cr L.J. 1128, 97 I.C. 648, 6 Pat 177, 8 P.L.T. 95, A.I.R. 1926 Pat 569, Sukhan, 31 Cr L.J. 1125, 126 I.C. 855, 12 P.L.T. 223, A.I.R. 1930 Pat 497, 1930 Cr C 925, Ind Rul 1930 Pat. 646; Emp v. Bishi Sahara, 36 Cr L.J. 846, 155 I.C. 729, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 69, 1935 Cr C. 139, 15 P.L.T. 836.

The Oudh Chief Court has taken the same view Thomas, J., observed. "In my opinion, it is not necessary, in order to bring a person within the operation of sec. 109, cl (a) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, to show that he has followed a continuous course of conduct in taking precautions to conceal his presence. I think that the wording and intention of sec. 109 of the Code of Criminal Procedure are very plain, otherwise it would be impossible to take action against any person, however bad his character or intention to commit an offence may be, if his attempt at concealment were confined to a solitary instance"—Manick, 35 Cr L.J. 1272, 151 I.C. 286, 11 O.W.N. 935, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 367.

The Nagpur High Court is inclined to the view that there may be concealment even if residence within the local limits is well-known and that no definite rule about continuity of concealment should be laid down, it being a question of fact in each case—Ganapati v. Emp. 39 Cr L.J. 807, 11 R.N. 708, 176 I.C. 820, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 465. The accused was walking along the road and, observing the railway watchman on the alert, he stood still and waited until his attention should be diverted before proceeding on his way. He did not hide behind anything but stood there apparently in the hope that he might be mistaken for an inanimate object or part of a building if the watchman happened to turn his eyes on him. There was no concealment whatever, merely immobility and a hope that the watchman's attention would not be attracted. In any circumstances this cannot be considered as concealing his presence within the meaning of cl (a) of this section—Ahesanali v. Emp. 39 Cr L.J. 747 (749), I.L.R. 1938 Nag 597, 176 I.C. 465, 11 R.N. 54, A.I.R. 1938 Nag 303.

Simply avoiding the police by a bad character or taking an unfrequented route is by itself no ground for taking action under this section. It may be that in some cases simply not giving an explanation may not be enough, for instance, an apparently respectable person returning from the house of his mistress very late at night, is using unfrequented streets and avoiding being seen. He cannot come under this section. But, if a man be found by the police with implements of house-breaking lurking near the house of a wealthy man, thereby indicating that he is about to commit burglary there and when challenged by the police he admits the object of his being there, action can be taken against him under this section—Emp v. Bishi Sahara, 36 Cr L.J. 846, 155 I.C. 729, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 69, 1935 Cr C. 139, 15 P.L.T. 836. Where the petitioner, who lived twenty or thirty miles from the place of occurrence, was found hiding in the mathia on a night, still within the jurisdiction of the same Sub-divisional Magistrate but manifestly taking precautions to conceal the fact that he was still within his jurisdiction by hiding in the mathia, avoiding the use of a light and by running away as soon as the police came up to the place, he came within the purview of this section—Sukhan, 31 Cr.L.J. 1125, 126 I.C. 855, 12 P.L.T. 223, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 646.

Where a petitioner was seen coming out of a sugar-cane field at 10 P.M. by two persons who challenged him and he tried to run away but was caught by them at a place near his village, he could not be bound over under this section—Emp. v. Bishambhar, 29 Cr.L.J. 864, 111 I.C. 448, 26 A.L.J. 896, A.I.R. 1928 All. 476 (F.B.).

The concealment referred to must be with a view to committing some offence. Therefore, a person cannot be called upon to furnish security under this section in respect of an alleged temporary concealment in his father's house merely to avoid observation of police (owing to a warrant being issued against him) unconnected with any intent to commit an offence or with any previous concealment outside the Magistrate's jurisdiction—Satis Chandra, 39 Cal. 456. An old offender attempting, on seeing a constable, to conceal himself to avoid observation, does not bring himself within the mischief of sec. 109—Sheikh Piru, 41 C.L.J. 142, 26 Cr.L.J. 842; Rambirich, 6 Pat. 177, 8 P.L.T. 95, 27 Cr.L.J. 1128. An attempt to avoid a police patrol does not bring a person within the ambit of this section—Gandoo, 27 Cr.L.J. 573, 93 I.C. 141, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 368. This clause is one which must be used with discretion; and the mere fact that a person was found talking at night with some persons of bad character, is no evidence that he was taking precautions to conceal his presence. There must be some definite attempt at concealment by taking precautions with that object in view, whether it be by disguise or otherwise indicating a desire to hide the fact that the person is present within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction—Ram Birich, 6 Pat. 177, 8 P.L.T. 95, 27 Cr.L.J. 1128.

A person who gives a false name and delivers letters secretly containing incitement to commit crimes or demanding money for the means of committing crimes, comes within the provisions of clause (a)—Preo Nath, 15 Cr.L.J. 255 (Cal.), 23 I.C. 207. But where a person on being asked by the police gives a false name and then corrects it, and there is nothing else to show that he was taking precautions to conceal his presence, an action under this section is not justified—Sheo Prosad, 21 A.L.J. 847, 25 Cr.L.J. 950, 81 I.C. 598.

248. Want of ostensible means of subsistence:—Mere proof of want of ostensible means of subsistence is not of itself a sufficient reason for passing an order for furnishing security. A Magistrate is bound to consider whether the order is really necessary in order to secure good behaviour, which is a matter for the Magistrate's judicial discretion, and he ought not to send people to jail simply because the opinions of Police witnesses are unfavourable to them—Kala, Ratanlal 723 (724).

A proceeding against a man because he has no ostensible means of subsistence is a totally different proceeding from one for being by habit a thief—Nga Ba Hein, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 544.

A young man, out of employment, staying in the house of his father who is a man of substance and able if necessary to support him, cannot be held to be without ostensible means of subsistence within the meaning of this section. Clause (b) is directed only against suspicious strangers lurking within the Magistrate's jurisdiction. The allegation that the accused is connected with anarchist agitation and conspires for the purpose of committing dacoity and other crimes, can, by itself, constitute no ground for a proceeding under sec. 109, but may properly form the basis of a proceeding under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code—Satis Chandra, 39 Cal. 456, 16 C.W.N. 499, 13 Cr.L.J. 161, 15 C.L.J. 395, 13 I.C. 913; Abdul Rashid, 22 Cr.L.J. 749, 64 I.C. 141 (Lah.). Merely to be penniless or out of work is not an offence. Many an honest man may find himself in either predicament, and in a country where there are workless people but no work houses, persons ought not to be exposed to proceedings under sec. 109 (b) merely because they cannot give a satisfactory account of the manner in which they are eking out a precarious existence—Victor, 43 C.L.J. 202, 53 Cal 345, 30 C.W.N. 380, 27 Cr.L.J. 497. If a person is unable to prove the source of his livelihood, he ought not to be ordered to execute a bond under sec. 109 unless there is reasonable ground for suspecting that he is sustaining himself by some dishonest means, for such an order can be made where 'it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour'—Ibid. The accused's explanation that he came to Calcutta 2 months ago and that he worked as a cooly but had no fixed abode, is a satisfactory account of himself. If a cooly could not show any immediate work, it does not mean that he has no ostensible means of livelihood—Sheikh Piru, 41 C.L.J. 142, 26 Cr.L.J. 842. So also, the mere fact that a man is doing no work at present and was previously convicted for bad livelihood (Pooran, 5 C.W.N. 28; Sheikh Piru, 41 C.L.J. 142, 26 Cr.L.J. 842) or the mere fact that he belongs to a wandering tribe (In re Yerukala, 2 Weir 53) or to a gang which frequented melas and carries on illegal games (Mahadeo, 6 A.L.J. 253), or the mere fact that he is a gambler or opium-smoker (1 Bur.S.R. 246) or has no other means of subsistence except through play of ring game which is a game of skill and not an offence under the Gambling Act (Bangoli, 40 Cal 702, 17 C.W.N. 883, 20 I.C. 612, 14 Cr.L.J. 452) is not a sufficient ground for requiring him to give security.

249. Cannot give a satisfactory account of himself:—Clause (b) of this section applies not only to vagrants or vagabonds, but also covers suspected persons of any class who cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves—Narendra, 13 Cr.L.J. 239, 14 I.C. 431 (Cal). A person who gives a false name or address (Abdur Rashid, 22 Cr.L.J. 749, 64 I.C. 141) or gives a false account or cannot give a satisfactory account of his association with persons who are dangerous political conspirators (Narendra, 13 Cr.L.J. 239, 14 I.C. 431) is included in this section.

The words "cannot give a satisfactory account of himself" do not mean failure to satisfy the Magistrate that he spends his time or at least his leisure hours in a satisfactory manner; and, therefore, the fact that a person (a municipal peon), whose residence and occupation were well known, was said to prowl about at night in the company of scoundrels and was armed with a lathi and used the lathi, was not a sufficient ground for calling upon him to furnish security—Sharif Ahmad, 8 A.L.J. 1097, 12 Cr.L.J. 536, 12 I.C. 304.

The expression "cannot give a satisfactory account of himself" does not include mere inability to account for one's presence at a particular place at a particular time. If a man proves that he is a resident of the neighbourhood, and is a man of substance, he must be said to be able to give a satisfactory account of himself, although he is not able to or does not give any convincing explanation as to why on a particular dark night he was found prowling about in a lonely place—Phuchai, 50 All. 959, 30 Cr.L.J. 145 (149) (F.B.). "A satisfactory account of himself" does not necessarily mean that he should give his correct name and address or even the object of his being present at night, but that he should satisfy the authorities by explaining the suspicious circumstances appearing against him—Emp v Bishi Sahar, 36 Cr.L.J. 846 (850), 155 I.C. 729, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 69, 1935 Cr.C. 139, 15 P.L.T. 836, 7 R.P. 611. Where a person is a man of position and a man of substance, the mere fact that he foolishly chose not to give his correct name and very foolishly tried to run away from the police at the time he was arrested, and declined to explain how he happened to be there, are really no reasons for holding that he could not give a satisfactory explanation of himself or for saying that he is a man of no ostensible means of subsistence—Din Mohammad v Emp, 37 Cr.L.J. 888, 164 I.C. 105, 1936 O.L.R. 426, 9 R.O. 36, 1936 O.W.N. 752, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 383, 1936 Cr.C. 979.

The whole object of the second part of clause (b) of this section is to enable Magistrates to take action against suspicious strangers lurking within their jurisdiction. The greatest criminal in the world is not liable to be questioned as to his presence in his own home unless there is some specific outstanding charge against him—Sa'ish

mathia on a night, still within the jurisdiction of the same Sub-divisional Magistrate but manifestly taking precautions to conceal the fact that he was still within his jurisdiction by hiding in the mathia, avoiding the use of a light and by running away as soon as the police came up to the place, he came within the purview of this section—Sukhan, 31 Cr.L.J. 1125, 126 I.C. 855, 12 P.L.T. 223, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 646.

Where a petitioner was seen coming out of a sugar-cane field at 10 P.M. by two persons who challenged him and he tried to run away but was caught by them at a place near his village, he could not be bound over under this section—Emp. v. Bishambhar, 29 Cr.L.J. 864, 111 I.C. 448, 26 A.L.J. 896, A.I.R. 1928 All. 476 (F.B.).

The concealment referred to must be with a view to committing some offence. Therefore, a person cannot be called upon to furnish security under this section in respect of an alleged temporary concealment in his father's house merely to avoid observation of police (owing to a warrant being issued against him) unconnected with any intent to commit an offence or with any previous concealment outside the Magistrate's jurisdiction—Satis Chandra, 39 Cal. 456. An old offender attempting, on seeing a constable, to conceal himself to avoid observation, does not bring himself within the mischief of sec. 109—Sheikh Piru, 41 C.L.J. 142, 26 Cr.L.J. 842; Rambirich, 6 Pat. 177, 8 P.L.T. 95, 27 Cr.L.J. 1128. An attempt to avoid a police patrol does not bring a person within the ambit of this section—Gandoo, 27 Cr.L.J. 573, 93 I.C. 141, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 368. This clause is one which must be used with discretion; and the mere fact that a person was found talking at night with some persons of bad character, is no evidence that he was taking precautions to conceal his presence. There must be some definite attempt at concealment by taking precautions with that object in view, whether it be by disguise or otherwise indicating a desire to hide the fact that the person is present within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction—Ram Birich, 6 Pat. 177, 8 P.L.T. 95, 27 Cr.L.J. 1128.

A person who gives a false name and delivers letters secretly containing incitement to commit crimes or demanding money for the means of committing crimes, comes within the provisions of clause (a)—Preo Nath, 15 Cr.L.J. 255 (Cal.), 23 I.C. 207. But where a person on being asked by the police gives a false name and then corrects it, and there is nothing else to show that he was taking precautions to conceal his presence, an action under this section is not justified—Sheo Prasad, 21 A.L.J. 847, 25 Cr.L.J. 950, 81 I.C. 598.

248. Want of ostensible means of subsistence:—Mere proof of want of ostensible means of subsistence is not of itself a sufficient reason for passing an order for furnishing security. A Magistrate is bound to consider whether the order is really necessary in order to secure good behaviour, which is a matter for the Magistrate's judicial discretion, and he ought not to send people to jail simply because the opinions of Police witnesses are unfavourable to them—Kala, Ratanlal 723 (724).

A proceeding against a man because he has no ostensible means of subsistence is a totally different proceeding from one for being by habit a thief—Nga Ba Hein, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 544.

A young man, out of employment, staying in the house of his father who is a man of substance and able if necessary to support him, cannot be held to be without ostensible means of subsistence within the meaning of this section. Clause (b) is directed only against suspicious strangers lurking within the Magistrate's jurisdiction. The allegation that the accused is connected with anarchist agitation and conspires for the purpose of committing dacoity and other crimes, can, by itself, constitute no ground for a proceeding under sec. 109, but may properly form the basis of a proceeding under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code—Satis Chandra, 39 Cal. 456, 16 C.W.N. 499, 13 Cr.L.J. 161, 15 C.L.J. 396, 13 I.C. 913; Abdul Rashid, 22 Cr.L.J. 749, 64 I.C. 141 (Lah.). Merely to be penniless or out of work is not an offence. Many an honest man may find himself in either predicament, and in a country where there are workless people but no work houses, persons ought not to be exposed to proceedings under sec. 109 (b) merely because they cannot give a satisfactory account of the manner in which they are eking out a precarious existence—Victor, 43 C.L.J. 202, 53 Cal. 345, 30 C.W.N. 380, 27 Cr.L.J. 497. If a person is unable to prove the source of his livelihood, he ought not to be ordered to execute a bond under sec. 109 unless there is reasonable ground for suspecting that he is sustaining himself by some dishonest means, for such an order can be made where 'it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour'—Ibid. The accused's explanation that he came to Calcutta 2 months ago and that he worked as a cooly but had no fixed abode, is a satisfactory account of himself. If a cooly could not show any immediate work, it does not mean that he has no ostensible means of livelihood—Sheikh Piru, 41 C.L.J. 142, 26 Cr.L.J. 842. So also, the mere fact that a man is doing no work at present and was previously convicted for bad livelihood (Pooran, 5 C.W.N. 28; Sheikh Piru, 41 C.L.J. 142, 26 Cr.L.J. 842) or the mere fact that he belongs to a wandering tribe (In re Yerukala, 2 Weir 53) or to a gang which frequented melas and carries on illegal games (Mahadeo, 6 A.L.J. 253), or the mere fact that he is a gambler or opium-smoker (1 BurSR 246) or has no other means of subsistence except through play of ring game which is a game of skill and not an offence under the Gambling Act (Ban̄goli, 40 Cal 702, 17 C.W.N. 883, 20 IC 612, 14 Cr.L.J. 452) is not a sufficient ground for requiring him to give security.

249. Cannot give a satisfactory account of himself:—Clause (b) of this section applies not only to vagrants or vagabonds, but also covers suspected persons of any class who cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves—Narendra, 13 Cr.L.J. 239, 14 IC. 431 (Cal). A person who gives a false name or address (Abdur Rashid, 22 Cr.L.J. 749, 64 IC 141) or gives a false account or cannot give a satisfactory account of his association with persons who are dangerous political conspirators (Narendra, 13 Cr.L.J. 239, 14 IC. 431) is included in this section.

The words "cannot give a satisfactory account of himself" do not mean failure to satisfy the Magistrate that he spends his time or at least his leisure hours in a satisfactory manner; and, therefore, the fact that a person (a municipal peon), whose residence and occupation were well known, was said to prowl about at night in the company of scoundrels and was armed with a lathi and used the lathi, was not a sufficient ground for calling upon him to furnish security—Sharif Ahmad, 8 A.L.J. 1097, 12 Cr.L.J. 536, 12 IC 304.

The expression "cannot give a satisfactory account of himself" does not include mere inability to account for one's presence at a particular place at a particular time. If a man proves that he is a resident of the neighbourhood, and is a man of substance, he must be said to be able to give a satisfactory account of himself, although he is not able to or does not give any convincing explanation as to why on a particular dark night he was found prowling about in a lonely place—Phuchai, 50 All. 959, 30 Cr.L.J. 145 (149) (F.B.). "A satisfactory account of himself" does not necessarily mean that he should give his correct name and address or even the object of his being present at night, but that he should satisfy the authorities by explaining the suspicious circumstances appearing against him—Emp. v. Bishi Sahar, 36 Cr.L.J. 846 (850), 155 IC. 729, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 69, 1935 Cr.C. 139, 15 P.L.T. 836, 7 R.P. 611. Where a person is a man of position and a man of substance, the mere fact that he foolishly chose not to give his correct name and very foolishly tried to run away from the police at the time he was arrested, and declined to explain how he happened to be there, are really no reasons for holding that he could not give a satisfactory explanation of himself or for saying that he is a man of no ostensible means of subsistence—Din Mohammad v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 888, 164 IC. 105, 1936 O.L.R. 426, 9 R.O. 36, 1936 O.W.N. 752, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 383, 1936 Cr.C. 979.

The whole object of the second part of clause (b) of this section is to enable Magistrates to take action against suspicious strangers lurking within their jurisdiction. The greatest criminal in the world is not liable to be questioned as to his presence in his own home unless there is some specific outstanding charge against him—Satish

Chandra, 39 Cal. 456, 16 C.W.N. 499, 13 Cr.L.J. 161, 15 C.L.J. 396, 13 I.C. 913; Sheikh Piru, 26 Cr.L.J. 842, 86 I.C. 666, 41 C.L.J. 142, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 616.

Where it was proved that the accused were residents of another district where they had their houses, that they had money with them, that they were dealers in cattle and that they had money in deposit with bankers, it could not be said that they had not been able to give a satisfactory account of themselves. And the mere fact that they were camping in an open ground in a city while on their way home, would not justify the Magistrate in passing an order under this section—Nanka, 18 A.L.J. 321, 21 Cr.L.J. 366, 55 I.C. 734.

The word 'satisfactory' means satisfactory in accordance with the known facts that are consistent with the surrounding circumstances. Where an accused was a man known to the police, the mere fact that a jemmy, a bunch of keys, a box of matches and a stock of lac were found near him, or that he was scantily dressed, did not show that he failed to give a satisfactory account of his presence at a particular locality at a precise time—Himayatullah, 49 All. 844, 25 A.L.J. 679, 28 Cr.L.J. 567 (568). The expressions, "who has no ostensible means of subsistence" and "who can not give a satisfactory account of himself" are widely different from each other. In practice, they are very often taken as meaning one and the same thing and this leads to a misapplication of the provision of the section. The latter expression does not mean that the person should satisfy the Magistrate how he spends his time, but it means that he has to satisfactorily account for his presence within the limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction. It means that if a person is present within such limits or is present at a place within such limits to which place he does not belong, and there are circumstances justifying a suspicion that he is there not for an innocent purpose, he has got to explain his presence—Sheikh Piru, 26 Cr.L.J. 842, 86 I.C. 666, 41 C.L.J. 142, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 616. The prosecution must satisfy the Magistrate that the accused is suspected to be living dishonestly because of his failure to give a satisfactory explanation when called upon to account for his presence in the place where he is found, e.g. if he fails to account for being discovered in the company of persons living a dishonest or criminal life, or detected in some place where he has no legal right to be. But the poor and the outcast and the old offenders must somewhere move and have their being, and a person who was passing the time to all outward appearances innocently and in a manner void of suspicion, could not be brought within the ambit of sec. 109 merely because he was unable to prove that he was working for his living—Victor, 53 Cal. 345, 30 C.W.N. 380, 27 Cr.L.J. 497, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 648, 43 C.L.J. 202, 93 I.C. 961.

When a man is called on to give a satisfactory account of himself, the implication necessarily follows that it is not a general account of himself but an account of himself in relation to the circumstances in which he is called on to give such account. Under sec. 55, Cr. P. Code an officer in charge of a police station is empowered to arrest or cause to be arrested inter alia any one who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself, and the satisfactory account which is to be given cannot, at the moment when an arrest is impending, be considered to have reference to anything except the circumstances in which he is about to be apprehended. The wording of sec. 109 Cr. P. Code is not otherwise, and it cannot be apprehended that a person can be considered to have given a satisfactory account of himself if, being found with unmistakable burgling instruments in his possession, in the middle of the night, he says that he is a respected house-holder, following an honourable profession in the day time still less can he be said to have given a satisfactory account of himself when, on being accosted, he flings away a bundle of house-breaking implements and runs to his own house by a devious route, and, when forced to open his door to the police, denies that he had left his house that night—Akesanali v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 747 (751), 176 I.C. 465, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 303, 11 R.N. 54, 11 L.R. 1938 Nag. 597.

At about 10 P.M., when two ladies were engaged in cleansing utensils at the ghat of their tank some one directed a torchlight on them from the eastern bank of the tank. The ladies thereupon retired to their house and informed the inmates who at once ran to the place with lights. Finding no one there, they proceeded towards a deserted hut in an orchard near the tank and, after a chase, arrested the opposite party who ran out of the hut as they approached. When questioned he said that he was going from N to M and, immediately after correcting himself, said that he was going from M to N and had entered the hut to take rest. He further admitted that he had come there with two other persons for the purpose of committing theft and that his two companions had gone away to select a house for the purpose, leaving him in the hut. He denied that he had any torch with him but admitted that his companions directed a torchlight from the eastern bank of the tank. When the hut was searched, a Sind-cutter and a gunny bag were found there. In view of these admissions and in view of the finding of a Sind-cutter and the circumstances in which he was arrested, he must be held to have failed to give a satisfactory account of himself and therefore he has rendered himself liable to be called upon under sec 109 (b), Cr. P. Code to execute a bond for good behaviour. Surely, where a man is arrested in extremely suspicious circumstances, and fails to give any reasonable explanation as to how he came to be in that position, he cannot be said to have given a satisfactory account of himself—Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Isabali, 39 Cr.L.J. 647, 175 I.C. 722, I.L.R. (1938) 2 Cal 221, 42 C.W.N. 588, 11 R.C. 1, A.I.R. 1938 Cal 409.

'With sureties':—Compare this expression with the words "with or without sureties" in the preceding sections. The requirement of surety in this section is obligatory and not optional.

250. Evidence:—Mere proof of want of ostensible means of livelihood is not a sufficient reason for passing an order under this section—Kala, Ratanlal 723 (724). The Magistrate should take evidence as to the general character of the person charged with bad livelihood, and not convict him on the mere report of the Police officers—Alum Sheikh, 5 W.R. 2, Kala, supra. The fact that the accused had previously been connected with a criminal conspiracy or might still be in correspondence with criminals, is not relevant under this section, though it might form the basis of a substantive proceeding under sec 110—Satish Chandra, 39 Cal. 456.

An order under this section passed more on suspicion than on any good basis of fact must be set aside. Where three respectable residents of Delhi came to Meerut by a night train, and were found on the road between the station and the city near to a place where a burglar's jemmy was found, an order calling upon them to furnish security for good behaviour was illegal—Ghulam Julani, 17 A.L.J. 432, 20 Cr.L.J. 401.

Where a person was convicted for an offence under sec 411, I.P.C., he should not be proceeded against also under sec 109, Cr.P.C., in respect of the same incidents where there is no other evidence against him—Lal, 29 Cr.L.J. 1013, 112 I.C. 467, A.I.R. 1928 Lah 928.

250A. Forfeiture of bond:—If the bond was forfeited on account of any act of the accused person within the period for which the sureties had bound themselves, they would be liable whether the proceedings were started against him before or after the expiry of the period—Emp v. Bahadur Singh, A.I.R. 1932 All 58, 1932 Cr.C. 110, 1932 A.L.J. 112, 33 Cr.L.J. 281, 136 I.C. 373, 54 All 335; Jeomal, 27 Cr.L.J. 326 (327), 92 I.C. 742, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 180, 20 S.L.R. 93.

Where a surety offered by a person for good behaviour has once been accepted, a Magistrate has no power subsequently to require fresh security merely because he is dissatisfied with the old security already accepted—Emp v. Ram Lal, 1 C.W.N. 394.

A breach of the bond is committed when the accused commits or attempts to commit or abets any offence punishable with imprisonment. The mere fact that he is again found in suspicious circumstances without any means of livelihood or is unable to give a satisfactory explanation of himself, which may justify a fresh proceeding against him under this section, would not result in the forfeiture of the first bond; because that does not amount to the commission of or attempt to commit or abetment of an offence punishable with imprisonment. At most it might be a preparation for the commission of an offence, but short of an attempt—Emp. v. Bahadur Singh, A.I.R. 1932 All. 58, 1932 Cr.C. 110, 1932 A.L.J. 112, 33 Cr.L.J. 281, 136 I.C. 373, 54 All 335.

250B. Appeal:—See sec. 406.

250C. Revision:—The question whether the circumstances are suspicious is mainly a question of fact, and if a Magistrate is satisfied that the circumstances in which a person who is brought before him under sec. 109, Cr. P. Code was found, are not suspicious and that there is no need for him to call upon that person to provide security, it is not the part of the High Court to reverse his order and to demand security a year later on the ground that the circumstances had been suspicious. Section 109, Cr. P. Code is one of the preventive sections which are to be employed by Magistrate for the prevention of crimes, and it must be rarely, if ever, that a High Court will feel called upon to reverse an order of a Magistrate refusing to demand security when he is not entitled to do so by law, and then no doubt there is occasion for the High Court to interfere on the ground that the Magistrate has exceeded his power—Emp. v. Gyan Singh, A.I.R. 1934 All. 24, 35 Cr.L.J. 446, 1933 A.L.J. 1201, 147 I.C. 433. The High Court would not go into the merits of a case unless there was something to show that there has been a material departure from the legal principles according to which the case ought to have been dealt with, or if it is asked to go into the facts, it will only do so if something is shown which particularly indicates that it is desirable to enter into those facts—Emp. v. Sundar, 35 Cr.L.J. 189, 146 I.C. 831, 1933 A.L.J. 272.

110. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Provincial Government receives information that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction—

Security for good behaviour from habitual offenders.

- (a) is by habit a robber, house-breaker, thief or forgery; or
- (b) is by habit a receiver of stolen property knowing the same to have been stolen; or
- (c) habitually protects or harbours thieves or aids in the concealment or disposal of stolen property; or
- (d) habitually commits or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of, the offence of kidnapping, abduction ischief, or any
XII of the 489A, Section
 Indian P 489B, Section 489C, or Section 489D of that Code; or
- (e) habitually commits, or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of, offences involving a breach of the peace; or

(f) is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community, such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding three years, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Change:—This section has been amended by sec. 18 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923).

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

251. Object and Scope of Section:—The object of this section is to afford protection to the public against a repetition of crimes in which the safety of property is menaced as well as the security of persons is jeopardised—Nawab, 2 All. 835; Manindra, 46 Cal 215, AIR 1919 Cal 702, 46 IC 152, 19 Cr.L.J. 696, 28 C.L.J. 25, 23 C.W.N. 193; Rajendra, 17 C.W.N. 238, 14 Cr.L.J. 5

The object is to prevent crime, and not to obtain money for the Crown—Q-E v Rahim, 20 All 206; Saligram, 36 Cal. 562.

Again, the object of this section is the prevention and not the punishment of offences, and with that object it authorises the Magistrate to take good and sufficient security for good behaviour. But it is solely for the purpose of securing future good behaviour that the section can be used. Any attempt to use it for the purpose of punishing past offences is wrong and not sanctioned by law—per Macpherson, J., in Umbica, 1 C.L.R. 268 (271); In re Raja Valad, 10 Bom 174; Jagat Singh, 2 Lah.L.J. 237. Therefore, where the accused have committed definite acts of extortion for which they are liable to be prosecuted under the I P Code, an order for furnishing security under this section should not be passed, because such order would seriously prejudice them in their trial for those offences—Anookool, 27 Cal 781. But the Allahabad High Court holds that the mere fact that a man is alleged to have committed a substantive offence (for which he ought to be punished under the I P Code) is not an obstacle to the institution of proceedings under sec. 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code—Chandan, 52 All 448, 1930 A.L.J. 389, 31 Cr.L.J. 627 (629), AIR 1930 All 274, 1930 Cr.C. 442, 121 IC 40; Sundar Lal, AIR 1933 All 676, 1933 A.L.J. 777, 1933 Cr.C. 1188, 146 IC. 900, 35 Cr.L.J. 218 (overruling Ram Prasad, 23 A.L.J. 18, 26 Cr.L.J. 746, 86 IC. 282, AIR. 1925 All 250, and Ram Rup, 1929 A.L.J. 981, 1929 Cr.C. 449). Evidence going to show that a substantive offence has been committed or evidence which might possibly form the basis of a charge of substantive offence, is not necessarily to be excluded from proceedings under sec. 110, and can form the basis of an order for security—Budhan, 47 All 733, 23 A.L.J. 507, 26 Cr.L.J. 1130, AIR. 1925 All 694; followed in Jai Singh, 6 Luck 36, 31 Cr.L.J. 1020 (1021); Lachman, 28 Cr.L.J. 515, 102 IC 211, AIR. 1927 All 473

Moreover, this section is not intended to afford the police a means of keeping a suspected person under detention until they are able to work out a case against him—Paimal, 10 A.L.J. 351, 13 Cr.L.J. 827.

Section 110, Cr. P. Code is intended to deal with persons who cannot readily be brought under the ordinary law and who, for special reasons, cannot be convicted under the Penal Code in respect of the offences said to have been committed by them. There is nothing in the wording of sec. 110 or of any other section of the Code that leads to the inference that sec. 110 can only be used where the parties are strangers to the locality in which the offences are committed. If the persons or the acts which they commit are such as to make it difficult to deal with them under the ordinary provisions of law then sec. 110 can be used—Shaumugham Asari, 39 Cr.L.J. 583, 175

I.C. 417, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 482, 1938 M.W.N. 93, 47 M.L.W. 196, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 178, 10 R.M. 777. This section is obviously not intended for use against merely undisciplined people such as local bosses and faction leaders to clip their wings, to deplete their resources by an expensive inquiry, to humble their pride by treating them as criminal mad men, to advertise publicly their high-handed behaviour. To apply the section to such as these is undoubtedly to abuse it. Conviction by public opinion should only be permitted to take the place of conviction by a Court in rare and exceptional circumstances, as for example, where the advent of a suspicious stranger in a village coincides with a series of crimes and suspicion waxes so strong and is so well justified that it may fairly be allowed to take the place of proof and in such unusual circumstances the section sanctions an experimental use of the security sections. But where a person has lived all his life in a locality and has never even been accused before a Court of law for any crime, far less convicted, there is absolutely no justification for any such experiment or for making any presumption that he is a criminal, not to say a habitual criminal—Rathnam Pillai, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 35 (37), 1937 M.W.N. 1065, 1937 M.Cr.C. 298, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 749, 46 M.L.W. 858, 39 Cr.L.J. 230, 172 I.C. 866.

Where the substance of the information received relates to disputes relating to land, a special provision of the Code, sec. 145, is applicable and that special provision excludes the general provision of sec. 110, Cr. P. Code—Alisher Dost Muhammad, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 261, 40 Cr.L.J. 887, 184 I.C. 189, 12 R.S. 91.

252. Application of Section:—This section arms the Magistrate with a powerful means of securing the interest of the community from injury at the hands of hardened offenders of the most dangerous classes. Therefore, the power given by this section should be exercised sparingly and with much discretion by the Magistrate and only in those cases where the evidence is very clear and precise—Rajendra, 17 C.W.N. 238, 18 I.C. 149, 16 Cr.L.J. 467, 14 Cr.L.J. 5; Jagat Singh, 2 Lah.L.J. 237; Yaghi, 1892 P.R. 5; nor, on the other hand, should its exercise be confined only to cases in which positive evidence is forthcoming of the commission of offences—In re Peddasiva Reddi, 3 Mad. 238.

This section is preventive and not punitive. Its object is to protect society against persons who are so likely to commit offences that it is not advisable to leave them at large unchecked. It is undesirable to proceed under this section against a person who is trying to reform himself and to live an honest life—In re Billa Appayya, 10 M.L.T. 333, 12 Cr.L.J. 328.

These preventive sections are not intended to be used to punish accused persons for offences that have been committed, but to prevent them from committing offences which they are by their nature or habit likely to commit—Jafar Hussain, A.I.R. 1933 All. 859, 1933 A.L.J. 883, 1933 Cr.C. 1534, 147 I.C. 551.

Moreover, Magistrates should be cautious in making sure that the provisions intended for securing the peace of the community are not utilized for taking private vengeance under the aegis of a Crown prosecution—Kali Prasanna, 38 Cal. 156, 15 C.W.N. 366, 12 Cr.L.J. 161. It is to be feared that this section is often resorted to by the Magistrates for the purpose of ensuring the punishment of the persons suspected but not proved to have committed offences such as theft, etc., and it is notorious that accusations of bad livelihood are constantly made with the object of blackening an enemy's character, and satisfying feelings of spite and hatred. So it is incumbent on the Magistrates to see that this section is not resorted to unnecessarily and to annoy individuals—Sukha, 1898 P.R. 4. The Courts must not make use of this section in order to secure a punishment of persons against whom a substantive charge has broken down—Raja Ram, 23 O.C. 371, 22 Cr.L.J. 273; Bhagwat, 21 O.C. 317, 23 Cr.L.J. 123; Jai Singh, 6 Luck. 36, 31 Cr.L.J. 1020 (1021), 126 I.C. 501; Shyam Lal, 6 A.L.J. 487, 9 Cr.L.J. 528; Lachman, 28 Cr.L.J. 551, 102 I.C. 211, A.I.R. 1927 All. 473; Bhagat Prasad, 72 I.C. 1031, 26 O.C. 317, 10 O.L.J. 232, A.I.R. 1921 Oudh 33. An order under section 110 should not be made against a person immediately after he has been acquitted of an offence, unless a very strong case is made out against him—Abdulla, 26 P.L.R. 789, 27 Cr.L.J. 190, A.I.R. 1926 Lah 190, 91 I.C. 1006, 2 Lah Cas 184. When proceedings have been taken under this section against a man soon after a discharge or acquittal from a charge of an offence of which he was suspected, it is always necessary to make it clear that the proceedings have not been taken as a means of punishing in an indirect way a man whom the police suspected to be guilty—Sham Lal, supra. The evidence which was regarded as unreliable and insufficient to convict a person on the charge of dacoity, should not be treated as reliable evidence to show that such person is a dangerous and desperate character who ought to be called upon to furnish security for good behaviour—Parbati, 35 Cr.L.J. 952 (955), 149 I.C. 408, 6 R.C. 593, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 482, 1934 Cr.C. 690, 61 Cal 588. See also Kismat Akarda, 11 C.W.N. 129, 4 Cr.L.J. 464; Alep, 11 C.W.N. 413, 5 Cr.L.J. 191; Jhandu, 25 Cr.L.J. 45, 75 I.C. 733, A.I.R. 1924 All 1420; Sital Din, 25 Cr.L.J. 366, 77 I.C. 302, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 49; Gulab Chand, 17 Cr.L.J. 184, 33 I.C. 824; Contra 32 All. 55.

The salutary provisions of this section were enacted by the Legislature with the purpose of protecting society from habitual offenders; they were unquestionably never intended to be applied to coerce landlords, however recalcitrant they might be, to adopt methods of management of their estate, the efficacy of which, very indiscreetly perhaps, they might not appreciate, though pressed upon them with the best of intentions—Rajendra, 17 C.W.N. 238 (269), 18 I.C. 149, 16 C.L.J. 467, 14 Cr.L.J. 5. Some tenants, who became refractory, submitted a memorial to His Excellency the Governor of Bengal, against their Zamindar. The memorial was sent down to the Collector for disposal. On being asked by him the Sub-divisional Magistrate reported in detail after examining a large number of witnesses. The substance of his report was that out of six definite allegations made in the memorial four were not established. The remaining two he believed to be true against the Zamindar's servants but held that the Zamindar's responsibility for these acts had not been established. On receipt of the report the District Magistrate drew up proceedings under sections 107 and 110, Cr. P. Code against the Zamindar. Reading the two together the High Court found it impossible to hold that they furnish any material sufficient to justify proceedings either under sec. 107 or under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code—Najar, 28 C.W.N. 23, 76 I.C. 429, 38 C.L.J. 198, A.I.R. 1924 Cal 114, 25 Cr.L.J. 189. General and vague allegations of supposed oppressions by a Zamindar spread over a number of years in which there is not a single individual named who is said to have been oppressed nor the place nor the date where and when these incidents took place, cannot justify the drawing up of proceedings against him at the instance of his tenants who complain of such oppressions—Narendra Nath Jha, 39 Cr.L.J. 811 (813), 1938 P.W.N. 588, 19 P.L.T. 512, 176 I.C. 849, 4 B.R. 767, 11 R.P. 116, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 533.

This section has been made applicable to Burma Habitual Offenders Restriction Act by section 4 of that Act, and section 3 of that Act permits an order of restriction to be passed in any case in which security can be required under sec. 110 of this Code—San Dun, 2 Rang. 641 (642), A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 112.

An order under this section cannot be used to bring an offender within the ambit of sec. 75, I. P. Code—Jumo, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 193, 28 S.L.R. 199.

253. Sections 108 and 110:—The mere fact that section 108 may have been applicable does not necessarily make sec. 110 inapplicable—Manindra, 46 Cal. 215 (231), 23 C.W.N. 193, 28 C.L.J. 25, 19 Cr.L.J. 96, 46 I.C. 152, A.I.R. 1919 Cal. 702.

254. Sections 109 and 110:—The two sections overlap each other. They must be carefully worked and great care should be taken not to abuse them. The proceedings taken must clearly specify whether the accusation which the accused is to meet is one under sec. 109 or under sec. 110—Mad. Pol. Man., p. 89. Therefore, where the preliminary order passed by the Magistrate under sec. 112 was not clear in that the accused did not know whether the accusation he had to meet, was under or 110, the order was set aside—Isvar Chandra, 11 Cal. 13. An order under

I.C. 417, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 482, 1938 M.W.N. 93, 47 M.L.W. 196, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 178, 10 R.M. 777. This section is obviously not intended for use against merely undisciplined people such as local bosses and faction leaders to clip their wings, to deplete their resources by an expensive inquiry, to humble their pride by treating them as criminal mad men, to advertise publicly their high-handed behaviour. To apply the section to such as these is undoubtedly to abuse it. Conviction by public opinion should only be permitted to take the place of conviction by a Court in rare and exceptional circumstances, as for example, where the advent of a suspicious stranger in a village coincides with a series of crimes and suspicion waves so strong and is so well justified that it may fairly be allowed to take the place of proof and in such unusual circumstances the section sanctions an experimental use of the security sections. But where a person has lived all his life in a locality and has never even been accused before a Court of law for any crime, far less convicted, there is absolutely no justification for any such experiment or for making any presumption that he is a criminal, not to say a habitual criminal—Rathnam Pillai, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 35 (37), 1937 M.W.N. 1065, 1937 M.Cr.C. 298, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 749, 46 M.L.W. 858, 39 Cr.L.J. 230, 172 I.C. 866.

Where the substance of the information received relates to disputes relating to land, a special provision of the Code, sec. 145, is applicable and that special provision excludes the general provision of sec. 110, Cr. P. Code—Alisher Dost Muhammad, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 261, 40 Cr.L.J. 887, 184 I.C. 189, 12 RS 94

252. Application of Section:—This section arms the Magistrate with a powerful means of securing the interest of the community from injury at the hands of hardened offenders of the most dangerous classes. Therefore, the power given by this section should be exercised sparingly and with much discretion by the Magistrate and only in those cases where the evidence is very clear and precise—Rajendra, 17 C.W.N. 238, 18 I.C. 149, 16 C.L.J. 467, 14 Cr.L.J. 5; Jagat Singh, 2 Lah.L.J. 237; Yaghi, 1892 P.R. 5; nor, on the other hand, should its exercise be confined only to cases in which positive evidence is forthcoming of the commission of offences—In re Peddaswa Reddi, 3 Mad 238

This section is preventive and not punitive. Its object is to protect society against persons who are so likely to commit offences that it is not advisable to leave them at large unchecked. It is undesirable to proceed under this section against a person who is trying to reform himself and to live an honest life—In re Billa Appayya, 10 M.L.T. 333, 12 Cr.L.J. 328.

These preventive sections are not intended to be used to punish accused persons for offences that have been committed, but to prevent them from committing offences which they are by their nature or habit likely to commit—Jafar Hussain, A.I.R. 1933 All 859, 1933 A.L.J. 883, 1933 Cr.C. 1534, 147 I.C. 551.

Moreover, Magistrates should be cautious in making sure that the provisions intended for securing the peace of the community are not utilized for taking private vengeance under the ægis of a Crown prosecution—Kali Prasanna, 38 Cal. 156, 15 C.W.N. 366, 12 Cr.L.J. 164. It is to be feared that this section is often resorted to by the Magistrates for the purpose of ensuring the punishment of the persons suspected but not proved to have committed offences such as theft, etc., and it is notorious that accusations of bad livelihood are constantly made with the object of blackening an enemy's character, and satisfying feelings of spite and hatred. So it is incumbent on the Magistrates to see that this section is not resorted to unnecessarily and to annoy individuals—Sukha, 1898 P.R. 4. The Courts must not make use of this section in order to secure a punishment of persons against whom a substantive charge has broken down—Raja Ram, 23 O.C. 371, 22 Cr.L.J. 273; Bhagwat, 24 O.C. 317, 23 Cr.L.J. 123; Jai Singh, 6 Luck. 36, 31 Cr.L.J. 1020 (1021), 126 I.C. 501; Shyam Lal, 6 A.L.J. 487, 9 Cr.L.J. 528; Lachman, 28 Cr.L.J. 551, 102 I.C. 211, A.I.R. 1927 All 473; Bhagat Prasad, 72 I.C. 1031, 26 O.C. 317, 10 O.L.J. 232, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 33. An order under section 110 should not be made against a (647), 22 Cr.L.J. 228 Undoubtedly a prudent Magistrate might not consider information sufficient to cause him to take action under the preventive sections, unless it gave substantial details against the person in question; but there is nothing in the section laying down any quantum of information as a necessary condition for the Magistrate to take action—Ram Ghulam, 28 Cr.L.J. 744 (746), 103 I.C. 792, 2 Luck. 157, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 306.

Source of information.—The language of this section does not place any limit as to the nature of the information or as to the source from which it may be derived—Mithu, 27 All 172 (173).

The Magistrate may initiate proceedings on information from any source; the statute does not impose any restriction as to the quarter from which the information may be derived—Rajendra, infra. The Magistrate is not bound to reveal the source of the information to the person concerned, for the information is not any evidence against the accused; moreover, if a Magistrate is to set out before the accused the names of the persons from whom he receives information and the nature of the information given, very few self-respecting persons would dream of placing any information at the disposal of the Magistrate—Mithu, 27 All 172 (173); Rajendra, 17 C.W.N. 238, 16 C.L.J. 467, 18 I.C. 149, 14 Cr.L.J. 5

The words "receives information" in this section include information, however obtained. The law does not limit the method in which the Magistrate who is empowered by the Local Government, is to receive the information. He may receive the information through some other Magistrate. Therefore, where the police made a report to the senior Deputy Magistrate that certain persons were in the habit of committing mischief, extortion, and other offences, and that Magistrate forwarded the report to another Magistrate of the first class, held that the latter had jurisdiction to institute a proceeding under this section on that report—Hiranand, 1 Pat 621, A.I.R. 1922 Pat 586, 24 Cr.L.J. 31, 71 I.C. 79

As to what is or is not credible information, see Notes under sec. 107

The information to be required by a Magistrate may be to some extent of a hearsay and general description, but when the party to whom the order is directed appears in Court in obedience to such order, the inquiry must be conducted on the lines laid down in section 117—Babua, 6 All 132

Conversations out of Court with persons, however, respectable, are not legal or proper materials upon which to adopt proceedings under this section—Babua, 6 All 132. It is incumbent on Magistrates to exercise the greatest caution and impartiality, and to be careful not to be influenced by outside gossip and vague rumours—Sukha, 1898 P.R. 4

Magistrates are not competent to base their orders on their local and personal knowledge of the accused and witnesses—Alimuddin, 29 Cal. 392; Wali Md, 25 Cr.L.J. 808, A.I.R. 1925 Lah 166. No doubt a Magistrate is compelled in the performance of his duties to make private inquiries as to the character of his neighbourhood and as to the person reputed to be of bad character and likely to cause trouble. These inquiries are necessary to an executive officer having to inform himself of the nature of the population committed to his charge, but where it is shown that the Magistrate has allowed the actual information obtained in such inquiries against certain individuals brought before him by process of law, his order would be quashed as being vitiated by the admission of such information—Ashiq Ali, 21 A.L.J. 513, 24 Cr.L.J. 593, A.I.R. 1923 All 596. The proper procedure, where it is important to utilize the personal knowledge of a Magistrate, is for the case to be tried by another Magistrate, and for the former Magistrate to give evidence as a witness—Alimuddin, 29 Cal. 392, Nuridin, 1903 P.R. 27, 1 Cr.L.J. 99

A local inquiry is most appropriate before instituting proceedings under sec. 110, but once the accused are before the Court, the case must be decided on the evidence alone, and not on the basis of the local inquiry. But it is not illegal for a Magistrate to use his inquiry to confirm the result at which he has arrived on a consideration of the evidence—Ram Pargat, 12 O.L.J. 341, 2 O.W.N. 350, 26 Cr.L.J. 1149.

But although the private information possessed by a Magistrate concerning the accused person cannot be used as evidence in the case, yet such information is a form of check which the trial Court may legitimately use in order to test the nature of the evidence with which it has to deal, and negative, for example, a suggestion that the police investigation has been unfair—Darbari Singh, 45 All 749 (751).

258. "Within the Magistrate's jurisdiction":—A Magistrate cannot take action under this section against a person who is outside the local limits of his jurisdiction—Satindia, 48 C.L.J. 143, 29 Cr.L.J. 842 (843); Sonardi, 35 C.W.N. 255 (256), 129 I.C. 688, 52 C.L.J. 415, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 65, 1931 Cr.C. 64, where it was also held that it was incumbent upon the persons proceeded against to show that they were not within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate; and it is not contemplated by this section that he can issue a warrant, so as to pursue the person concerned into another jurisdiction—Ketaboi, 27 Cal. 993 (995); nor is it contemplated that the Police should be at liberty to bring persons from distant places (e.g., from a different district or a different province) outside the Magistrate's jurisdiction to a place within the local limits of his jurisdiction, and then to ask the Magistrate to exercise his jurisdiction in respect of offences committed elsewhere. The jurisdiction given by this section is in terms confined to persons within the limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction, and certainly cannot have been meant to extend to persons who are within those limits merely because they have been brought there in police custody—Murli, 1885 P.R. 43; Ketaboi, supra; Krishnaji, 23 Bom 32 (35). But if a person has been arrested outside the jurisdiction for an offence committed within the jurisdiction, and the charge of substantive offence fails, the person can be proceeded against under this section—Manindra, 46 Cal 215 (235), A.I.R. 1919 Cal. 702, 46 I.C. 152, 19 Cr.L.J. 696, 28 C.L.J. 25, 23 C.W.N. 193.

But it is not necessary that the person should have a permanent residence within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction. Therefore, persons who ordinarily did not reside within the Magistrate's jurisdiction, but resided within his jurisdiction at the time of taking action could be proceeded against by the Magistrate under this section—In re Kora Rangan, 36 Mad 96, 17 I.C. 413, 23 M.L.J. 535, 13 Cr.L.J. 781; Lakhi Narain, 23 C.W.N. 100; Bhola, 23 Cr.L.J. 86, 20 A.L.J. 49; In re Ramjibhai, 14 Bom L.R. 889, 17 I.C. 540, 13 Cr.L.J. 706; Ghulam Kadir, 20 S.L.R. 310, 27 Cr.L.J. 1261, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 59. The words "within . . . jurisdiction" do not mean 'residing within the jurisdiction', but only mean literally and physically present within the territorial limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction at the date of the proceedings—Sonardi, 35 C.W.N. 255 (256), 32 Cr.L.J. 425, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 65, 52 C.L.J. 415. Having regard to the plain language of this section, it is clear that a Magistrate is given power to deal with persons who have a general reputation as bad characters and who happen to be within his jurisdiction, no matter whether they are residents of a place within his jurisdiction or not—Munna, 39 All 139, 17 Cr.L.J. 390, 14 A.L.J. 1074, 35 I.C. 822; Ghulam Hussain, 38 Cr.L.J. 144, 165 I.C. 648, 17 Lah. 453, 38 P.L.R. 905, 9 R.L. 274, dissenting from Crown v Kahu, 12 P.R. 1901, Ketaboi, supra and Kripasindhu, 1918 M.W.N. 751, 47 I.C. 277, 19 Cr.L.J. 905, 8 M.L.W. 461. The reason is that the most dangerous criminals have no well-known residence anywhere and wander from place to place, and it should be left in the power of the Magistrate to deal with them where the police or the Magistrate could be sure, at any time, of finding them—Bapoo, 9 Bom.L.R. 244. In Durga Halwai, 43 Cal. 153, 19 C.W.N. 1022, it has been pointed out that in none of the sections 107-110 does the word 'residing' occur, and therefore no residence within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction is necessary to bring the case under this section; it is sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction if the evil habits were practised and the evil reputation acquired within the local limits of his jurisdiction, i.e., if the various acts of house-breaking and theft were committed at a place within the Magistrate's jurisdiction.

Where the accused had a residential house within the Magistrate's jurisdiction, to which he occasionally, if not often, went for the purpose of his business, the Magistrate had jurisdiction over him, provided the accused committed the acts of oppression while he so resided—Kasi Sundar, 31 Cal 419.

An order under this section may be made against a person who is in custody in a jail within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction at the time of the proceeding—Mamundra, 46 Cal 215 (235) and Nga Singh, 8 LBR 353, 17 Cr.L.J. 88 (overruling 4 LBR. 148). See also Fateh in Note 254. This is also evident from the words 'when such person is in custody' occurring in sec 114.

It is incumbent upon the persons proceeded against to show that they were not within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate—Sonardi, 35 C.W.N. 255 (257), 32 Cr.L.J. 425, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 65, 52 C.L.J. 415.

Where a case against a person under sec 110, Cr P C., was transferred by the District Magistrate from the file of a Sub-divisional Magistrate within whose jurisdiction he resided, to another Magistrate in the same district, the latter had jurisdiction to try it—Gulabrao Luxmanrao Changude v Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 514, 162 I.C. 207, A.I.R. 1935 Bom 409, 37 Bom L.R. 745, 1935 Cr.C. 1113, 8 RB 404.

259. Clause (a)—Habitual thief, etc.:—For the meaning of the words "habit" and "habitually" see Notes 261 and 262. The evidence must be of such a nature as would lead to a reasonable and definite ground for coming to the conclusion that the accused was a habitual thief—Gholam Ali, 8 C.W.N. 543. There should be proof of specific acts showing that he, to the knowledge of some particular individual, is by habit a thief or a dacoit—Kalai, 29 Cal 779. Where the evidence merely showed that the accused has been suspected of a single act of theft, and kept bad company, it did not amount to his being a robber by habit, and an order under this section was not proper—Ishar Singh, 1880 P.R. 32. Where a person stated that he was a bad character and that he had been once in jail, but there was no evidence to show that he was a habitual thief, an order under this section was not justified—Kaka, 3 Bom L.R. 269.

Mere association with men of bad character is not sufficient to bring a man under this section as being by habit a thief, etc., unless the association is to commit theft, etc. So, the fact that a Zemindar had tenants of bad character and he used to lend money and paddy to them does not bring him under this section—Nikamal, 6 C.L.J. 711, 6 Cr.L.J. 403. When the charge against the accused is that of being a habitual robber, the fact that the accused gathered bad characters at his house, does not go far enough to make itself relevant. It is necessary to show that these bad characters were robbers or were gathered there for the purpose of robbery or theft—Budhan, 47 All 733, 23 A.L.J. 507, 26 Cr.L.J. 1130.

This section does not provide for any person being called upon to furnish security on the ground that he was by habit a dacoit and belonged to a gang of dacoits—Ram Prasad, 26 Cr.L.J. 746, 86 I.C. 282, 23 A.L.J. 18, A.I.R. 1925 All 250.

See Note 271.

Forger—By reason of the addition of this word in clause (a), the ruling in Mahjan Mal, 1900 P.R. 28 (where it was held that a habitual forger did not come under this section) is no longer good law.

260. Clause (c):—aid in concealment of stolen property. This clause is designed to meet only the case of professional receivers of stolen property who assist the thief by protecting him from discovery and arrest and by helping him to dispose of such property—Nga Pu, 11 Cr.L.J. 790, 7 I.C. 462 (464).

Harbouring thief—The harbouring must be to screen the offender from punishment. A person giving food or shelter or medical assistance to a starving or invalid criminal, from mere motives of humanity and not with the intention of enabling him to escape, does not come within the purview of this section—Nga Pu supra.

It is not enough to prove that the petitioner helped the accused persons in whom he was interested in one or two cases, but that he is in the habit of protecting thieves as such. Firangi, 34 Cr L.J. 643, 143 I.C. 687, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 189, 1933 Cr.C. 520, Ind. Rul. 1933 Pat. 209, 14 P.L.T. 482.

This clause speaks of harbouring a thief but not of harbouring a dacoit. Harbouring a dacoit is a more serious offence and should be dealt with under the substantive provisions of sec. 216A, I. P. Code, and not under the provisions of sec. 110, Cr. P. Code—Manni Lal, 51 All. 459, 30 Cr.L.J. 694 (695), 27 A.L.J. 93, A.I.R. 1928 All. 682.

261. Clause (d):—Habitually committing extortion:—The Legislature must be taken to have used the word "habit" as meaning persistence in doing an act, a fact which is capable of proof by adducing evidence of the commission of a number of similar acts "Habitually" must be taken to mean repeatedly or persistently—Local Government v. Nanmat Rao, 25 Cr.L.J. 60 (62), 75 I.C. 764, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 19. See also Note 262 Section 110 is not applicable to the case of persons who commit acts of extortion not in their individual capacity but as agents of others; e.g., the burkundazes in a Zemindary who commit acts of extortion on tenants in the performance of their duties Section 110 is not applicable to them, as it cannot be said that they are in the habit of committing extortion as individual members of the community; because, if it so happens that they cease to be in the employ of the Zemindars, they would no longer commit those acts of extortion in their private capacities. The proper course of dealing with the case is to prosecute them, or their masters under whose orders they act, for specific acts of oppression—Hari Telang, 27 Cal. 781 (784), 4 C.W.N. 531 But see Srikantha, 9 C.W.N. 898, 2 Cr.L.J. 554 and Local Government v. Nanmat Rao, 25 Cr.L.J. 60 (63), 75 I.C. 764, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 19.

It was formerly held that persons in the habit of bringing false claims by forged entries (Ganesh, 1884 P.R. 25) or obtaining decrees by means of forged documents (Chuni, 1914 P.R. 21) did not come under this section as they could not be said to be habitually committing extortion. But these rulings are no longer good law in view of the word "forger" added to clause (a) by the Amendment Act of 1923

A person who brings a claim in the Civil Court which he knows to be false commits an offence under sec. 209, I. P. Code but he does not by so doing commit an offence of extortion, if he succeeds in the claim, or an offence of attempting to commit extortion, if he fails in his claim; and he cannot be bound down under this section—Khushal, 20 O.C. 129, 18 Cr.L.J. 651; Bappuji, 19 Cr.L.J. 885, 47 I.C. 81 (Nag.).

Committing mischief:—This clause applies to persons who habitually commit mischief; where the evidence shows the man to be of an excellent character, one weak and unsupported charge of mischief by fire does not bring him within the purview of this clause—Hamidooddeen, 24 W.R. 37.

262. Clause (e):—Offences involving breach of the peace.—See Note 221 under sec. 106.

A Zemindar employing lathuals to threaten his tenants and use force by unyoking their bullocks, and burning their houses for the purpose of compelling the tenants to pay enhanced rents, brought himself within the mischief of this clause—Kasi Sundar, 31 Cal. 419. Where a naib is found to have led several riots in the interest of his master and been convicted in several cases and there is evidence that certain lathuals are always employed to help his cause, he comes within the mischief of this clause—Kali Prasanna, 38 Cal. 156 (168), 15 C.W.N. 366, 12 Cr.L.J. 164

Where security was taken from the accused, who was found to be addicted to acts of immorality in attempting to seduce married women and behaving indecently and immodestly to them, held that although the actions of the accused were certainly offences under the law and it might be desirable to control them, still the offences were not as "involved a breach of the peace" within the meaning of this section, and the order for security was illegal—Arun Samanta, 30 Cal. 366. The words "offences peace" in this clause are to bear the same interpretation as in sec. 106—Ibid

(at p 368). So also where the accused had made certain indecent overtures towards boys—Muhammad Asghar Khan v. Emp., 16 Cr.L.J. 582, 30 I.C. 131, A.I.R. 1915 All 352. But sec. 106 Cr. P. Code makes it quite clear that an assault is an offence involving a breach of the peace; and clearly an attempt to rape does involve an assault, force and violence upon the person against whom the offence is committed, and therefore involves a breach of the peace within the meaning of this clause—Ganti Veera Reddi, 39 Cr.L.J. 816, 176 I.C. 815, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 615, 47 M.L.W. 610, 1938 M.W.N. 601, 11 R.M. 177

The allegation that a person is a smuggler does not by itself necessarily lead to the conclusion that he is one of the individuals contemplated by cls. (e) and (f) of this section. The activities which point to a tendency to cause breach of the peace or to violence of character in the person concerned must in addition be definitely proved according to the law of evidence before a person can be asked to furnish security for good behaviour under that portion of the section—Abdul Karim, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 80 (82), 36 Cr.L.J. 1127, 156 I.C. 659, 1935 Cr.C. 606

The word "habitually" implies frequent practice or use. It implies a tendency or a capacity resulting from the frequent repetition of the same acts—Maung Po Aung v. The King, A.I.R. 1940 Rang 95 (96), 41 Cr.L.J. 495, 187 I.C. 609, following Bhubaneswar Kuer v. Emp., A.I.R. 1927 Pat 126, 100 I.C. 967, 28 Cr.L.J. 359, 6 Pat 1, 8 P.L.T. 335, where it has also been laid down that the words "by habit" and "habitually" have been used in sec 110, Cr P Code in the sense of depravity of character as evidenced by the frequent repetition or commission of offences mentioned in the section. See also Note 261.

263. Clause (f):—Desperate and dangerous character—A man of desperate and dangerous character in clause (f) means a man who has a reckless disregard of the safety of the person and of the property of his neighbours—Manindra, A.I.R. 1919 Cal 702, 46 Cal 215; 46 I.C. 152, 28 C.L.J. 25, 19 Cr.L.J. 69, 23 C.W.N. 193; Wahed Ali, 11 C.W.N. 789, 6 Cr.L.J. 1; Parbati, 35 Cr.L.J. 952. Evidence of acts of extortion committed by a person, unless those acts were accompanied by acts causing danger to life and property, is not sufficient to bring the case under this clause—Wahid Ali, (supra).

But where it was found that the accused persons were associated for the purpose of spreading disloyal doctrines among school boys and, besides being engaged in preparing the young for the future revolution, were connected with an organisation for the collection of money by dacoity, held that these facts were sufficient to bring the case within this clause—Manindra, 46 Cal 215, 23 C.W.N. 193, 19 Cr.L.J. 696, 28 C.L.J. 25

The following persons, though they are undoubtedly persons of bad character, do not come under this clause, as they cannot be called men of 'desperate and dangerous' character—

A person who had been arrested on suspicion of the commission of a dacoity and released—Kismat, 11 C.W.N. 129, Gulab Chand 17 Cr.L.J. 181 (Oudh); an habitual gambler, especially if he is a man of some means—33 PR 1880 (Cr); a person who is known to be a bad character and is earning his living by prostituting one of his wives—Yaghi, 5 PR 1892; a person who had been annoying the neighbours in various ways by knocking at their doors at night or throwing brickbats over their roofs, or who had been annoying respectable women—Akhoy Kumar, 5 C.W.N. 219; a person who attempts to seduce married women and behaves indecently and immorally to them—Arun Samanta, 30 Cal 366; a person who has been caught while committing adultery—Ahmad Ali A.I.R. 1930 Lah 1051 (1054), 129 I.C. 276, 1930 Cr.C. 1227, 32 P.L.R. 92, 32 Cr.L.J. 271 (274); a person who is a nuisance to his neighbours, declines to pay debts, abuses his neighbours, and makes indecent overtures to school-boys who pass by his shop—Md. Asghar, 30 I.C. 134 16 Cr.L.J. 582 (All); a person of a violent or turbulent character—In re Nara 6 WR 6; a person of a litigious disposition or a person who promotes litigation and is said to have had considerable influence with patiwans—Ishwar Dutt, 16 A.L.J. 776, 19 Cr.L.J. 731, 45 I.C. 77

Ahmed Ali, (supra). A man, who is quarrelsome, engages in petty assaults with his neighbours and throws bricks into people's houses or on to the streets, does not come within this clause—Bangi Lal, 32 Cr.L.J. 1070, 133 I.C. 535, A.I.R. 1931 All 437, 1931 Cr.C. 709, Ind Rul 1931 All. 695. If persons are proved by the evidence to be members of a secret society the purpose of which is to cause a revolution by the use of bombs, pistols and other forms of violence, proceedings can legally be taken against them under this section—Ajay, A.I.R. 1933 All 674, 1933 Cr.C. 1186, 146 I.C. 1070; Satgur, A.I.R. 1933 All. 674, 1933 A.L.J. 676, 1933 A.L.J. 777, 1933 Cr.C. 1188, 146 I.C. 900, 35 Cr.L.J. 218.

A person, who led local factions responsible for constant threat and bullying, is none the less dangerous to the community because he lives in a house and owns lands and comes within the purview of clauses (e) and (f) of this section—Mana, 39 Cr.L.J. 595, 175 I.C. 491, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 448, 47 M.L.W. 139, 1938 M.W.N. 213, 10 RM 783; Venkataramanayya, 47 M.L.W. 139.

Where the evidence shows that there is an apprehension of the accused committing a breach of the peace by using violence towards a particular person or persons, he ought not to be bound over under this section. He may be hazardous to the particular person or persons, but cannot be said to be hazardous to the community. He may be proceeded against under section 107 but not under sec 110—Kallu, 27 All 92; Babua, 6 All. 132.

Evidence, which was regarded as unreliable and insufficient to convict a person of the charge of dacoity, should not be treated as reliable evidence to show that such person is a dangerous and desperate character who ought to be called upon to furnish security for good behaviour—Gulab Chand, 3 O.L.J. 43, 17 Cr.L.J. 184.

The applicant, who was not one of those accused in a conspiracy case, had been present in the precincts of the Court and had threatened one of the assessors that if he did not give his opinion in favour of the accused, he would be killed by a pistol or a bomb and made use of other threatening expressions. He was proved to have sent a threatening message to him worded in a similar way. He was a desperate and dangerous character within the meaning of this clause—Tek Chand, A.I.R. 1935 All 638, 1935 Cr.C. 643, 36 Cr.L.J. 1142, 157 I.C. 413, 1935 A.L.J. 1069.

'At large':—Persons who have been convicted and whose sentences have not expired are not 'at large' within the meaning of clause (f), and therefore, there is no necessity of taking action against them—Bhubaneshwar, 6 Pat 1, 28 Cr.L.J. 359, 8 P.L.T. 335, A.I.R. 1927 Pat 126.

270. Joint trial of several persons:—See Note 290 under sec 117 (5).

The provisions of section 117 (5) as to joint trial cannot properly be applied to proceedings under section 110, when the matter under inquiry is whether a person is a habitual offender. But there can be a joint trial of persons called on to show cause under sec. 110, when there is evidence in the nature of a conspiracy or of acting in concert—Jogendra, 25 C.W.N. 334 (335), 22 Cr.L.J. 377; see also Kalu Mirza, 37 Cal 91; Godhan, 4 P.L.J. 7. The provisions about joint trial are applicable to cases coming under clause (f) as well as cases under clause (a) to (e)—Jogendra, (supra). But it is not advisable to take proceedings under this section against several persons jointly, unless such persons are confederates or partners, as against whom all the evidence is equally applicable—Angnu Singh, 45 All 109, 20 A.L.J. 881, 24 Cr.L.J. 257, 71 I.C. 865; Muhammad Ismail, 25 Cr.L.J. 952, 81 I.C. 600, 21 A.L.J. 841, A.I.R. 1924 All 195. Ordinarily, under this section, every person has to be tried separately for the offences enumerated herein. A joint trial is only permissible when two or more persons have been associated for the purpose of committing the offences mentioned in clauses (a) to (f) of this section. Unless this circumstance is established, a joint trial is illegal and the conviction would be set aside—Jai Rao, 3 P.L.T. 538, 23 Cr.L.J. 100. But if in a joint trial the evidence against each is separated and considered distinctly, there is no prejudice and the order will not be upset—Shamsuddin, 26 Cr.L.J. 1114, 88 I.C. 282, A.I.R. 1925 Nag 381.

271. Evidence under this section:—In a case under sec. 110, it is the duty of the Magistrate to hold an independent inquiry of the offence, and not to bind down the accused person merely because he agrees to furnish security—Ram Charan, 24 A.L.J. 317, 27 Cr.L.J. 370 (371). In a proceeding under this section no final action should be taken and no order having the effect of a conviction against the accused should be passed without formal evidence being recorded—Prathipati, 30 Mad 330

The evidence that is required to justify an order under this section is not necessarily evidence that the accused has committed definite criminal offences, but it must be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise that he comes within the category of one of the clauses (a) to (f)—Sher Zaman, 10 P.R. 1899. The mere fact that a man is a bad character does not necessarily make him liable to be called upon to furnish security for good behaviour. There must be satisfactory evidence that he answers to one of the descriptions mentioned in the section—Babua, 6 All 132; Kala Chand, 6 Cal. 14; In re Daulat Singh, 14 All. 45; In re Karuppanan, 8 M.L.T. 246, 11 Cr.L.J. 638; Haku, 1881 P.R. 12; Sohan, 26 Cr.L.J. 1377. The mere fact that a person has a record of several previous convictions, does not satisfy the requirements of this section, and he cannot be ordered to give security on that fact alone—In re Raja, 10 Bom 174 (175); Emp v Nepal, 13 C.W.N. 318. The mere fact that sixteen years ago the accused had on three occasions been bound over is no ground for considering that he is still a bad character and has not reformed himself, and is not a ground of action under this section against him—Jagat Singh, 23 Cr.L.J. 507, Raghobar, 36 Cr.L.J. 33, 152 I.C. 120, A.I.R. 1934 All. 735, 1934 Cr.C. 936. The existence of a number of previous convictions of offences, such as theft, is a matter which may and should be taken into consideration as indicating the character and disposition of the accused. But the existence of such convictions is not by itself sufficient to justify ordering the accused to furnish security. Weight must be given to a consideration of the period that has elapsed subsequent to the last of the convictions in order to see whether during that period the accused has apparently shown a disposition to conduct himself properly or whether there are indications that he has during that period continued in his previous course, though he may not have actually brought himself within the clutches of the law—Emp v Ram Lal, 30 Cr.L.J. 562 (564), 116 I.C. 25, 51 All 663, A.I.R. 1929 All 273, 1929 A.L.J. 361, Ind. Rul. 1929 All 505. Before a person can be bound over under this or similar sections, it is not necessary that a certain number of previous convictions should have been proved. There is no necessity for this if the evidence that a person is a habitual robber or house-breaker or thief can be proved otherwise. If there are no previous convictions, the quantum of proof necessary would naturally be greater—Shanmugham Asari, 39 Cr.L.J. 588 (589), 175 I.C. 417, 10 R.M. 777, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 482, 1938 M.W.N. 93 (1938) 1 M.L.J. 178, 47 M.L.W. 196; Khuda Bakhsh, 39 Cr.L.J. 599, 175 I.C. 522, 10 R.L. 732, A.I.R. 1938 Lah 428, 40 P.L.R. 222; Bachu, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 238, 160 I.C. 1039, 1936 Cr.C. 385, 37 Cr.L.J. 390, 1936 O.W.N. 247, 12 Luck. 36, 1936 O.L.R. 126, 8 R.O. 297; Perne Mailla Rai, 39 Cr.L.J. 898 (899), 177 I.C. 586, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 591, 1938 M.W.N. 313, 47 M.L.W. 428, I.L.R. 1938 Mad. 720, dissenting from Rathnam Pillai v Emp, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 35, 172 I.C. 866, 39 Cr.L.J. 230, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 749, 1937 M.W.N. 1065, 46 M.L.W. 858, 10 R.M. 498.

Instances of specific crimes are admissible in evidence in a proceeding under this section, although they are not supported by evidence of such amount and value as would secure a conviction for a substantive offence—Jai Singh, 6 Luck. 36, 31 Cr.L.J. 1020 (1021).

In a trial under this section the Magistrate must act on evidence duly recorded in the presence of the accused, and it is not open to him to take into consideration any information obtained otherwise than from such evidence. He must not act on any thing extraneous to the evidence on the record e.g. an information obtained from local inquiries—San Dun, 2 Rang 641 (642). Ram Pargat, 26 Cr.L.J. 1149, 88 I.C. 461, 2 O.W.N. 350, 12 O.L.J. 341, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 441. Personal knowledge ought not to be imported in a judicial pronouncement—Wali Muhammad, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 166, 25 Cr.L.J. 808, 81 I.C. 344; Alimuddin, 29 Cal. 392.

Inquiries under this chapter are governed by the ordinary rules of evidence, and evidence which is not admissible under the Evidence Act cannot be admitted in proceedings under sec. 110 of this Code—Bechai, 12 A.L.J. 937, 15 Cr.L.J. 705; Raj Narayan, 25 A.L.J. 393, 28 Cr.L.J. 502.

Police evidence:—In proceedings under this section, the evidence of official and police witnesses should as far as possible be eschewed. Even if it is not wholly discarded, it should influence his judgment as little as possible. Where the evidence of the police witnesses consists only of rumours and hearsay which they have recorded in their note-books and diaries, it is wholly inadmissible—In re Ranga Reddi, 38 M.L.J. 97, 43 Mad. 450; Kondia, 31 Cr.L.J. 165, 120 I.C. 734, A.I.R. 1930 Nag 148. Entries in the Thana Village Crime Note Book are in themselves no evidence to support an order under this section—Pocha, 22 Cr.L.J. 486 (Cal.) A Magistrate should not act on information not given in evidence but obtained from a perusal of the police diary—Jhanda, 25 Cr.L.J. 45, 75 I.C. 733, A.I.R. 1924 All. 142. The history sheets kept by the Police of persons proceeded against under this section cannot be taken into consideration by the Court—Jogendra, 21 Cr.L.J. 700, 57 I.C. 940, A.I.R. 1920 Cal. 556; Jabinuddin, 20 Cr.L.J. 689 (All.). See Kudua Bari, 31 Cr.L.J. 301, 121 I.C. 559, A.I.R. 1930 All. 37, 1930 Cr.C. 53 in this connection. A list of cases in which the accused was suspected of having been concerned is inadmissible in evidence—Chandi, 21 O.C. 132, 19 Cr.L.J. 825; Raghubir, 10 O.C. 168, 6 Cr.L.J. 256. A police officer is as good a witness as any other person, if he has proved facts which establish that the person concerned is acting in a manner likely to cause breach of the peace or is a dangerous character—Abdul Karim, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 80, 36 Cr.L.J. 1127, 1935 Cr.C. 606, 156 I.C. 659. See also Satgur, A.I.R. 1933 All. 674, 1933 A.L.J. 927, 1933 Cr.C. 1186, 146 I.C. 875, 35 Cr.L.J. 183; Emp. v. Babu Ram, 29 Cr.L.J. 92, 106 I.C. 684, A.I.R. 1928 All. 1, 26 A.L.J. 99; Emp. v. Dipu, 36 Cr.L.J. 1362, 158 I.C. 424, A.I.R. 1935 All. 850 (where it was also held that Mukhias and Sarpanches were not quasi police).

The question what is a person's reputation is a question of fact. It can be spoken to by any one who knows what his general reputation is. The Police Officer who goes to the place where a particular person lives and who makes enquiries to find out what is reputation is, is perfectly competent to speak in the witness-box about the result of his enquiries. His evidence that the reputation of such and such a person is so and so, is evidence of a fact and it is not to be excluded as mere hearsay evidence. In one sense the evidence of general repute is of course hearsay but it is hearsay of a particular kind which is made admissible in a case under sec. 110 by sec. 117 Cr. P. Code. It is not necessary that the witness who speaks to the general reputation of a person must be resident in the same place. A stranger can find out what the general repute of a person is and he is competent to testify to that fact—Perne Maila Rai, 39 Cr.L.J. 898 (899), 177 I.C. 586, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 591, 1938 M.W.N. 313, 47 M.L.W. 428, 11 R.M. 351.

Mere suspicion is not evidence.—The powers under this section are to be exercised very sparingly and only in those cases where the evidence is very clear and precise. Where, beyond the mere suspicion that the accused are habitual thieves, nothing substantial has been established, an action under this section is not justified—Jagat Singh, 23 Cr.L.J. 507; Kurma, 26 A.L.J. 519, 30 Cr.L.J. 122; Amyad Ali, 5 P.L.T. 129, 25 Cr.L.J. 35, 75 I.C. 723. The evidence must be of such a nature as would lead to a reasonable and definite ground for coming to the conclusion that they are habitual thieves—Golam Ali, 8 C.W.N. 543 (544). A person ought not to be bound down on the mere statement of witnesses that they suspect the accused to be a thief or a dacoit—Alep Pramanik, 11 C.W.N. 413; Kismat, 11 C.W.N. 129; Sohna, 27 Cr.L.J. 1067, 97 I.C. 43 (Lah.). The fact that he was once convicted of theft, and his house was searched on several occasions (but no stolen property was found) and he was said to have associated with two or three persons of bad character, does not justify an order under this section—Kashim, 1907 P.L.R. 23, 5 Cr L J. 24.

Where the only thing appearing against the accused was that he was on a previous occasion arrested in connection with a dacoity, but the police considered that evidence against him of so little value that he was released under sec 169 without even being placed before the Court, held that this fact was insufficient for binding over the accused under this section—Jhandoo, 25 Cr.LJ 45, AIR 1924 All 124; Sital Din, 23 Cr.LJ 366, AIR 1925 Oudh 49 But if the evidence in support of the charge under section 110 is antecedent to the charge for the substantive offence (dacoity), and is wholly independent of it, the proceedings under section 110 are not illegal—Sital Din, (supra). The Court is not warranted in basing its finding on the evidence gathered from the proceedings in those cases, when the accused was exonerated in respect of the charges laid against him in those proceedings—Perne Maala Rai, 39 Cr L J 898 (900), 177 IC 586, AIR. 1938 Mad. 591, 1938 M.W.N. 313, 47 MLW. 428, 11 LR 1938 Mad 720 See also Rajendra, 17 C.W.N 238 (268), 11 Cr L J 5, 18 IC 149, 16 CLJ 467 If the prosecution witnesses themselves admit that in all cases in which the person proceeded against was sent up, he was either discharged or acquitted, it cannot be urged that the requirements of sec. 110 Cr P Code are satisfied—Islam-ud-din, AIR 1939 Lah 269, 40 Cr L J 753, 183 IC 269, 12 RL 105, 41 PLR 431, 11 LR 1939 Lah 53 An order under sec 110 read with sec 118, Cr P Code cannot be made on vague allegations, otherwise none would be safe Unless the requirements of sec 110 are fulfilled or in other words, a man is proved by habit a robber, house-breaker, thief or forger or by habit a receiver of stolen property, etc., this drastic measure cannot be taken against him—Idid Habit has to be proved by an aggregate of acts and it would strain the provisions of the section if it were to be held that a man being suspected mainly by the Police in four thefts after he had been acquitted on a charge of theft amounted to sufficient evidence of habit—Rahman v Emp, 29 Cr L J 574, 109 IC 510, 10 Lah L J 317, 10 A.I Cr.R 355 See also Note 252

A witness's "suspicions" and his "allegations" that the accused is a thief, etc., are worth nothing and should not be admitted—Emp v Ram Lal, 51 All. 663, AIR 1929 All. 273, 116 IC. 25, 30 Cr L J 562, 1929 A L J 361, Ind Rul 1929 All. 505

Evidence as to mere suspicion on particular isolated occasions is not sufficient evidence at all for the purpose of a case under this section What is necessary to prove under clause (a) is that the man is by habit a thief Evidence can no doubt, be led of his general reputation about the matter and evidence that he was suspected in a particular case by a particular person or by the police of having committed theft. But there must be a large number of such cases before it can be proved on this evidence alone that he is by habit a thief—Lila, 32 Cr L J 62 127 IC 860, 1930 Cr C 393, AIR 1930 Lah 345, Ind Rul 1930 Lah 893 But where in a proceeding under this section there was evidence showing that the accused had been suspected of complicity in certain thefts and had been mentioned in each case in the reports made in Police Station at the time of each theft and there was further un rebutted evidence of the residents of the village that he had the general reputation of being a burglar and a thief, an order under this section requiring the accused to execute a bond to be of good behaviour was a proper order—Emp v Gajodhar, 9 O W N 1012 141 IC. 251, Ind Rul 1933 Oudh 48, AIR 1933 Oudh 58, 34 Cr L J 160 1933 Cr C 98, Emp. v Bachchu 37 Cr L J 390 (393), 160 IC 1039, 1936 O W N 247, AIR 1936 Oudh 238, 1936 O L R 128, 1935 Cr C 285

When the evidence is good and equally balanced on both sides no order for security should be made—Raham Ali 11 A L J 461, Ganga Sagar 10 A L J 383, 13 Cr L J. 772, Angnu Singh, 43 All 109 (113), 20 A L J 881; Ismad Ali, AIR. 1930 Lah 1051, 129 IC 276, 1930 Cr C. 1227, 32 P.L.R. 92, 32 Cr L J 271 (273); 4 Lah L J.

531. Thus, where there is a large volume of evidence in favour of the accused which is as good as, if not better than, that of the prosecution, there is no ground for making an order under this section—Krishna, supra; Bahadur, 27 O.C. 327, 26 Cr.L.J. 530; Gur Dayal, 26 Cr.L.J. 99, 83 I.C. 659, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 277; Amjad Ali, 5 P.L.T. 129, 25 Cr.L.J. 35, 75 I.C. 723. But the proper and judicial method of deciding a case is to consider the evidence produced on both sides, regardless of the number of witnesses examined and then to come to conclusion whether the prosecution or the defence established its case—Emp v. Dipu, A.I.R. 1935 All. 850. See Note 272.

The burden of proving the bad character of an accused is on the prosecution, and therefore when the evidence on both sides is of an indifferent and interested character, the prosecution must fail—Nurdin, 1903 P.R. 27, 1 Cr.L.J. 99; Sukha, 1898 P.R. 4.

Evidence of habit—The persons mentioned in this section are those who are habitual criminals, and the habit is to be proved by an aggregate of acts—Sriram Venkatasami, 6 M.H.C.R. 120, 1 Weir 452. The word "habitually" must be taken to mean repeatedly or persistently. The word "habit" means persistence in doing an act, a fact which is capable of proof by adducing evidence of the commission of a number of similar acts—Nanmantrao, 25 Cr.L.J. 60, 75 I.C. 764, A.I.R. 1924 Nag 19. The words 'by habit' and 'habitually' imply frequent practice or use, and are used in this section in the sense of depravity of character, as evidenced by the frequent repetition or commission of offences mentioned in the section—Bhubaneswar, 6 Pat. 1, 8 P.L.T. 335, 28 Cr.L.J. 359. The fact that a person was on only one occasion suspected of theft is no evidence that he is a habitual thief—Ishar Singh, 1880 P.R. 32. There must be at least two or more cases against the same individual to show habit—Bonai, 15 C.W.N. 461. Where certain tenants formed into a party to compel the Zemindar to settle certain lands with them, and many loots, assaults and murders were committed by them against the Zemindar, but apart from this land dispute, there was nothing on the record to show that the tenants bore any despicable character, or that they were implicated in theft, extortion etc., or that they ever provoked a breach of the peace, held that the tenants could not be said to be habitual offenders within the purview of clauses (a) to (e), but that they were desperate and dangerous characters and proceedings could be taken against them under clause (f)—Bhubaneshwar, (supra). Evidence of acts of misconduct committed by a person years ago is admissible as indicating formation of habit. But such evidence, unless supplemented by evidence of misconduct committed by such person within a year or so, cannot justify the making of an order under sec. 118—Wahid Ali, 11 C.W.N. 789, 6 Cr.L.J. 1; Kali Prasanna, 38 Cal 156 (166), 15 C.W.N. 366, 12 Cr.L.J. 164. The existence of previous convictions is not by itself sufficient to justify an order for furnishing security. Weight must be given to a consideration of the period that has elapsed subsequent to the last of the convictions in order to see whether during that period the accused has apparently shown a disposition to conduct himself properly or has during the period continued his previous course—Ram Lal, 51 All. 663, 30 Cr.L.J. 562 (564), 116 I.C. 25, 1929 A.L.J. 361, A.I.R. 1929 All. 273; Raghubar Dayal, 36 Cr.L.J. 33 (35), 152 I.C. 120, A.I.R. 1934 All. 735, 1934 Cr.C. 936. The greatest thief is entitled to a locus penitentiae, when he has served out his punishment; it is only when he outrages that grace which is extended to him and thereby shows he is unreformed, that the machinery of the Act should be brought into operation, in order to obtain a substantial guarantee for society that he will not commit further depredations upon it—Nawab, 2 All. 835 (838). See Note 275.

Proof of previous convictions:—Whenever it is required to prove previous convictions against a man in a proceeding under this chapter, such previous convictions must be proved strictly and in accordance with law; otherwise, no Court can properly take them into consideration—Sheikh Abdul, 43 Cal. 1128, 20 C.W.N. 725, 17 Cr.L.J. 185, 33 I.C. 825. A different view seems to have been taken in Emp v. Bachchu, 37

Cr L.J. 390 (392), 160 I.C. 1093, 1936 O.W.N. 247, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 238, 1936 O.L.R. 128, 1936 Cr C. 385, where it has been held that in proceedings under this section it is not necessary for the prosecution to prove a previous conviction of any person in the same formal manner as that required by the provisions of secs 310 and 311, Cr P. C., in respect of offences tried in the Court of Session. See sec. 511.

Previous convictions are not substantive evidence in a case under this section, though they may have an effect in deciding for what length of time the accused is to be bound down—Emp v Nepal, 13 C.W.N. 318.

272. Evidence of general repute:—Under sec. 117 (4) the fact that a person is a habitual offender or a desperate and dangerous character may be proved by evidence of general repute

In proceedings under this section if the witnesses have clearly deposed that the accused has the general repute of being an habitual offender, such evidence is admissible under sub-sec (4) of sec 117, Cr P C.—Emp v Gajodkar, 9 O.W.N. 1012, 141 I.C. 251, Ind Rul 1933 Oudh 48, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 58, 34 Cr.L.J. 160, 1933 Cr C. 98; Emp v. Bachchu, 37 Cr L.J. 390 (393), 160 I.C. 1039, 1936 O.W.N. 247, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 238, 1936 O.L.R. 128, 1936 Cr C. 385

Hearsay evidence is evidence of general repute for the purpose of this section, provided there is reasonable foundation for it—Satgur, A.I.R. 1933 All 674, 1933 A.L.J. 927, 1933 Cr C. 1186, 146 I.C. 875, 35 Cr L.J. 183

Evidence of reputation, although admissible and even important, has to be accepted with caution as it is very easy to say that a person is of ill-repute, and in the nature of things such evidence is too indefinite to permit of cross-examination. Evidence of reputation is the weakest form of evidence and requires material corroboration by other evidence proving the habits of the persons against whom the police are proceeding—Shanmugham Asari, 39 Cr L.J. 588 (589), 175 I.C. 417, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 482, 1938 M.W.N. 93, 47 M.L.W. 196, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 178, 10 R.M. 777. An accused person should not be bound down under sec 110, Cr P Code upon evidence of repute unless such evidence is very strong and almost universal—Wali Muhammad Khan v. Emp, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 166, 81 I.C. 344, 25 Cr L.J. 808

A man's general reputation is the reputation which he bears in the place in which he lives amongst all the townsmen; and if it is proved that a man who lives in a particular place is looked upon by his fellow townsmen, whether they happen to know him or not, as a man of good repute, that is strong evidence that he is a man of good character. On the other hand, if the state of things is that the body of his fellow townsmen who know him look upon him as a dangerous man and a man of bad habits, that is strong evidence that he is a man of bad character—Rai Isri Prasad, 23 Cal. 621; Jogendra, 25 C.W.N. 331, 22 Cr L.J. 337; Raghubir, 10 O.C. 168; Gokul, 10 O.C. 132, 6 Cr L.J. 97; Jagarnath, 1903 A.W.N. 181; Keval Kishore, 29 O.C. 44, 12 O.L.J. 413, 26 Cr L.J. 1283. Reputation of a man's character is the inference or estimate from the sum total of a man's actions and qualities drawn or formed by persons who are acquainted with him or among whom he resides and with whom he is chiefly conversant or the circle in which he moves; it is the prevailing opinion formed by those with whom he associates and who would have the best opportunity of knowing his habits and general behaviour. It is generally understood that the 'place' or 'community' with reference to which reputation evidence is tendered should relate to the neighbourhood where he dwells or moves, but having regard to modern conditions, it is impossible to define "neighbourhood" or "community" with any degree of accuracy—Perne Mailla Rai, 39 Cr L.J. 898 (900), 177 I.C. 586, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 591, 1938 M.W.N. 313, 47 M.L.W. 428, I.L.R. 1938 Mad. 720.

Where in a proceeding under this section, the accused person is able to produce witnesses on his behalf to speak of his good character, the Court ought to pay particular attention to such evidence and to give substantial reason for not believing such evidence, before it makes an order under section 118—Ramlagan, 5 P.L.T. 166,

Nature of the evidence:—Evidence of general repute may be either evidence as to the general opinion of the community or the neighbourhood, or the personal opinion of the witnesses who are examined. But the opinion need not necessarily be the opinion of the entire community, but as least the opinion of a considerable number of persons—Bechai, 12 A.L.J. 927, 15 Cr.L.J. 705; In re Ranga Reddi, 43 Mad 450, 38 M.L.J. 97, 55 I.C. 722, 21 Cr.L.J. 354, 1920 M.W.N. 398; Kewal Kishore, 29 O.C. 44, 12 O.L.J. 413, 26 Cr.L.J. 1283.

The persons who testify to the character of the accused must be respectable persons who are acquainted with the accused—Ranga Reddi, 43 Mad. 450, and should not ordinarily be officials—Nga Hein, 8 Bur L.T. 53, 16 Cr.L.J. 553. Thus, when a large body of respectable persons testified to the character of the accused against the evidence of Police-officers, the opinion of the former should be accepted, and an order under this section should not be made—Soman, 1910 P.W.R. 37, 11 Cr.L.J. 603; Kundan, 9 Lah 133, 28 Cr.L.J. 813, A.I.R. 1928 Lah 49, 104 I.C. 253, 29 P.L.R. 368. The general reputation of a man is that which he bears among his fellow-townsmen and mere suspicion of complicity in this or that offence, is not evidence of general reputation—Ghulam, 30 Cr.L.J. 220, 113 I.C. 909, Ind. Rul 1929 Lah. 175. An accused person should not be bound over on the evidence of bad repute where there are respectable persons on his side to clear him of the charge—Tar Gul, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh 158. See also Note 271.

General reputation means the opinion of those members of the public who are in a position to know the man's character—Jai Singh, 6 Luck 36, 31 Cr.L.J. 1020 (1022). Evidence of accused's own caste fellows and neighbours is certainly the best sort of evidence available—Gur Baksh, 12 Cr.L.J. 542 (Oudh). The reputation which the accused is found to have, must necessarily mean the reputation of that person in the neighbourhood, and the persons residing in that locality would be best able to speak to his character—Ketaboi, 27 Cal 993 (995). Where the accused who was a Zemindar and money-lender produced a large number of witnesses consisting of his caste-fellows and tenants to depose to his good character, but the Magistrate disbelieved the evidence simply on the ground that the accused by virtue of his position could produce a large number of witnesses, and assigned no other legitimate reason, held that the case had not been approached from a proper point of view—Miharban, 13 A.L.J. 1046, 16 Cr.L.J. 805. Where witnesses voluntarily come forward as friends or associates or caste-fellows of the accused to give evidence about the good character of the accused, they must not be brushed aside, unless they are discredited as regards their good faith and honesty—Angnu Singh, 45 All 109 (113), 24 Cr.L.J. 257, Rahu, 43 All 186 (190), 18 A.L.J. 1114; Kewal Kishore, 29 O.C. 44, 12 O.L.J. 413, 26 Cr.L.J. 1283; Babu Ram, 106 I.C. 684, A.I.R. 1928 All 2, 29 Cr.L.J. 92, 26 A.L.J. 99; Raghubar, 36 Cr.L.J. 33, 152 I.C. 120, A.I.R. 1934 All 735, 1934 Cr.C. 936. In fact, when the caste-fellows of the accused voluntarily come forward and say that they regard the accused as the head of their brotherhood and they consider it a slur upon their community that the accused should be treated as a habitual robber or dacoit, it shows the good faith of the witnesses and their honest and emphatic belief that the accused is a respectable person enjoying the confidence of his community. The Magistrate ought not to discredit the evidence of these witnesses—Rahu, 43 All. 186 (190), 18 A.L.J. 1114, 22 Cr.L.J. 115, 59 I.C. 547.

But it is not always necessary that the persons who testify to the character of the accused should live in the immediate neighbourhood of the accused—Wahid Ali, 11 C.W.N. 789, 6 Cr.L.J. 1. Thus, a series of dacoities having taken place in a certain village, the evidence of general reputation of the accused coming from the people of the village where the dacoities took place, is certainly to be treated as evidence of general repute, although the accused did not live among those people—

Chintamon, 35 Cal 243, 7 C.L.J. 177, 12 C.W.N. 299. It is not right to discard the evidence of witnesses who speak to the reputation of the accused, merely because they are not his immediate neighbours. A man's general reputation in the place in which he lives among the inhabitants of that place, is not always conclusive, because it is quite possible for a cunning rogue to conceal his real character from his immediate neighbours. What the Court has to do is to satisfy itself that the evidence of the witnesses is true; and if it is satisfied on this point, then it is entitled to accept the evidence. Where a witness lives at a considerable distance from the person of whose reputation he speaks, the Court should of course inquire how he came by that knowledge and should take his answer into consideration in framing its estimate of the value of the evidence—Po Yin, 2 Rang 686, 4 Bur.L.J. 6, 26 Cr.L.J. 528.

Evidence of association with bad characters against a person proceeded against under this section, is evidence of reputation, but such reputation can only be based upon association with proved bad characters and not with reputed bad characters—Emperor v Nepal, 13 C.W.N. 318.

Moreover, the persons testifying to the character of the accused must speak from their personal knowledge. A vague and general statement that a man is a habitual offender is not sufficient. Evidence of repute in respect of an accused person must be evidence of persons who are speaking to matters within their own personal knowledge and not from mere hearsay—Rup Singh, 1 ALJ 616; Kallu, 19 ALJ. 39, 22 Cr.L.J. 314; Angnu Singh, 45 All 109 (113); San Dun, 2 Rang 641 (613); Deodhar, 6 PLT 810, 26 Cr.L.J. 738, 86 IC 274. But evidence of repute must necessarily consist largely of hearsay evidence, in this sense that it consists of statements of what persons other than the witness say or believe about the character of the accused—Kumera, 51 All 275, 1929 Cr.C. 346 (349).

Mere rumour is not repute; evidence of rumour is mere hearsay evidence of a particular fact, evidence of repute is a totally different thing. Rumours in a particular place that a man had done particular acts or has characteristics of a certain kind, are not evidence of general repute—Isri Prasad, 23 Cal 621; Rajendra, 1 ALJ 611; Kripasindhu, 1918 M.W.N. 751, 19 Cr.L.J. 905, Ramlagan, 5 PLT 166, 25 Cr.L.J. 985; Tor Gul, AIR 1935 Pesh. 158.

The witnesses must give their own opinion, and their statements must not be mere repetitions of what other persons said to them about the accused, and when they give their own opinion they may be asked to give the grounds of their opinion and to give names of the persons whom they have heard to speak against the character of the accused—Bechar, 12 ALJ 937, 15 Cr.L.J. 705; Keval Kishore, 29 OC 44, AIR 1925 Oudh 473, 89 IC 147, 12 OLJ 413, 26 Cr.L.J. 1283; Angnu Singh, 45 All 109, 24 Cr.L.J. 257. When evidence is taken as to reputation, the Court cannot and should not exclude the reasons which induced the members of the community to form a bad opinion of the accused person, and if their opinion is based wholly or partly on the belief that the accused person committed a crime which has not been brought home to him, the Court cannot rule out as inadmissible all evidence on which the belief of the witnesses is based—Jai Singh, 6 Luck 36, 31 Cr.L.J. 1020 (1021). The evidence must relate to particular instances which have come to the knowledge of the witnesses and must be specific. Evidence relating to mere beliefs and opinions without reference to acts or instances which have induced the witnesses to form an opinion, cannot be regarded as evidence of repute. Moreover, it should be the opinion of a considerable number of persons, and must not be the repetition of what certain persons have said to the witnesses—In re Ranga Reddi, 43 Mad. 450; Ramlagan, 5 PLT 166, 25 Cr.L.J. 985. Where a large number of persons come forward and swear that they believe a man to be of desperate and dangerous character, and there is little or no counter evidence of good character, such evidence will justify a Court in taking action, even if the grounds of belief are indefinite—Jai Singh, supra. But where as many good witnesses come forward to state that the man's reputation is good as those who state the contrary, it can hardly be held safely that the man's general reputation is bad, unless there is something to corroborate the evidence of witnesses against him—Ajmar Singh, 1898 P.R. 2; Rajendra Prosad, 1 A.L.J. 611; Kundan, 9 Lah. 133, 28 Cr.L.J. 813; Jai Singh, supra.

Mere suspicion, and mere allegations that a person is a man of ill-repute, is not sufficient to base an order under this section—Sohna, 27 Cr.L.J. 1067, 97 I.C. 43. Mere suspicion against the accused is not evidence of general repute. Statements of witnesses each of whom says that he suspected the accused to be implicated in this or that isolated offence, do not amount to evidence of general repute—Bechai, 12 A.L.J. 937, 15 Cr.L.J. 705; Amjad Ali, 5 P.L.T. 129; Raj Narain, 25 A.L.J. 393, 28 Cr.L.J. 502; Kehr Singh, 9 Lah. 586, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 41, 109 I.C. 127, 29 P.L.R. 443, 29 Cr.L.J. 479; Kundan, 9 Lah. 133, 28 Cr.L.J. 813, 104 I.C. 253, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 49; Sohan, 26 Cr.L.J. 1377, 89 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 45. So also, evidence of cases in which the accused was suspected or his house was searched, is not evidence of general repute—Rahan Ali, 11 A.L.J. 461, 14 Cr.L.J. 407; Bechai, 12 A.L.J. 937, 15 Cr.L.J. 705; Surendra, 21 Cr.L.J. 170 (Cal.). Where there is positive evidence for the defence that the accused is a good man, it is not a sufficient reason for casting it aside to say that proof of malice against the accused on the part of the prosecution is wanting—Surendra, 21 Cr.L.J. 170 (Cal.). See also Gur Dayal, 26 Cr.L.J. 99, 83 I.C. 659, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 277.

But the existence of suspicion can be material only as corroborating a witness's evidence as to repute—Jogendra, 25 C.W.N. 334 (336). An evidence that a person had been suspected and named in a large number of cases extending over a considerable interval, may be very useful corroboration of general evidence against him. Conversely, in a doubtful case, the fact that a person has never been suspected of any offence, may weaken the general evidence of reputation that is given against him—Raja Ram, 23 O.C. 371, 22 Cr.L.J. 273.

It cannot be laid down as a general proposition that the fact that a person proceeded against under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code has been acquitted of a charge brought against him of a substantive offence entitles him to have all evidence excluded of the incident which formed the subject of his trial. It is entirely a question of the value of that acquittal. It is perfectly certain that if he was acquitted on the ground that the case was totally false against him, no Magistrate or Judge would think of taking it into consideration against him. On the other hand, if he was only given the benefit of the doubt there is no reason why the incident should not be put in evidence and given whatever value it might be worth. The fact that an accused person has been acquitted of a particular charge may diminish, and will diminish in many cases, and may even destroy wholly, the value of the evidence, but does not render it inadmissible—Budhan, 23 A.L.J. 507, 47 All. 733, 26 Cr.L.J. 1130, A.I.R. 1925 All. 694.

Where the police or the Magistrates want to make use of sec. 117 (4), Cr. P. Code the witness should be allowed to depose, if he can in fact give that evidence, that the accused has a general reputation as a habitual thief (or robber, etc., as the case may be), but he should not be allowed to depose that the accused is a bad character or has the reputation of being a bad character. Evidence as to general repute is permitted by law; but it is obviously a type of evidence which requires to be weighed very carefully; and that is the greater reason for being careful that no improper laxity is permitted—Kurwa, 26 A.L.J. 519, A.I.R. 1928 All. 357 (358), 9 A.I.Cr.R. 467, 113 I.C. 282, 30 Cr.L.J. 122 (124). A witness should not be allowed to state merely that the accused is a "bad character", because that expression is too vague and susceptible of many different meanings. But when a witness starts by saying that the accused is a "bad character" and immediately explains what he means by that expression by saying that the person habitually commits theft, then there is no ambiguity about his meaning and his deposition is admissible as evidence of general repute—Kumera, 51 All. 275, 1929 Cr.C. 346 (348).

A number of similar incidents cease to be isolated facts and become evidence of habit and character. How many facts must be proved to enable the Court to draw a reasonable inference of habit of an accused, cannot be laid down by any hard and fast rule; it depends upon the circumstances of each case. Evidence of general repute and character, which is not admissible when an accused is being tried for the commission of a specific offence, is admissible in a case of this kind and specific instances where reasonable suspicion fell upon the accused, are good evidence to show the basis of bad reputation. Whether from these instances habit and character can be inferred, is a matter to be decided on the facts of the particular case. Reputation is the sum total of the rumours and talks about a man accepted and believed by those who know him well. The evidence of reputation is made up partly of the belief of the deponent and partly of what he heard from others of their beliefs. Distinction between reputation and rumour is well marked, though it may be difficult to say generally where a rumour ends and reputation begins. How many instances build up a reputation and how long it takes for rumours to ripen into reputation, cannot be laid down by any hard and fast rule. The distinction between admissible evidence of reputation and inadmissible hearsay evidence can be stated thus. If the evidence is of those persons who are living in the locality where the reputation is prevailing and where people talk of their beliefs about him and who themselves believe it, it is admissible. But if the evidence is of a man who does not know about the reputation himself but has heard it from others, it will be hearsay. In other words, the evidence of those who know the man and his reputation is admissible. Evidence of those who do not know the man, but have heard of the reputation is not admissible—Firangi, 34 Cr L J. 643, 143 IC 687, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 189, 1933 Cr C 520, Ind Rul 1933 Pat 209.

What weight is to be attached to the evidence of a particular witness must necessarily depend on the fact whether the witness is independent and impartial, whether he is in a position to disclose the source of his knowledge and whether the source of his knowledge is such as to inspire confidence. If the witness merely states that a man is reputed to be an habitual offender and is unable to disclose the source of his knowledge, his evidence is entitled to no weight whatsoever. The reputation of a man means "what is generally said or believed about his character". It follows that the evidence of a witness as to the general repute of a man must necessarily depend on what he has heard about his character from others. It follows that the witness must be able to disclose the name of the person from whom he has derived his knowledge about the general repute of the man and if he is not in a position to do so, then his evidence cannot be treated as evidence of general repute of the man concerned—Raghubar, 36 Cr L J 33 (35), 152 IC 120, A.I.R. 1934 All 735, 1934 Cr.C. 936.

273. Duty of the Court to test the evidence:—Evidence of general repute is obviously a type of evidence which requires to be weighed very carefully; and the Court should be careful that no improper laxity is permitted—Kurwa, 26 A.L.J. 519, 30 Cr L J 122 (124). Where the evidence for the prosecution is of a vague character, and when a case has to be established merely upon evidence of bad repute, the Court should take into consideration the value and weight of evidence tendered on behalf of the prosecution as compared with that for the defence—Gur Baksh, 12 Cr.L.J 542 (Oudh).

The Court (whether original or appellate) must show by its judgment that it has duly weighed and examined the evidence for and against the accused in the case. Where, therefore, in a proceeding started under sec 110 the judgment ran: "It is obvious that if one quarter of the evidence for the prosecution is true—and I see no reason to doubt that it is—the appellant is a most proper person to be bound over under sec 110", held that the judgment was bad and must be set aside and the case sent back for retrial—Bhansi Dhar, 4 O.L.J 141, 18 Cr.L.J 649. Where the Appellate Court in a case under this section wrote a judgment of four lines without giving even an indication of the fact that he had weighed the evidence for and against the accused, held that there had not been a proper trial of the case, and that it should be retried—Sarwan, 14 A.L.J. 279, 17 Cr.L.J. 167. It must appear, on the face of the judgment, that the case of each accused has been taken into consideration, and reasons should be given, as far as may be necessary, to show that the appellate Court has devoted judicial attention to the case of each accused—Jamait, 35 Cal. 138.

Evidence should be tested by its quality rather than by its quantity. When the evidence on the side of the prosecution and the defence is found to be of an indifferent character, the prosecution must fail. If the quality of evidence is good on both sides, the case must also fail, if the evidence for the defence over-balances that for the prosecution—Sukha, 1898 P.R. 4; Hari Telang, 27 Cal. 781; Raham Ali, 11 A.L.J. 461, 14 Cr.L.J. 407. Where as many as 10 reliable persons come forward and testify to the good character of the accused, the Magistrate should not reject their evidence and pass an order under this section, merely because the prosecution produces a large number of witnesses—Bahadur, 27 O.C. 327, 26 Cr.L.J. 530. On the other hand, the accused is not entitled to be acquitted merely because the defence witnesses are as numerous as or more numerous than the prosecution witnesses; but it is the weight of the evidence and not the number of the witnesses which the Court has to consider—Kewal Kishore, 12 O.L.J. 413, 29 O.C. 44, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 473, 89 I.C. 147, 26 Cr.L.J. 1283; Gur Din, 24 O.C. 225, 22 Cr.L.J. 647, 63 I.C. 407.

In cases where proceedings are taken jointly against more persons than one, under sec. 110, the Magistrate is required to come to separate findings as regards each of the persons charged, individually—Parbati, 35 Cr.L.J. 952 (1955); Dhaju, 34 Cr.L.J. 476, 146 I.C. 931, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 112, 1933 Cr.C. 261, Ind. Rul. 1933 Pat. 187. See also Note 290.

274. Examination of witnesses:—Neither the prosecution nor the defence, in enquiries under this section, ought to be hampered in any way—Legal Remembrancer, Bengal v. Jiban Kumar, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 292 (293). In a proceeding under this section the Magistrate is bound to examine all the witnesses produced by the accused. Where the trying Magistrate declined to examine on behalf of the defence more than the same number of witnesses as were examined for the prosecution, held that it was not open to the trying Magistrate to put such an arbitrary limit on the witnesses whose evidence the defence desired to adduce—Amirulla, 22 C.W.N. 408, 20 Cr.L.J. 201. Where witnesses are cited for the defence in proceedings under this section, time and opportunity should be given to have them produced, and then only should order be passed—Ponthiram, 38 C.L.J. 285, 25 Cr.L.J. 293, 76 I.C. 965.

But Magistrates should be careful not to allow an unnecessarily large number of witnesses to be examined, which would amount to a scandalous waste of public time and Magisterial energy—Angnu Singh, 45 All. 109 (112), 20 A.L.J. 881. In this case the Police produced as many as 76 witnesses to prove the bad character of the accused (which took more than two months to examine them), and the total number of witnesses produced in the case was 402, the examination of which occupied 6 months. The High Court severely condemned the procedure as "monstrous and amounting to something like persecution."

There is no provision in Cr. P. C., by which a Magistrate can arbitrarily limit the number of witnesses for the defence. Section 257, Cr. P. C., which is one of the provisions relating to warrant cases, lays down that a Magistrate may refuse to issue process for the appearance of witnesses, when he considers the application to be for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice, but in such a case the grounds for refusing to summon them shall be recorded in writing. Having summoned them, however, he must be presumed to have concluded that they are not being produced by the accused for the purpose of vexation or delay and therefore he should hear them, and in any case he must record his reasons for not hearing them in writing—Tek Chand, A.I.R. 1935 All 638, 1935 Cr.C. 643 So long as the application under sec 257, Cr. P. C., is not made for the purposes of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice, the appellant has a right to recall any witnesses either for the purpose of examination or cross-examination. This is a matter entirely to be left to the discretion of the Magistrate—Zamin, 34 Cr.L.J. 468, 142 I.C. 752, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 29, 1933 Cr.C. 277, Ind. Rul 1933 Rang 52 A Magistrate has no sanction in law to arbitrarily limit the number of witnesses whom the accused wants to examine in his defence. A person, who is called upon to furnish security under sec. 110, Cr. P. C., is entitled, like other accused persons, to have his full say in the matter and there is no warrant in law for calling upon such a person to play the role of a Judge and decide for himself who are his "best witness" and examine only such witnesses in his defence—Raghubar, 36 Cr.L.J. 33, 152 I.C. 120, A.I.R. 1934 All. 735, 1934 Cr.C. 936. See also Note 286 in this connection.

Further Inquiry:—See Notes 294 and 295A. Section 436 as now amended does not apply to cases under this chapter, and, therefore, further inquiry cannot be directed in a case of discharge under sec 110

275. Order for security:—The provision of law which requires sureties for the bond is made not with a view to obtain money for the Crown by the forfeiture of recognizances, but to ensure that the particular accused person shall be of a good behaviour for the time mentioned in the order—Rahim Baksh, 20 All 206; In re Raja, 10 Bom 174 Therefore, an order under this section requiring persons to deposit cash in lieu of entering into a bond for their future good behaviour is bad in law—Kala Chand, 6 Cal 14.

Under this section, the Magistrate can pass an order directing the person to give security But an order directing that person "must leave the town at once or he will be prosecuted as a bad character" is illegal and ultra vires—Ram Prasad, 19 A.L.J. 951, 23 Cr.L.J. 122, 65 I.C. 554

An order should not be made under this section, where a previous proceeding against the same accused had resulted in his discharge and only a short interval had elapsed between the previous proceeding and the institution of the present proceedings—Shakur, 26 O.C. 242, 24 Cr.L.J. 565

It is illegal for a Magistrate to call upon a person to furnish security soon after the expiry of the term of imprisonment to which he was sentenced for past offences. Before passing such an order, the accused should be questioned as to his means and intention of earning an honest livelihood, and he should not be subjected to penalties unless it is shown that there is no reasonable prospect of his future good behaviour—In re Raja, 10 Bom 174 (175)

See Notes 292 and 293

Fresh security after expiry of term of bond—Where a bond for good behaviour expired on the 13th of June 1905, and on the 20th June fresh proceedings were started against him, it was held that the order was illegal in as much as the accused was not given a sufficient opportunity of showing that he was willing to adopt an honest livelihood, and the interval was not long enough to see whether the accused had reformed his course of life or not—Ranjit, 28 All 306, 3 A.L.J. 29; Akbara, 18 Cr.L.J. 710 (Oudh). Where the accused was imprisoned for one year for failure to furnish security, and several months afterwards fresh proceedings were instituted against him as a result of which he was ordered to execute a bond for good behaviour, it was held that the order was bad, that the accused has not had a sufficient locus penitentiae, and that the evil reputation which he had before his imprisonment still followed him and permeated the evidence of many of the witnesses—Junab Ali, 31 Cal 783; K-E v Sheikh Abdul, 20 C.W.N. 725, 43 Cal. 1128, 17 Cr.L.J. 185, 33 I.C. 825; Nga Po, 17 Cr.L.J. 85; Rajendra, 17 C.W.N. 238 (268), 16 C.L.J. 467 See Note 271.

See also 4 C.W.N. 121 in Note 292

In cases where there has been a previous order under this section, witnesses ought to make it clear in their evidence that their evidence relates to the reputation of persons proceeded against subsequently to their release from imprisonment. It would be intolerable that on the same evidence as before suspected persons should continually be sent to jail under this section—Emp v. Niranjan Singh, A.I.R. 1933 All. 369, 55 All. 404, 1933 Cr.C. 646, 1933 A.L.J. 203; Golap Khan, 22 C.W.N. 1x; Ram Deo, 19 C.W.N. 223, 16 Cr.L.J. 312, 28 I.C. 648.

Error in form of bond—When a bond required under sec. 110 was, under a mistake, executed in the form of bonds required to be entered into under section 107, it was held that the bond was void and the error could not be rectified under section 537—Wadhawa, 1903 P.R. 32.

Order should state on which clause it is based—On the conclusion of the inquiry, if the Magistrate considers that the accused is a person falling within any of the descriptions stated in this section, he should record a distinct finding of the specific description which he considers proved. If the finding be insufficient, the final order based upon it will be open to reversal. The same will be the case, if the finding be that he is a habitual thief (or dacoit) but the finding is not supported by evidence that the misconduct is habitual—Punj Circ., p. 167. When a person is sought to be proceeded against under this section, it must be made clear to him as to which sub-section he is charged with coming under. Mere assertion that he is a man of criminal tendency or is suspected of having committed crimes is insufficient—Sohan, 26 Cr.L.J. 1377, 89 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 45, 1 Lah. Cas. 80.

Remand to custody—Where proceedings are instituted under this section the Magistrate can remand the accused person to custody. See Note 526 under sec. 167.

276. Revision—In question arising under sec. 110 and sec. 107, the moment it is shown prima facie that there is something which the Courts below have done either in excess of their powers, or by a too summary exercise of their powers, or by misapplying the rules of evidence, or by not giving due effect to the evidence for the defence, an application for revision should be admitted. But the High Court will not generally interfere on the merits except in very exceptional cases, because it is idle to suggest that the High Court, sitting with only the paper-evidence before it, should presume to differ on questions which are purely questions of fact and questions depending on the demeanour of witnesses—Gayani, 17 Cr.L.J. 461 (All). The High Court is not a Court of Appeal in cases under sec. 110, and the responsibility of administering that section does not rest upon it. It is only when something appears unsatisfactory and unusual in the proceedings of the lower Court that the High Court will look into the record to examine whether the order under sec. 110 has been properly passed—Raj Narayan, 25 A.L.J. 393, 28 Cr.L.J. 502. The High Court is not a Court of Appeal in cases under section 110, and the duty of the High Court is not to weigh the evidence given on behalf of one side or the other, but only to see whether the Court below has approached the consideration of the case in a fair way, having regard to the interest not only of the prosecution but also of the accused—Miharban, 13 A.L.J. 1046, 16 Cr.L.J. 805; Juggut Chunder, 2 Cal. 110 (112); Kewal Kishore, 29 O.C. 44, 12 O.L.J. 413, 26 Cr.L.J. 1283, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 473, 89 I.C. 147; Likka, 35 Cr.L.J. 403, 147 I.C. 388, 11 O.W.N. 84. But at the same time before affirming an order under this section the Court is to be satisfied that the evidence in the case was of a character which made it imperative in the interests of public security to pass an order under this section—Lachman, 28 Cr.L.J. 515, 102 I.C. 211, A.I.R. 1927 All. 473; Alimuddin alias Allia, 82 I.C. 35, 22 A.L.J. 678, A.I.R. 1924 All. 569, 25 Cr.L.J. 1172. The High Court will not interfere on the merits with proceedings under this section, provided that the Lower Court or the Appellate Court shows in its judgment that it has really and not merely nominally considered the evidence on the record—Shiam Lal, 6 A.L.J. 487, 9 Cr.L.J. 528. The High Court is not disposed to encourage revision applications in respect of proceedings under this Chapter, because so long as the cases proceed fairly and regularly, the Magistrate is the best tribunal, in fact the only tribunal who can satisfactorily decide them—Darbari Singh, 45 All. 749 (751), 24 Cr.L.J. 257. But at the same time the administration of this section has to be very carefully watched; and where evidence has been misunderstood or ignored, difficulties have not been seen or the rules of evidence have not been followed, and the Judge has reviewed the case in a very perfunctory way without noticing the palpable defects in the evidence, the grounds upon which a man has been bound down require to be carefully scrutinized—Bisheswar, 19 A.L.J. 668. If it is established to the satisfaction of the High Court, that the proceedings under sec. 110 are not bona fide, and that in substance their continuation would mean an abuse of the statutory provision on the subject, it is not only competent to the High Court but it is its obvious duty to interfere—Rajendra, 17 C.W.N. 238, 16 C.L.J. 467, 18 I.C. 149, 14 Cr.L.J. 5; Nafar, 28 C.W.N. 23, 38 C.L.J. 198, 25 Cr.L.J. 189, 76 I.C. 429, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 114; Satindra, 48 C.L.J. 143. It is undoubtedly true that Magistrates have complete jurisdiction to initiate proceedings under sec. 110 Cr. P. Code provided that they are satisfied that there are sufficient materials for doing so, but in each case the superior Court will examine, if necessary, the materials upon which the proceedings are based—Narendra Nath Jha v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 811 (813), 176 I.C. 849, 19 P.L.T. 542, 1938 P.W.N. 588, 4 B.R. 767, 11 R.P. 116, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 533. Though the High Court finds it difficult to interfere with orders under sec. 110, still it has to be satisfied that the evidence is of a character which will reasonably support the interference that it is necessary in the interests of public security to bind down the accused—Alimuddin, 22 A.L.J. 678, 25 Cr.L.J. 1172.

If the Courts below approach the consideration of the case in a fair way and subject the evidence both for the prosecution and for the defence to legitimate criticisms the High Court is relieved from the necessity of weighing the evidence in criminal revisions. Where it is clear from the judgments of the Courts below that the evidence has not been fairly considered, it is imperative to examine the evidence with a view to test the accuracy of the decisions of the Courts below—Raghubar Dayal, 36 Cr.L.J. 33, 152 I.C. 120, A.I.R. 1934 All. 735, 1934 Cr.C. 936. See also Nizamaddi, 23 C.W.N. 488. There can be no doubt that in the case of orders made in a proceeding under this section the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court is as much unfettered as in other cases coming before it, and interference by the High Court would be called for, and justified on a proper case being made out. At the same time the position cannot be overlooked that the question whether it is necessary, in the interest of keeping the peace, to take security from a person, is essentially a question which concerns the Magistrate and the local Police; and it may be said that the power to demand security from suspected persons is a power that is almost as much of an executive as of a judicial nature. The High Court will, therefore, interfere only on very strong and clear grounds which go to show that there has been, in a particular case, a miscarriage of justice—Parbati Charan, 35 Cr.L.J. 952, 61 Cal. 588, 149 I.C. 460, 1934 Cr.C. 690, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 482. See also Khairatram, 33 Cr.L.J. 324, 136 I.C. 753, A.I.R. 1932 Sind. 100, 1932 Cr.C. 540, Ind. Rul. 1932 Sind. 49.

Where the bad livelihood proceedings were pending for an unconscionable time mainly due to the fault of the petitioners themselves and according to the Crown a murder took place because the murdered persons were witnesses in the bad livelihood case, the High Court refused to exercise its revisional powers for stay of proceedings under sec. 110, Cr. P. C., and declined to interfere with the direction of the lower Court as regards the dates of the trial of the bad livelihood case—Girdhar, 34 Cr.L.J. 1145, 146 I.C. 37, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 116, 1933 Cr.C. 260.

277. Order under Special Acts:—An order restricting movements under the provisions of sec. 7 of the Punjab Act V of 1918 (Restriction of Habitual Offenders Act) cannot be passed against any person from whom a security has already been taken under sec. 110 of the Cr. P. Code—Kabir Baksh, 1 Lah. 100; Bhana, 1919 P.I.R. 34.

A double order both under sec. 110 of this Code and under sec. 7 of the Burma Habitual Offenders Restriction Act is illegal, and the order of restriction must be set aside—Pan Zyaw, 1 Bur.L.J. 257, 24 Cr.L.J. 735. Where proceedings have been taken under sec. 110 of this Code by the Sub-divisional Magistrate, and a final order has been passed under sec. 118, the District Magistrate (and he alone) can convert the order into an order of restriction under the Burma Habitual Offenders Restriction Act (II of 1919), where there has been a proper preliminary order under sec. 112 and the District Magistrate has good reasons for the change—Parsodan, 2 Rang. 524.

Proceedings under this section against persons who have been registered under sec. 4 of the Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1911) are not illegal. But such proceedings though not illegal are inexpedient, and the fact that the persons proceeded against are already registered under the Criminal Tribes Act may be a factor and an important factor which the Magistrate should take into consideration before he makes any order against them under sec. 110 of this Code—Ghulam Rasul, 20 Cr.L.J. 30, 48 I.C. 510 (Cal.). A person who has been registered under the Criminal Tribes Act may be proceeded against under sec. 110 of this Code, if he pursues a career of crime bringing him within some one of the clauses of this section. Each case has to be scrutinized on its merits. If such proceedings appear to be necessary in view of the exigencies of any particular case, evidence of general repute, which is bound to be affected in a large measure by the very fact of the person proceeded against being a member of a criminal tribe, should be, if at all, acted upon with great caution and scrutiny—Bada Mir, 54 Cal. 279, 31 C.W.N. 165 (166), 28 Cr.L.J. 106, 44 I.C. 314, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 213.

277A. Transfer:—Cases under Ch. VIII may be transferred in accordance with the provisions of sec. 192, Cr. P. Code. See Notes 598 in this connection. See also Gulabrao Laxmanrao Changude v. Emp., in Note 258.

A person proceeded against under sec. 107, Cr. P. Code can apply for transfer of the proceedings under sec. 526, Cr. P. Code—Haji Baqriddi, 26 A.L.J. 398, 29 Cr.L.J. 448 (449), 108 I.C. 569, A.I.R. 1928 All. 268.

Proceedings under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code cannot be transferred by the High Court to another district—Emp. v. Mahendra, 30 All. 47, 27 A.W.N. 268, 7 Cr.L.J. 214; Amar Singh, 16 All. 9. This view was dissented from in Emp. v. Wahid Ali Khan, 32 All. 642, where Tudball, J., observed. "No doubt, a Magistrate cannot take action under sec. 110 unless the person against whom the action is taken, is one within the local limits of his jurisdiction. But once action has been taken, the inquiry and the final order are made under the powers conferred by sec. 117 and sec. 118 of the Code. Section 526 clearly enables this Court to transfer a criminal case of this description, once it has been properly instituted, to any other Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction (and which otherwise would have no jurisdiction), and the order of this Court will give jurisdiction to the Court to which the case has been so transferred to make an enquiry under sec. 117 and to pass an order under sec. 118. I do not think that the powers of transfer given to this Court by sec. 526 are in any way limited by the terms of sec. 110 or sec. 107 of the Code." This view was followed in U Gandama, 145 I.C. 314, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 164, 1933 Cr.C. 763, 6 Rang. 41, 34 Cr.L.J. 950. As a rule, it would not be at all in accordance with the view of the Calcutta High Court, to transfer any preventive proceeding from one district to another. It must be an extremely exceptional case that could justify the interference of the High Court with the jurisdiction of the Magistrate of the district taking preventive action within his own boundaries and imposing such foreign and extraneous duty on the Magistrate of another district—Chandi Prosad, 17 C.W.N. 536, 20 I.C. 142, 14 Cr.L.J. 382. See also Maung Saw Hlaing, 34 Cr.L.J. 1195, 146 I.C. 23, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 165, 1933 Cr.C. 764, where the High Court transferred proceedings under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., to another district.

277B. Confession:—A confession in a dacoity case is admissible against its maker in proceedings under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code. It is clearly inadmissible against the co-accused in such proceedings, the provisions of sec. 30 of the Indian Evidence Act not being applicable in such a case—Amirulla, 22 C.W.N. 408, 49 I.C. 649; Mafizuddin, 25 C.W.N. 239, 61 I.C. 793, 33 Cr.L.J. 70, 22 Cr.L.J. 441, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 557. 1931 A.L.J. 1170, the Allahabad High Court took a contrary view, holding that sec. 110 of the Indian Evidence Act applied to such a case. See also Sarju, 41 All. 231, A.L.J. 147, 20 Cr.L.J. 206, 49 I.C. 654

111. [Repealed.]

This section has been repealed by sec. 8 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1923). It ran as follows:—

"111. The provisions of secs. 109 and 110 do not apply to the European British subjects in cases where they may be dealt with under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874" "We consider that sec. 111 should be repealed and that secs. 109 and 110 should apply equally to Europeans and Indians"—Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee, 16

112. When a Magistrate acting under section 107, section 108, section 109 or section 110 deems it necessary to require any person to show cause under such section, he shall make an order in writing, setting forth the substance of the information received, the amount of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be in force, and the number, character and class of sureties (if any) required.

78. Scope:—The provisions of this section must be complied with by a Magistrate passing a preliminary order under the Burma Habitual Offenders Restriction Act of 1919), and if that order does not set forth the substance of the information received and the term during which the order of restriction shall be in force, the entire order is irregular and order passed therein must be set aside—Parsadan, 2 Rang. The information which leads to action under sec. 107 may be of the most varied kind. It may be oral, sworn or not sworn, and need not be in writing. It may be derived from any source, official or unofficial, formal or informal. It may be derived from the Magistrate's own knowledge. He is not bound to disclose the source or the nature of the information received—In re Mithu Khan, 27 All. 172, 1904 A.W.N. 206, 1 A.L.J. 685; Tapadmanabhiah, 54 Mad. 422, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 975, 1930 M.W.N. 1100, 32 W. 784, 59 M.L.J. 914, 129 I.C. 70, 32 Cr.L.J. 217, 1930 Cr.C. 1191

79. Order in writing:—Before making an order the Magistrate may hold an inquiry. See Note 230 under the heading "Inquiry." A Magistrate acting under this section has no power to act until he has recorded an order in writing under this section—Rameshwar, 36 All. 262, 12 A.L.J. 365. The issue of a warrant under sec. 115 without recording an order under this section is illegal—Jatoi, 20 S.L.R. 122, 27 Cr.L.J. 391. So also, where the accused persons were arrested as suspected habitual offenders and the Magistrate fixed a date for the production of evidence with the object of issuing a notice under sec. 112, but on the date fixed, after hearing the prosecution evidence, he at once called upon the accused to enter upon his defence to a charge under sec. 110, held that the procedure was illegal and the proceedings must be set aside. It is only after the Magistrate has recorded an order under sec. 112, that the actual hearing can by law take place at all—Rajbans, 42 All. 616 (648), 22 Cr.L.J. 228. In Pragt, 10 O.C. 365, 7 Cr.L.J. 94, however, it has been held that the provisions of this section are purely directory, and a failure to record the order is a mere irregularity. In In re Kavatham, 26 M.L.T. 385, 20 Cr.L.J. 763, it was held that the omission to draw up a proceeding under this section or to serve a copy of the order on the accused under sec. 115 did not vitiate the proceedings, if the order was drawn up later and read out and explained to the accused who appeared in Court in pursuance of a summons.

Where a Magistrate, instead of making an order in writing, wrote the order on the back of the police report which gave the information, held that it was a mere irregularity cured by sec. 537—Ram Deo, 27 Cr.L.J. 1132, 97 I.C. 652, A.I.R. 1927 All. 767, 25 A.L.J. 44, 49 All. 228.

Joint order:—Where there are several persons, and the charges against them are not the same, a joint notice to them is undesirable. Each man is entitled to a separate notice and not to have the charges which are going to be made against him confused with the charges that are being made against somebody else—Ram Lal, 51 All. 663, 30 Cr.L.J. 562 (564), A.I.R. 1929 All. 273, 116 I.C. 25, 1929 A.L.J. 361.

280. Contents of the order:—

Substance of the information.—It means an abstract of the facts upon which the Magistrate charges the persons proceeded against with being likely to commit a breach of the peace, so as to give them notice of what they have to meet and be prepared to meet it—Kalia, 59 M.L.J. 887, 32 Cr.L.J. 27 (29), A.I.R. 1930 Mad 859, 1930 Cr.C. 1033, 127 I.C. 652 Under this section, the substance of the report made to the Magistrate should be clearly disclosed to the accused so that he may be informed of the charges or of the nature of the evidence which he is to rebut. Thus, a notice under sec. 110 must contain something more than a mere reproduction of the clauses of the section. There should be sufficient indication of the time and place of the facts charged and sufficient details which enable the accused to know what facts he is to meet—Ranga Reddi, 38 M.L.J. 97, 21 Cr.L.J. 354, 55 I.C. 722, A.I.R. 1920 Mad. 534, 11 M.L.W. 331, 1920 M.W.N. 398, 43 Mad 450; Kripasindhu, 19 Cr.L.J. 905, 1918 M.W.N. 751; Tanwar, 19 S.L.R. 176, 26 Cr.L.J. 1398; Santhana Ramaswami, 1937 M.W.N. 885. The omission to state the substance of the information is a grave and substantial irregularity and if it be shown that the accused has thereby been prejudiced the order of the Court should be set aside. In the absence of such prejudice the proceedings cannot be treated as void ab initio—Alisher Dost Muhammad, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 261, 40 Cr.L.J. 887, 184 I.C. 189, 12 RS 94. Magistrates should by no means be contented with allowing the officer to fill up a vague lithographed or typed form, but ought to do their best to see that the first order does actually contain the substance of the information, no less and no more. If this is not done, the accused cannot know till he comes to Court precisely what he is charged with, and as no charge is drawn up, he may not know till the final order is passed what his alleged delinquency is—Sultan, A.I.R. 1925 Sind 236, 19 S.L.R. 332, 26 Cr.L.J. 767, 86 I.C. 351. A mere assertion in writing by the Magistrate that he has been informed that an offence (e.g., a breach of the peace) is likely to be committed, is not sufficient; the persons proceeded against are entitled to know the nature of the accusation they have to meet and to a reasonable opportunity within which to prepare themselves to meet the accusation and to cite witnesses—Iswar Chandra, 11 Cal 13; Nathu, 6 All 214; Ranga Reddi, supra. The accused is entitled to be told the nature and extent of the information. Therefore, if the substance of the report made to the Magistrate is not clearly disclosed, and the accused is not informed of the charges and of the nature of the evidence that he is to rebut, the proceedings cannot be regarded as legal—Ranga Reddi, supra. Where a notice under sec. 107 did not at all state when the threats complained of were uttered, who were the persons who were threatened and when the apprehension of a breach of the peace arose, held that the notice was vague and bad in law—Konda Reddi, 41 Mad 246, 18 Cr.L.J. 787, A.I.R. 1918 Mad 555, 41 I.C. 990. A notice which is very meagre and does not contain sufficient details regarding the charges brought against the persons, is illegal, and this defect cannot be remedied by any explanation given by the Prosecuting Inspector at the commencement of the trial—In re Kutti Goundan, 47 M.L.J. 689, 26 Cr.L.J. 673, 86 I.C. 49, A.I.R. 1925 Mad 189; Kalia Goundan, 59 M.L.J. 887, 32 Cr.L.J. 27, 32 M.L.W. 320, 1127 I.C. 652, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 859. See also Santhanaramaswami v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N.Cr. 189; 2 Weir 49, Maruthapali Goundar v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Mad 356, 169 I.C. 97, 38 Cr.L.J. 699, 1937 M.W.N.Cr. 9. After discussing the above mentioned rulings the Full Bench of the Madras High Court has laid down that action taken under sec. 112, Cr. P. Code constitutes a judicial act and therefore the Magistrate should not act arbitrarily. There must be information of a nature which convinces him that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace. It is impossible to formulate a hard and fast rule with regard to the nature of the information on which a Magistrate should act. What is reasonably sufficient to satisfy a Magistrate must depend on the particular situation. While there must be something more than the past misconduct of the person proceeded against to justify a notice being served upon him, the Cr. P. Code does not require the information to show the particular act which is in contemplation at the time. The Magistrate must be satisfied that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace. What will satisfy him must depend on the particular facts of the case—In re Muthuswami, AIR 1940 Mad. (25, 26), 50 MLW. 802, 1939 M.W.N. 1209, 185 I.C. 824, 41 Cr.L.J. 238, (1940), 1 MLJ. 11 (F.B.).

Merely informing an accused person that he is suspected to be a habitual thief, is not a sufficient notice, before proceeding under sec 110. There must be something in the nature of the indictment or charge containing substantial particulars indicating the grounds upon which the police have given information to the Magistrate—Rajbansi, 18 A.L.J. 678, 42 All 616 (648), 22 Cr.L.J. 228; Nihal, 49 All. 5, 24 A.L.J. 900, 28 Cr.L.J. 9, AIR 1926 All 759, 99 I.C. 41. The failure of the Magistrate to record the details of the information which he has received, is not a mere irregularity which would be covered by sec 537, but is an illegality which vitiates the trial—Nihal, (supra). The Oudh Chief Court, however, dissents from these two rulings and is of opinion that the 'substance of the information' does not mean anything more than the gist of the information. It is not necessary to state anything more than the particular section or sub-section on which it is proposed to proceed against the accused. In any view, the failure to give the accused the information of the nature of the case against him, is a mere irregularity cured by sec 537—Ram Ghulam, 2 Luck 157, 28 Cr.L.J. 744 (746), 103 I.C. 792, AIR 1927 Oudh 306, 6 O.W.N. 1202. The Calcutta High Court likewise holds that the substance of the information means such or so much of the information as would enable the party to know under what clause of sec 110 he is charged or to what particular class of offenders he is said to belong. Where possible, the repetition of the words of the section should be avoided, but the notice is not rendered invalid because of failure to mention the details of the case—Bhut Nath, 33 C.W.N. 852, 124 I.C. 71, 31 Cr.L.J. 614, 1929 Cr.C. 387, 57 Cal 503, AIR. 1929 Cal. 739. It is utterly impossible to draw the line or to offer the Magistrates any guiding principle which would assist them in determining how much information is to be given in a case under sec 110. It is sufficient if the particular clause of the charge, or where there are more than one offence named in a charge, the particular offence or offences are given in the notice—Chandan, 52 All 448, AIR 1930 All. 274, 1930 Cr.C. 442, 124 I.C. 40, 31 Cr.L.J. 627, 1930 A.L.J. 389. Ordinarily, it is sufficient if that portion of the clause of sec 110 which is applicable to the particular case is specified in the notice, but where the particular clause refers to two or more offences, the particular offence or offences which is more appropriate to the particular case should also be mentioned in the notice. This applies more particularly to clause (d) of sec. 110—Chandan, supra. This section does not contemplate that the allegations of fact constituting the information should be embodied in the preliminary order. The section provides for a preliminary order to be passed in proceedings started under secs 107, 108, 109 and 110 and contemplates that the order should contain as much of the information as would be sufficient to enable the party to know under which of the several sections or which part of any one of them he is proceeded against. The preliminary order under this section need not contain more than an indication of the particular offence which is sought to be prevented—Jagannath Prasad v. Emp., AIR 1910 Nag 134 (135), 1940 NLJ 31.

The omission to set forth the substance of the information will not of itself be sufficient to render the proceeding and the final order null and void, unless the accused has been prejudiced by the omission and a failure of justice has been occasioned—Id.

Jafar, 3 All. 545; Abbasu v. Umda, 8 Cal 724; Bhagwan, 1891 A.W.N. 40; Tanwar, 19 S.L.R. 176, 26 Cr.L.J. 1398; the omission in the notice to give detailed information as to the nature of the evidence for the prosecution, is not an irregularity sufficient to vitiate the proceedings, especially if the accused had cross-examined at great length the witnesses for the prosecution—Dohra, 20 Cr.L.J. 436 (Pat.); or if as a matter of fact the accused had clear notice of the case made against them and had ample time and opportunity to let in evidence—Jai Singh, 23 Cr.L.J. 42 (Pat.). According to the Lahore and Rangoon High Courts, an order which does not set forth the substance of the information is illegal and must be set aside—Ujagar, 10 Lah. 155, 30 Cr.L.J. 839, 117 I.C. 807, A.I.R. 1929 Lah 504, 1929 Cr.C. 61, 30 P.L.R. 694, Ind. Rul. 1929 Lah 695; Maung Tunu, 4 Bur.L.J. 172, 27 Cr.L.J. 318 (319), '92 I.C. 702, A.I.R. 1925 Rang 353. For contra, see Dayaram, 27 Cr.L.J. 575, 94 I.C. 143, A.I.R. 1926 Lah 366.

In a proceeding under sec. 107, the Magistrate may give only the substance of the information received, and it is not necessary to specify the definite acts which the accused intends to commit—Jagui, 16 A.L.J. 567, 19 Cr.L.J. 876, A.I.R. 1918 All 93, 43 I.C. 72. In proceedings under sec. 110 an order by the Magistrate stating that he has received some reliable information (though not definite) that the accused is a habitual cattle thief and a receiver of stolen goods, is a sufficient compliance with the provisions of this section—In re Kala, 1896 A.W.N. 73.

But a Magistrate is not bound to give the source of the information—In re Mithu, 27 All 172; Alimuddin, 29 Cal. 392. It is also not necessary to give a list of the prosecution witnesses in the order—Chintamon, 35 Cal. 243, 12 C.W.N. 299, 7 C.L.J. 177; Rajendra, 17 C.W.N. 238 (261), 18 I.C. 149, 16 C.L.J. 467, 14 Cr.L.J. 5.

Section 110 provides six categories of cases within one or more of which the offender's case must come in order that a penalty may be imposed in accordance with that section. When a person is sought to be proceeded against under this section it must be made clear as to which sub-section he is charged with coming under. It is not enough merely to assert that he is a person of criminal tendencies or that he is suspected of having committed certain crimes. The omission to do so is obviously a serious hardship to the accused person, in as much as he receives no notice of the precise case which he is to meet. It is not enough to charge a person generally of having committed an offence under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code without specifically stating under which of the sub-section the case is alleged to fall—Sohan Singh, 26 Cr.L.J. 1377, 89 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1926 Lah 45.

Where in a proceeding under sec. 107, Cr. P. Code the Magistrate has only reproduced the language of the section, without specifying in what way and with reference to what matter a person was likely to commit a breach of the peace and in what way he was likely to do a wrongful act which might occasion a breach of the peace, the proceeding is vague and cannot be supported—Amanal Ali, 30 Cr.L.J. 492, 115 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 67, 10 P.L.T. 639, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat 209.

It is doubtful how far an order under this section can properly exceed the information given under sec. 107, Cr. P. Code—Jasoda Lekhraj v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 703 (704), I.L.R. 1939 Kar 662, 182 I.C. 698, 12 R.S. 31, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 167.

Amendment of the order:—If it had been the intention of the Legislature to give Courts power to amend orders under sec. 112, after they had been communicated to the accused, provision would have been made in the Code for such amendment. The provisions which have actually been made, seem impliedly to prohibit any amendment of that kind. In the first place it is necessary not only that the information received should be set out in the order under sec. 112, but also the kind of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be enforced and the number, character and class of sureties, if any, required. These latter requirements for an order under sec. 112 seem to indicate that it was not the intention of the Legislature that the Courts should have a more or less free hand in altering the nature of the bond, the class of sureties, the term for which the bond was to be enforced, after evidence had been taken or during the course of the proceedings. The provision of sec. 118 would be meaningless, if it was open to Court at any time to amend the original order under sec. 112—Nim, 34 Cr.L.J. 9, 140 I.C. 170, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 8, 1933 Cr.C. 32, 27 S.L.R. 19, Ind. Rul. 1932 Sind 182. For contra, see Hyder Khan, 1933 M.W.N. 551. But where the Magistrate recorded an order calling upon three persons to show cause why they should not be required to furnish security in the sum of Rs 2,000, got a copy of that order duly served on them to appear on a certain date and, on their appearance on the fixed date, passed an entirely fresh order under sec. 112 and carefully read it out to them as was required by sec. 113, it was held that the proceedings were in no way vitiated by the procedure adopted by the Magistrate—Muhammad Ishaq, 28 Cr.L.J. 815, 104 I.C. 255, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 689.

Where a person was not called upon to show cause as being "by habit" a thief and burglar but it was stated in the order drawn up under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., that it appeared to the Magistrate that he was by "general repute" a thief and burglar, it was held that the proceedings were not illegal in as much as it was not shown that he was misled or in any way prejudiced by the terms of the order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C.—The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Kadir Muzza, 17 C.W.N. 331, 13 Cr.L.J. 784, 17 I.C. 416.

There is nothing in the provisions of sec. 109 or of sec. 112, Cr. P. Code which makes it imperative on the part of the Magistrate, after having recited the reasons why the person named is to be called on to execute a bond, to enter the actual section and clause which he considers appropriate. Where the Sessions Judge in appeal has considered that what is set out in the body of the order under sec. 112, Cr. P. Code brings the matter within the terms of clause (a) of sec. 109, Cr. P. Code and not under clause (b), and he has in effect corrected what he considers either to be a misconception of the trying Magistrate or a clerical error and the substance of the accusation which the applicant had to meet has not been altered in any way, there is jurisdiction of the Appellate Court to make the alteration—Ahesanali v Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 747 (748), 176 I.C. 465, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 303, 11 R.N. 54, I.L.R. 1938 Nag. 595.

See also Note 292.

Number, character and class of sureties:—The Magistrate in setting forth the number, character and class of sureties, should not place undue and unnecessary difficulties in the way of finding them—Rahmatulla, 22 Cr.L.J. 395 (All.) The Magistrate should not impose impossible restrictions, as the provisions of this Chapter are preventive and not penal—Mad Pahor, 1 S.L.R. 46, 8 Cr.L.J. 166.

Therefore, a Magistrate has no right to impose a condition requiring the accused to find sureties residing within certain geographical limits (e.g., within one mile or five miles) or residing in a certain locality—Narain Soobodhee, 22 W.R. 37; Tara Sing, 1880 P.R. 38; Bhagwan, 7 A.L.J. 993, 11 Cr.L.J. 536; Hasimuddin, 10 A.L.J. 354, 13 Cr.L.J. 831; Rahunandan, 20 A.L.J. 520, 23 Cr.L.J. 400; Mangal, 6 O.C. 199; or to impose a condition that the sureties must be inhabitants of one village—Nga Po, 17 Cr.L.J. 85. In Nabhu, 24 All. 471, it has been held that the Magistrate is entitled to prescribe certain geographical limits for the residence of sureties, but it must not be too narrow; and, therefore, where an order was passed by a Magistrate requiring the sureties to be "residing within the Municipality of Mirzapore" the High Court added the words "or in the immediate neighbourhood."

Lastly, as regards the class of sureties. Since sec. 112 gives the Magistrate power to define the character and class of sureties, it is open to him to require that they must be landholders or persons having a certain pecuniary status—Rahim, 20 All. 206, Jita Natha, 16 Bom.L.R. 138, 15 Cr.L.J. 268; Allahbad, 17 S.L.R. 160; Jumo, 16 Cr.L.J. 252, 8 S.L.R. 229; (but see Wasaya, 1901 P.R. 28); or that they should be of respectable character and should not be of inferior standing to suspects—Mad Ibrahim, 8 S.L.R. 173, 16 Cr.L.J. 100, 27 I.C. 148. But a condition that the sureties must not be lambardars, inamdars and Chowkidars (Kaim Khan, 1906 P.R. 18) or that they must not be related to the accused (Narain, 22 W.R. 37) or that they must not come from Kaharati and must not be Kunbi by caste (Yesu, 1 Bom L.R. 520) is too restrictive and illegal.

See Notes under sec. 122.

Copy:—A person against whom a Magistrate has drawn up an order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., asking him to show cause why he should not be bound down to keep the peace under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., is not entitled to obtain a copy of the written information given by the police on which the order is based—Anantapadmanabhiah, A.I.R. 1930 Mad 975, 54 Mad 422, 1930 M.W.N. 1100, 32 M.L.W. 784, 59 M.L.J. 914, 129 I.C. 70, 1930 Cr.C. 1191, 32 Cr.L.J. 217.

Revision:—The High Court has powers under sec. 439 read with sec. 423 (1) (c) and sec. 561A, Cr. P. Code to set aside the Magistrate's order under sec. 112, Cr. P. Code and to quash proceedings—Jasoda Lekhray v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Sind 167 (170), I.L.R. 1939 Kar 662, 182 I.C. 698, 12 R.S. 31, 40 Cr.L.J. 703. The High Court has undoubtedly power to quash proceedings where the notice issued does not comply with the requirements of sec. 112, but before doing so, it must be satisfied that there has been a failure to comply. It must be remembered that the issue of the notice is merely a preliminary step and no order can be passed under sec. 107, Cr. P. Code unless the inquiry which follows the issue of the notice shows that the laying of the information was justified. The High Court can always interfere when the inquiry has not been held in accordance with the law or a wrong conclusion has been arrived at—In re Muthuswami, 41 Cr.L.J. 238 (241), 185 I.C. 824, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 23, 50 M.L.W. 802, 1939 M.W.N. 1209, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 11 (F.B.).

113. If the person in respect of whom such order is made is present in Court, it shall be read over to him or, if he so desires, the substance thereof shall be explained to him.

Procedure in respect of person present in Court.

'Is present in Court':—Even if persons are illegally arrested and brought into Court, the Magistrate is justified in treating the persons as present in Court and may proceed to initiate proceedings—Ghullam Husain, 12 Cr.L.J. 533, 12 I.C. 301 (Bom.). The record must show conclusively that the order was read out to the person proceeded against—Din Dayal, 28 Cr.L.J. 8, 99 I.C. 40, A.I.R. 1927 All 146

114. If such person is not present in Court, the Magistrate shall issue a summons requiring him to appear, or, when such person is in custody, a warrant directing the officer in whose custody he is, to bring him before the Court:

Summons or warrant in case of person not so present.

Provided that, whenever it appears to such Magistrate, upon the report of a police-officer or upon other information (the substance of which report or information shall be recorded by the Magistrate, that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person, the Magistrate may at any time issue a warrant for his arrest.

281. Issue of Summons:—Summons is necessary only if the accused is not present in Court. If he is present, and the Magistrate records an order calling on him to show cause on a day fixed why he should not furnish security for keeping the peace, it is not necessary to issue a summons to him—Chowdhury, 2 B.L.R. App. 28

When a Magistrate issued a notice with reference to sec. 110, but at the time of inquiry passed an order demanding security under section 107, it was held that the Magistrate ought to have issued a fresh notice with reference to sec. 107, to enable the party to know the facts on which the Magistrate intended to proceed against him—Krishnaswami v. Vanamamalai, 30 Mad 282.

The notice issued to the accused to appear and show cause must give him sufficient time to produce his evidence. So, where notice was served on the 7th, requiring the accused to appear on the 9th, it was held that sufficient time was not given, and the order for security was set aside—Cheytt Singh, 22 W.R. 70.

282. Issue of Warrant:—Before making an order for immediate arrest, the Magistrate must be of opinion that the only way of preventing a breach of the peace is to commit the person to custody, and he must put on record the substance of the Police report or other information by which he is influenced—Maniruddin, 5 P.L.T. 95, 24 Cr.L.J. 829, 74 IC 851. To justify an arrest under this section the Magistrate must act upon information that has been on record. It is not enough for him to merely express a belief that such a course is necessary. Not only must he have reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, but it must be shown that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person—Babua, 6 All 132. No notice is necessary before arrest—Chandan, 52 All. 448, 31 Cr.L.J. 627, 1930 A.L.J. 389, AIR 1930 All 274.

A Magistrate holding an inquiry under sec. 110, Cr. P. C., derives jurisdiction to issue a warrant against a suspect only after he has passed an order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., and after he has satisfied himself that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of the suspect—Jatoi, 27 Cr.L.J. 935, 96 IC 391, 20 S.L.R. 122, AIR 1926 Sind 288.

As for arrest without warrant, see 20 S.L.R. 85, cited in Note 126 under sec. 55.

Re-arrest:—The proviso to the section is a provision relating to the circumstances set out in the section and is not a substantive provision by itself. It does not give power to Magistrates to re-arrest a person who has already been let off after executing surety bonds—Nathan Gope, 10 P.L.T. 801, 30 Cr.L.J. 809 (811).

It may be doubted whether this proviso empowers a Magistrate to re-arrest a person who has already appeared and been admitted to bail—Raghunandan, 32 Cal 80 (83).

283. Bail:—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to refuse bail to an accused person arrested under a warrant issued under this section—Faiz Mahomed, 9 S.L.R. 158, 17 Cr.L.J. 77, 32 IC 669. When a man who is arrested is not accused of a non-bailable offence, no needless impediments should be placed in the way of his being admitted to bail. The intention of the law undoubtedly is that in such cases the man is ordinarily to be at liberty, and it is only if he is unable to furnish such moderate security, if any is required of him, as is suitable for the purpose of securing his appearance before a Court pending inquiry, that he should remain in detention—Mir Hashamali, 20 Bom.L.R. 121, 19 Cr.L.J. 329.

284. Person outside jurisdiction:—A Magistrate cannot legally issue a warrant under this section for the arrest of a person who has already left the local limits of his jurisdiction. The person proceeded against must be actually and physically present in the district in which the Magistrate exercises jurisdiction—In re Ramjiban, 14 Bom.L.R. 889, 13 Cr.L.J. 796, 17 IC 540. But see Manindra, 46 Cal. 215 (236), AIR. 1919 Cal 702, 23 C.W.N. 193, 28 C.L.J. 25, 19 Cr.L.J. 969, 46 IC 152, where it is held that sec. 114 is not limited to arrest within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction but applies to an accused arrested outside the jurisdiction and brought in custody within the jurisdiction for the purpose of proceeding under this Chapter. See Note 258 under section 110.

115. Every summons or warrant issued under section 114 shall be accompanied by a copy of the order made under section 112 and such copy shall be delivered by the officer serving or executing such summons or warrant to the person served with, or arrested under, the same.

285. Omission to send copy of order:—When the summons was not accompanied by a copy of the order passed under section 112, the whole proceedings were invalid, and the order for security must be set aside—Subba Naicken, 6 Cr.L.J. 332, 17 M.L.J. 438; Abdul Rahaman, 2 Weir 55. Contra—Suleman, 11 Bom.L.R. 740, 10 Cr.L.J. 375, 10 Bom.L.R. 375, and Narain, 25 Cr.L.J. 682, 81 I.C. 170, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 33, where such omission was held to be a mere irregularity, cured by sec. 537. So also, in a recent Allahabad case, where the Magistrate instead of sending a copy of his order with the summons, gave the substance of the information in the summons itself, and the accused were, therefore, informed of what they had to meet, held that the irregularity was cured by sec. 537—Ram Deo, 27 Cr.L.J. 1132, 97 I.C. 652, 49 All. 228, 25 A.L.J. 44, A.I.R. 1927 All. 767. See also In re Kavatham, 26 M.L.T. 385, 20 Cr.L.J. 763, 53 I.C. 491; Rameshwar, 1 P.L.T. 632, 21 Cr.L.J. 321, 55 I.C. 593, and Bajrao, 25 Cr.L.J. 132, 76 I.C. 228, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 166, where it has been held that an order for security is not liable to be set aside, merely because no preliminary order was drawn up and served on the accused, provided that the preliminary order was drawn up later and read and explained to the accused when they were brought into Court in pursuance of summonses.

116. The Magistrate may, if he sees sufficient cause, dispense with the personal attendance of any person called upon to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond for keeping the peace, and may permit him to appear by a pleader.

Power to dispense with personal attendance.

Where the person against whom proceedings were taken lived at a distance and there was no special circumstance making his personal attendance necessary, it would be a very unwise exercise of jurisdiction to require him to appear personally, since the Magistrate could under this section allow him to appear by a pleader—Dinonath v. Gurja, 12 Cal. 133.

The words "bond for keeping the peace" imply that this section applies only to a case under sec. 107. Vide also 2 Weir 54.

117. (1) When the order under section 112 has been read or explained under section 113 to a person present in Court or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with, or in execution of, a summons or warrant issued under section 114, the Magistrate shall proceed to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken, and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary.

Inquiry as to truth of information.

(2) Such inquiry shall be made, as nearly as may be practicable, where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons-cases; and where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant-cases, except that no charge need be framed.

(3) Pending the completion of the inquiry under sub-section (1), the Magistrate, if he considers that immediate measures are 'necessary for the prevention of a breach' of the peace or disturbance of the public tranquillity or the 'commission of any offence, or for the public safety, may for reasons to be recorded in writing, direct the person, in respect of whom the order under Section 112 has been made, to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour until the conclusion of the inquiry, and may detain him in custody until such bond is executed, or, in default of execution, until the inquiry is concluded:

Provided that—

(a) no person against whom proceedings are not being taken under section 108, section 109 or section 110 shall be directed to execute a bond for maintaining good behaviour, and

(b) the conditions of such bond, whether as to the amount thereof or as to the provision of sureties or the number thereof or the pecuniary extent of their liability shall not be more onerous than those specified in the order under section 112.

(4) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person is a habitual offender or is so desperate or dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise.

(5) Where two or more persons have been associated together in the matter under inquiry, they may be dealt with in the same or separate inquiries as the Magistrate shall think just.

Change:—Sub-section (3) and the italicised words in sub-section (4) have been added by sec 19 of the Cr P C, Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). The reasons are stated below. Sub-sections (3) and (4) have been renumbered as (4) and (5).

286. Sub-section (1)—Inquiry into truth of information:—The inquiry provided for by secs 117 and 118 is not strictly limited by the precise terms of the order drawn up under sec 112, Cr P. Code—The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Kadir Mirza, 17 C.W.N. 331, 13 Cr L J 784, 17 IC 416. But it is hardly possible that a Court could equitably call on a man to prove that he was not a thief, and then without further notice bind him over on the grounds that he was an habitual forger—Sultan, 26 Cr L J 767 (768), 19 SLR 332, 86 IC 351, AIR. 1925 Sind 236.

Under this section a Magistrate is bound to inquire into the truth of the information, notwithstanding that the accused admits the allegations against him and consents to furnish security—Nga Yan Shin, UBR. (1902-3) 1; Allahditto, 19 SLR 101, 26 Cr L J. 1041. Strictly speaking, a plea of guilty in a Criminal Court can only be made in response to a charge made by the Court and an informal admission as to guilt does certainly not amount to a formal plea of guilty and such an admission has not, of course, the same binding effect as a plea of guilty. It has not the same effect

115. Every summons or warrant issued under section 114 shall be accompanied by a copy of the order made under section 112 and such copy shall be delivered by the officer serving or executing such summons or warrant to the person served with, or arrested under, the same.

285. Omission to send copy of order:—When the summons was not accompanied by a copy of the order passed under section 112, the whole proceedings were invalid, and the order for security must be set aside—Subba Naicken, 6 Cr.L.J. 332, 17 M.L.J. 438; Abdul Rahaman, 2 Weir 55. Contra—Suleman, 11 Bom.L.R. 740, 10 Cr.L.J. 375, 10 Bom.L.R. 375, and Narain, 25 Cr.L.J. 682, 81 I.C. 170, AIR 1925 Nag 33, where such omission was held to be a mere irregularity, cured by sec 537. So also, in a recent Allahabad case, where the Magistrate instead of sending a copy of his order with the summons, gave the substance of the information in the summons itself, and the accused were, therefore, informed of what they had to meet, held that the irregularity was cured by sec. 537—Ram Deo, 27 Cr.L.J. 1132, 97 I.C. 652, 49 All. 228, 25 A.L.J. 44, AIR 1927 All 767. See also In re Kavatham, 26 M.L.T. 385, 20 Cr.L.J. 763, 53 I.C. 491; Rameshwar, 1 P.L.T. 632, 21 Cr.L.J. 321, 55 I.C. 593, and Bajirao, 25 Cr.L.J. 132, 76 I.C. 228, AIR. 1924 Nag. 166, where it has been held that an order for security is not liable to be set aside, merely because no preliminary order was drawn up and served on the accused, provided that the preliminary order was drawn up later and read and explained to the accused when they were brought into Court in pursuance of summonses.

Girija*, 12 Cal 133

The words "bond for keeping the peace" imply that this section applies only to a case under sec. 107. Vide also 2 Weir 54.

117. (1) When the order under section 112 has been read or explained under section 113 to a person present in Court or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with, or in execution of, a summons or warrant issued under section 114, the Magistrate shall proceed to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken, and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary.

Inquiry as to truth of information.

(2) Such inquiry shall be made, as nearly as may be practicable, where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons-cases; and where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant-cases, except that no charge need be framed.

(3) Pending the completion of the inquiry under sub-section (1), the Magistrate, if he considers that immediate measures are 'necessary for the prevention of a breach' of the peace or disturbance of the public tranquillity or the commission of any offence, or for the public safety, may for reasons to be recorded in writing, direct the person, in respect of whom the order under Section 112 has been made, to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour until the conclusion of the inquiry, and may detain him in custody until such bond is executed, or, in default of execution, until the inquiry is concluded:

Provided that—

(a) no person against whom proceedings are not being taken under section 108, section 109 or section 110 shall be directed to execute a bond for maintaining good behaviour, and

(b) the conditions of such bond, whether as to the amount thereof or as to the provision of sureties or the number thereof or the pecuniary extent of their liability shall not be more onerous than those specified in the order under section 112.

(4) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person is a habitual offender or is so desperate or dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise.

(5) Where two or more persons have been associated together in the matter under inquiry, they may be dealt with in the same or separate inquiries as the Magistrate shall think just.

286. Sub-section (1)—Inquiry into truth of information:—The inquiry provided for by secs 117 and 118 is not strictly limited by the precise terms of the order drawn up under sec 112, Cr P Code—The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Kadir Mirza, 17 C.W.N 331, 13 Cr L J 784, 17 I C. 416. But it is hardly possible that a Court could equitably call on a man to prove that he was not a thief, and then without further notice bind him over on the grounds that he was an habitual forger—Sultan, 26 Cr L J 767 (768), 19 S L R 332, 86 I C 351, A I R 1925 Sind 236.

Under this section a Magistrate is bound to inquire into the truth of the information, notwithstanding that the accused admits the allegations against him and consents to furnish security—Nga Yan Shin, UBR (1902-3) 1; Allahdutto, 19 S L R. 101, 26 Cr L J 1041. Strictly speaking, a plea of guilty in a Criminal Court can only be made in response to a charge made by the Court and an informal admission as to guilt does certainly not amount to a formal plea of guilty and such an admission has not, of course, the same binding effect as a plea of guilty. It has not the same effect in fact and it has not the same effect in law. When such an admission is made due to an inducement made by the investigating Police Officer, there is nothing in the law to suggest that, in such circumstances, a Sessions Judge hearing a reference under sec. 123, Cr. P. Code is forbidden to direct that the persons proceeded against under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code should be examined again—Legal Remembrancer, Bengal v. Jiban Kumar, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 292, 37 Cr.L.J. 818, 163 I.C. 228, 1936 Cr.C. 529, 8 R.C. 727. See Note 236 under sec. 107.

It is not competent to a Magistrate to dispense with the inquiry provided for by this section, and to base his order merely on the result of another case recently tried by him—Mul Chand, 37 All. 30 (31).

The inquiry to be held under this section is a full judicial inquiry. It must be conducted judicially and becomes a judicial proceeding. All the formalities of a judicial proceeding have to be observed in the inquiry—Sher Zaman, 1899 P.R. 10; Nur Mahomed v. Nil Rutton, 18 W.R. 2

The Court must act on evidence duly recorded in the presence of the accused person and it is not open to it to take into consideration any information obtained otherwise than from such evidence. This, of course, refers to the final decision in the case, and not to the initiation of the proceedings—San Dun v. King-Emph., 2 Rang. 641 (642).

Summoning witnesses—It is quite clear that the accused person when appearing to show cause must be ready with his evidence. If he has been unable to bring the witnesses with him on account of the shortness of the notice or other reasonable cause, it is his duty, when he appears, to apply at once for summons to the witnesses he proposes to call—Narayan, 9 Bom.L.R. 1385; Chulan v. Sukedad, 23 W.R. 9. When a Magistrate is of opinion that the expenses for calling witnesses should be charged from parties he should realise the expenses before issuing the summons—Govind Sahai, 12 A.L.J. 262, 15 Cr.L.J. 363.

The accused person must be given sufficient time to bring his witnesses and have their evidence recorded. Where the accused has not had this opportunity, the order against him must be set aside—Keramuddin, 41 Cal. 806, 15 Cr.L.J. 353, 23 I.C. 721; Jaloi, 27 Cr.L.J. 935, 96 I.C. 381, 20 S.L.R. 122, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 288; Nathu, 6 All. 214; Ponthiram, 38 C.L.J. 285, 25 Cr.L.J. 293.

Defence by Pleader—The person against whom proceedings have been initiated under this Chapter has a right to be defended by a pleader—Jhosh Singh, 23 Cal. 493; Girand, 25 All. 375. See Notes under sec. 340.

See also Note 274.

287. Further evidence—The words "further evidence" indicate that some evidence may be taken by the Magistrate even before drawing up the preliminary order under sec. 112—Nga Po, 2 Cr.L.J. 462 (Bur.).

The Magistrate trying a case is bound by law to hear those witnesses only whose list is sent up by the Police along with the case; and as soon as the witnesses produced in support of the case have been heard, the Magistrate is then to ascertain the names of the persons likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case, and shall summon to give evidence only such of them as he thinks necessary. He is not bound by law to, and should not, save in very exceptional cases, call the other witnesses that the police or any one else from time to time choose to produce—Govind Sahai, 12 A.L.J. 262, 15 Cr.L.J. 363.

Evidence, which relates to occurrences which took place after the information mentioned in sec. 110, Cr. P. Code had been received by the Magistrate, is irrelevant to the matter before him—Jagan, 36 All. 239 (242), 12 A.L.J. 399, 15 Cr.L.J. 212, 22 I.C. 996.

In a proceeding under this section it is erroneous on the part of the Magistrate to admit fresh evidence for the prosecution after the close of the defence case. No further evidence can be admitted except under sec. 540 for which valid reasons must be recorded—Ganga Singh, 10 A.L.J. 383, 13 Cr.L.J. 772.

288. Sub-section (2)—Nature of Procedure:—An inquiry in a proceeding for security to keep the peace must be made in the same way as in a trial of a summons case—Bidapati, 25 All 273. If it is tried as a warrant case, the proceedings would be vitiated—Uttam Chand, 85 I.C. 46, 26 Cr L.J. 430 (All). The Magistrate must proceed as nearly as practicable in the same way as under sec. 242. He must state to the accused the particulars of the matter against him and ask him if he can show cause why he should not be required to execute bonds. The question 'are you willing to execute the bond?' answered by a statement that the accused would execute a bond, is not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section—Palaniappa, 34 Mad. 139. See also Nasir Ahmad, 28 Cr L.J. 609, 50 All. 120, 102 I.C. 897; A.I.R. 1927 All. 579; Sadhu, 1935 Pesh. 116. But sec 242, Cr P. Code does not seem to apply to all to proceedings under sec. 107 Cr. P. Code—Christy v. Christy, A.I.R. 1933 Lah 1019 (1020), 1933 Cr.C. 1556, 35 Cr L.J. 505, 147 I.C. 997. In an inquiry under sec. 107, the deposition need not be read over to the witnesses in the presence of the accused. See 52 Cal. 668 cited in Note 1028 under sec. 360. If the complainant is absent, the proper order is one of discharge under sec. 119, but not of acquittal under sec. 247—Ashrafali v. Nasu Sarkar, 31 C.W.N. 388, 28 Cr L.J. 479 (480).

The Crown is not bound at the initial stage even to name the witnesses who will support the case by their evidence—Rajendra, 17 C.W.N. 238 (261), 16 C.L.J. 467, 18 I.C. 149, 14 Cr L.J. 5.

The procedure applicable to the proceedings under sec. 108, Cr P. Code is that prescribed for warrant cases except that a charge need not be framed: this is clear from sec. 117 (2), Cr P. Code. The prosecution has to establish the truth of the information and the person against whom an order requiring security for good behaviour is sought is entitled to take up the position of keeping quiet and putting the prosecution to the proof of the allegations made against him—Pitre, 47 Bom 423 (443), 25 Bom L.R. 97, 25 Cr L.J. 150, 76 I.C. 294, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 255. An inquiry in a good-behaviour case must be conducted as if it were a warrant case, and the procedure in secs 251-256 must be followed. According to those sections an accused person cannot be called upon to enter on his defence until the prosecution closes its case (sec. 256)—Ganga Singh, 10 A.L.J. 383, 13 Cr L.J. 772. The Calcutta and the Punjab High Courts are of opinion that the procedure prescribed for warrant cases is not to be followed strictly but "is as nearly as practicable" to be observed; therefore, the accused cannot invoke the aid of sec. 256 and is not entitled to ask the Court to recall the witnesses who have given evidence against him for further cross-examination—Ahmed Baksh, 1916 P.R. 1, 17 Cr L.J. 84; Chintamon, 35 Cal. 243; Bija, 8 Lah. 265, 28 Cr L.J. 239. See Note 835 under sec. 256.

The words "the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant cases" in clause (2) of this section are wide enough to cover the special procedure laid down for the trial of summons or warrant cases in Chs. 20 and 21 as well as the general provisions as to inquiries and trials contained in Ch. 24. Therefore, there is no reason why in an enquiry in a case under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code which vitally affects an accused, he should be deprived of the right given to him in provision (a), sec. 350, Cr. P. Code to demand that the witnesses or any of them be re-summoned and re-heard and to ask the Magistrate to see for himself the demeanour of the witnesses and to have a first hand impression of the witnesses and their evidence. The fact whether the inquiry is under secs. 107, 108, 109 or 110, Cr. P. C. makes no difference because sec. 117, clause (2) applies equally to an enquiry under any of these sections—Mahatab Singh v. Emp. A.I.R. 1937 All. 423, 1937 A.W.R. (H.C.) 382, 1937 A.L.J. 373, 169 I.C. 833, 1937 A.L.R. 598, 38 Cr L.J. 804, 1937 A.I.C.R. 29, following J. Venkatchennaya, A.I.R. 1920 Mad. 337, 55 I.C. 50, 21 Cr L.J. 402, 27 M.L.T. 178, 38 M.L.J. 370, 1920 M.W.N. 280, 43 Mad. 511 (F.B.) Govinda v. Emp. 20 N.L.J. 117. See also Notes 1012 and 1015.

Ordinarily the person proceeded against under this Chapter and ordered to give security for good behaviour, is entitled to have his witnesses summoned at Government expense as in warrant cases unless the Magistrate, for reasons to be recorded, declines to summon all or any of the witnesses named by the person concerned—Pahlwan, 33 Cr.L.J. 679, 138 I.C. 765, 33 P.L.R. 742, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 529, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 577, 1932 Cr.C. 805 See also Sayyad Habib, 117 I.C. 667, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 23, 30 Cr.L.J. 814; Habib v. Mehdi Hussain, 108 I.C. 907, 29 Cr.L.J. 459 and Muhammad Azim v. Muhammad Ji, 7 P.R. 1898.

'Except that no charge need be framed'.—The reason for this exception is obvious. What is equivalent to a charge has already been framed in the order served upon the accused, in accordance with sec. 112—Tirlok, 25 A.L.J. 749, 28 Cr.L.J. 792 (793).

An examination of the persons proceeded against is necessary under sec. 342, Cr. P. Code—Raghubar Dayal, 36 Cr.L.J. 33, 152 I.C. 120, A.I.R. 1934 All. 735, 1934 Cr.C. 936 But see, Binode, 50 Cal 985, where it has been held that sec. 342, Cr. P. C., does not apply to an inquiry under this section See Note 973 in this connection Consent of accused to be bound down.—See Note 236.

288A. Sub-section (3)—"This sub-section has been added to enable the Magistrate in emergent cases to take immediate steps to preserve the public peace or for the public safety by taking security pending the detailed inquiry"—Statement of Objects and Reasons, (1914).

The object of sec. 117 (3) is to empower the Magistrate to direct the person against whom an order under sec. 112 has been made to execute a bond for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour until the conclusion of the enquiry. The power so to direct is made to depend on the Magistrate holding that immediate measures are necessary for any of the following purposes.—

(1) for the prevention of—

(a) a breach of the peace or

(b) disturbance of public tranquillity, or

(c) the commission of any offence; or

(2) for the public safety.

Where, therefore, the ground on which the Magistrate considered that immediate measures were necessary was that he apprehended that the person proceeded against would "prove a danger to the witnesses who are to give evidence against him" at the enquiry, the case falls under clause (c) above and the requirements of this sub-section have been satisfied—Pir Shah Murad Shah v. Emp., 27 Cr.L.J. 1030, 96 I.C. 982, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 276

The Court passing an order under clause (3) of this section must state its reasons in writing for passing the order, i.e., it must state that there was a likelihood of the accused committing a breach of the peace. Where all that the Magistrate said was that the order was passed on account of emergency, held that the order was bad and must be set aside—Sahib Dino, 21 S.L.R. 93, 28 Cr.L.J. 173, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 148. The only condition precedent that is laid down is that the Magistrate must record his reasons in writing—Pir Shah Murad Shah v. Emp., supra.

Where a Magistrate postpones the case after the accused has notified his intention to make a transfer application, he has jurisdiction to pass an order under clause (3) pending the completion of the inquiry—Sahib Dino (supra); Baqridi, 26 A.L.J. 398, 29 Cr.L.J. 448 (449).

An order made under this sub-section is not subject to the provisions of Ch. XXXIX relating to bail. This sub-section has been introduced in the interests of public safety pending an inquiry under secs. 108, 109 and 110; consequently, it is not open to the High Court to reduce the security which the Magistrate orders to be furnished under this clause. At the same time there is nothing to prevent the High Court in the exercise of its inherent powers from considering whether the interim security is not too high. But if the High Court reduces the interim security, such reduction does not fetter the discretion of the Magistrate as to the amount of security which he may ultimately demand—Jagir Singh, 31 Cr.L.J. 812 (813), 125 I.C. 322, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 529,

In making an order under this sub-section there should be no restriction that the accused should produce sureties in moveable property. The Magistrate should follow the words of sec. 117, and require a bond in the form given in the Schedule; he should not introduce the restrictive words "in moveable property"—Harihar, 1932 A.L.J. 157, 33 Cr.L.J. 229 (230), A.I.R. 1932 All 122

289. Sub-section (4)—Evidence of general repute:—See this subject fully discussed in Note 272 under section 110.

Prior to the amendment of this sub section, evidence of general repute was admissible only in those cases where the person was a habitual offender within the meaning of clauses (a) to (e) of sec. 110. It could not be adduced to prove under clause (f) of that section that a man was a desperate and dangerous character—Indar, 40 All 372; Ranga Reddi, 43 Mad 450; Kalai, 29 Cal. 779; Babu Murtaza, 9 O.C. 69; Hurmat, 2 A.L.J. 174; Wahid Ali, 11 C.W.N. 789; Akhoy, 5 C.W.N. 249; Nur Muhammad, 1917 P.W.R. 8. Those rulings are no longer good law in view of the amendment of sub-section (4) of the present section.

But evidence of general repute is not admissible in a case where a person is called upon to furnish security under sec 107—Bidyapati, 25 All 273; Banarsi Das, 1888 P.R. 16.

It is not everything that may be proved by evidence of general repute. The ordinary rules of evidence apply, with such modification only as is made by this sub-section. No extension of evidence of general repute beyond the limits prescribed in this sub-section is permissible—San Dun v King-Emp, 2 Rang. 641 (642). This sub-section is an exception to the general rule of evidence and like all exceptions to be sparingly used and only in exceptional circumstances. The general rule of law, of course, is that every man is presumed not to be a criminal or an offender until he has been found guilty by a competent Court. Conviction by public opinion should only be permitted to take the place of conviction by a Court in rare and exceptional circumstances, as for example, where the advent of a suspicious stranger in a village coincides with a series of crimes and suspicion waxes so strong and is so well justified that it may fairly be allowed to take the place of proof, and in such unusual circumstances, the section sanctions an experimental use of the security sections. But where a person has lived all his life in a locality and has never even been accused before a Court of law for any crime, far less convicted, there is absolutely no justification for any such experiment or for making any presumption that he is a criminal, not to say a habitual criminal—Rathnam Pillai, 39 Cr.L.J. 230 (231), 172 I.C. 866, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 35, 1937 M.W.N. 1065, 1937 M.Cr.C. 298, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 749, 46 M.L.W. 858.

"Or otherwise" —According to the general rule of interpretation the word "otherwise" must be read as meaning something ejusdem generis with the particular or particulars alleged above it, e.g., hearsay evidence. It is clear that the intention of the Legislature is that the Magistrate should use very large discretion as to the evidence which he may admit in the proceedings—Kallu Mal, 1904 A.W.N. 140; Emp. v Jaggan, 36 All 239 (242), 12 A.L.J. 399, 15 Cr.L.J. 212, 22 I.C. 996. The expression 'or otherwise' would include statements made by some of the co-accused amounting to a confession of the actual commission of the offence and incriminating the other accused—Sarju, 41 All. 231, 17 A.L.J. 147, 20 Cr.L.J. 206, 49 I.C. 654.

290. Sub-section (5)—Joint trial:—Upon general principles each individual member of the community is, in the absence of exceptional authority conferred by the law to the contrary effect, entitled, when required by the judiciary either to forfeit his liberty or to have that liberty qualified, to insist that his case shall be separately tried. In the eye of the law, each individual citizen is a separate integer or unit of the commonwealth, and his rights of liberty cannot, without express authority in the law, be dealt with jointly with those of a crowd of other persons with whom, far from having a community of interests, he may have incompatibility of interests—Abdul Kadir, 9 All 452 (457). The main principles applicable to a criminal trial regarding joinder of charges and the joint trial of accused persons may well be held to be applicable to inquiries under sec. 107, Cr. P. Code—Pran Krishna, 8 C.W.N. 180 (184). Under this section, the persons who had been associated together may be tried jointly. But there must be clear evidence to prove the association—Deodhari, 6 P.L.T. 810, 26 Cr.L.J. 738. Where several persons are proceeded against under sec. 110, clause (5) of sec. 117 does not make it a condition precedent to such joint inquiry that the suspects shall be shown to be associated together in the order itself. It is a permissive clause which permits a joint inquiry being held where such persons are, as a matter of fact, associated together—Tanwar, 19 S.L.R. 176, 26 Cr.L.J. 1398. Where it was clearly established that the accused (who were father and his three sons) were associated together and formed a gang, and the evidence against them was all the same, held that the case was one in which the accused could be rightly dealt with together and that any minute inquiry into the complicity of each of the accused individually was not necessary—Parasulla, 13 C.W.N. 244. Where the essence of the charge was that the accused formed one gang with one purpose, namely, that of harassing the complainant, and each act spoken to by the witnesses was an act prompted by that common object and directed towards accomplishing it, and the evidence of the common association of all the persons for that one purpose was particularly strong, held that they could be jointly tried—Taranagowd, 51 Mad. 515, 29 Cr.L.J. 77 (79). If a gang of disorderly persons join together committing acts of violence or criminal intimidation, proceedings against the whole gang in the same case are proper, and it suffices in such cases that some members of the gang committed various acts. It is not necessary that the evidence should establish that on every occasion the whole gang were together. It is sufficient if the evidence establishes that there is a gang of persons joining together to commit such acts as the security-section exists to prevent—Bakaram, 23 Cr.L.J. 741 (Nag). Where certain persons serving under a common master were found to have committed certain acts of extortion for the benefit of their master, held that although each of the acts alleged was not done by all of them together, yet they were so associated together as to justify a joint inquiry—Srikanta, 9 C.W.N. 898, 2 Cr.L.J. 554.

The fact that persons are members of an undivided family would not by itself render each member liable for the misconduct of any other member. The test to be applied is, whether there has been habitual association between the persons charged in respect of the misconduct alleged in the complaint—Kripasindhu, 1918 M.W.N. 751, 19 Cr.L.J. 905, 47 I.C. 277, 8 M.L.W. 461.

Even where the association of the several accused is established satisfactorily, the Magistrate has a discretion to try the accused jointly or separately—Hari Telang, 4 C.W.N. 531, 27 Cal. 781; Hossein, 6 Cal. 96; Jai Gorind, 15 O.C. 263. See also 19 S.L.R. 176 (181), A.I.R. 1926 Sind. 69. Although there is no legal prohibition in jointly trying a number of persons proceeded against under sec. 107, still it is highly unjust and unfair to proceed against them jointly unless it is apparent that they formed a gang. The case of each has to be considered separately and this is not likely to be effected if the trial is joint—Muhammed Ismail, 21 A.L.J. 841, 25 Cr.L.J. 952, 81 I.C. 600, A.I.R. 1924 All. 195.

Association, what is not?—In the absence of any evidence to prove that the persons constituted a gang, the mere fact that they belonged to one tribe and village with a bad name, is not sufficient evidence of association, and, therefore, they cannot be tried jointly in one and the same proceeding—Mutad, 1895 P.R. 1. Thus, the fact that the accused persons are close neighbours and had been previously implicated in good many cases together, does not lead to the inference that they were associated together in the particular offence under inquiry, and does not justify a joint trial of them all—Jogendra, 21 Cr.L.J. 700 (Cal.).

The word "association" cannot apply to such cases where the offence is purely personal to the offender. For instance, the question whether a person is a habitual thief or not is personal to himself and forms a separate matter by itself. So, where four persons were charged under sec 110 (a) as being thieves by habit, it was held that there was an error in law in trying them all together—K.E. v. Po Twe, 4 L.B.R. 46, 6 Cr.L.J. 284. So also, the fact that the accused are desperate and dangerous persons hazardous to the community, is a fact which pertains to each accused separately, and there is no such connection between them in regard to the character which may be deemed as habitual association. Consequently, proceedings should be taken separately against each of the accused persons—Hari Telang, 27 Cal. 781 (783), 4 C.W.N. 531; Kutti Gounden, 47 M.L.J. 689, 26 Cr.L.J. 673, 86 I.C. 49, 1925 M.W.N. 57, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 189; Angnoo Singh, 71 I.C. 865, 45 All. 109, 20 A.L.J. 881, A.I.R. 1923 All. 35, 24 Cr.L.J. 257; Jhari Lal, 65 I.C. 484, 23 Cr.L.J. 100, 3 P.L.T. 538, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 104. These cases were cases in which joint trial could not properly be held, in as much as the matter under enquiry was whether a person individually was or was not a habitual offender. There can, however, be no doubt that a joint trial could be held, and a joint trial was the proper procedure, in the case of persons acting in concert; persons who are associates and confederates, so as to call into operation the provisions of clause (5) of this section—Parbati, 35 Cr.L.J. 952, 61 Cal. 588, 149 I.C. 460, 1934 Cr.C. 690, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 482. In every case it has to be considered how far the evidence proves association and how far the various persons tried are prejudiced by a joint trial—Ganti Veera Reddi, 39 Cr.L.J. 816, 176 I.C. 815, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 615, 47 M.L.W. 640, 1938 M.W.N. 601.

Again, sub-section (5) does not authorise a Magistrate to deal with persons charged under separate sections in one and the same inquiry. Thus, a person called upon to give security under sec 109, and another person called upon to give security under sec 110 cannot be tried together in the same proceeding—Mehen, 8 O.C. 91, 2 Cr.L.J. 224.

And lastly, two contending parties opposed to one another and inclined to commit an offence involving a breach of the peace, cannot be said to have been associated together, and a joint trial of such contending parties is illegal. The case against the persons on the one side at least should be tried separately from that against the other side—Pran Krishna, 8 C.W.N. 180; Ganapathi, 31 Mad. 276, Kamal, 11 C.W.N. 472, 5 C.L.J. 231, 5 Cr.L.J. 197; Har Dutt, 14 A.L.J. 268, 17 Cr.L.J. 165; Kishore, 6 P.L.T. 768, 26 Cr.L.J. 1248, 88 I.C. 864, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 32. But in 9 All. 452 it has been held that such a joint trial is not ipso facto null and void, except where the accused has been prejudiced thereby.

An objection to the joint trial of accused persons ought to be taken at the beginning of the trial, or, at least, at an early stage thereof. This objection is not sufficient to set aside the order when it is taken at the time of argument after examination of witnesses on both sides—Anjad Ali, 25 Cr.L.J. 35, 75 I.C. 723, 5 P.L.T. 129, 2 P.L.R. 79 (Cr.), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 498.

The legality of a joint trial must depend on what is alleged for the prosecution, not on the facts subsequently found to be true. Otherwise in many cases there could be no determination whether the joint trial was legal or not till the result of the case was known, a proposition which has only to be stated to be rejected—Jogendra, 25 C.W.N. 334, 61 I.C. 233, 22 Cr.L.J. 377; Parbati, 35 Cr.L.J. 952 (951), 61 Cal. 588, 149 I.C. 460, 1934 Cr.C. 690, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 482. See also Sundar Lal, A.I.R. 1933 All. 676 (677), 1933 A.L.J. 777, 1933 Cr.C. 1188, 146 I.C. 900, 35 Cr.L.J. 183; Chheda Lal, 34 Cr.L.J. 793, 144 I.C. 577, 10 O.W.N. 233, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh. 195, 1933 Cr.C. 382, Ind. Rul. 1933 Oudh. 269. For contra see 65 I.C. 484, 3 P.L.T. 538, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 104.

The law requires that when proceedings are taken against more than one person, for a joint trial under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code proof should be given that they were associated together in the matter under enquiry—Nizamaddi, 23 C.W.N. 488, 20 Cr.L.J. 551, 51 I.C. 889. There can be no doubt that a joint trial could be held, and a joint trial was the proper procedure, in the case of persons acting in concert; persons who are associates and confederates, so as to call into operation the provision contained in sec. 117 (5), Cr. P. C. The illegality of a joint trial cannot be given effect to in the absence of proof of any prejudice. In cases where proceedings are taken joint against more persons than one under sec. 110, the Magistrate is required to come to separate finding as regards each of the persons charged individually—Parbati, 61 Cal. 588, 149 I.C. 460, 1934 Cr.C. 690, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 482, 35 Cr.L.J. 952, distinguishing Hari Tclang, 27 Cal. 781, 4 C.W.N. 531; Angnoo Singh, 71 I.C. 865, 45 All. 109, 20 A.L.J. 881, A.I.R. 1923 All. 35, 24 Cr.L.J. 257; In re Kutti Goundan, 86 I.C. 49, 47 M.L.J. 689, 1925 M.W.N. 57, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 189, 26 Cr.L.J. 673; and Jhari Lal, 65 I.C. 484, 23 Cr.L.J. 100, 3 P.L.T. 538, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 104. See also Kalu Mirza, 37 Cal. 91. Even in cases where one and the same proceeding taken by the Magistrate under secs. 107, 112, 117 and 118, Cr. P. Code improperly deals with more than one person, the matter must be considered upon the individual merits of that particular case, and it would, at least, amount to an irregularity, which may or may not be covered by the somewhat broadly worded provisions of sec. 537, Cr. P. Code according to the circumstances of each case—Abdul Kadir, 9 All. 452 (459). The Madras High Court has, however, held that such a joinder is not a mere irregularity but an illegality which will vitiate the proceedings—Ganapathi, 31 Mad. 276. This view was followed by the Nagpur Court in 5 N.L.R. 65.

In proceedings under sec. 110, Cr. P. C., every accused person proceeded against under that section is entitled to a separate notice and it is not fair to him to have the charges which are going to be made against him confused with the charges that are being made against somebody else—Emp v. Ram Lal, 116 I.C. 25, 51 All. 663, A.I.R. 1929 All. 73, 30 Cr.L.J. 562, 1929 A.L.J. 361. But where the applicants were alleged by the prosecution to be members of a gang of habitual thieves and robbers and were always associated jointly in the commission of thefts, burglaries and robberies, it was perfectly right in issuing one order against them under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., calling upon them to show cause why they should not be bound over to be of good behaviour under sec. 110, Cr. P. C.—Hubdar Ali, 34 Cr.L.J. 852, 144 I.C. 944, 10 O.W.N. 325, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh. 251, 1933 Cr.C. 557.

Section 117, clause (5) is not specifically limited to proceedings under sec. 107 or sec. 108. It is true that when a person is charged with being a habitual thief, it is nilhil ad rem that some other person with whom he may or may not have associated, is also a habitual thief; but when it is alleged that a person is in the habit of committing theft in association with other persons as members of a gang of thieves, the Magistrate is at liberty in his discretion to deal with the case of all such persons in the same enquiry. Of course, in deciding whether an order under sec. 117 (5) should be made or not, the Magistrate must consider whether, if the order is made, one or more of the persons concerned might be prejudiced in his defence—Rangoo Mean, 35 Cr.L.J. 1257, 151 I.C. 205, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 121, 1934 Cr.C. 713, 12 Rang. 169.

All persons who joined in the conspiracy to molest other people and to cause them injuries could, if their common aims and objects were once established, certainly be tried at the same trial under sec. 107, Cr. P. C.—Bajirao, 25 Cr.L.J. 132, 76 I.C. 228, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 166.

A joint inquiry is out of the question when one charge at least is that two persons are so desperate and dangerous as to render their being at large without security hazardous to the community. There certainly can be no such intimate connexion between two individuals in regard to their characters as to render them liable to a joint inquisition—Rathinam Pillai, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 35, 1937 M.W.N. 1065, 1937 M.Cr.C. 298, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 749, 46 M.L.W. 858, 39 Cr.L.J. 230, 172 I.C. 866.

See also Note 270 under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code.

Separate finding and evidence:—Where proceedings are taken jointly against more persons than one under this sub-section, the Magistrate must come to a separate finding as regards each of them individually—Ajodhya, 35 Cal. 929; Kalu Mirza, 14 C.W.N. 49, 11 Cr.L.J. 23, 5 I.C. 29, 37 Cal. 91; Murad, 1895 P.R. 1; Brijnandan, 37 All. 33, 16 Cr.L.J. 46; Khairo, 25 Cr.L.J. 1377, 83 I.C. 337, 19 S.L.R. 96; Ghousbux, A.I.R.

1937 Sind 26 (27), 167 I.C. 227, 30 S.L.R. 382, 38 Cr.L.J. 363, 9 R.S. 173; and the judgment must show that the Magistrate has considered the case of each individual accused—Kalu Mirza, supra. The case of each person is to be considered on its own merits, and it should not be allowed to be mixed up or prejudiced by that of the others—Nathu, 6 All 214; Md. Ismail, 21 A.L.J. 841, 25 Cr.L.J. 952, 81 I.C. 600, A.L.R. 1924 All. 195; Dhanoo, 34 C.W.N. 144, 31 Cr.L.J. 944, 125 I.C. 855, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 294. Upon general principles every accused person is entitled to insist that his case shall be tried separately from the case of other persons similarly circumstanced—Abdul Kadir, 9 All. 452; Bahadur Shah, 1910 P.R. 4, 10 Cr.L.J. 591.

An order passed under sec. 118 or sec. 123 (3), Cr. P. Code must be self-contained—Ghousbux, supra.

The Magistrate must insist upon definite evidence being given against each person charged—Jai Govind, 15 O.C. 263, 13 Cr.L.J. 760. What is evidence against one cannot be treated as evidence against all others, without discriminating between the cases of the various persons implicated—Abdul Kadir, 9 All. 452; Angnu Singh, 45 All. 109 (111). Thus, where the evidence recorded by the Magistrate has bearing only on 11 out of 26 persons called upon to show cause, his order binding down all the 26 persons is not valid; it is valid only as regards those against whom the evidence is relevant—Kassim Biswas, 10 C.L.R. 335.

See also Note 273.

118. (1) If, upon such inquiry, it is proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, with or without sureties, the Magistrate shall make an order accordingly:

Provided—

first, that no person shall be ordered to give security of a nature different from, or of an amount larger than, or for a period longer than, that specified in the order made under section 112;

secondly, that the amount of every bond shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and shall not be excessive;

thirdly, that, when the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made is a minor, the bond shall be executed only by his sureties.

291. "If it is proved, etc."—Evidence:—These words show that an order under this section cannot be made without inquiry and proof—Gaiba, Ratanlal 585 (586). The Magistrate must give his reason for finding it proved that security is necessary—In re Raja, 10 Bom. 174 (175).

The mere fact that the accused person says that he is willing to give security to keep the peace is not the kind of proof required by this section as condition precedent to the taking of security—Prem Singh, 1917 P.R. 27, 18 Cr.L.J. 847; Sheodan, 1915 P.R. 21. See Note 236 under sec. 107. When the accused denied the allegations but expressed his willingness to execute a bond, whereupon he was ordered to execute a bond, the order was held to be illegal, in as much as the accused denied every allegation on the basis of which he was considered liable to furnish security, and no evidence was taken to prove those allegations—Rai Singh, 20 Cr.L.J. 105; Kunra, 25 A.L.J. 519, 30 Cr.L.J. 122 (124).

292. Order for security:—The object of this section is the prevention and not the punishment of offences, and consequently a Magistrate when passing an order in terms of this section, ought not to have any direct intention of inflicting punishment—Kandhaia, 7 All. 67 (72). Therefore, a Magistrate ought not to impose arbitrary conditions not essential for the object in view, which it would be impossible for the accused to fulfil, still less impossible conditions. The order must not be tantamount to saying that the prisoner shall not furnish any security at all but must go to jail—Narain Soobadhee, 22 W.R. 37.

According to the first proviso to this section, the final order must not be at variance with the preliminary order. Thus, the Magistrate cannot vary the conditional order passed under sec. 112 by imposing further conditions in the final order—Ramanand, 11 O.C. 267, 8 Cr.L.J. 344; Jangi Singh, 1906 A.W.N. 276, 4 Cr.L.J. 405. So also, it is illegal to require a bond for good behaviour, when the notice was to show cause with respect to keeping the peace—Driver, 25 Cal. 798. Similarly, the Magistrate is not competent to demand security with reference to sec. 110, when the preliminary order was with reference to sec. 109—Nga He, U.B.R. (1897—1901) 24 (In such a case, the proper course is to institute fresh proceedings—Ibid.). So again, the Magistrate is not justified in demanding security for a larger amount than what was communicated to the accused in the preliminary order—Kishen, 1907 P.W.R. 11, 5 Cr.L.J. 219; Isree Pershad, 18 W.R. 61; Debi, 1885 A.W.N. 30; Sultan, 26 Cr.L.J. 767, 86 I.C. 351, 19 S.L.R. 332; nor is he justified in demanding sureties when the summons made no mention of sureties at all—Isree Pershad, 18 W.R. 61. In cases where heavier security is deemed necessary, the Magistrate ought to issue fresh summons setting forth the intended amount—Isree Pershad, 18 W.R. 61; Md. Ismail, 1881 A.W.N. 152. See Note 280 under the heading "Amendment of the order."

The Magistrate cannot in the final order direct the accused to give security for a longer period than what was mentioned in the notice under section 112—Ramchandra, 26 Mad. 471 (472).

A person against whom an order is passed under this section must be given sufficient time to furnish security. Where the Magistrate ordered the accused to furnish security with four sureties of Rs 3,000 each on the very day, and imprisoned the accused on his failure to do so, held that the order was illegal and must be set aside—Maung Tun, 4 Bur.L.J. 172, 27 Cr.L.J. 318.

No condition and limitations can be imposed upon persons ordered to give security under this section—Jhoja Singh, 24 Cal. 155.

Section 109, Cr. P. C., merely requires a Magistrate to issue a notice and does not empower him to pass the final order. This is done under sec. 118, which in its turn is dependent upon the order passed under sec. 112. All that the final order can contain is a direction to furnish security to be of good behaviour for a period which cannot, in any case, exceed one year, and which must not be beyond that specified in the order under sec. 112. Any order which specifies a period of imprisonment in default is to that extent illegal. The penalty for a failure to furnish security is given in sec. 123 (1), Cr. P. C.—Rangi, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 265, 1936 Cr.C. 1138.

The order under this section, though restricted in its contents by the order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., is the operative order, and time runs from the order passed under this section, and not from the order passed under sec. 112—Ghousbux, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 26 (28), 167 I.C. 227, 38 Cr.L.J. 363, 9 R.S. 173.

Fresh security upon expiry of a previous and existing security:—A security to keep the peace once given is sufficient for that purpose so long as it is in force in respect of every act of the person bound over breaking any of the conditions. A second order to give further security during the continuance of the first one is not contemplated by law; but if upon the expiry of the first order the dispute still exists, a further security may be demanded on fresh proceedings properly taken—Mahomed Abdul Bari, 1 C.W.N. 121.

Supplementary order for larger security:—A Magistrate passed a final order directing certain persons to furnish security in certain amounts. A month later he passed another order directing one of the accused to furnish security in a much bigger sum and stating that he had overlooked that this accused had been called upon in the preliminary order to furnish a larger security. It was held that the second order was ultra vires. After the Magistrate had finished his case, it was beyond his power to alter the order—Rajkumar, 17 A L J. 335, 20 Cr L J. 486, 51 I C. 470

293. Amount of security:—The provisions of Chapter VIII are not intended to punish but to prevent crime and it is not permissible to limit the security or the amount of security to such descriptions that it is perfectly impossible for the accused to furnish them, thus rendering it certain that they will be committed to jail—Allahdad v Emp, 26 Cr L J 179 (180), 83 I C. 883, 17 S L R 160, A I R. 1924 Sind 120.

Under proviso (2), in fixing the amount of security, the Magistrate should have due regard to the circumstances of the case, and the security should not be disproportionate to the ability of the accused to furnish it, with reference to his means and station in life—Rama, 16 Bom 372; Nathu, 6 All 214; Juggut, 2 Cal 110 (112); Ali, 1900 P R 17, Jawaya, 1890 P R 30; Firal, 5 S L R 10, 12 Cr L J 110, 9 I C. 651. The Magistrate is the best judge to decide what would be the proper amount of security, which must vary with the danger to be apprehended and the means of the parties. But the Magistrate cannot make an order that is altogether unreasonable—Juggut Chander, 2 Cal 110 (111). The amount should be such as to give the accused a fair chance of complying with the conditions of the security, and the Magistrate should not fix an amount for which there is a probability of the accused being unable to find security—Ali, 1900 P R 17, Wasia, 1901 P R 28; Barkat, 1900 P R 24; Anon, 2 Weir 52, 4 M H C R App 46; Dedar, 2 Cal 384 (385); Satgur, A I R 1933 All 674, 1933 A L J 927, 1933 Cr C 1186, 145 I C 875, 35 Cr L J 183; Satindra, 32 Cr L J 593 (598), 130 I C 880, A I R 1931 Cal 18, 52 C L J 405, 1931 Cr C 50, Ind Rul 1931 Cal 400. When the accused is unable to give security for the amount required and remains in jail, it is an index that the Magistrate has not exercised a proper discretion in fixing the amount—Raza Ali, 23 All 80. See Note 243A

Movable property as security —As to the nature of the security the provisions of Cr P C., read with Schedule V, Form XI, show that what in the case of a bond for good behaviour must be given is personal security and the same is by inference the case in respect of a bond to keep the peace. If a surety offers a house or cattle, then this is not the security required because his risk is confined to the house or cattle Mohammad Baksh, 25 Cr L J 796, 81 I C 316, 26 O C 284, A I R 1924 Oudh 80

House property as security —The accused was ordered under this section to furnish a bond for Rs. 200 and a respectable surety. Such a surety came forward and offered security in the shape of house property worth Rs 500. The Magistrate rejected the surety. It was held that the surety being respectable and the house being worth Rs 500 should have been accepted, though it was true that under sec. 514 only movable property could be attached and sold during the surety's lifetime for the recovery of the penalty—Nanha, 16 A L J 503, 19 Cr L J 711; 46 I C. 295. The Magistrate should follow the words of sec. 117, Cr. P C., and not introduce the restrictive words "in moveable property." When sureties are produced, the Magistrate should consider whether, having regard to all the circumstances, they are fit persons to be accepted or not. When they have been accepted, the bond executed by them should be in the form given in the schedule. If the Magistrate has any apprehension that the sureties may part with their properties and be unable to fulfil, he may by way of precaution accept a hypothecation bond from them as a condition precedent to their being accepted as reliable sureties—Harihar, 33 Cr.L.J. 229, 136 I.C. 65, 1932 A.L.J. 157, 1932 Cr.C. 147, A.I.R. 1932 All. 122, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 113.

293A. Minor:—In the case of a minor the bond shall be executed only by his sureties. See proviso 3. The reason for this proviso is no doubt the incapacity of the minor to contract—Mipyn, 4 L.B.R. 12, 6 Cr.L.J. 123.

294. Revision by High Court:—The question whether it is necessary in the interest of keeping the peace to take security from a person, is essentially a question which primarily concerns the Magistrate and the local police. If the District Magistrate considers it unnecessary to take action, the Sessions Judge or High Court will not ordinarily interfere—Mad Yusuf v. Abdul, 53 All. 148, 32 Cr.L.J. 570 (571). The power to demand security from suspected persons is a power that is almost as much of an executive as of judicial nature; and the jurisdiction with which the Magistrate is invested with regard to suspected persons is a very large one. Therefore, the High Court will interfere only on the very clearest and strongest grounds which demonstrate that there has been in the particular case a gross miscarriage of justice—Balmukund, 23 P.R. 1889.

The High Court sitting in revision would not ordinarily constitute itself as a Court on facts—Ghousbux, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 26, 167 I.C. 227, 30 S.L.R. 382, 38 Cr.L.J. 363. But the High Court will interfere in revision where the order is based on no evidence on the record—Sher Singh v. Hari Singh, 1912 P.L.R. 195, 13 Cr.L.J. 720; Sukhdeo, 14 A.L.J. 215, 17 Cr.L.J. 157; or where the materials on which the order was passed are clearly insufficient to support the order—Nafar Chandra, 38 Cr.L.J. 198, 28 C.W.N. 23, 25 Cr.L.J. 189, 76 I.C. 429, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 114; or where there is nothing on the record to show that an inquiry as required by sec. 117 was held—Mul Chand, 37 All. 30, 12 A.L.J. 1262; Sukhdeo, 14 A.L.J. 215. It will also interfere where the judgment of the District Judge deciding an appeal under section 110 is a very short one and does not show that evidence was all examined and carefully weighed—Sarwan, 14 A.L.J. 279, 17 Cr.L.J. 167; or where the Magistrate disbelieved the evidence produced by the accused without any substantial reason—Miharban, 16 Cr.L.J. 805, 13 A.L.J. 1046; Hakim Singh, 13 A.L.J. 1055, 16 Cr.L.J. 810; or where the Magistrate has not given due effect to the evidence for the defence—Gayani, 17 Cr.L.J. 461 (All.); or where the Lower Appellate Court in hearing the appeal has not taken the trouble to rehear the case—Ibid.

The High Court has the power to interfere in revision where the exercise of discretion being required by law, the lower Court exercised no discretion at all or exercised its discretion in a wholly unreasonable and improper manner, e.g., where the Magistrate ordered security to be furnished in an unreasonably large sum out of all proportion to the means of the accused—In re Juggut, 2 Cal. 110 (111). The High Court may interfere in revision if there is a material error in any judicial proceeding, i.e., an error resulting in an unjust order for security—Ibid (at p. 113). The High Court is always very unwilling to interfere in the case of orders passed under the preventing sections of the Cr. P. Code. These orders are largely of an administrative nature; they are concerned with the maintenance of the public peace and the prevention of the breaches of the public peace for the maintenance of which the District Magistrate is responsible, and the needs of which he, as the responsible officer on the spot, is presumably in the best position to know; but these orders, though largely of an administrative nature, have a legal basis, and if it is clear that an order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., has no legal basis, and that the District Magistrate has proceeded upon a wrong legal principle applying equally to the wrong-doers as well as to the wronged the wide powers conferred upon him by the law for the restraint of the wrong-doers and for the protection of the wronged, the High Court is bound to interfere—Jasoda Lekhray v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Sind 167 (168).

It must be rarely, if ever, that a High Court will feel called upon to reverse an order of a Magistrate refusing to demand security under any of those sections—

Gyan Singh, A.I.R. 1934 All. 24, 1933 A.L.J. 1201; Ram Lal v Bankateshar, 25 Cr.L.J. 1149, 81 IC 973, 11 O.L.J. 732, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 138, 1 O.W.N. 359, 28 O.C. 44. See also Notes 250B, 276 and 295.

Appeal:—See sec. 406 and Notes under it.

119. If, on an inquiry under section 117, it is not proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, the Magistrate shall make an entry on the record to that effect, and if such person is in custody only for the purposes of the inquiry, shall release him, or, if such person is not in custody, shall discharge him.

295. Absence of the Complainant:—In absence of the complainant or any evidence on his behalf or on behalf of the opposite party in a case under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., the Magistrate must proceed to inquire into the truth of the information and, no evidence having been produced before him, he must hold under this section that it is not proved that the person in respect of whom enquiry is made should execute a bond. Sec. 247, Cr. P. C., is not applicable to a case like this—Asrafah v Nasu, 31 C.W.N. 388

295A. Further inquiry:—The word 'discharge' means merely a permission to depart. It does not mean the discharge of an 'accused' person as contemplated by sec. 437 (now sec. 436) so as to enable further proceedings being instituted under that section against the person discharged under this section—Velu v Chidamabar, 33 Mad 85. Section 437 (now sec. 436) does not enable a Court to direct further inquiry in a case of discharge of a person against whom security proceedings were instituted under Chapter VIII, because such a person is not an 'accused' within the meaning of that section—Imam Mandal, 27 Cal 662; Dayanth, 33 Cal 8; Muhammad Khan, 1905 P.R. 42; Roshan Singh, 46 All 235, 22 A.L.J. 129; Narain v Durga, 1911 P.R. 6, 12 Cr.L.J. 232; Ismail v Nollan, 1914 U.B.R. 1st Qr 3, 13 Cr.L.J. 531. (But the contrary view has been taken in Fyazuddin, 24 All 148; Kharga, 36 All 147; Manna, 1903 P.R. 24; Mona Puna, 16 Bom 661; Baba Yashwanta, 35 Bom 401; and Mutsaddi Lal, 21 All 107, where it is held that the person proceeded against under this chapter may be said to be an 'accused' person and further inquiry may therefore be directed)

Section 436 as now amended in 1923 clearly applies only to the case of a person accused of an 'offence'; further inquiry cannot therefore be directed against a person discharged under sec. 119, because the person proceeded against under this chapter is not accused of an offence—Phani v Kunja, 25 Cr.L.J. 679, 81 IC 167, A.I.R. 1926 Cal 262; Maung Than, 2 Rang 30. The only section under which a Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate may take action in such a case is under sec. 438, Cr. P. C., by making a report to the High Court; Mohammad Yusuf v Abdul Majid, 32 Cr.L.J. 570, 130 IC 630, A.I.R. 1931 All 53, 53 All 148, 1930 A.L.J. 1485, 1931 Cr.C. 125. The District Magistrate should not append to his letter of reference what appears to be the opinion of the Police Prosecutor describing the order of the trial Magistrate as perverse. If he is of the opinion that the letter of the Police Prosecutor contains material of assistance to the Court he should embody that material in his own letter. He should not permit himself to be associated with criticism by a police officer of an order of the Magistrate—Ali Muhammad, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 243, 1936 Cr.C. 1099, 165 IC. 950, 38 Cr.L.J. 117. The proceedings under this chapter should be taken with care and caution only when the public interest compels, and where there is no reason to suppose that the Magistrate is not a careful and responsible Magistrate, who does not know his charge and where he has seen the witnesses and has heard what they have to say, and he has come to the conclusion that the case against the suspected persons is unworthy of credit, and that the evidence should not be believed, the High Court will not interfere—Ali Muhammad, supra

The withdrawal of the first charge-sheet under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., is no bar to a second proceeding under the same section—In re Muthia Moopan, 36 Mad. 315. When a person proceeded against under sec. 110, Cr. P. C., was tried and released by the Magistrate, he is competent to institute further proceedings under the law on fresh information received—Imam Mondal, 27 Cal 662. The rulings cited above within the brackets are no longer good law. See Note 1180 under sec. 436. See also Notes 250B and 294 in this connection.

295B. Discharge:—Under the provisions of this section, after an enquiry has been made whether an order binding a person over to keep the peace should be passed, and it has been found that no such order is necessary, the proper course is to discharge the person concerned. The use of the term "acquittal" is quite inappropriate to a proceeding of this nature—Bhagat Raj v. Mt. Gurai Dulaiya, AIR. 1938 All 49 (50), 172 I.C. 643, 1937 A.W.R. 1113, 1937 A.L.J. 1281.

C.—Proceedings in all Cases subsequent to Order to furnish Security.

120. (1) If any person, in respect of whom an order requiring security is made under section 106 or section 118, is, at the time such order is made, sentenced to, or undergoing a sentence of, imprisonment, the period for which such security is required shall commence on the expiration of such sentence.

(2) In other cases such period shall commence on the date of such order, unless the Magistrate, for sufficient reason fixes a later date.

296. "On the expiration of the sentence":—Under this section, a convict undergoing a sentence of imprisonment cannot be obliged to give security, until the imprisonment ends; nor can an order for imprisonment (under sec. 123) in default be made till then—Appa, Ratanlal 765; Rangya, 4 Bom.L.R. 934; Kya Wa, 5 L.B.R. 34, 10 Cr.L.J. 69, 2 I.C. 531; Jhabdey, 22 Cr.L.J. 95 (All.). If, the meantime, he is convicted of another offence, and sentenced to a fresh term of imprisonment, the order for security should not be passed until after the expiry of both imprisonments. If, before such expiry, the prisoner gives the required security, the Magistrate cannot pass an order of imprisonment under sec. 123—Pandu, Ratanlal 774. Where a person was sentenced on 8th August, 1927 to 12 months' rigorous imprisonment in default of giving security on proceedings initiated under sec. 109, Cr. P. C., and, while undergoing that sentence, was sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment under s. 110, Cr. P. C., on 21st December, 1927, he should have been required to give security from 8th August 1928 in view of the provisions of sec. 120, Cr. P. C.—Fateh, AIR. 1929 Sind 166, 117 I.C. 777, 30 Cr.L.J. 819, 23 S.L.R. 438, 1929 Cr.C. 335.

The accused was convicted under sec. 147, I. P. C., but was released on bail pending an appeal against the conviction. While he was on bail, proceedings were taken against him under sec. 110 of this Code and he was ordered to furnish security, or in default, to undergo imprisonment. His appeal was afterwards dismissed and the Magistrate ordered that as he was undergoing imprisonment in default of furnishing security, the sentence under sec. 147, I. P. C., would commence after the expiry of the sentence under sec. 110, Cr. P. C. Held that the order was illegal, being in contravention of sub-section (1) of this section—Jhabdey, 22 Cr.L.J. 95 (All.), 59 I.C. 383.

Section 120 (1), Cr P. C., refers to orders passed under sec. 106 or sec. 118, Cr. P. C., and is not affected in its operation by the orders of the Sessions Judge passed under sec. 123 (3), Cr. P. C.—Lashkaro, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 203, 38 Cr.L.J. 961, 31 S.L.R. 409, 170 I.C. 676, 10 R.S. 71.

When a Magistrate passes an order under sec. 118, Cr. P. C., he should make it clear that by reason of the provisions of sec. 120 (1), Cr. P. C., the period for which security is required should commence not from the date of the order under sec. 118, but from the date of the expiration of the sentence of imprisonment the suspected person is undergoing. When sec. 123 (1), Cr. P. C., is read through carefully it would appear that it was the purpose of the Legislature that if a suspected person when ordered to give security was actually in prison he should remain in prison on the expiration of his sentence if he has not given security, until he gives security or until the period for which he was required to give security has expired. Therefore, it is open to a suspected person, while he is undergoing a sentence, to give security to the Court. Under cl. (4) of sec. 123, Cr P C., security may be tendered to the officer in charge of the jail, but it would not appear from the provisions of the section that it was contemplated that when a suspected person was in prison when the order under sec. 118, Cr P C., against him was passed, he should be released from prison on the expiration of the sentence in order that he might find his sureties. He can, if it is possible for him to do so, furnish security while he is in prison undergoing his sentence of imprisonment. and he can, if he cannot furnish security before the expiration of his sentence, furnish security on the expiration of that sentence or at any time during the period for which he is committed to prison, in default, and his sureties will be accepted or rejected according to the provisions of sec. 122, Cr P. C.—Hussein Allahdino, A I R 1937 Sind 204, 31 S L R 412, 171 I C. 61, 38 Cr.L.J 1014, 10 R S. 86.

Sub-section (2):—“Date of such order”.—It means the date of the final order under sec. 118, and not the date of the preliminary order under sec. 112—Taranagowd, 51 Mad 515, 29 Cr L J 77 (78); Ghousbux, A I R 1937 Sind 26 (28), 167 I C 227, 30 S L R. 382, 38 Cr L J 363

Fixing later date.—The object of this sub-section is to allow a Magistrate to grant time to the accused instead of at once proceeding to order imprisonment as if in default. This is shown by sec. 123 which provides that the security may be given on or before the date on which the period for such security commences—Md Abdul Bari, 4 C.W.N 121. The Magistrate has power under this section to postpone the date from which the security should take effect, i.e., to give the accused time within which to furnish it, and if the accused absconds during the extended time, the sureties who were responsible for the accused's attendance would be made liable—Mustaqimuddin, 24 A.L.J. 327, 27 Cr L J 377 (378), 92 I C 889, A I R. 1926 All 297.

Where an order is passed on the accused under sec. 118, and then on the request of the accused the Magistrate grants him 12 days' time to furnish the required security, and during this 12 days' time he is convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for an offence committed prior to the date of the order under sec. 118, it is not competent to the Magistrate to fix the date of the expiry of such sentence as the date for computing the period from which such security is to be furnished. The case falls neither under clause (1) nor under clause (2) of this section, and the Magistrate is bound to proceed at once under sec. 123 and order imprisonment of the accused—Ahmed, 20 S L R 163, 27 Cr L J 865, 96 I C 113, A I R 1926 Sind 273 (F.B.). An order for security was made under sec. 118 on October 20, but upon the failure of the accused to give security, he was ordered to be imprisoned for one year under sec. 123, on October 29. But between October 20 and October 29, he was convicted of a substantive offence and sentenced to 7 years' rigorous imprisonment. Held that under sec. 120 (2) the period of the order under sec. 118 commenced on October 20, and the Magistrate should not have made any order under sec. 123 at all. However, the two sentences were concurrent—Aba Farid, 29 Bom L.R. 700, 28 Cr.L.J. 652, 103 I C 198.

The provisions of the two clauses of this section may be thus explained. If on the date of the order passed under sec 118 the suspect is undergoing imprisonment for a substantive offence, the provisions of clause (1) come into operation, and the period of security does not commence till the suspect has served out his substantive sentence of imprisonment. The proper procedure under the circumstances would be that the Magistrate should not pass the order for detention of the suspect under sec. 123 at once but postpone further proceedings under that section, till the suspect has served out the period of sentence for the substantive offence. If on the date of the order under sec 118, the suspect is not undergoing imprisonment for a substantive offence, his case does not fall within the purview of clause (1) of sec. 120. If, on that date, the suspect asks for time to furnish the required security, it is open to the Magistrate to refuse to grant time and to take immediate action under sec. 123. If, however, he grants time and before the expiry of the time the suspect is convicted of a substantive offence, and sentenced to imprisonment, the Magistrate should proceed at once to pass an order under sec. 123, which provides for immediate detention in prison of the suspect till he furnishes the required security. This detention should ipso facto run concurrently with the substantive sentence which the accused is undergoing—Saidu, 22 S.L.R. 20, 28 Cr.L.J. 431, 101 I.C. 463. The proper procedure under the circumstances would be that indicated in—Emp. v. Nana Ramji, 97 I.C. 747, 28 Bom.L.R. 1038, 27 Cr.L.J. 1163, A.I.R. 1926 Bom 545, i.e., the Magistrate should not pass the order for detention of the suspect under sec 123 at once but postpone further proceedings till the suspect has served out the period of sentence for the substantive offence.

The period during which a person was released on bail by the appellate Court must be excluded from the period of one year for which he was required to undergo imprisonment failing the giving of security—Darsu, A.I.R. 1934 All 845, 36 Cr.L.J. 177, 152 I.C. 785, 1934 Cr.C. 1031, 4 A.W.R. 76; Emp. v. Masuria, 37 Cr.L.J. 155, 159 I.C. 804, 1935 A.L.R. 1200, 8 R.A. 518, 1935 A.L.J. 1337, A.I.R. 1936 All. 107, 1936 Cr.C. 94, 58 All 589. But see Allahdad v. Emp., A.I.R. 1924 Sind 120, 83 I.C. 883, 26 Cr.L.J. 179, 17 S.L.R. 160; Kadu, 37 Cr.L.J. 1003, 164 I.C. 576, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 125, 29 S.L.R. 353, 1936 Cr.C. 802, 9 R.S. 49 and Ghousbux, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 26 (28), 167 I.C. 227, 30 S.L.R. 382, 38 Cr.L.J. 363, where it has been laid down that the order under sec. 118, Cr. P. Code will not be suspended during the time spent on bail and a fortiori it will not be suspended during the time spent in prison if the suspect be not on bail.

On principles similar to those laid down in the above mentioned Allahabad cases it should be held that where the persons, against whom the order to give security was passed, for their own advantage made an application that the order for bonds and sureties be stayed until the decision of the appeal, the time from which the period ran was the date of the order of the Appellate Court—Abdul Sattar v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 195, 1938 O.W.N. 676, 1938 O.L.R. 355, 1938 O.A. 566, 11 R.O. 7, 1938 A.Cr.C. 55, 176 I.C. 948, 39 Cr.L.J. 831.

Fresh security:—A second order requiring further security from the same person to commence on the expiration of the term of security already given, passed during the continuance of the first one, is not a proper order. If at the end of the period the act involving a breach of the peace is still continued, a further security can be demanded on fresh proceedings being properly taken— Md Abdul Bari, 4 C.W.N. 121.

121. The bond to be executed by any such person shall bind him to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, as the case may be, and in the latter case the commission or attempt to commit, or the abetment of, any offence punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond.

Contents of bond.

297. Breach of bond for keeping peace:—A bond for keeping the peace will not be forfeited by the commission of any offence. It can be forfeited only by the commission of offences likely in their consequences to cause a breach of the peace. Thus, a conviction for theft (Taren Chunder, 18 WR 63), or for wrongful confinement or extortion (Zearuddin, 19 W.R. 48) or for abduction (Broune v. Chandra, 1906 P.R. 6, 4 Cr L.J. 78) or for a secret attempt to poison a person (Ahmad Gul, 1914 PR 22, 15 Cr L.J. 605) will not entail a forfeiture of the bond.

In Ananthachari v. Ananthachari, 2 Mad. 169, 2 Weir 663, however, it has been held that it is not necessary that some actually punishable offence should be committed. All that is necessary to show, is that some act was done which was likely in its consequence to provoke a breach of the peace.

A bond to keep the peace may be forfeited on the commission of any act involving a breach of the peace, no matter whether the act is committed against the person at whose charge the original order was framed or against any other person—Jaha Box, 15 W.R. 14. It is also immaterial whether the accused committed the act with his own hands or instigated other persons to do it. In either case the bond is forfeited—Ananthachari, 2 Mad 169; Kally, 11 WR 52.

If some persons (Hindus) are bound down under sec 107 owing to an apprehension of a breach of the peace on account of their interference with the slaughter of cows by the Mahomedans at a particular place, such persons are not debarred from instituting a civil suit to prevent the Mahomedans from slaughtering cows at that place, and the institution of the suit will not amount to a breach of the bond which they were required to furnish. The filing of the civil suit may be extremely provocative to the Mahomedans and may lead to further quarrel and breach of the peace, but it cannot by any stretch of language be called a wrongful act which would entail forfeiture of the bond. The bringing of the civil suit is perfectly legal action, and the Hindus were acting within their rights in doing so—Sital, 1 Lah 310, 21 Cr L.J. 702, 57 I.C. 942.

298. Breach of bond for good behaviour:—A bond for good behaviour will be forfeited by the commission of any offence. Thus, a conviction for causing grievous hurt (Sher Sing, 1915 PR 10, 29 IC 821, AIR 1914 Lah 563, 16 Cr L.J. 549), or a conviction for causing simple hurt (Abdul Aziz, 4 Lah 462), or a conviction under sec 452, I.P.C. (Indar Singh, 31 Cr L.J. 130, 120 IC 605, AIR 1930 Lah. 227, 1930 CrC 210), or a conviction under the Excise and Opium Acts (Ghulam Hussain, 37 Cr L.J. 342, 160 IC 631, AIR 1936 Pesh 16), or a conviction under sec. 13 of the Gambling Act, III of 1867 (Abdul Hai, 1906 A.W.N. 13) would amount to a breach of the bond.

But an actual commission or attempt to commit or abetment of an offence is necessary for the forfeiture of the bond. Where a person bound down under sec 109 was found to be in possession of costly clothes, for which he could not account, it was held that the bond should not be forfeited, since there was no proof that he had actually stolen those clothes—In re Venkataratnam, 2 Weir 57. The mere fact that a person bound down under sec 109 was again found in possession of himself under suspicious circumstances in a lonely place without any account of livelihood and unable to give a satisfactory account of himself, would not justify forfeiture of the bond, because his act did not amount to commission of an offence to commit or abetment of an offence—Bahadur, 1932 A.L.J. 112, 56 IC 222, 31 P. 1932 All 58, 33 Cr L.J. 281 (282). The bond is forfeited by the commission of any offence no matter wherever the offence may be committed. If the offence is committed in one district and the accused is convicted of committing it in another district, the bond is forfeited, and the Magistrate of the former district may proceed against the accused under this section—Sham Sundar, 2 BLR AC 111.

The words 'commission of an offence' do not necessarily mean the commission of an offence. Although it is true that a conviction is considered as a commission of an offence.

The provisions of the two clauses of this section may be thus explained. If on the date of the order passed under sec. 118 the suspect is undergoing imprisonment for a substantive offence, the provisions of clause (1) come into operation, and the period of security does not commence till the suspect has served out his substantive sentence of imprisonment. The proper procedure under the circumstances would be that the Magistrate should not pass the order for detention of the suspect under sec. 123 at once but postpone further proceedings under that section, till the suspect has served out the period of sentence for the substantive offence. If on the date of the order under sec. 118, the suspect is not undergoing imprisonment for a substantive offence, his case does not fall within the purview of clause (1) of sec. 120. If, on that date, the suspect asks for time to furnish the required security, it is open to the Magistrate to refuse to grant time and to take immediate action under sec. 123. If, however, he grants time and before the expiry of the time the suspect is convicted of a substantive offence, and sentenced to imprisonment, the Magistrate should proceed at once to pass an order under sec. 123, which provides for immediate detention in prison of the suspect till he furnishes the required security. This detention should ipso facto run concurrently with the substantive sentence which the accused is undergoing—Saidu, 22 S.L.R. 20, 28 Cr.L.J. 431, 101 I.C. 463. The proper procedure under the circumstances would be that indicated in—Emp. v. Nana Ramji, 97 I.C. 747, 28 Bom.L.R. 1038, 27 Cr.L.J. 1163, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 545, ie, the Magistrate should not pass the order for detention of the suspect under sec. 123 at once but postpone further proceedings till the suspect has served out the period of sentence for the substantive offence.

The period during which a person was released on bail by the appellate Court must be excluded from the period of one year for which he was required to undergo imprisonment failing the giving of security—Darsu, A.I.R. 1934 All. 845, 36 Cr.L.J. 177, 152 I.C. 785, 1934 Cr.C. 1031, 4 A.W.R. 76; Emp. v. Masuria, 37 Cr.L.J. 155, 159 I.C. 804, 1935 A.L.R. 1200, 8 R.A. 518, 1935 A.L.J. 1337, A.I.R. 1936 All. 107, 1936 Cr.C. 94, 58 All. 589. But see Allahdad v. Emp., A.I.R. 1924 Sind 120, 83 I.C. 883, 26 Cr.L.J. 179, 17 S.L.R. 160; Kadu, 37 Cr.L.J. 1003, 164 I.C. 576, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 125, 29 S.L.R. 353, 1936 Cr.C. 802, 9 R.S. 49 and Ghousbux, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 26 (28), 167 I.C. 227, 30 S.L.R. 382, 38 Cr.L.J. 363, where it has been laid down that the order under sec. 118, Cr. P. Code will not be suspended during the time spent on bail and a fortiori it will not be suspended during the time spent in prison if the suspect be not on bail.

On principles similar to those laid down in the above mentioned Allahabad cases it should be held that where the persons, against whom the order to give security was passed, for their own advantage made an application that the order for bonds and sureties be stayed until the decision of the appeal, the time from which the period ran was the date of the order of the Appellate Court—*Abdul Sattar v. Fresh security:—A second order requiring further security from the same person to commence on the expiration of the term of security already given, passed during the continuance of the first one, is not a proper order. If at the end of the period the act involving a breach of the peace is still continued, a further security can be demanded on fresh proceedings being properly taken—Id. Abdul Bari, 4 C.W.N. 121.

The bond to be executed by any such person shall bind him to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, as the case may be, and in the latter case the commission or attempt to commit, or the abetment of, any offence punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond, 297. Breach of bond for keeping peace:—A bond for keeping the peace will not be forfeited by the commission of any offence. It can be forfeited only by the commission of offences likely in their consequences to cause a breach of the peace. Thus, a conviction for theft (Taren Chunder, 18 W.R. 63), or for wrongful confinement or extortion (Zcaruddin, 19 W.R. 48) or for abduction (Browne v Chandra, 1906 P.R. 6, 4 Cr.L.J. 78) or for a secret attempt to poison a person (Ahmad Gul, 1914 P.R. 22, 15 Cr.L.J. 605) will not entail a forfeiture of the bond.

In Ananthachari v Ananthachari, 2 Mad. 169, 2 Weir 663, however, it has been held that it is not necessary that some actually punishable offence should be committed. All that is necessary to show, is that some act was done which was likely in its consequence to provoke a breach of the peace.

298. Breach of bond for good behaviour:—A bond for good behaviour will be forfeited by the commission of any offence. Thus, a conviction for causing grievous hurt (Sher Sing, 1915 P.R. 10, 29 I.C. 821, A.I.R. 1914 Lah 563, 16 Cr.L.J. 549), or a conviction for causing simple hurt (Abdul Aziz, 4 Lah 462), or a conviction under sec 452, I.P.C. (Indar Singh, 31 Cr.L.J. 130, 120 I.C. 605, A.I.R. 1930 Lah 227, 1930 Cr.C. 240), or a conviction under the Excise and Opium Acts (Ghulam Hussain, 37 Cr.L.J. 342, 160 I.C. 631, A.I.R. 1936 Pesh 16), or a conviction under sec 13 of the Gambling Act, III of 1867 (Abdul Hat, 1906 A.W.N. 13) would amount to a breach of the bond.

But an actual commission or attempt to commit or abetment of an offence is necessary for the forfeiture of the bond. Where a person bound down under sec. 109 was found to be in possession of costly clothes, for which he could not satisfactorily account, it was held that the bond should not be forfeited, since there was no proof that he had actually stolen those clothes—In re Venkataratnam, 2 Weir 57. The mere fact that a person bound down under sec 109 was again found concealing himself under suspicious circumstances in a lonely place without any ostensible means of livelihood and unable to give a satisfactory account of himself, would not justify forfeiture of the bond, because his act did not amount to commission of or attempt to commit or abetment of an offence—Bahadur 1932 A.L.J. 112, 54 All 335, A.I.R. 1932 All 58, 33 Cr.L.J. 281 (282). The bond is forfeited by the commission of any offence no matter wherever the offence may be committed. If the bond is entered into in one district and the accused is convicted of committing an assault in another district, the bond is forfeited, and the Magistrate of the former district can proceed against the accused under this section—Sham Sundar, 2 B.L.R. A.C. 11.

The words 'commission of an offence' do not necessarily imply a conviction for an offence. Although it is true that a conviction is considered necessary to establish that an offence has been committed, still there is no authority for the extreme view that the commission of an offence cannot be proved otherwise than by a conviction—Mansur, 24 Cr.L.J. 588, 73 I.C. 332; Sheo Jangal, 50 All. 666, 30 Cr.L.J. 203 (204).

An offence committed in a Native State would amount to a breach of the bond—Dewa Singh, 28 P.R. 1910; but see Bahadur Singh, 26 P.R. 1918, 19 Cr.L.J. 924, 47 I.C. 440

See also Note 250A.

299. Procedure on breach of bond:—When a person forfeits a bond by being convicted of an offence, the amount of the forfeited bond may be recovered, but he cannot be forthwith imprisoned for the unexpired portion of the term for which security was taken. The Magistrate's remedy is to take fresh proceedings under this Chapter—Jag Deo, 28 All 629. A Magistrate is not justified in forfeiting a recognisance under this section without giving the party charged with the breach an opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses upon whose evidence the rule to show cause has been issued—Nobin, 4 Cal. 865. If the surety bond is forfeited on account of any act of the accused within the period for which the sureties had bound themselves, the Magistrate may take proceedings against the sureties even after the expiry of the period—Bahadur, 1932 A.L.J. 112, 33 Cr.L.J. 281 (282), 54 All. 335, A.I.R. 1932 All. 58.

300. Liability of surety:—See Note 1337 under sec. 514.

It has been held in Punjab that in order to make the surety liable, the conviction of the principal must be for an offence similar to that for which security was given. When men stand sureties in respect of sec. 110, it is to be understood that they undertake liability for only such good conduct on the part of the principal as is indicated by the circumstances under which the security was demanded, and not for any conceivable form of offence committed by the principal. Thus, where a person was required to give security for being suspected as a thief and a habitual receiver of stolen property, and a person was accepted as his surety, and the principal offender was subsequently convicted under sec. 326, I. P. C. (grievous hurt), held that the surety should not be held liable—Udham Singh, 1913 P.R. 15, 14 Cr.L.J. 575. In Sher Singh, 29 I.C. 821, 1915 P.R. 10, 16 Cr.L.J. 549, under similar circumstances, the sureties were not altogether exempted, but were ordered to pay a reduced penalty, viz, Rs. 500 instead of Rs. 1,000. The Allahabad High Court holds that the surety is liable for any offence committed by the person bound over, and this section makes no reservation that in order to make the surety liable, the offence committed by the person bound over should be ejusdem generis with the offence for which he was bound over—Sheo Jangal, 50 All. 666, 30 Cr.L.J. 203 (204), 26 A.L.J. 443, A.I.R. 1928 All. 232

A person was put on security for Rs. 1,000 for one year, and two other persons stood sureties for him. That person was afterwards convicted under sec. 323, I. P. C., in which offence he was found to have taken only a minor part. Held, under the circumstances, that the order of forfeiture of a reasonable sum of Rs. 50 against the sureties was sufficient, and that they need not be burdened—Fatta, 1915 P.R. 6, 16 Cr.L.J. 287.

122. (1) A Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered, or may reject any surety previously accepted by him or his predecessor under this Chapter, on the ground that such surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond:

Power to reject sureties.

Provided that, before so refusing to accept or rejecting any such surety, he shall either himself hold an inquiry on oath into the fitness of the surety or cause such inquiry to be held and a report to be made thereon by a Magistrate subordinate to him,

(2) Such Magistrate shall, before holding the inquiry, give reasonable notice to the surety, and to the person by whom the surety was offered and shall in making the inquiry record the substance of the evidence adduced before him.

(3) If the Magistrate is satisfied after considering the evidence so adduced either before him or before a Magistrate deputed under sub-section (1), and the report of such Magistrate (if any), that the surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond, he shall make an order refusing to accept or rejecting, as the case may be, such surety and recording his reasons for so doing:

Provided that, before making an order rejecting any surety who has previously been accepted, the Magistrate shall issue his summons or warrant, as he thinks fit, and cause the person for whom the surety is bound to appear or to be brought before him.

Change:—The whole section has been newly drafted by sec. 20 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923).

The main changes introduced by this new section are:—(1) rejection of a surety previously accepted; (2) inquiry into the fitness of a surety; and (3) delegation of such inquiry to a subordinate Magistrate. The reasons have been stated below in proper places.

301. Rejection of sureties:—The question as to whether a particular person is fit to stand as surety or not, is a matter for the decision of the Magistrate. The question in every case is one of discretion and the Magistrate's discretion in this matter is not fettered in any way—In re Jalil, 13 C.W.N. 80; Bhawani, 12 A.L.J. 1004, 16 Cr.L.J. 54, 26 I.C. 616, A.I.R. 1914 All. 489; Abdul Karim, 44 Cal. 737, 21 C.W.N. 925. But this discretion to accept or reject a surety must be exercised only after a satisfactory inquiry in accordance with law—Bhawani, 12 A.L.J. 1004; Akbar Ali, 42 Cal. 706, 19 C.W.N. 220; Rayan, 43 Cal. 1024, 20 C.W.N. 1133. The Magistrate can refuse or accept any surety only on valid and reasonable grounds and not on mere conjectures and surmises—Abdul Khan, 10 C.W.N. 1027; Asiruddin, 41 Cal. 761.

After an order is passed under section 118 demanding sureties, the Magistrate cannot introduce any new qualifications while deciding on the suitability of the sureties, and cannot reject them because they do not answer to those qualifications—Alladitto, 26 Cr.L.J. 1011, 87 I.C. 961, A.I.R. 1925 Sind 321, 19 S.L.R. 101.

Sureties ought not to be rejected merely on the strength of reports of the Police—Jai Gorind, 15 O.C. 263, 13 Cr.L.J. 760; Abdul Khan, 10 C.W.N. 1027; Tota, 25 All. 272; Panchoo, 29 Cal. 455; Munshi, 18 A.L.J. 321, 21 Cr.L.J. 365; Gopi, 20 A.L.J. 760, A.I.R. 1922 All. 541, 68 I.C. 35, 23 Cr.L.J. 499; Sukhai, A.I.R. 1935 All. 517, 36 Cr.L.J. 1285, 157 I.C. 1049, 1935 Cr.C. 513; Kaim Khan, 1906 P.R. 18, 1907 P.L.R. 14, 5 Cr.L.J. 148, 1907 P.W.R. 5; Kanwal, 25 Cr.L.J. 91, 76 I.C. 27, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 672; Ramdhani, 36 Cr.L.J. 1473, 158 I.C. 918, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 421, 16 P.L.T. 478, 1935 Cr.C. 1064; Zorawar, 13 A.L.J. 469, 16 Cr.L.J. 445; Bhawani, 12 A.L.J. 1004; Id Ibrahim, 16 Cr.L.J. 100, 8 S.L.R. 173; or on mere hearsay evidence of general repute—A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 227, 9 O.L.J. 353, 68 I.C. 959. The implicit acceptance of the opinions expressed in police reports without considering the facts upon which such opinions are based, would place all persons ordered to furnish security at the mercy of the police—In re Abdul Khan, 10 C.W.N. 1027. The Magistrate may ask the police to report, with a view merely of enabling them to collect and call evidence. But in every case his order must proceed on a consideration of the evidence and not of the police-report—Mahro, 2 S.L.R. 11, 10 Cr.L.J. 225; Jai Gorind, 15

5, 1931 A.L.J. 1170, the Allahabad High Court took a contrary view, holding that 30 of the Indian Evidence Act applied to such a case. See also Sarju, 41 All 231, A.L.J. 147, 20 Cr.L.J. 206, 49 I.C. 654.

111. [Repealed.]

This section has been repealed by sec. 8 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1923). It ran as follows —

"111. The provisions of secs. 109 and 110 do not apply to the European British subjects in cases where they may be dealt with under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874." We consider that sec. 111 should be repealed and that secs. 109 and 110 should equally to Europeans and Indians"—Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee, 16.

112. When a Magistrate acting under section 107, section 108, section 109 or section 110 deems it order to be made. necessary to require any person to show under such section, he shall make an order in writing, setting forth the substance of the information received, the amount of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be in force, and the number, character and class of sureties (if any) required.

78. Scope:—The provisions of this section must be complied with by a Magistrate passing a preliminary order under the Burma Habitual Offenders Restriction Act of 1919), and if that order does not set forth the substance of the information received and the term during which the order of restriction shall be in force, the entire order is irregular and order passed therein must be set aside—Parsodan, 2 Rang. The information which leads to action under sec. 107 may be of the most varied kind. It may be oral, sworn or not sworn, and need not be in writing. It may be derived from any source, official or unofficial, formal or informal. It may be derived from the Magistrate's own knowledge. He is not bound to disclose the source or the nature of the information received—In re Mithu Khan, 27 All 172, 1904 A.W.N. 206, 1 A.L.J. 685; Padmanabhaiah, 54 Mad 422, AIR 1930 Mad 975, 1930 M.W.N. 1100, 32 Cr.L.J. 784, 59 M.L.J. 914, 129 I.C. 70, 32 Cr.L.J. 217, 1930 Cr.C. 1191.

9. Order in writing:—Before making an order the Magistrate may hold an inquiry. See Note 230 under the heading "Inquiry." A Magistrate acting under this section has no power to act until he has recorded an order in writing under this section. Rameshwar, 36 All 262, 12 A.L.J. 365. The issue of a warrant under sec. 115 without recording an order under this section is illegal—Jatoi, 20 S.L.R. 122, 27 Cr.L.J. 391. So also, where the accused persons were arrested as suspected habitual offenders and the Magistrate fixed a date for the production of evidence with the object of issuing a notice under sec. 112, but on the date fixed, after hearing the prosecution evidence, he at once called upon the accused to enter upon his defence to a charge under sec. 110, held that the procedure was illegal and the proceedings must be set aside. It is only after the Magistrate has recorded an order under sec. 112, that the actual hearing can by law take place at all—Rajbansi, 42 All 646 (648), 22 Cr.L.J. 228. In Pragi, 10 O.C. 365, 7 Cr.L.J. 94, however, it has been held that the provisions of this section are purely directory, and a failure to record the order is a mere irregularity. In In re Kavatham, 26 M.L.T. 385, 20 Cr.L.J. 763, it was held that the omission to draw up a proceeding under this section or to serve a copy of the order on the accused under sec. 115 did not vitiate the proceedings, if the order was drawn up later and read out and explained to the accused who appeared in Court in pursuance of a summons.

passed under sec. 118, the District Magistrate (and he alone) can convert the order into an order of restriction under the Burma Habitual Offenders Restriction Act (II of 1919), where there has been a proper preliminary order under sec. 112 and the District Magistrate has good reasons for the change—Parsodan, 2 Rang. 524.

Proceedings under this section against persons who have been registered under sec. 4 of the Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1911) are not illegal. But such proceedings though not illegal are inexpedient, and the fact that the persons proceeded against are already registered under the Criminal Tribes Act may be a factor and an important factor which the Magistrate should take into consideration before he makes any order against them under sec. 110 of this Code—Ghulam Rasul, 20 Cr.L.J. 30, 48 I.C. 510 (Cal.). A person who has been registered under the Criminal Tribes Act may be proceeded against under sec. 110 of this Code, if he pursues a career of crime bringing him within some one of the clauses of this section. Each case has to be scrutinized on its merits. If such proceedings appear to be necessary in view of the exigencies of any particular case, evidence of general repute, which is bound to be affected in a large measure by the very fact of the person proceeded against being a member of a criminal tribe, should be, if at all, acted upon with great caution and scrutiny—Bada Mir, 54 Cal 279, 31 C.W.N. 165 (166), 28 Cr.L.J. 106, 44 I.C. 314, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 213.

277A. Transfer:—Cases under Ch VIII may be transferred in accordance with the provisions of sec. 192, Cr. P. Code. See Notes 598 in this connection. See also Gulabrao Laxmanrao Changude v. Emp., in Note 258.

A person proceeded against under sec. 107, Cr. P. Code can apply for transfer of the proceedings under sec. 526, Cr. P. Code—Haji Baqiridi, 26 A.L.J. 398, 29 Cr.L.J. 448 (419), 108 I.C. 569, A.I.R. 1928 All. 268.

Proceedings under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code cannot be transferred by the High Court to another district—Emp v. Mahendra, 30 All. 47, 27 A.W.N. 268, 7 Cr.L.J. 214; Amar Singh, 16 All. 9. This view was dissented from in Emp. v. Wahid Ali Khan, 32 All. 612, where Tudball, J., observed: "No doubt, a Magistrate cannot take action under sec. 110 unless the person against whom the action is taken, is one within the local limits of his jurisdiction. But once action has been taken, the inquiry and the final order are made under the powers conferred by sec. 117 and sec. 118 of the Code. Section 526 clearly enables this Court to transfer a criminal case of this description, once it has been properly instituted, to any other Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction (and which otherwise would have no jurisdiction), and the order of this Court will give jurisdiction to the Court to which the case has been so transferred to make an enquiry under sec. 117 and to pass an order under sec. 118. I do not think that the powers of transfer given to this Court by sec. 526 are in any way limited by the terms of sec. 110 or sec. 107 of the Code." This view was followed in U Gandama, 145 I.C. 314, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 164, 1933 Cr.C. 763, 6 Rang. 41, 34 Cr.L.J. 950. As a rule, it would not be at all in accordance with the view of the Calcutta High Court, to transfer any preventive proceeding from one district to another. It must be an extremely exceptional case that could justify the interference of the High Court with the jurisdiction of the Magistrate of the district taking preventive action within his own boundaries and imposing such foreign and extraneous duty on the Magistrate of another district. Chandi Prosad, 17 C.W.N. 536, 20 I.C. 142, 14 Cr.L.J. 382. See also Maung Saw Hlaing 31 Cr.L.J. 1195, 146 I.C. 23, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 165, 1933 Cr.C. 764, where the High Court transferred proceedings under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., to another district.

judicial act and therefore the Magistrate should not act arbitrarily. There must be information of a nature which convinces him that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace. It is impossible to formulate a hard and fast rule with regard to the nature of the information on which a Magistrate should act. What is reasonably sufficient to satisfy a Magistrate must depend on the particular situation. While there must be something more than the past misconduct of the person proceeded against to justify a notice being served upon him, the Cr P Code does not require the information to show the particular act which is in contemplation at the time. The Magistrate must be satisfied that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace. What will satisfy him must depend on the particular facts of the case—In re Muthuswami, AIR 1940 Mad (25, 26), 50 M.L.W. 802, 1939 M.W.N. 1209, 185 I.C. 824, 41 Cr.L.J. 238, (1940), 1 M.L.J. 11 (F.B.).

Merely informing an accused person that he is suspected to be a habitual thief, is not a sufficient notice, before proceeding under sec 110. There must be something in the nature of the indictment or charge containing substantial particulars indicating the grounds upon which the police have given information to the Magistrate—Rajbansi, 18 A.L.J. 678, 42 All 646 (648), 22 Cr.L.J. 228; Nihal, 49 All 5, 24 A.L.J. 900, 28 Cr.L.J. 9, AIR 1926 All 759, 99 I.C. 41. The failure of the Magistrate to record the details of the information which he has received, is not a mere irregularity which would be covered by sec 537, but is an illegality which vitiates the trial—Nihal, (supra). The Oudh Chief Court, however, dissents from these two rulings and is of opinion that the 'substance of the information' does not mean anything more than the gist of the information. It is not necessary to state anything more than the particular section or sub-section on which it is proposed to proceed against the accused. In any view, the failure to give the accused the information of the nature of the case against him, is a mere irregularity cured by sec. 537—Ram Ghulam, 2 Luck. 157, 28 Cr.L.J. 744 (746), 103 I.C. 792, AIR 1927 Oudh 306, 6 O.W.N. 1202. The Calcutta High Court likewise holds that the substance of the information means such or so much of the information as would enable the party to know under what clause of sec. 110 he is charged or to what particular class of offenders he is said to belong. Where possible, the repetition of the words of the section should be avoided, but the notice is not rendered invalid because of failure to mention the details of the case—Bhut Nath, 33 C.W.N. 852, 124 I.C. 71, 31 Cr.L.J. 614, 1929 Cr.C. 387, 57 Cal 503, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 739. It is utterly impossible to draw the line or to offer the Magistrates any guiding principle which would assist them in determining how much information is to be given in a case under sec. 110. It is sufficient if the particular clause of the charge, or where there are more than one offence named in a charge, the particular offence or offences are given in the notice—Chandan, 52 All. 448, AIR. 1930 All. 274, 1930 Cr.C. 442, 124 I.C. 40, 31 Cr.L.J. 627, 1930 A.L.J. 389. Ordinarily, it is sufficient if that portion of the clause of sec. 110 which is applicable to the particular case is specified in the notice, but where the particular clause refers to two or more offences, the particular offence or offences which is more appropriate to the particular case should also be mentioned in the notice. This applies more particularly to clause (d) of sec. 110—Chandan, supra. This section does not contemplate that the allegations of fact constituting the information should be embodied in the preliminary order. The section provides for a preliminary order to be passed in proceedings started under secs. 107, 108, 109 and 110 and contemplates that the order should contain as much of the information as would be sufficient to enable the party to know under which of the several sections or which part of any one of them he is proceeded against. The preliminary order under this section need not contain more than an indication of the particular offence which is sought to be prevented—Jagannath Prasad v. Emp., AIR. 1940 Nag. 134 (135), 1940 N.L.J. 31.

The omission to set forth the substance of the information will not of itself be sufficient to render the proceeding and the final order null and void, unless the accused has been prejudiced by the omission and a failure of justice has been occasioned—Id.

Jafar, 3 All 515; Abbasu v. Umda, 8 Cal 724; Bhagwan, 1891 A.W.N. 40; Tanwar, 19 S.L.R. 176, 26 Cr.L.J. 1398; the omission in the notice to give detailed information as to the nature of the evidence for the prosecution, is not an irregularity sufficient to vitiate the proceedings, especially if the accused had cross-examined at great length the witnesses for the prosecution—Dohra, 20 Cr.L.J. 436 (Pat.); or if as a matter of fact the accused had clear notice of the case made against them and had ample time and opportunity to let in evidence—Jai Singh, 23 Cr.L.J. 42 (Pat.). According to the Lahore and Rangoon High Courts, an order which does not set forth the substance of the information is illegal and must be set aside—Ujagar, 10 Lah. 155, 30 Cr.L.J. 839, 117 I.C. 807, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 504, 1929 Cr.C. 61, 30 P.L.R. 694, Ind. Rul. 1929 Lah. 695; Maung Tunu, 4 Bur.L.J. 172, 27 Cr.L.J. 318 (319), 92 I.C. 702, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 353. For contra, see Dayaram, 27 Cr.L.J. 575, 94 I.C. 143, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 366.

In a proceeding under sec. 107, the Magistrate may give only the substance of the information received, and it is not necessary to specify the definite acts which the accused intends to commit—Jagaji, 16 A.L.J. 567, 19 Cr.L.J. 876, A.I.R. 1918 All. 93, 13 I.C. 72. In proceedings under sec. 110 an order by the Magistrate stating that he has received some reliable information (though not definite) that the accused is a habitual cattle-thief and a receiver of stolen goods, is a sufficient compliance with the provisions of this section—In re Kala, 1896 A.W.N. 73.

But a Magistrate is not bound to give the source of the information—In re Mithu, 27 All. 172; Alimuddin, 29 Cal. 392. It is also not necessary to give a list of the prosecution witnesses in the order—Chintamon, 35 Cal. 243, 12 C.W.N. 299, 7 C.L.J. 177; Rajendra, 17 C.W.N. 238 (261), 18 I.C. 149, 16 C.L.J. 467, 14 Cr.L.J. 5.

Section 110 provides six categories of cases within one or more of which the offender's case must come in order that a penalty may be imposed in accordance with that section. When a person is sought to be proceeded against under this section it must be made clear as to which sub-section he is charged with coming under. It is not enough merely to assert that he is a person of criminal tendencies or that he is suspected of having committed certain crimes. The omission to do so is obviously a serious hardship to the accused person, in as much as he receives no notice of the precise case which he is to meet. It is not enough to charge a person generally of having committed an offence under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code without specifically stating under which of the sub-section the case is alleged to fall—Sohan Singh, 26 Cr.L.J. 1377, 89 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 45.

Where in a proceeding under sec. 107, Cr. P. Code the Magistrate has only reproduced the language of the section, without specifying in what way and with reference to what matter a person was likely to commit a breach of the peace and in what way he was likely to do a wrongful act which might occasion a breach of the peace, the proceeding is vague and cannot be supported—Amanal Ali, 30 Cr.L.J. 492, 115 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 67, 10 P.L.T. 639, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 209.

It is doubtful how far an order under this section can properly exceed the information given under sec. 107, Cr. P. Code—Jasoda Lekhraj v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 703 (704), I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 662, 182 I.C. 698, 12 R.S. 31, A.I.R. 1939 Sind. 167.

Amendment of the order:—If it had been the intention of the Legislature to give Courts power to amend orders under sec. 112, after they had been communicated to the accused, provision would have been made in the Code for such amendment. The provisions which have actually been made, seem impliedly to prohibit any amendment of that kind. In the first place it is necessary not only that the information received should be set out in the order under sec. 112, but also the kind of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be enforced and the number, character and class of sureties, if any, required. These latter requirements for an order under sec. 112 seem to indicate that it was not the intention of the Legislature that the Courts should have a more or less free hand in altering the nature of the bond, the class of sureties, the term for which the bond was to be enforced, after evidence had been taken or during the course of the proceedings. The provision of sec. 118 would be meaningless, if it was open to Court at any time to amend the original order under sec. 112—Nim, 34 Cr.L.J. 9, 140 I.C. 170, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 8, 1933 Cr.C. 32, 27 S.L.R. 19, Ind. Rul. 1932 Sind 182. For contra, see Hyder Khan, 1933 M.W.N. 551. But where the Magistrate recorded an order calling upon three persons to show cause why they should not be required to furnish security in the sum of Rs. 2,000, got a copy of that order duly served on them to appear on a certain date and, on their appearance on the fixed date, passed an entirely fresh order under sec. 112 and carefully read it out to them as was required by sec. 113, it was held that the proceedings were in no way vitiated by the procedure adopted by the Magistrate—Muhammad Ishaq, 28 Cr.L.J. 815, 104 I.C. 255, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 689.

Where a person was not called upon to show cause as being "by habit" a thief and burglar but it was stated in the order drawn up under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., that it appeared to the Magistrate that he was by "general repute" a thief and burglar, it was held that the proceedings were not illegal in as much as it was not shown that he was misled or in any way prejudiced by the terms of the order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C.—The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Kadir Mirza, 17 C.W.N. 331, 13 Cr.L.J. 784, 17 I.C. 416.

There is nothing in the provisions of sec. 109 or of sec. 112, Cr. P. Code which makes it imperative on the part of the Magistrate, after having recited the reasons why the person named is to be called on to execute a bond, to enter the actual section and clause which he considers appropriate. Where the Sessions Judge in appeal has considered that what is set out in the body of the order under sec. 112, Cr. P. Code brings the matter within the terms of clause (a) of sec. 109, Cr. P. Code and not under clause (b), and he has in effect corrected what he considers either to be a misconception of the trying Magistrate or a clerical error and the substance of the accusation which the applicant had to meet has not been altered in any way, there is jurisdiction of the Appellate Court to make the alteration—Ahesanali v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 747 (748), 176 I.C. 465, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 303, 11 R.N. 54, I.L.R. 1938 Nag. 595.

See also Note 292.

Number, character and class of sureties:—The Magistrate in setting forth the number, character and class of sureties, should not place undue and unnecessary difficulties in the way of finding them—Rahmatulla, 22 Cr.L.J. 395 (All.). The Magistrate should not impose impossible restrictions, as the provisions of this Chapter are preventive and not penal—Md. Pahor, 1 S.L.R. 46, 8 Cr.L.J. 166.

Therefore, a Magistrate has no right to impose a condition requiring the accused to find sureties residing within certain geographical limits (e.g., within one mile or five miles) or residing in a certain locality—Narain Soobodhee, 22 W.R. 37; Tara Sing, 1880 P.R. 38; Bhagwan, 7 A.L.J. 993, 11 Cr.L.J. 536; Hasimuddin, 10 A.L.J. 354, 13 Cr.L.J. 831; Rahunandan, 20 A.L.J. 520, 23 Cr.L.J. 400; Mangal, 6 O.C. 199; or to impose a condition that the sureties must be inhabitants of one village—Nga Po, 17 Cr.L.J. 85. In Nabhu, 24 All. 471, it has been held that the Magistrate is entitled to prescribe certain geographical limits for the residence of sureties, but it must not be too narrow; and, therefore, where an order was passed by a Magistrate requiring the sureties to be "residing within the Municipality of Mirzapore" the High Court added the words "or in the immediate neighbourhood."

Lastly, as regards the class of sureties. Since sec. 112 gives the Magistrate power to define the character and class of sureties, it is open to him to require that they must be landholders or persons having a certain pecuniary status—Rahim, 20 All. 206; Jiva Natha, 16 Bom.L.R. 138, 15 Cr.L.J. 268; Allahbad, 17 S.L.R. 160; Jumo, 16 Cr.L.J. 252, 8 S.L.R. 229; (but see Wasya, 1901 P.R. 28); or that they should be of respectable character and should not be of inferior standing to suspects—Md. Ibrahim, 8 S.L.R. 11, 16 Cr.L.J. 100, 27 I.C. 148. But a condition that the sureties must not be lambars inamdars and Chowkidars (Kaim Khan, 1906 P.R. 18) or that they must not be related to the accused (Narain, 22 W.R. 37) or that they must not come from Kaharati and must not be Kunbi by caste (Yesu, 1 Bom L.R. 520) is too restrictive and illegal.

See Notes under sec. 122.

Copy:—A person against whom a Magistrate has drawn up an order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., asking him to show cause why he should not be bound down to keep the peace under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., is not entitled to obtain a copy of the written information given by the police on which the order is based—Anantapadmanabiah, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 975, 54 Mad. 422, 1930 M.W.N. 1100, 32 M.L.W. 784, 59 M.L.J. 911, 129 I.C. 70, 1930 Cr.C. 1191, 32 Cr.L.J. 217.

Revision:—The High Court has powers under sec. 439 read with sec. 423 (1) (c) and sec. 561A, Cr. P. Code to set aside the Magistrate's order under sec. 112, Cr. P. Code and to quash proceedings—Jasoda Lekhtaj v Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Sind 167 (170), 1 I.R. 1939 Kar. 662, 182 I.C. 698, 12 RS 31, 40 Cr.L.J. 703. The High Court has undoubtedly power to quash proceedings where the notice issued does not comply with the requirements of sec. 112, but before doing so, it must be satisfied that there has been a failure to comply. It must be remembered that the issue of the notice is merely a preliminary step and no order can be passed under sec. 107, Cr. P. Code unless the inquiry which follows the issue of the notice shows that the laying of the information was justified. The High Court can always interfere when the inquiry has not been held in accordance with the law or a wrong conclusion has been arrived at—In re Muthuswami, 41 Cr.L.J. 238 (241), 185 I.C. 824, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 23, 50 M.L.W. 802, 1939 M.W.N. 1209, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 11 (F.B.).

113. If the person in respect of whom such order is made is present in Court, it shall be read over to him or, if he so desires, the substance thereof shall be explained to him.

Procedure in respect of person present in Court.

'Is present in Court':—Even if persons are illegally arrested and brought into Court, the Magistrate is justified in treating the persons as present in Court and may proceed to initiate proceedings—Ghulam Husain, 12 Cr.L.J. 533, 12 I.C. 301 (Bom.). The record must show conclusively that the order was read out to the person proceeded against—Din Dayal, 28 Cr.L.J. 8, 99 I.C. 40, A.I.R. 1927 All. 146.

114. If such person is not present in Court, the Magistrate shall issue a summons requiring him to appear, or, when such person is in custody, a warrant directing the officer in whose custody he is, to bring him before the Court:

Summons or warrant in case of person not so present.

Provided that, whenever it appears to such Magistrate, upon the report of a police-officer or upon other information (the substance of which report or information shall be recorded by the Magistrate, that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person, the Magistrate may at any time issue a warrant for his arrest.

281. Issue of Summons:—Summons is necessary only if the accused is not present in Court. If he is present, and the Magistrate records an order calling on him to show cause on a day fixed why he should not furnish security for keeping the peace, it is not necessary to issue a summons to him—Choudhury, 2 B.L.R. App. 28.

When a Magistrate issued a notice with reference to sec. 110, but at the time of inquiry passed an order demanding security under section 107, it was held that the Magistrate ought to have issued a fresh notice with reference to sec. 107, to enable the party to know the facts on which the Magistrate intended to proceed against him—Krishnaswami v. Vanamamalai, 30 Mad 282.

The notice issued to the accused to appear and show cause must give him sufficient time to produce his evidence. So, where notice was served on the 7th, requiring the accused to appear on the 9th, it was held that sufficient time was not given, and the order for security was set aside—Cheyti Singh, 22 W R. 70.

282. Issue of Warrant:—Before making an order for immediate arrest, the Magistrate must be of opinion that the only way of preventing a breach of the peace is to commit the person to custody, and he must put on record the substance of the Police report or other information by which he is influenced—Maniruddin, 5 P.L.T. 95, 24 Cr.L.J. 829, 74 I.C. 861. To justify an arrest under this section the Magistrate must act upon information that has been on record. It is not enough for him to merely express a belief that such a course is necessary. Not only must he have reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, but it must be shown that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person—Babua, 6 All 132. No notice is necessary before arrest—Chandan, 52 All 448, 31 Cr.L.J. 627, 1930 A.L.J. 389, A.I.R. 1930 All. 274.

A Magistrate holding an inquiry under sec. 110, Cr. P. C., derives jurisdiction to issue a warrant against a suspect only after he has passed an order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., and after he has satisfied himself that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of the suspect—Jatoi, 27 Cr.L.J. 935, 96 I.C. 391, 20 S.L.R. 122, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 288.

As for arrest without warrant, see 20 S.L.R. 85, cited in Note 126 under sec. 55.

Re-arrest:—The proviso to the section is a provision relating to the circumstances set out in the section and is not a substantive provision by itself. It does not give power to Magistrates to re-arrest a person who has already been let off after executing surety bonds—Nathan Gope, 10 P.L.T. 801, 30 Cr.L.J. 809 (811).

It may be doubted whether this proviso empowers a Magistrate to re-arrest a person who has already appeared and been admitted to bail—Raghunandan, 32 Cal. 80 (83).

283. Bail:—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to refuse bail to an accused person arrested under a warrant issued under this section—Faiz Mahomed, 9 S.L.R. 158, 17 Cr.L.J. 77, 32 I.C. 669. When a man who is arrested is not accused of a non-bailable offence, no needless impediments should be placed in the way of his being admitted to bail. The intention of the law undoubtedly is that in such cases the man is ordinarily to be at liberty, and it is only if he is unable to furnish such moderate security, if any is required of him, as is suitable for the purpose of securing his appearance before a Court pending inquiry, that he should remain in detention—Mir Hashamali, 20 Bom.L.R. 121, 19 Cr.L.J. 329.

284. Person outside jurisdiction:—A Magistrate cannot legally issue a warrant under this section for the arrest of a person who has already left the local limits of his jurisdiction. The person proceeded against must be actually and physically present in the district in which the Magistrate exercises jurisdiction—In re Ramjiban, 14 Bom.L.R. 889, 13 Cr.L.J. 796, 17 I.C. 540. But see Manindra, 46 Cal. 215 (236), A.I.R. 1919 Cal. 702, 23 C.W.N. 193, 28 Cr.L.J. 25, 19 Cr.L.J. 969, 46 I.C. 152, where it is held that sec. 114 is not limited to arrest within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction but applies to an accused arrested outside the jurisdiction and brought in custody within the jurisdiction for the purpose of proceeding under this Chapter. See Note 258 under section 110.

115. Every summons or warrant issued under section 114 shall be accompanied by a copy of the order made under section 112 and such copy shall be delivered by the officer serving or executing such summons or warrant to the person served with, or arrested under, the same.

285. Omission to send copy of order:—When the summons was not accompanied by a copy of the order passed under section 112, the whole proceedings were invalid, and the order for security must be set aside—Subba Naicken, 6 Cr.L.J. 332, 17 M.L.J. 438; Abdul Rahaman, 2 Weir 55. Contra—Suleman, 11 Bom.L.R. 740, 10 Cr.L.J. 375, 10 Bom.L.R. 375, and Narain, 25 Cr.L.J. 682, 81 I.C. 170, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 33, where such omission was held to be a mere irregularity, cured by sec. 537. So also, in a recent Allahabad case, where the Magistrate instead of sending a copy of his order with the summons, gave the substance of the information in the summons itself, and the accused were, therefore, informed of what they had to meet, held that the irregularity was cured by sec. 537—Ram Deo, 27 Cr.L.J. 1132, 97 I.C. 652, 49 All. 228, 25 A.L.J. 44, A.I.R. 1927 All. 767. See also In re Kavatham, 26 M.L.T. 385, 20 Cr.L.J. 763, 53 I.C. 491; Rameshwar, 1 P.L.T. 632, 21 Cr.L.J. 321, 55 I.C. 593, and Bajrao, 25 Cr.L.J. 132, 76 I.C. 228, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 166, where it has been held that an order for security is not liable to be set aside, merely because no preliminary order was drawn up and served on the accused, provided that the preliminary order was drawn up later and read and explained to the accused when they were brought into Court in pursuance of summonses.

116. The Magistrate may, if he sees sufficient cause, dispense with the personal attendance of any person called upon to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond for keeping the peace, and may permit him to appear by a pleader.

Where the person against whom proceedings were taken lived at a distance and there was no special circumstance making his personal attendance necessary, it would be a very unwise exercise of jurisdiction to require him to appear personally, since the Magistrate could under this section allow him to appear by a pleader—Dinonath v. Girja, 12 Cal. 133.

The words "bond for keeping the peace" imply that this section applies only to a case under sec. 107. Vide also 2 Weir 54.

117. (1) When the order under section 112 has been read or explained under section 113 to a person present in Court or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with, or in execution of, a summons or warrant issued under section 114, the Magistrate shall proceed to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken, and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary.

(2) Such inquiry shall be made, as nearly as may be practicable, where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons-cases; and where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant-cases, except that no charge need be framed.

(3) Pending the completion of the inquiry under sub-section (1), the Magistrate, if he considers that immediate measures are 'necessary for the prevention of a breach' of the peace or disturbance of the public tranquillity or the commission of any offence, or for the public safety, may for reasons to be recorded in writing, direct the person, in respect of whom the order under Section 112 has been made, to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour until the conclusion of the inquiry, and may detain him in custody until such bond is executed, or, in default of execution, until the inquiry is concluded.

Provided that—

(a) no person against whom proceedings are not being taken under section 108, section 109 or section 110 shall be directed to execute a bond for maintaining good behaviour, and

(b) the conditions of such bond, whether as to the amount thereof or as to the provision of sureties or the number thereof or the pecuniary extent of their liability shall not be more onerous than those specified in the order under section 112.

(4) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person is a habitual offender or is so desperate or dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise.

(5) Where two or more persons have been associated together in the matter under inquiry, they may be dealt with in the same or separate inquiries as the Magistrate shall think just.

Change:—Sub-section (3) and the italicised words in sub-section (4) have been added by sec 19 of the Cr P C., Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). The reasons are stated below. Sub sections (3) and (4) have been renumbered as (4) and (5).

286. Sub-section (1)—Inquiry into truth of information:—The inquiry provided for by secs 117 and 118 is not strictly limited by the precise terms of the order drawn up under sec 112, Cr. P. Code—The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Kadu Mirza, 17 C.W.N. 331, 13 Cr.L.J. 784, 17 I.C. 416. But it is hardly possible that a Court could equitably call on a man to prove that he was not a thief, and then without further notice bind him over on the grounds that he was an habitual forger—Sultan, 26 Cr.L.J. 767 (768), 19 S.L.R. 332, 86 I.C. 351, A.I.R. 1925 Sind 236.

Under this section a Magistrate is bound to inquire into the truth of the information, notwithstanding that the accused admits the allegations against him and consents to furnish security—Nga Yan Shin, U.B.R. (1902-3) 1; Allahditta, 19 S.L.R. 101, 26 Cr.L.J. 1041. Strictly speaking, a plea of guilty in a Criminal Court can only be made in response to a charge made by the Court and an informal admission as to guilt does certainly not amount to a formal plea of guilty and such an admission has not, of course, the same binding effect as a plea of guilty. It has not the same effect in fact and it has not the same effect in law. When such an admission is made due to an inducement made by the investigating Police Officer, there is nothing in the law to suggest that, in such circumstances, a Sessions Judge hearing a reference under sec. 123, Cr. P. Code is forbidden to direct that the persons proceeded against under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code should be examined again—Legal Remembrancer, Bengal v. Jibari Kinnar, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 292, 37 Cr.L.J. 818, 163 I.C. 228, 1936 Cr.C. 529, 8 R.C. 727. See Note 236 under sec. 107.

It is not competent to a Magistrate to dispense with the inquiry provided for by this section, and to base his order merely on the result of another case recently tried by him—Mul Chand, 37 All. 30 (31).

The inquiry to be held under this section is a full judicial inquiry. It must be conducted judicially and becomes a judicial proceeding. All the formalities of a judicial proceeding have to be observed in the inquiry—Sher Zaman, 1899 P.R. 10; Nur Mohamed v. Nil Rutton, 18 W.R. 2.

The Court must act on evidence duly recorded in the presence of the accused person and it is not open to it to take into consideration any information obtained otherwise than from such evidence. This, of course, refers to the final decision in the case, and not to the initiation of the proceedings—San Dun v. King-Emp, 2 Rang. 641 (642).

Summoning witnesses:—It is quite clear that the accused person when appearing to show cause must be ready with his evidence. If he has been unable to bring the witnesses with him on account of the shortness of the notice or other reasonable cause, it is his duty, when he appears, to apply at once for summons to the witnesses he proposes to call—Narayan, 9 Bom L.R. 1383; Chulan v. Sukedad, 23 W.R. 9. When a Magistrate is of opinion that the expenses for calling witnesses should be charged from parties he should realise the expenses before issuing the summons—Govind Sahai, 12 A.L.J. 262, 15 Cr.L.J. 363.

The accused person must be given sufficient time to bring his witnesses and have their evidence recorded. Where the accused has not had this opportunity, the order against him must be set aside—Keramuddin, 41 Cal. 806, 15 Cr.L.J. 353, 23 I.C. 721; Jatoi, 27 Cr.L.J. 935, 96 I.C. 381, 20 S.L.R. 122, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 288; Nathu, 6 All 214; Ponthiram, 38 C.L.J. 285, 25 Cr.L.J. 293.

Defence by Pleader:—The person against whom proceedings have been initiated under this Chapter has a right to be defended by a pleader—Jhojha Singh, 23 Cal 493; Girand, 25 All. 375. See Notes under sec. 340.

See also Note 274.

287. Further evidence:—The words "further evidence" indicate that some evidence may be taken by the Magistrate even before drawing up the preliminary order under sec. 112—Nga Po, 2 Cr.L.J. 462 (Bur.).

The Magistrate trying a case is bound by law to hear those witnesses only whose list is sent up by the Police along with the case; and as soon as the witnesses produced in support of the case have been heard, the Magistrate is then to ascertain the names of the persons likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case, and shall summon to give evidence only such of them as he thinks necessary. He is not bound by law to, and should not, save in very exceptional cases, call the other witnesses that the police or any one else from time to time choose to produce—Govind Sahai, 12 A.L.J. 262, 15 Cr.L.J. 363.

Evidence, which relates to occurrences which took place after the information mentioned in sec. 110, Cr. P. Code had been received by the Magistrate, is irrelevant to the matter before him—Jagan, 36 All 239 (242), 12 A.L.J. 399, 15 Cr.L.J. 212, 22 I.C. 996.

In a proceeding under this section it is erroneous on the part of the Magistrate to admit fresh evidence for the prosecution after the close of the defence case. No further evidence can be admitted except under sec. 540 for which valid reasons must be recorded—Ganga Singh, 10 A.L.J. 383, 13 Cr.L.J. 772.

288. Sub-section (2)—Nature of Procedure:—An inquiry in a proceeding for security to keep the peace must be made in the same way as in a trial of a summons case—Bidapati, 25 All 273. If it is tried as a warrant case, the proceedings would be vitiated—Uttam Chand, 85 I.C. 46, 26 Cr.L.J. 430 (All). The Magistrate must proceed as nearly as practicable in the same way as under sec. 242. He must state to the accused the particulars of the matter against him and ask him if he can show cause why he should not be required to execute bonds. The question 'are you willing to execute the bond?' answered by a statement that the accused would execute a bond, is not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section—Palaniappa, 34 Mad. 139. See also Nasir Ahmad, 28 Cr.L.J. 609, 50 All. 120, 102 I.C. 897; A.I.R. 1927 All. 579; Sadhu, 1935 Pesh. 116. But sec. 242, Cr. P. Code does not seem to apply at all to proceedings under sec. 107 Cr. P. Code—Christy v. Christy, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 1019 (1020), 1933 Cr.C. 1556, 35 Cr.L.J. 505, 147 I.C. 997. In an inquiry under sec. 107, the deposition need not be read over to the witnesses in the presence of the accused. See 52 Cal 668 cited in Note 1028 under sec. 360. If the complainant is absent, the proper order is one of discharge under sec. 119, but not of acquittal under sec. 247—Ashrafali v. Nasu Sarkar, 31 C.W.N. 388, 28 Cr.L.J. 479 (480).

The Crown is not bound at the initial stage even to name the witnesses who will support the case by their evidence—Rajendra, 17 C.W.N. 238 (261), 16 C.L.J. 467, 18 I.C. 149, 14 Cr.L.J. 5.

The procedure applicable to the proceedings under sec. 108, Cr. P. Code is that prescribed for warrant cases except that a charge need not be framed: this is clear from sec. 117 (2), Cr. P. Code. The prosecution has to establish the truth of the information and the person against whom an order requiring security for good behaviour is sought is entitled to take up the position of keeping quiet and putting the prosecution to the proof of the allegations made against him—Pitre, 47 Bom 438 (443), 25 Bom.L.R. 97, 25 Cr.L.J. 150, 76 I.C. 294, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 255. An inquiry in a good-behaviour case must be conducted as if it were a warrant case, and the procedure in secs. 251-256 must be followed. According to those sections an accused person cannot be called upon to enter on his defence until the prosecution closes its case (sec. 256)—Ganga Singh, 10 A.L.J. 383, 13 Cr.L.J. 772. The Calcutta and the Punjab High Courts are of opinion that the procedure prescribed for warrant cases is not to be followed strictly but "is as nearly as practicable" to be observed; therefore, the accused cannot invoke the aid of sec. 256 and is not entitled to ask the Court to recall the witnesses who have given evidence against him for further cross-examination—Ahmed Baksh, 1916 P.R. 1, 17 Cr.L.J. 84; Chintamon, 35 Cal. 243; Bija, 8 Lah 265, 28 Cr.L.J. 239. See Note 835 under sec. 256.

The words "the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant cases" in clause (2) of this section are wide enough to cover the special procedure laid down for the trial of summons or warrant cases in Chs. 20 and 21 as well as the general provisions as to inquiries and trials contained in Ch. 24. Therefore, there is no reason why in an enquiry in a case under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code which vitally affects an accused, he should be deprived of the right given to him in provision (a), sec. 350, Cr. P. Code to demand that the witnesses or any of them be re-summoned and re-heard and to ask the Magistrate to see for himself the demeanour of the witnesses and to have a first hand impression of the witnesses and their evidence. The fact whether the inquiry is under secs. 107, 108, 109 or 110, Cr. P. C., makes no difference because sec. 117, clause (2) applies equally to an enquiry under any of these sections—Mahatab Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 All. 438, 1937 A.W.R. (H.C.) 382, 1937 A.L.J. 373, 169 I.C. 833, 1937 A.L.R. 598, 38 Cr.L.J. 804, 1937 A.I.C.R. 29, following Y. Venkatchennaya, A.I.R. 1920 Mad. 337, 56 I.C. 50, 21 Cr.L.J. 402, 27 M.L.T. 178, 38 M.L.J. 370, 1920 M.W.N. 280, 43 Mad. 511 (F.B.); Govinda v. Emp., 20 N.L.J. 117. See also Notes 1012 and 1015.

Ordinarily the person proceeded against under this Chapter and ordered to give security for good behaviour, is entitled to have his witnesses summoned at Government expense as in warrant cases unless the Magistrate, for reasons to be recorded, declines to summon all or any of the witnesses named by the person concerned—Pahlwan, 33 Cr.L.J. 679, 138 I.C. 765, 33 P.L.R. 742, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 529, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 577, 1932 Cr.C. 805. See also Sayyad Habib, 117 I.C. 667, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 23, 30 Cr.L.J. 814; Habib v. Mehdi Hussain, 108 I.C. 907, 29 Cr.L.J. 459 and Muhammad Azim v. Muhammad Ji, 7 P.R. 1898.

'Except that no charge need be framed':—The reason for this exception is obvious. What is equivalent to a charge has already been framed in the order served upon the accused, in accordance with sec. 112—Tirlok, 25 A.L.J. 749, 28 Cr.L.J. 792 (793).

An examination of the persons proceeded against is necessary under sec. 342, Cr. P. Code—Raghubar Dayal, 36 Cr.L.J. 33, 152 I.C. 120, A.I.R. 1934 All. 735, 1934 Cr.C. 936. But see, Binode, 50 Cal 985, where it has been held that sec. 342, Cr. P. C., does not apply to an inquiry under this section. See Note 973 in this connection.

Consent of accused to be bound down:—See Note 236.

288A. Sub-section (3)—"This sub-section has been added to enable the Magistrate in emergent cases to take immediate steps to preserve the public peace or for the public safety by taking security pending the detailed inquiry"—Statement of Objects and Reasons, (1914).

The object of sec. 117 (3) is to empower the Magistrate to direct the person against whom an order under sec. 112 has been made to execute a bond for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour until the conclusion of the enquiry. The power so to direct is made to depend on the Magistrate holding that immediate measures are necessary for any of the following purposes:—

- (1) for the prevention of—
 - (a) a breach of the peace or
 - (b) disturbance of public tranquillity, or
 - (c) the commission of any offence; or
- (2) for the public safety.

Where, therefore, the ground on which the Magistrate considered that immediate measures were necessary was that he apprehended that the person proceeded against would "prove a danger to the witnesses who are to give evidence against him" at the enquiry, the case falls under clause (c) above and the requirements of this sub-section have been satisfied—Pir Shah Murad Shah v. Emp., 27 Cr.L.J. 1030, 96 I.C. 982, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 276.

The Court passing an order under clause (3) of this section must state its reasons in writing for passing the order, i.e., it must state that there was a likelihood of the accused committing a breach of the peace. Where all that the Magistrate said was that the order was passed on account of emergency, held that the order was bad and must be set aside—Sahib Dino, 21 S.L.R. 93, 28 Cr.L.J. 173, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 148. The only condition precedent that is laid down is that the Magistrate must record his reasons in writing—Pir Shah Murad Shah v. Emp., supra.

Where a Magistrate postpones the case after the accused has notified his intention to make a transfer application, he has jurisdiction to pass an order under clause (3) pending the completion of the inquiry—Sahib Dino (supra); Baqridi, 26 A.L.J. 398, 29 Cr.L.J. 448 (449).

An order made under this sub-section is not subject to the provisions of Ch. XXXIX relating to bail. This sub-section has been introduced in the interests of public safety pending an inquiry under secs. 108, 109 and 110; consequently, it is not open to the High Court to reduce the security which the Magistrate orders to be furnished under this clause. At the same time there is nothing to prevent the High Court in the exercise of its inherent powers from considering whether the interim security is not too high. But if the High Court reduces the interim security, such reduction does not fetter the discretion of the Magistrate as to the amount of security which he may ultimately demand—Jagir Singh, 31 Cr.L.J. 812 (813), 125 I.C. 322, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 529.

In making an order under this sub-section there should be no restriction that the accused should produce sureties in moveable property. The Magistrate should follow the words of sec. 117, and require a bond in the form given in the Schedule; he should not introduce the restrictive words "in moveable property"—Harihar, 1932 A.L.J. 157, 33 Cr.L.J. 229 (230), A.I.R. 1932 All. 122.

289. Sub-section (4)—Evidence of general repute:—See this subject fully discussed in Note 272 under section 110.

Prior to the amendment of this sub-section, evidence of general repute was admissible only in those cases where the person was a habitual offender within the meaning of clauses (a) to (e) of sec. 110. It could not be adduced to prove under clause (f) of that section that a man was a desperate and dangerous character—Indar, 40 All. 372; Ranga Reddi, 43 Mad. 450; Kalai, 29 Cal. 779; Babu Murtaza, 9 O.C. 69; Hurmat, 2 A.L.J. 174; Wahid Ali, 11 C.W.N. 789; Akhoy, 5 C.W.N. 249; Nur Muhammad, 1917 P.W.R. 8. Those rulings are no longer good law in view of the amendment of sub-section (4) of the present section.

But evidence of general repute is not admissible in a case where a person is called upon to furnish security under sec. 107—Bidyapati, 25 All. 273; Banarsi Das, 1888 P.R. 16.

It is not everything that may be proved by evidence of general repute. The ordinary rules of evidence apply, with such modification only as is made by this sub-section. No extension of evidence of general repute beyond the limits prescribed in this sub-section is permissible—San Dun v King-Emp, 2 Rang. 641 (642). This sub-section is an exception to the general rule of evidence and like all exceptions to be sparingly used and only in exceptional circumstances. The general rule of law, of course, is that every man is presumed not to be a criminal or an offender until he has been found guilty by a competent Court. Conviction by public opinion should only be permitted to take the place of conviction by a Court in rare and exceptional circumstances, as for example, where the advent of a suspicious stranger in a village coincides with a series of crimes and suspicion waxes so strong and is so well justified that it may fairly be allowed to take the place of proof, and in such unusual circumstances, the section sanctions an experimental use of the security sections. But where a person has lived all his life in a locality and has never even been accused before a Court of law for any crime, far less convicted, there is absolutely no justification for any such experiment or for making any presumption that he is a criminal, not to say a habitual criminal—Rathnam Pillai, 39 Cr.L.J. 230 (231), 172 I.C. 866, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 35, 1937 M.W.N. 1065, 1937 M.Cr.C. 298, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 749, 46 M.L.W. 858.

"Or otherwise"—According to the general rule of interpretation the word "otherwise" must be read as meaning something ejusdem generis with the particular or particulars alleged above it, e.g., hearsay evidence. It is clear that the intention of the Legislature is that the Magistrate should use very large discretion as to the evidence which he may admit in the proceedings—Kallu Mal, 1904 A.W.N. 140; Emp v. Jaggan, 36 All. 239 (242), 12 A.L.J. 399, 15 Cr.L.J. 212, 22 I.C. 996. The expression 'or otherwise' would include statements made by some of the co-accused amounting to a confession of the actual commission of the offence and incriminating the other accused—Sarju, 41 All. 231, 17 A.L.J. 147, 20 Cr.L.J. 206, 49 I.C. 654.

290. Sub-section (5)—Joint trial:—Upon general principles each individual member of the community is, in the absence of exceptional authority conferred by the law to the contrary effect, entitled, when required by the judiciary either to forfeit his liberty or to have that liberty qualified, to insist that his case shall be separately tried. In the eye of the law, each individual citizen is a separate integer or unit of the commonwealth, and his rights of liberty cannot, without express authority in the law, be dealt with jointly with those of a crowd of other persons with whom, far from having a community of interests, he may have incompatibility of interests—Abdul Kadir, 9 All. 452 (457). The main principles applicable to a criminal trial regarding joinder of charges and the joint trial of accused persons may well be held to be applicable to inquiries under sec 107, Cr. P. Code—Pran Krishna, 8 C.W.N. 180 (184). Under this section, the persons who had been associated together may be tried jointly. But there must be clear evidence to prove the association—Deodhari, 6 P.L.T. 810, 26 Cr.L.J. 738. Where several persons are proceeded against under sec. 110, clause (5) of sec. 117 does not make it a condition precedent to such joint inquiry that the suspects shall be shown to be associated together in the order itself. It is a permissive clause which permits a joint inquiry being held where such persons are, as a matter of fact, associated together—Tanwar, 19 S.L.R. 176, 26 Cr.L.J. 1398. Where it was clearly established that the accused (who were father and his three sons) were associated together and formed a gang, and the evidence against them was all the same, held that the case was one in which the accused could be rightly dealt with together and that any minute inquiry into the complicity of each of the accused individually was not necessary—Parasulla, 13 C.W.N. 244. Where the essence of the charge was that the accused formed one gang with one purpose, namely, that of harassing the complainant, and each act spoken to by the witnesses was an act prompted by that common object and directed towards accomplishing it, and the evidence of the common association of all the persons for that one purpose was particularly strong, held that they could be jointly tried—Taranagowd, 51 Mad. 515, 29 Cr.L.J. 77 (79). If a gang of disorderly persons join together committing acts of violence or criminal intimidation, proceedings against the whole gang in the same case are proper, and it suffices in such cases that some members of the gang committed various acts. It is not necessary that the evidence should establish that on every occasion the whole gang were together. It is sufficient if the evidence establishes that there is a gang of persons joining together to commit such acts as the security-section exists to prevent—Bakaram, 23 Cr.L.J. 741 (Nag). Where certain persons serving under a common master were found to have committed certain acts of extortion for the benefit of their master, held that although each of the acts alleged was not done by all of them together, yet they were so associated together as to justify a joint inquiry—Srikanta, 9 C.W.N. 898, 2 Cr.L.J. 554.

The fact that persons are members of an undivided family would not by itself render each member liable for the misconduct of any other member. The test to be applied is, whether there has been habitual association between the persons charged in respect of the misconduct alleged in the complaint—Kripasindhu, 1918 M.W.N. 751, 19 Cr.L.J. 905, 47 I.C. 277, 8 M.L.W. 461.

Even where the association of the several accused is established satisfactorily, the Magistrate has a discretion to try the accused jointly or separately—Hari Telang, 4 C.W.N. 531, 27 Cal. 781; Hossein, 6 Cal. 96; Jai Govind, 15 O.C. 263. See also 19 S.L.R. 176 (181), A.I.R. 1926 Sind. 69. Although there is no legal prohibition in jointly trying a number of persons proceeded against under sec 107, still it is highly unjust and unfair to proceed against them jointly unless it is apparent that they formed a gang. The case of each has to be considered separately and this is not likely to be effected if the trial is joint—Muhammed Ismail, 21 A.L.J. 841, 25 Cr.L.J. 952, 81 I.C. 600, A.I.R. 1924 All. 195.

Association, what is not?—In the absence of any evidence to prove that the persons constituted a gang, the mere fact that they belonged to one tribe and village with a bad name, is not sufficient evidence of association, and, therefore, they cannot be tried jointly in one and the same proceeding—Murad, 1895 P.R. 1. Thus, the fact that the accused persons are close neighbours and had been previously implicated in good many cases together, does not lead to the inference that they were associated together in the particular offence under inquiry, and does not justify a joint trial of them all—Jogendra, 21 Cr.L.J. 700 (Cal.).

The word "association" cannot apply to such cases where the offence is purely personal to the offender. For instance, the question whether a person is a habitual thief or not is personal to himself and forms a separate matter by itself. So, where four persons were charged under sec. 110 (a) as being thieves by habit, it was held that there was an error in law in trying them all together—K-E v. Po Twe, 4 L.B.R. 46, 6 Cr.L.J. 284. So also, the fact that the accused are desperate and dangerous persons hazardous to the community, is a fact which pertains to each accused separately, and there is no such connection between them in regard to the character which may be deemed as habitual association. Consequently, proceedings should be taken separately against each of the accused persons—Hari Telang, 27 Cal. 781 (783), 4 C.W.N. 531; Kutti Gounden, 47 M.L.J. 689, 26 Cr.L.J. 673, 86 I.C. 49, 1925 M.W.N. 57, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 189; Angnoo Singh, 71 I.C. 865, 45 All. 109, 20 A.L.J. 881, A.I.R. 1923 All. 35, 24 Cr.L.J. 257; Jhari Lal, 65 I.C. 484, 23 Cr.L.J. 100, 3 P.L.T. 538, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 104. These cases were cases in which joint trial could not properly be held, in as much as the matter under enquiry was whether a person individually was or was not a habitual offender. There can, however, be no doubt that a joint trial could be held, and a joint trial was the proper procedure, in the case of persons acting in concert; persons who are associates and confederates, so as to call into operation the provisions of clause (5) of this section—Parbati, 35 Cr.L.J. 952, 61 Cal. 588, 149 I.C. 460, 1934 Cr.C. 690, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 482. In every case it has to be considered how far the evidence proves association and how far the various persons tried are prejudiced by a joint trial—Ganti Veera Reddi, 39 Cr.L.J. 816, 176 I.C. 815, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 615, 47 M.L.W. 640, 1938 M.W.N. 601.

Again, sub-section (5) does not authorise a Magistrate to deal with persons charged under separate sections in one and the same inquiry. Thus, a person called upon to give security under sec. 109, and another person called upon to give security under sec. 110 cannot be tried together in the same proceeding—Mehen, 8 O.C. 91, 2 Cr.L.J. 224.

And lastly, two contending parties opposed to one another and inclined to commit an offence involving a breach of the peace, cannot be said to have been associated together, and a joint trial of such contending parties is illegal. The case against the persons on the one side at least should be tried separately from that against the other side—Pran Krishna, 8 C.W.N. 180; Ganapathi, 31 Mad. 276; Kamal, 11 C.W.N. 472, 5 C.L.J. 231, 5 Cr.L.J. 197; Har Dutt, 14 A.L.J. 268, 17 Cr.L.J. 165; Kishore, 6 P.L.T. 768, 26 Cr.L.J. 1248, 88 I.C. 864, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 32. But in 9 All. 452 it has been held that such a joint trial is not ipso facto null and void, except where the accused has been prejudiced thereby.

An objection to the joint trial of accused persons ought to be taken at the beginning of the trial, or, at least, at an early stage thereof. This objection is not sufficient to set aside the order when it is taken at the time of argument after examination of witnesses on both sides—Amjad Ali, 25 Cr.L.J. 35, 75 I.C. 723, 5 P.L.T. 129, 2 P.L.R. 79 (Cr.), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 498.

The legality of a joint trial must depend on what is alleged for the prosecution, not on the facts subsequently found to be true. Otherwise in many cases there could be no determination whether the joint trial was legal or not till the result of the case was known, a proposition which has only to be stated to be rejected—Jogendra, 25 C.W.N. 334, 61 I.C. 233, 22 Cr.L.J. 377; Parbati, 35 Cr.L.J. 952 (954), 61 Cal. 588, 149 I.C. 460, 1934 Cr.C. 690, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 482. See also Sundar Lal, A.I.R. 1933 All. 676 (677), 1933 A.L.J. 777, 1933 Cr.C. 1188, 146 I.C. 900, 35 Cr.L.J. 183; Chheda Lal, 34 Cr.L.J. 793, 144 I.C. 577, 10 O.W.N. 233, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh. 195, 1933 Cr.C. 382, Ind. Rul. 1933 Oudh. 269. For contra see 65 I.C. 484, 3 P.L.T. 538, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 104.

The law requires that when proceedings are taken against more than one person, for a joint trial under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code proof should be given that they were associated together in the matter under enquiry—Nizamaddi, 23 C.W.N. 488, 20 Cr.L.J. 551, 51 I.C. 889. There can be no doubt that a joint trial could be held, and a joint trial was the proper procedure, in the case of persons acting in concert; persons who are associates and confederates, so as to call into operation the provision contained in sec. 117 (5), Cr. P. C. The illegality of a joint trial cannot be given effect to in the absence of proof of any prejudice. In cases where proceedings are taken joint against more persons than one under sec. 110, the Magistrate is required to come to separate finding as regards each of the persons charged individually—Parbati, 61 Cal. 588, 149 I.C. 460, 1934 Cr.C. 690, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 482, 35 Cr.L.J. 952, distinguishing Hari Telang, 27 Cal. 781, 4 C.W.N. 531; Angnoo Singh, 71 I.C. 865, 45 All. 109, 20 A.L.J. 881, A.I.R. 1923 All. 35, 24 Cr.L.J. 257; In re Kutti Goundan, 86 I.C. 49, 47 M.L.J. 689, 1925 M.W.N. 57, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 189, 26 Cr.L.J. 673; and Jhari Lal, 65 I.C. 484, 23 Cr.L.J. 100, 3 P.L.T. 538, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 104. See also Kalu Mirza, 37 Cal. 91. Even in cases where one and the same proceeding taken by the Magistrate under secs. 107, 112, 117 and 118, Cr. P. Code improperly deals with more than one person, the matter must be considered upon the individual merits of that particular case, and it would, at least, amount to an irregularity, which may or may not be covered by the somewhat broadly worded provisions of sec. 537, Cr. P. Code according to the circumstances of each case—Abdul Kadir, 9 All. 452 (459). The Madras High Court has, however, held that such a joinder is not a mere irregularity but an illegality which will vitiate the proceedings—Ganapathi, 31 Mad. 276. This view was followed by the Nagpur Court in 5 N.L.R. 65.

In proceedings under sec. 110, Cr. P. C., every accused person proceeded against under that section is entitled to a separate notice and it is not fair to him to have the charges which are going to be made against him confused with the charges that are being made against somebody else—Emp. v. Ram Lal, 116 I.C. 25, 51 All. 663, A.I.R. 1929 All. 73, 30 Cr.L.J. 562, 1929 A.L.J. 361. But where the applicants were alleged by the prosecution to be members of a gang of habitual thieves and robbers and were always associated jointly in the commission of thefts, burglaries and robberies, it was perfectly right in issuing one order against them under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., calling upon them to show cause why they should not be bound over to be of good behaviour under sec. 110, Cr. P. C.—Hubdar Ali, 34 Cr.L.J. 852, 144 I.C. 944, 10 O.W.N. 325, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh. 251, 1933 Cr.C. 557.

Section 117, clause (5) is not specifically limited to proceedings under sec. 107 or sec. 108. It is true that when a person is charged with being a habitual thief, it is nilhil ad rem that some other person with whom he may or may not have associated, is also a habitual thief; but when it is alleged that a person is in the habit of committing theft in association with other persons as members of a gang of thieves, the Magistrate is at liberty in his discretion to deal with the case of all such persons in the same enquiry. Of course, in deciding whether an order under sec. 117 (5) should be made or not, the Magistrate must consider whether, if the order is made, one or more of the persons concerned might be prejudiced in his defence—Rangoo Mean, 35 Cr.L.J. 1257, 151 I.C. 205, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 121, 1934 Cr.C. 713, 12 Rang. 169.

All persons who joined in the conspiracy to molest other people and to cause them injuries could, if their common aims and objects were once established, certainly be tried at the same trial under sec. 107, Cr. P. C.—Bajirao, 25 Cr.L.J. 132, 76 I.C. 228, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 166.

A joint inquiry is out of the question when one charge at least is that two persons are so desperate and dangerous as to render their being at large without security hazardous to the community. There certainly can be no such intimate connexion between two individuals in regard to their characters as to render them liable to a joint inquisition—Rathinam Pillai, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 35, 1937 M.W.N. 1065, 1937 M.Cr.C. 298, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 749, 46 M.L.W. 858, 39 Cr.L.J. 230, 172 I.C. 866.

See also Note 270 under sec. 110, Cr. P. Code.

Separate finding and evidence:—Where proceedings are taken jointly against more persons than one under this sub-section, the Magistrate must come to a separate finding as regards each of them individually—Ajodhya, 35 Cal. 929; Kalu Mirza, 14 C.W.N. 49, 11 Cr.L.J. 23, 5 I.C. 29, 37 Cal. 91; Murad, 1895 P.R. 1; Brijnandan, 37 All. 33, 16 Cr.L.J. 46; Khairu, 25 Cr.L.J. 1377, 83 I.C. 337, 19 S.L.R. 96; Ghousbux, A.I.R.

1937 Sind 26 (27), 167 I.C. 227, 30 S.L.R. 382, 38 Cr.L.J. 363, 9 R.S. 173; and the judgment must show that the Magistrate has considered the case of each individual accused—Kalu Mirza, supra. The case of each person is to be considered on its own merits, and it should not be allowed to be mixed up or prejudiced by that of the others—Nathu, 6 All. 214; Md Ismail, 21 A.L.J. 841, 25 Cr.L.J. 952, 81 I.C. 600, A.L.R. 1924 All. 195; Dhanoo, 34 C.W.N. 144, 31 Cr.L.J. 944, 125 I.C. 855, A.L.R. 1930 Cal. 294. Upon regeral principles every accused person is entitled to insist that his case shall be tried separately from the case of other persons similarly circumstanced—Abdul Kadir, 9 All. 452; Bahadur Shah, 1910 P.R. 4, 10 Cr.L.J. 591.

An order passed under sec. 118 or sec. 123 (3), Cr. P. Code must be self-contained—Ghousbux, supra.

The Magistrate must insist upon definite evidence being given against each person charged—Jai Govind, 15 O.C. 263, 13 Cr.L.J. 760. What is evidence against one cannot be treated as evidence against all others, without discriminating between the cases of the various persons implicated—Abdul Kadir, 9 All. 452; Angnu Singh, 45 All. 109 (111). Thus, where the evidence recorded by the Magistrate has bearing only on 11 out of 26 persons called upon to show cause, his order binding down all the 26 persons is not valid; it is valid only as regards those against whom the evidence is relevant—Kassim Biswas, 10 C.L.R. 335.

118. (1) If, upon such inquiry, it is proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, with or without sureties, the Magistrate shall make an order accordingly:

Provided—

first, that no person shall be ordered to give security of a nature different from, or of an amount larger than, or for a period longer than, that specified in the order made under section 112;

secondly, that the amount of every bond shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and shall not be excessive, thirdly, that, when the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made is a minor, the bond shall be executed only by his sureties.

291. "If it is proved, etc."—Evidence:—These words show that an order under this section cannot be made without inquiry and proof—Gaiba, Ratanlal 585 (586). The Magistrate must give his reason for finding it proved that security is necessary—In re Raja, 10 Bom. 174 (175).

The mere fact that the accused person says that he is willing to give security to keep the peace is not the kind of proof required by this section as condition precedent to the taking of security—Prem Singh, 1917 P.R. 27, 18 Cr.L.J. 847; Sheodan, 1915 P.R. 21. See Note 236 under sec. 107. When the accused denied the allegations but expressed his willingness to execute a bond, whereupon he was ordered to execute a bond, the order was held to be illegal, in as much as the accused denied every allegation on the basis of which he was considered liable to furnish security, and no evidence was taken to prove those allegations—Rai Singh, 20 Cr.L.J. 105; Kurwa, 26 A.L.J. 519, 30 Cr.L.J. 122 (124).

292. Order for security:—The object of this section is the prevention and not the punishment of offences, and consequently a Magistrate when passing an order in terms of this section, ought not to have any direct intention of inflicting punishment—Kandhaia, 7 All 67 (72). Therefore, a Magistrate ought not to impose arbitrary conditions not essential for the object in view, which it would be impossible for the accused to fulfil, still less impossible conditions. The order must not be tantamount to saying that the prisoner shall not furnish any security at all but must go to jail—Narain Soobadhee, 22 W.R. 37.

According to the first proviso to this section, the final order must not be at variance with the preliminary order. Thus, the Magistrate cannot vary the conditional order passed under sec 112 by imposing further conditions in the final order—Ramanand, 11 O.C. 267, 8 Cr.L.J. 344; Jangi Singh, 1906 A.W.N. 276, 4 Cr.L.J. 405. So also, it is illegal to require a bond for good behaviour, when the notice was to show cause with respect to keeping the peace—Driver, 25 Cal 798. Similarly, the Magistrate is not competent to demand security with reference to sec. 110, when the preliminary order was with reference to sec. 109—Nga He, U.B.R. (1897—1901) 24. (In such a case, the proper course is to institute fresh proceedings—Ibid.). So again, the Magistrate is not justified in demanding security for a larger amount than what was communicated to the accused in the preliminary order—Kishen, 1907 P.W.R. 11, 5 Cr.L.J. 219; Isree Pershad, 18 W.R. 61; Debi, 1885 A.W.N. 30; Sultan, 26 Cr.L.J. 767, 86 I.C. 351, 19 S.L.R. 332; nor is he justified in demanding sureties when the summons made no mention of sureties at all—Isree Pershad, 18 W.R. 61. In cases where heavier security is deemed necessary, the Magistrate ought to issue fresh summons setting forth the intended amount—Isree Pershad, 18 W.R. 61; Md. Ismail, 1881 A.W.N. 152. See Note 280 under the heading "Amendment of the order."

The Magistrate cannot in the final order direct the accused to give security for a longer period than what was mentioned in the notice under section 112—Ramchandra, 26 Mad 471 (472).

A person against whom an order is passed under this section must be given sufficient time to furnish security. Where the Magistrate ordered the accused to furnish security with four sureties of Rs. 3,000 each on the very day, and imprisoned the accused on his failure to do so, held that the order was illegal and must be set aside—Maung Tun, 4 Bur L.J. 172, 27 Cr.L.J. 318.

No condition and limitations can be imposed upon persons ordered to give security under this section—Jhoja Singh, 24 Cal 155.

Section 109, Cr. P. C., merely requires a Magistrate to issue a notice and does not empower him to pass the final order. This is done under sec. 118, which in its turn is dependent upon the order passed under sec. 112. All that the final order can contain is a direction to furnish security to be of good behaviour for a period which cannot, in any case, exceed one year, and which must not be beyond that specified in the order under sec. 112. Any order which specifies a period of imprisonment in default is to that extent illegal. The penalty for a failure to furnish security is given in sec. 123 (1), Cr. P. C.—Rangi, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 265, 1936 Cr.C. 1138.

The order under this section, though restricted in its contents by the order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., is the operative order, and time runs from the order passed under this section, and not from the order passed under sec. 112—Ghousbux, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 26 (28), 167 I.C. 227, 38 Cr.L.J. 363, 9 R.S. 173.

Fresh security upon expiry of a previous and existing security:—A security to keep the peace once given is sufficient for that purpose so long as it is in force in respect of every act of the person bound over breaking any of the conditions. A second order to give further security during the continuance of the first one is not contemplated by law; but if upon the expiry of the first order the dispute still exists, a further security may be demanded on fresh proceedings properly taken—Mahomed Abdul Bari, 4 C.W.N. 121.

Supplementary order for larger security—A Magistrate passed a final order directing certain persons to furnish security in certain amounts. A month later he passed another order directing one of the accused to furnish security in a much bigger sum and stating that he had overlooked that this accused had been called upon in the preliminary order to furnish a larger security. It was held that the second order was ultra vires. After the Magistrate had finished his case, it was beyond his power to alter the order—Rajkumar, 17 A.L.J. 335, 20 Cr.L.J. 486, 51 I.C. 470

See Note 275.

293. Amount of security:—The provisions of Chapter VIII are not intended to punish but to prevent crime and it is not permissible to limit the security or the amount of security to such descriptions that it is perfectly impossible for the accused to furnish them, thus rendering it certain that they will be committed to jail—Allahdad v Emp., 26 Cr.L.J. 179 (180), 83 I.C. 883, 17 S.L.R. 160, A.I.R. 1924 Sind. 120

Under proviso (2), in fixing the amount of security, the Magistrate should have due regard to the circumstances of the case, and the security should not be disproportionate to the ability of the accused to furnish it, with reference to his means and station in life—Rama, 16 Bom 372; Nathu, 6 All 214; Juggust, 2 Cal 110 (112); Ali, 1900 P.R. 17; Jawaya, 1890 P.R. 30; Firai, 5 S.L.R. 10, 12 Cr.L.J. 110, 9 I.C. 651. The Magistrate is the best judge to decide what would be the proper amount of security, which must vary with the danger to be apprehended and the means of the parties. But the Magistrate cannot make an order that is altogether unreasonable—Juggut Chander, 2 Cal 110 (111). The amount should be such as to give the accused a fair chance of complying with the conditions of the security, and the Magistrate should not fix an amount for which there is a probability of the accused being unable to find security—Ali, 1900 P.R. 17, Wasia, 1901 P.R. 28, Barkat, 1900 P.R. 24; Anon., 2 Weir 52, 4 M.H.C.R. App 46; Dedar, 2 Cal 384 (385); Satgur, A.I.R. 1933 All 674, 1933 A.L.J. 927, 1933 Cr.C. 1186, 145 I.C. 875, 35 Cr.L.J. 183; Satindra, 32 Cr.L.J. 593 (598), 130 I.C. 880, A.I.R. 1931 Cal 18, 52 C.L.J. 405, 1931 Cr.C. 50, Ind Rul 1931 Cal 400. When the accused is unable to give security for the amount required and remains in jail, it is an index that the Magistrate has not exercised a proper discretion in fixing the amount—Raza Ali, 23 All 80. See Note 243A.

There is no warrant in law for taking separate bonds from the accused and his sureties individually and severally exceeding in the aggregate the amount for which the accused is liable—Jawaya, 1890 P.R. 30

Moveable property as security—As to the nature of the security the provisions of Cr. P. C., read with Schedule V, Form XI, show that what in the case of a bond for good behaviour must be given is personal security and the same is by inference the case in respect of a bond to keep the peace. If a surety offers a house or cattle, then this is not the security required because his risk is confined to the house or cattle Mohammad Baksh, 25 Cr.L.J. 796, 81 I.C. 316, 26 O.C. 284, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 80.

House property as security—The accused was ordered under this section to furnish a bond for Rs 200 and a respectable surety. Such a surety came forward and offered security in the shape of house property worth Rs 500. The Magistrate rejected the surety. It was held that the surety being respectable and the house being worth Rs 500 should have been accepted, though it was true that under sec 514 only moveable property could be attached and sold during the surety's lifetime for the recovery of the penalty—Nanha, 16 A.L.J. 503, 19 Cr.L.J. 711; 46 I.C. 295. The Magistrate should follow the words of sec. 117, Cr. P. C., and not introduce the restrictive words "in moveable property". When sureties are produced, the Magistrate should consider whether, having regard to all the circumstances, they are fit persons to be accepted or not. When they have been accepted, the bond executed by them should be in the form given in the schedule. If the Magistrate has any apprehension that the sureties may part with their properties and be unable to fulfil, he may by way of precaution accept a hypothecation bond from them as a condition precedent to

292. Order for security:—The object of this section is the prevention and not the punishment of offences, and consequently a Magistrate when passing an order in terms of this section, ought not to have any direct intention of inflicting punishment—Kandhaia, 7 All 67 (72). Therefore, a Magistrate ought not to impose arbitrary conditions not essential for the object in view, which it would be impossible for the accused to fulfil, still less impossible conditions. The order must not be tantamount to saying that the prisoner shall not furnish any security at all but must go to jail—Narain Soobadhee, 22 W.R. 37.

According to the first proviso to this section, the final order must not be at variance with the preliminary order. Thus, the Magistrate cannot vary the conditional order passed under sec. 112 by imposing further conditions in the final order—Ramanand, 11 O.C. 267, 8 Cr.L.J. 344; Jangi Singh, 1906 A.W.N. 276, 4 Cr.L.J. 405. So also, it is illegal to require a bond for good behaviour, when the notice was to show cause with respect to keeping the peace—Driver, 25 Cal. 798. Similarly, the Magistrate is not competent to demand security with reference to sec. 110, when the preliminary order was with reference to sec. 109—Nga He, U.B.R. (1897—1901) 24. (In such a case, the proper course is to institute fresh proceedings—Ibid). So again, the Magistrate is not justified in demanding security for a larger amount than what was communicated to the accused in the preliminary order—Kishen, 1907 P.W.R. 11, 5 Cr.L.J. 219; Isree Pershad, 18 W.R. 61; Debi, 1885 A.W.N. 30; Sultan, 26 Cr.L.J. 767, 86 I.C. 351, 19 S.L.R. 332; nor is he justified in demanding sureties when the summons made no mention of sureties at all—Isree Pershad, 18 W.R. 61. In cases where heavier security is deemed necessary, the Magistrate ought to issue fresh summons setting forth the intended amount—Isree Pershad, 18 W.R. 61; Md. Ismail, 1881 A.W.N. 152. See Note 280 under the heading "Amendment of the order."

The Magistrate cannot in the final order direct the accused to give security for a longer period than what was mentioned in the notice under section 112—Ramchandra, 26 Mad. 471 (472).

A person against whom an order is passed under this section must be given sufficient time to furnish security. Where the Magistrate ordered the accused to furnish security with four sureties of Rs 3,000 each on the very day, and imprisoned the accused on his failure to do so, held that the order was illegal and must be set aside—Maung Tun, 4 Bur.L.J. 172, 27 Cr.L.J. 318.

No condition and limitations can be imposed upon persons ordered to give security under this section—Jhoja Singh, 24 Cal 155.

Section 109, Cr. P. C., merely requires a Magistrate to issue a notice and does not empower him to pass the final order. This is done under sec. 118, which in its turn is dependent upon the order passed under sec. 112. All that the final order can contain is a direction to furnish security to be of good behaviour for a period which cannot, in any case, exceed one year, and which must not be beyond that specified in the order under sec. 112. Any order which specifies a period of imprisonment in default is to that extent illegal. The penalty for a failure to furnish security is given in sec. 123 (1), Cr. P. C.—Rangi, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 265, 1936 Cr.C. 1138.

The order under this section, though restricted in its contents by the order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., is the operative order, and time runs from the order passed under this section, and not from the order passed under sec. 112—Ghousbux, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 26 (28), 167 I.C. 227, 38 Cr.L.J. 363, 9 R.S. 173.

Fresh security upon expiry of a previous and existing security:—A security to keep the peace once given is sufficient for that purpose so long as it is in force in respect of every act of the person bound over breaking any of the conditions. A second order to give further security during the continuance of the first one is not contemplated by law; but if upon the expiry of the first order the dispute still exists, a further security may be demanded on fresh proceedings properly taken—Mahomed Abdul Bari, 4 C.W.N. 121.

Supplementary order for larger security:—A Magistrate passed a final order directing certain persons to furnish security in certain amounts. A month later he passed another order directing one of the accused to furnish security in a much bigger sum and stating that he had overlooked that this accused had been called upon in the preliminary order to furnish a larger security. It was held that the second order was ultra vires. After the Magistrate had finished his case, it was beyond his power to alter the order—Rajlumar, 17 ALJ 335, 20 CrLJ 486, 51 IC 470.

293. Amount of security:—The provisions of Chapter VIII are not intended to punish but to prevent crime and it is not permissible to limit the security or the amount of security to such descriptions that it is perfectly impossible for the accused to furnish them, thus rendering it certain that they will be committed to jail—Allahdad v Emp., 26 CrLJ 179 (180), 83 IC 883, 17 SLR 160, AIR 1924 Sind. 120.

Under proviso (2), in fixing the amount of security, the Magistrate should have due regard to the circumstances of the case, and the security should not be disproportionate to the ability of the accused to furnish it, with reference to his means and station in life—Rama, 16 Bom 372; Nathu, 6 All 214; Juggust, 2 Cal 110 (112); Ali, 1900 PR 17; Jawaya, 1890 PR 30, Fisal, 5 SLR 10, 12 CrLJ 110, 9 IC 651. The Magistrate is the best judge to decide what would be the proper amount of security, which must vary with the danger to be apprehended and the means of the parties. But the Magistrate cannot make an order that is altogether unreasonable—Juggut Chander, 2 Cal 110 (111). The amount should be such as to give the accused a fair chance of complying with the conditions of the security, and the Magistrate should not fix an amount for which there is a probability of the accused being unable to find security—Ali, 1900 PR 17; Wasia, 1901 PR 28; Barkat, 1900 PR 24; Anon., 2 Weir 52, 4 MHC.R. App 46; Dedar, 2 Cal 384 (385); Satgur, AIR 1933 All 674, 1933 ALJ 927, 1933 CrC 1186, 145 IC 875, 35 CrLJ 183; Satindra, 32 CrLJ 593 (598), 120 IC 880, AIR 1931 Cal 18, 52 CLJ 405, 1931 CrC 50, Ind Rul 1931 Cal 400. When the accused is unable to give security for the amount required and remains in jail, it is an index that the Magistrate has not exercised a proper discretion in fixing the amount—Raza Ali, 23 All 80. See Note 243A.

Movable property as security —As to the nature of the security the provisions of Cr P C, read with Schedule V, Form XI, show that what in the case of a bond for good behaviour must be given is personal security and the same is by inference the case in respect of a bond to keep the peace. If a surety offers a house or cattle, then this is not the security required because his risk is confined to the house or cattle—Mohammad Baksh, 25 CrLJ 796, 81 IC 316, 26 OC 284, AIR 1924 Oudh 80.

House property as security —The accused was ordered under this section to furnish a bond for Rs 200 and a respectable surety. Such a surety came forward and offered security in the shape of house property worth Rs 500. The Magistrate rejected the surety. It was held that the surety being respectable and the house being worth Rs 500 should have been accepted, though it was true that under sec 514 only movable property could be attached and sold during the surety's lifetime for the recovery of the penalty—Nanka, 16 ALJ 503, 19 CrLJ 711; 46 IC 295. The Magistrate should follow the words of sec 117, Cr. P C, and not introduce the restrictive words "in moveable property." When sureties are produced, the Magistrate should consider whether, having regard to all the circumstances, they are fit persons to be accepted or not. When they have been accepted, the bond executed by them should be in the form given in the schedule. If the Magistrate has any apprehension that the sureties may part with their properties and be unable to fulfil, he may by way of precaution accept a hypothecation bond from them as a condition precedent to their being accepted as reliable sureties—Harshar, 33 Cr.L.J. 229, 136 I.C. 65, 1932 A.L.J. 157, 1932 Cr.C. 147, A.I.R. 1932 All 122, Ind Rul. 1932 All 113.

293A. Minor:—In the case of a minor the bond shall be executed only by his sureties See proviso 3. The reason for this proviso is no doubt the incapacity of the minor to contract—Mipyn, 4 L.B.R. 12, 6 Cr.L.J. 123.

294. Revision by High Court:—The question whether it is necessary in the interest of keeping the peace to take security from a person, is essentially a question which primarily concerns the Magistrate and the local police. If the District Magistrate considers it unnecessary to take action, the Sessions Judge or High Court will not ordinarily interfere—Md. Yusuf v. Abdul, 53 All. 148, 32 Cr.L.J. 570 (571). The power to demand security from suspected persons is a power that is almost as much of an executive as of judicial nature; and the jurisdiction with which the Magistrate is invested with regard to suspected persons is a very large one. Therefore, the High Court will interfere only on the very clearest and strongest grounds which demonstrate that there has been in the particular case a gross miscarriage of justice—Balmukund, 23 P.R. 1889.

The High Court sitting in revision would not ordinarily constitute itself as a Court on facts—Ghousbux, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 26, 167 I.C. 227, 30 S.L.R. 382, 38 Cr.L.J. 363. But the High Court will interfere in revision where the order is based on no evidence on the record—Sher Singh v. Hari Singh, 1912 P.L.R. 195, 13 Cr.L.J. 720; Sukhdeo, 14 A.L.J. 215, 17 Cr.L.J. 157; or where the materials on which the order was passed are clearly insufficient to support the order—Nafar Chandra, 38 Cr.L.J. 198, 28 C.W.N. 23, 25 Cr.L.J. 189, 76 I.C. 429, A.I.R. 1924 Cal 114; or where there is nothing on the record to show that an inquiry as required by sec. 117 was held—Mul Chand, 37 All. 30, 12 A.L.J. 1262; Sukhdeo, 14 A.L.J. 215. It will also interfere where the judgment of the District Judge deciding an appeal under section 110 is a very short one and does not show that evidence was all examined and carefully weighed—Sarwan, 14 A.L.J. 279, 17 Cr.L.J. 167; or where the Magistrate disbelieved the evidence produced by the accused without any substantial reason—Mitharban, 16 Cr.L.J. 805, 13 A.L.J. 1046; Hakim Singh, 13 A.L.J. 1055, 16 Cr.L.J. 810; or where the Magistrate has not given due effect to the evidence for the defence—Gayani, 17 Cr.L.J. 461 (All); or where the Lower Appellate Court in hearing the appeal has not taken the trouble to rehear the case—Ibid.

The High Court has the power to interfere in revision where the exercise of discretion being required by law, the lower Court exercised no discretion at all or exercised its discretion in a wholly unreasonable and improper manner, e.g., where the Magistrate ordered security to be furnished in an unreasonably large sum out of all proportion to the means of the accused—In re Juggut, 2 Cal 110 (111). The High Court may interfere in revision if there is a material error in any judicial proceeding, i.e., an error resulting in an unjust order for security—Ibid (at p. 113). The High Court is always very unwilling to interfere in the case of orders passed under the preventing sections of the Cr. P. Code. These orders are largely of an administrative nature; they are concerned with the maintenance of the public peace and the prevention of the breaches of the public peace for the maintenance of which the District Magistrate is responsible, and the needs of which he, as the responsible officer on the spot, is presumably in the best position to know; but these orders, though largely of an administrative nature, have a legal basis, and if it is clear that an order under sec. 112, Cr. P. C., has no legal basis, and that the District Magistrate has proceeded upon a wrong legal principle applying equally to the wrong-doers as well as to the wronged the wide powers conferred upon him by the law for the restraint of the wrong-doers and for the protection of the wronged, the High Court is bound to interfere—Jasoda Lekhray v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Sind 167 (168).

It must be rarely, if ever, that a High Court will feel called upon to reverse an order of a Magistrate refusing to demand security under any of those sections—

Gyan Singh, AIR. 1934 All. 24, 1933 A.L.J. 1201; Ram Lal v. Bankateshar, 25 Cr.L.J. 1149, 81 IC 973, 11 O.L.J. 732, AIR. 1925 Oudh 138, 1 O.W.N. 359, 28 O.C. 44. See also Notes 250B, 276 and 295.

Appeal:—See sec. 406 and Notes under it.

119. If, on an inquiry under section 117, it is not proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, the Magistrate shall make an entry on the record to that effect, and if such person is in custody only for the purposes of the inquiry, shall release him, or, if such person is not in custody, shall discharge him.

295. Absence of the Complainant:—In absence of the complainant or any evidence on his behalf or on behalf of the opposite party in a case under sec 107, Cr. P. C., the Magistrate must proceed to inquire into the truth of the information and, no evidence having been produced before him, he must hold under this section that it is not proved that the person in respect of whom enquiry is made should execute a bond. Sec. 247, Cr. P. C., is not applicable to a case like this—Asrafali v. Nasu, 31 C.W.N. 388

295A. Further inquiry:—The word 'discharge' means merely a permission to depart. It does not mean the discharge of an 'accused' person as contemplated by sec. 437 (now sec 436) so as to enable further proceedings being instituted under that section against the person discharged under this section—Velu v. Chidamabar, 33 Mad 85. Section 437 (now sec 436) does not enable a Court to direct further inquiry in a case of discharge of a person against whom security proceedings were instituted under Chapter VIII, because such a person is not an 'accused' within the meaning of that section—Imam Mandal, 27 Cal 662; Daxanth, 33 Cal 8, Muhammad Khan, 1905 P.R. 42; Roshan Singh, 46 All 235, 22 A.L.J. 129; Narain v. Durga, 1911 P.R. 6, 12 Cr.L.J. 232; Ismail v. Nollan, 1914 U.B.R. 1st Qr. 3, 13 Cr.L.J. 531. (But the contrary view has been taken in Fayazuddin, 24 All 148; Kharga, 36 All. 147, Manna, 1903 P.R. 21, Mona Puna, 16 Bom 661; Baba Yashwanta, 35 Bom 401; and Mutsaddi Lal, 21 All 107, where it is held that the person proceeded against under this chapter may be said to be an 'accused' person and further inquiry may therefore be directed)

Section 436 as now amended in 1923 clearly applies only to the case of a person accused of an 'offence'; further inquiry cannot therefore be directed against a person discharged under sec 119, because the person proceeded against under this chapter is not accused of an offence—Phani v. Kunja, 25 Cr.L.J. 679, 81 IC 167, AIR. 1926 Cal 262; Maung Than, 2 Rang 30. The only section under which a Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate may take action in such a case is under sec 438, Cr. P. C., by making a report to the High Court; Mohammad Yusuf v. Abdul Majid, 32 Cr.L.J. 570, 130 IC 630, AIR. 1931 All 53, 53 All 148, 1930 A.L.J. 1485, 1931 Cr.C. 125. The District Magistrate should not append to his letter of reference what appears to be the opinion of the Police Prosecutor describing the order of the trial Magistrate as perverse. If he is of the opinion that the letter of the Police Prosecutor contains material of assistance to the Court he should embody that material in his own letter. He should not permit himself to be associated with criticism by a police officer of an order of the Magistrate—Ali Muhammad, AIR 1936 Sind 243, 1936 Cr.C. 1099, 165 IC 950, 38 Cr.L.J. 117. The proceedings under this chapter should be taken with care and caution only when the public interest compels, and where there is no reason to suppose that the Magistrate is not a careful and responsible Magistrate, who does not know his charge and where he has seen the witnesses and has heard what they have to say, and he has come to the conclusion that the case against the suspected persons is unworthy of credit, and that the evidence should not be believed, the High Court will not interfere—Ali Muhammad, supra.

The withdrawal of the first charge-sheet under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., is no bar to a second proceeding under the same section—In re Muthia Moopan, 36 Mad., 315. When a person proceeded against under sec. 110, Cr. P. C., was tried and released by the Magistrate, he is competent to institute further proceedings under the law on fresh information received—Imam Mondal, 27 Cal. 662. The rulings cited above within the brackets are no longer good law. See Note 1180 under sec. 436. See also Notes 250B and 294 in this connection.

295B. Discharge:—Under the provisions of this section, after an enquiry has been made whether an order binding a person over to keep the peace should be passed, and it has been found that no such order is necessary, the proper course is to discharge the person concerned. The use of the term "acquittal" is quite inappropriate to a proceeding of this nature—Bhagat Raj v. Mt. Gurai Dulaiya, A.I.R. 1938 All. 49 (50), 172 I.C. 643, 1937 A.W.R. 1113, 1937 A.L.J. 1281.

C.—Proceedings in all Cases subsequent to Order to furnish Security.

120. (1) If any person, in respect of whom an order requiring security is made under section 106 or section 118, is, at the time such order is made, sentenced to, or undergoing a sentence of, imprisonment, the period for which such security is required shall commence on the expiration of such sentence.

(2) In other cases such period shall commence on the date of such order, unless the Magistrate, for sufficient reason fixes a later date.

296. "On the expiration of the sentence":—Under this section, a convict undergoing a sentence of imprisonment cannot be obliged to give security, until the imprisonment ends; nor can an order for imprisonment (under sec. 123) in default be made till then—Appa, Ratanlal 765; Rangya, 4 Bom.L.R. 934; Kya W'a, 5 L.B.R. 34, 10 Cr.L.J. 69, 2 I.C. 531; Jhabdey, 22 Cr.L.J. 95 (All). If, the meantime, he is convicted of another offence, and sentenced to a fresh term of imprisonment, the order for security should not be passed until after the expiry of both imprisonments. If, before such expiry, the prisoner gives the required security, the Magistrate cannot pass an order of imprisonment under sec. 123—Pandur, Ratanlal 774. Where a person was sentenced on 8th August, 1927 to 12 months' rigorous imprisonment in default of giving security on proceedings initiated under sec. 109, Cr. P. C., and, while undergoing that sentence, was sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment under s. 110, Cr. P. C., on 21st December, 1927, he should have been required to give security from 8th August 1928 in view of the provisions of sec. 120, Cr. P. C.—Fateh, A.I.R. 1929 Sind 166, 117 I.C. 777, 30 Cr.L.J. 819, 23 S.L.R. 438, 1929 Cr.C. 335.

The accused was convicted under sec. 147, I. P. C., but was released on bail pending an appeal against the conviction. While he was on bail, proceedings were taken against him under sec. 110 of this Code and he was ordered to furnish security, or in default, to undergo imprisonment. His appeal was afterwards dismissed and the Magistrate ordered that as he was undergoing imprisonment in default of furnishing security, the sentence under sec. 147, I. P. C., would commence after the expiry of the sentence under sec. 110, Cr. P. C. Held that the order was illegal, being in contravention of sub-section (1) of this section—Jhabdey, 22 Cr.L.J. 95 (All.), 59 I.C. 383.

Section 120 (1), Cr. P. C., refers to orders passed under sec. 106 or sec. 118, Cr. P. C., and is not affected in its operation by the orders of the Sessions Judge passed under sec. 123 (3), Cr. P. C.—Lashkaro, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 203, 38 Cr.L.J. 961, 31 S.L.R. 409, 170 I.C. 676, 10 R.S. 71.

When a Magistrate passes an order under sec. 118, Cr. P. C., he should make it clear that by reason of the provisions of sec. 120 (1), Cr. P. C., the period for which security is required should commence not from the date of the order under sec. 118, but from the date of the expiration of the sentence of imprisonment the suspected person is undergoing. When sec. 123 (1), Cr. P. C., is read through carefully it would appear that it was the purpose of the Legislature that if a suspected person when ordered to give security was actually in prison he should remain in prison on the expiration of his sentence if he has not given security, until he gives security or until the period for which he was required to give security has expired. Therefore, it is open to a suspected person, while he is undergoing a sentence, to give security to the Court. Under cl. (4) of sec. 123, Cr. P. C., security may be tendered to the officer in charge of the jail, but it would not appear from the provisions of the section that it was contemplated that when a suspected person was in prison when the order under sec. 118, Cr. P. C., against him was passed, he should be released from prison on the expiration of the sentence in order that he might find his sureties. He can, if it is possible for him to do so, furnish security while he is in prison undergoing his sentence of imprisonment, and he can, if he cannot furnish security before the expiration of his sentence, furnish security on the expiration of that sentence or at any time during the period for which he is committed to prison, in default, and his sureties will be accepted or rejected according to the provisions of sec. 122, Cr. P. C.—Hussein Allahdino, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 204, 31 S.L.R. 412, 171 I.C. 61, 38 Cr.L.J. 1014, 10 R.S. 86.

Sub-section (2):—"Date of such order"—It means the date of the final order under sec. 118, and not the date of the preliminary order under sec. 112—Taranagowd, 51 Mad. 515, 29 Cr.L.J. 77 (78); Ghousbux, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 26 (28), 167 I.C. 227, 30 S.L.R. 382, 38 Cr.L.J. 363.

Fixing later date—The object of this sub-section is to allow a Magistrate to grant time to the accused instead of at once proceeding to order imprisonment as if in default. This is shown by sec. 123 which provides that the security may be given on or before the date on which the period for such security commences—Md Abdul Bari, 4 C.W.N. 121. The Magistrate has power under this section to postpone the date from which the security should take effect, i.e., to give the accused time within which to furnish it, and if the accused absconds during the extended time, the sureties who were responsible for the accused's attendance would be made liable—Mustaqimuddin, 24 A.L.J. 327, 27 Cr.L.J. 377 (378), 92 I.C. 889, A.I.R. 1926 All 297.

Where an order is passed on the accused under sec. 118, and then on the request of the accused the Magistrate grants him 12 days' time to furnish the required security, and during this 12 days' time he is convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for an offence committed prior to the date of the order under sec. 118, it is not competent to the Magistrate to fix the date of the expiry of such sentence as the date for computing the period from which such security is to be furnished. The case falls neither under clause (1) nor under clause (2) of this section, and the Magistrate is bound to proceed at once under sec. 123 and order imprisonment of the accused—Ahmed, 20 S.L.R. 163, 27 Cr.L.J. 865, 96 I.C. 113, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 273 (F.B.). An order for security was made under sec. 118 on October 20, but upon the failure of the accused to give security, he was ordered to be imprisoned for one year under sec. 123, on October 29. But between October 20 and October 29, he was convicted of a substantive offence and sentenced to 7 years' rigorous imprisonment. Held that under sec. 120 (2) the period of the order under sec. 118 commenced on October 20, and the Magistrate should not have made any order under sec. 123 at all. However, the two sentences were concurrent—Aba Farid, 29 Bom.L.R. 700, 28 Cr.L.J. 652, 103 I.C. 198.

that an offence has been committed, still there is no authority for the extreme view that the commission of an offence cannot be proved otherwise than by a conviction—Mansur, 24 Cr.L.J. 588, 73 I.C. 332; Sheo Jangal, 50 All. 666, 30 Cr.L.J. 203 (204).

An offence committed in a Native State would amount to a breach of the bond—Dewa Singh, 28 P.R. 1910; but see Bahadur Singh, 26 P.R. 1918, 19 Cr.L.J. 924, 47 I.C. 440.

See also Note 250A.

299. Procedure on breach of bond:—When a person forfeits a bond by being convicted of an offence, the amount of the forfeited bond may be recovered, but he cannot be forthwith imprisoned for the unexpired portion of the term for which security was taken. The Magistrate's remedy is to take fresh proceedings under this Chapter—Jag Deo, 28 All 629. A Magistrate is not justified in forfeiting a recognisance under this section without giving the party charged with the breach an opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses upon whose evidence the rule to show cause has been issued—Nobin, 4 Cal. 865. If the surety bond is forfeited on account of any act of the accused within the period for which the sureties had bound themselves, the Magistrate may take proceedings against the sureties even after the expiry of the period—Bahadur, 1932 A.L.J. 112, 33 Cr.L.J. 281 (282), 54 All 335, A.I.R. 1932 All. 58.

300. Liability of surety:—See Note 1337 under sec. 514.

It has been held in Punjab that in order to make the surety liable, the conviction of the principal must be for an offence similar to that for which security was given. When men stand sureties in respect of sec. 110, it is to be understood that they undertake liability for only such good conduct on the part of the principal as is indicated by the circumstances under which the security was demanded, and not for any conceivable form of offence committed by the principal. Thus, where a person was required to give security for being suspected as a thief and a habitual receiver of stolen property, and a person was accepted as his surety, and the principal offender was subsequently convicted under sec. 326, I P. C. (grievous hurt), held that the surety should not be held liable—Udham Singh, 1913 P.R. 15, 14 Cr.L.J. 575. In Sher Singh, 29 I.C. 821, 1915 P.R. 10, 16 Cr.L.J. 549, under similar circumstances, the sureties were not altogether exempted, but were ordered to pay a reduced penalty, viz, Rs. 500 instead of Rs. 1,000. The Allahabad High Court holds that the surety is liable for any offence committed by the person bound over, and this section makes no reservation that in order to make the surety liable, the offence committed by the person bound over should be ejusdem generis with the offence for which he was bound over—Sheo Jangal, 50 All. 666, 30 Cr.L.J. 203 (204), 26 A.L.J. 443, A.I.R. 1928 All. 232.

A person was put on security for Rs. 1,000 for one year, and two other persons stood sureties for him. That person was afterwards convicted under sec. 323, I. P. C., in which offence he was found to have taken only a minor part. Held, under the circumstances, that the order of forfeiture of a reasonable sum of Rs. 50 against the sureties was sufficient, and that they need not be burdened—Fatta, 1915 P.R. 6, 16 Cr.L.J. 287.

122. (1) A Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered, or may reject any surety previously accepted by him or his predecessor under this Chapter, on the ground that such surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond:

Power to reject sureties.

Provided that, before so refusing to accept or rejecting any such surety, he shall either himself hold an inquiry on oath into the fitness of the surety or cause such inquiry to be held and a report to be made thereon by a Magistrate subordinate to him,

(2) Such Magistrate shall, before holding the inquiry, give reasonable notice to the surety, and to the person by whom the surety was offered and shall in making the inquiry record the substance of the evidence adduced before him.

(3) If the Magistrate is satisfied after considering the evidence so adduced either before him or before a Magistrate deputed under sub-section (1), and the report of such Magistrate (if any), that the surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond, he shall make an order refusing to accept or rejecting, as the case may be, such surety and recording his reasons for so doing:

Provided that, before making an order rejecting any surety who has previously been accepted, the Magistrate shall issue his summons or warrant, as he thinks fit, and cause the person for whom the surety is bound to appear or to be brought before him.

Change:—The whole section has been newly drafted by sec 20 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923).

The main changes introduced by this new section are:—(1) rejection of a surety previously accepted; (2) inquiry into the fitness of a surety; and (3) delegation of such inquiry to a subordinate Magistrate. The reasons have been stated below in proper places.

301. Rejection of sureties:—The question as to whether a particular person is fit to stand as surety or not, is a matter for the decision of the Magistrate. The question in every case is one of discretion and the Magistrate's discretion in this matter is not fettered in any way—In re Jahl, 13 C.W.N. 80; Bhawani, 12 A.L.J. 1004, 16 Cr.L.J. 54, 26 I.C. 646, A.I.R. 1914 All. 489; Abdul Karim, 44 Cal. 737, 21 C.W.N. 925. But this discretion to accept or reject a surety must be exercised only after a satisfactory inquiry in accordance with law—Bhawani, 12 A.L.J. 1004; Akbar Ali, 42 Cal. 706, 19 C.W.N. 220; Rayan, 43 Cal. 1024, 20 C.W.N. 1133. The Magistrate can refuse or accept any surety only on valid and reasonable grounds and not on mere conjectures and surmises—Abdul Khan, 10 C.W.N. 1027; Asiruddin, 41 Cal. 764.

After an order is passed under section 118 demanding sureties, the Magistrate cannot introduce any new qualifications while deciding on the suitability of the sureties, and cannot reject them because they do not answer to those qualifications—Alladitto, 26 Cr.L.J. 1041, 87 I.C. 961, A.I.R. 1925 Sind 321, 19 S.L.R. 101.

Sureties ought not to be rejected merely on the strength of reports of the Police—Jai Govind, 15 O.C. 263, 13 Cr.L.J. 760; Abdul Khan, 10 C.W.N. 1027; Tota, 25 All. 272; Panchoo, 29 Cal. 455; Munshi, 18 A.L.J. 324, 21 Cr.L.J. 365; Gopi, 20 A.L.J. 760, A.I.R. 1922 All. 541, 68 I.C. 35, 23 Cr.L.J. 499; Sukhai, A.I.R. 1935 All. 517, 36 Cr.L.J. 1285, 157 I.C. 1019, 1935 Cr.C. 543; Kaim Khan, 1906 P.R. 18, 1907 P.L.R. 14, 5 Cr.L.J. 148, 1907 P.W.R. 5; Kanwal, 23 Cr.L.J. 91, 76 I.C. 27, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 672; Ramdhani, 36 Cr.L.J. 1473, 158 I.C. 948, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 421, 16 P.L.T. 478, 1935 Cr.C. 1064; Zorawar, 13 A.L.J. 469, 16 Cr.L.J. 445; Bhawani, 12 A.L.J. 1004; Md Ibrahim, 16 Cr.L.J. 100, 8 S.L.R. 173; or on mere hearsay evidence of general repute—A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 227, 9 O.L.J. 353, 68 I.C. 959. The implicit acceptance of the opinions expressed in police reports without considering the facts upon which such opinions are based, would place all persons ordered to furnish security at the mercy of the police—In re Abdul Khan, 10 C.W.N. 1027. The Magistrate may ask the police to report, with a view merely of enabling them to collect and call evidence. But in every case his order must proceed on a consideration of the evidence and not of the police-report—Mahro, 2 S.L.R. 11, 10 Cr.L.J. 225; Jai Govind, 15

O.C. 263, 13 Cr.L.J. 760. Where a surety tendered by the accused is reported by the police to be an unreliable person, it is not for the surety to prove that he is of good character, but for the Magistrate, if he doubts it, to decide the matter upon evidence—Munshi Singh, 18 A.L.J. 324, 21 Cr.L.J. 365.

Even a Magistrate cannot rely on his personal knowledge in rejecting a surety and dispense with an inquiry—Piru, 7 S.L.R. 91, 15 Cr.L.J. 378. When a Magistrate receives private information that the sureties are bad characters, he ought not to reject them on that information alone. He should bring the information to the notice of the sureties and give them an opportunity of controverting it—Ela Buksh, 14 C.W.N. 709, 11 Cr.L.J. 243, 6 I.C. 124.

Before the amendment of this section, it was held that if a person had been once accepted as surety, he could not be rejected subsequently as an unfit person—Ram Lal, 1 C.W.N. 394; Purya Lal, 1905 P.R. 16, 2 Cr.L.J. 278. But these decisions are now rendered obsolete by reason of the addition of the words "may reject any surety previously accepted" "We have adopted the suggestion that the provisions of the new section 122 should be elaborated so as to enable a Magistrate to reject a surety previously accepted by him, or his predecessor."—Report of the Joint Committee (1922). The proviso to sub-section (3) prescribes a procedure to be followed in such a case.

If the Magistrate is not satisfied with the sureties tendered, he should reject them within a reasonable time so as to give the accused an opportunity of offering fresh sureties—Maung Tun, 4 Bur.L.J. 172, 27 Cr.L.J. 318 (319).

302. Test as to fitness:—According to the Allahabad High Court the primary test is whether the surety can exercise proper control over the person who has been bound over—Sheikh Zikri, 8 A.L.J. 785. Mere pecuniary fitness is not the only test of his fitness. The object of requiring security for good behaviour is not to obtain money for the Crown by the forfeiture of recognisances but to ensure that the accused should be of good behaviour. It is, therefore, reasonable to expect that the sureties should not be men residing at such a distance as would make it unlikely that they could exercise any control over the accused—Rahim Baksh, 20 All. 206, 1898 A.W.N. 21; Manna, 15 A.L.J. 848, 18 Cr.L.J. 1039; Nabhu Khan, 24 All. 471. And this seems to be the intention of the legislature by reason of the addition of the words "for the purposes of the bond"

According to the Bombay High Court, it is sufficient if the sureties are solvent and respectable. It is wrong to attach a condition to a surety for good behaviour, that he should be able to control the accused—Jiva Natha, 16 Bom.L.R. 138, 15 Cr.L.J. 268. Therefore, where the sureties offered were solvent and respectable, the mere fact that they lived at some distance from the persons bound over and were not in a position to exercise control over those persons was not a good ground for their non-acceptance—Jesha Batha, 44 Bom 385, 21 Cr.L.J. 377, 22 Bom.L.R. 190.

In Calcutta, however, there is a conflict of decisions as to whether the pecuniary or moral fitness is the primary test. In Abinash, 4 C.W.N. 797, Ram Pershad, 6 C.W.N. 593 and Adam Sheikh, 35 Cal. 400 it has been said that the primary test is whether the surety is a person of sufficient substance to warrant his being accepted, and the fact that he cannot supervise or control the person bound down or that he is not a resident of the same village (Suresh, 3 C.L.J. 575) is not material. So also, in Kalu Mirza, 37 Cal 91 and Ryan, 43 Cal 1024, 20 C.W.N. 1133, 24 C.L.J. 51, 18 Cr.L.J. 408, 38 I.C. 968; Joyal Singh, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 374, a failure by the sureties to show that they could exercise proper control over the accused was held to be not a proper ground for their rejection. In Jafar Ali, 37 Cal 446, it has been held that the pecuniary test is the primary test, but there may be other objections to be considered, and any such objection must be dealt with in each case as it arises. But in Asiraddi, 41 Cal 764, and Abdul Karim, 44 Cal. 737, 21 C.W.N. 925, 18 Cr.L.J. 453, 39 I.C. 293 the fact that the sureties would not be able to exercise proper control over the accused

(who was a notorious dacoit) was held to be a proper ground of unfitness of the sureties. The unfitness referred to in this section, though it may not exclude the idea of pecuniary unfitness, is more concerned with the idea of moral unfitness—Jahl, 13 C.W.N. 80, 8 Cr.L.J. 388, 4 I.C. 560.

Where the sureties were called on to state in writing what influence they had over the accused persons, and on their failing to do so their security was rejected, the order was not proper—Kalu Mirza, 37 Cal. 91 (101).

In Burma it is laid down that the sureties must be persons who are in a position to influence the accused and likely to be able to restrain him—Nga Hein, 8 Bur.L.T. 53, 29 I.C. 825.

In Sind, it has been held that it is not in itself a disqualification that a person cannot exercise active physical control over the accused; a man may be satisfactory surety if he is in a position to watch the movements of the accused and to ascertain from time to time how he is behaving—Md. Ibrahim, 8 S.L.R. 173, 16 Cr.L.J. 100. But mere solvency of the surety is not the only test of his fitness. The Magistrate has also to consider the question of the ability of the surety to enforce the good conduct of the accused, as relevant to his fitness—Md. Pahor, 1 S.L.R. 46, 8 Cr.L.J. 166. In another Sind case, however, it is stated that sureties cannot be rejected on the ground that they will not be able to influence the accused. The most that a Magistrate can reasonably demand is that they should be respectable men, neighbours of the accused, and solvent up to the amount of the security required—Ahmed, 1 S.L.R. 14, 9 Cr.L.J. 256.

In Oudh, it has been held that a surety should not be rejected on the mere ground that he lives at a distance from the accused; but inability to control is a good ground—Md. Baksh, 26 O.C. 284, 25 Cr.L.J. 796, 81 I.C. 316, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 80. If the sureties undertake to keep the accused within the area of their observation or to adopt other suitable measures for securing the supervision and control needed to keep him in good behaviour, there can be no inherent objection to their being accepted as sufficient, though they reside at a place 18 miles distant from that of the accused—Rameshwar, 10 O.L.J. 299, 24 Cr.L.J. 795, 74 I.C. 539, A.I.R. 1923 Oudh 165.

In Patna, it has been held that the fact that the sureties reside at a distance at which they cannot reasonably be expected to exercise control over the accused, becomes of less importance when the sureties are themselves relations and presumably persons of some standing—Jugal Singh, 30 Cr.L.J. 45, 112 I.C. 909, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 374, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 43, 10 P.L.T. 213. See also Joyal Singh, supra.

What are not disqualifications:—The fact that the sureties offered are the relations of the accused, far from being a disqualification, is a circumstance which would be an additional qualification, if the sureties are in other respects suitable. A relation is more likely than any other person to keep an eye on the accused—Shib Singh, 25 All. 131; Abdul Khan, 10 C.W.N. 1027; Mahala, 1914 P.R. 6, Miro, 1 S.L.R. 3; Md. Wasi, 22 Cr.L.J. 22 (All.).

A Magistrate should not refuse to accept a surety on the ground that he has already stood surety for another man—Ghisa, 24 Cr.L.J. 517, 73 I.C. 53, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 132. So also, a Magistrate cannot reject a surety simply because he is a Wanthanu member.

Politics not a disqualification:—As long as the security is ample, the Court is bound to accept the same without inquiring into the politics of the person standing surety—Maung Tun, 4 Bur.L.T. 172, 27 Cr.L.J. 318.

Previous conviction not a disqualification:—The proposed surety is not to be considered as unfit merely by reason of the fact that he was on one occasion convicted of offences—Raghunath, 26 All. 189; Budhu Ahir, 22 Cr.L.J. 488, 62 I.C. 179, 25 C.W.N. 140; or that he was once challanned in a theft case—Munshi Singh, 18 A.L.J. 324, 21 Cr.L.J. 365.

Witness not disqualified:—The fact that the proposed surety has given evidence in favour of the accused in the proceeding which resulted in the order for furnishing

O.C. 263, 13 Cr.L.J. 760. Where a surety tendered by the accused is reported by the police to be an unreliable person, it is not for the surety to prove that he is of good character, but for the Magistrate, if he doubts it, to decide the matter upon evidence—Munshi Singh, 18 A.L.J. 324, 21 Cr.L.J. 365.

He should bring the information to the notice of the sureties and give them an opportunity of controverting it—Ela Buksh, 14 C.W.N. 709, 11 Cr.L.J. 243, 6 I.C. 124.

Before the amendment of this section, it was held that if a person had been once accepted as surety, he could not be rejected subsequently as an unfit person—Ram Lal, 1 C.W.N. 394; Pirya Lal, 1905 P.R. 16, 2 Cr.L.J. 278. But these decisions are now rendered obsolete by reason of the addition of the words "may reject any surety previously accepted." "We have adopted the suggestion that the provisions of the new section 122 should be elaborated so as to enable a Magistrate to reject a surety previously accepted by him, or his predecessor."—Report of the Joint Committee (1922). The proviso to sub-section (3) prescribes a procedure to be followed in such a case.

If the Magistrate is not satisfied with the sureties tendered, he should reject them within a reasonable time so as to give the accused an opportunity of offering fresh sureties—Maung Tun, 4 Bur.L.J. 172, 27 Cr.L.J. 318 (319).

(who was a notorious dacoit) was held to be a proper ground of unfitness of the sureties. The unfitness referred to in this section, though it may not exclude the idea of pecuniary unfitness, is more concerned with the idea of moral unfitness—Jalil, 13 C.W.N. 80, 8 Cr.L.J. 388, 4 I.C. 560.

A Magistrate should not refuse to accept a surety on the ground that he has already stood surety for another man—Ghisa, 24 Cr.L.J. 517, 73 I.C. 53, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 132. So also, a Magistrate cannot reject a surety simply because he is a Wanthanu member.

Politics not a disqualification:—As long as the security is ample, the Court is bound to accept the same without inquiring into the politics of the person standing surety—Mauung Tun, 4 Bur.L.T. 172, 27 Cr.L.J. 318.

Previous conviction not a disqualification:—The proposed surety is not to be considered as unfit merely by reason of the fact that he was on one occasion convicted of offences—Raghunath, 26 All. 189; Budhu Ahir, 22 Cr.L.J. 488, 62 I.C. 179, 25 C.W.N. 140; or that he was once challanned in a theft case—Munshi Singh, 18 All. 224, 21 Cr.L.J. 365.

Witness not disqualified:—The fact that the proposed surety has given evidence in favour of the accused in the proceeding which resulted in the order for furnishing security, does not disqualify him from standing as a surety for the accused—Bairagi, 15 Cr.L.J. 727 (All.); Md. Wasi, 22 Cr.L.J. 22 (All.). So also the fact that the persons offered as sureties helped the accused in his defence, is no ground for rejecting them—Gobardhun, 16 A.L.J. 263, 16 Cr.L.J. 441.

See also Note 280 under the heading "Number, character and class of sureties".

303. Inquiry into the fitness of sureties:—The Magistrate should hold an inquiry into the fitness of a surety before accepting or rejecting him—Akbar Ali, 42 Cal 706; Rayan, 43 Cal. 1024; Bhawani, 12 A.L.J. 1004; Piru, 7 S.L.R. 94; Manna, 15 A.L.J. 848. See also Note 308.

By virtue of the amendment of 1923, the Magistrate can delegate the inquiry to a subordinate Magistrate. But under the old law, it was consistently held in a number of decisions that the Magistrate ought himself to make the inquiry into the sufficiency or otherwise of the sureties and that he could not delegate the task to a subordinate officer—Balwant, 27 All. 293; Tota, 25 All. 272; Kaim Khan, 1906 P.R. 18; Mahala, 1914 P.R. 6; Prithi Pal, 1898 A.W.N. 151. These cases are no longer authoritative. But the Magistrate cannot delegate this task to a Police officer nor act upon the report of that officer; see Note 301 ante and Kanwal, 25 Cr.L.J. 91, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 672.

There is nothing to prevent a Magistrate from accepting persons, with whom he is satisfied, as sureties without any sort of enquiry or examination of witnesses on oath. In fact, this procedure is followed almost every day—Supdt & Rembr., Etc. v. Azizar, 41 C.W.N. 415 (416), A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 233, 38 Cr.L.J. 635, 168 I.C. 716, 9 R.C. 873.

It is the Magistrate alone who is to test the fitness of sureties; there is no provision regulating the testing of sureties by the Sessions Judge. Section 406A which gives a right of appeal against the order of rejection of sureties, speaks of orders made by Magistrates only, and there is no mention of any such order made by a Sessions Court. It seems that such an order by a Sessions Judge is not contemplated—Narendra, 9 Pat. 741, 31 Cr.L.J. 802 (803).

Evidence.—The Magistrate can refuse or accept any surety only on tangible evidence recorded and considered by him—Munshi, 18 A.L.J. 324. He should examine the sureties as to their fitness and take such evidence as the accused may give and base his decision on the evidence so recorded—Piru, 7 S.L.R. 94; Makro, 2 S.L.R. 11. The inquiry is to be conducted judicially, and the Magistrate has power to call for and record evidence upon oath or affirmation—Ghulam Mustafa, 26 All. 371; Allahdino, 5 S.L.R. 87. This is now expressly provided in the proviso to sub-section (1). Hearsay evidence of general repute is not admissible against sureties—Sheopal, 68 I.C. 959; 23 Cr.L.J. 639.

304. Recording reasons:—The Magistrate in rejecting a surety must record his reasons for doing so in his own writing. From this it seems to follow that the reasons must be carefully considered and tested, which is best done by their being brought to the notice of the persons who are refused as sureties and by their having an opportunity for controverting them—Ela Buksh, 14 C.W.N. 709, 11 Cr.L.J. 243, 6 I.C. 124; Kalu Mirza, 37 Cal 91; Jesha Bhatha, 22 Bom.L.R. 190, 44 Bom. 385. The intention of the Legislature in insisting that a Magistrate should record his reasons is that he should exercise his independent judgment, and should not be guided by the opinions expressed in Police reports without considering the facts upon which such opinions are based—Abdul Khan, 10 C.W.N. 1027, 4 Cr.L.J. 169. When a Magistrate failed to record the reasons and in his explanation to the High Court stated that he did not remember the exact circumstances, the order rejecting the sureties was set aside—Hor Ali, 13 C.W.N. xxvii.

Appeal:—See section 406A.

305. Interference by High Court:—The question whether a particular person is or is not a fit person to stand as surety is one for the decision of the Magistrate and is left to his discretion which is not fettered in any way—Jalil, 13 C.W.N. 80

(81); and the High Court will not lightly interfere—Bhawani, 12 A.L.J. 1004; Bairagi, 15 Cr.L.J. 727 (All.). But if the discretion has not been judicially exercised, as for instance, where no reasons are given why a surety was rejected (Hor Ali, 13 C.W.N. xxvii), the High Court will interfere. See also Satindra, 48 C.L.J. 143.

123. (1) If any person ordered to give security under section 106 or section 118 does not give such security on or before the date on which the period for which such security is to be given commences, he shall, except in the case next hereinafter mentioned, be committed to prison, or if he is already in prison, be detained in prison until such period expires or until within such period he gives the security to the Court or Magistrate who made the order requiring it.

(2) When such person has been ordered by a Magistrate to give security for a period exceeding one year, such Magistrate shall, if such person does not give such security as aforesaid, issue a warrant directing him to be detained in prison pending the orders of the Sessions Judge or, if such Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, pending the orders of the High Court; and the proceedings shall be laid, as soon as conveniently may be, before such Court.

(3) Such Court, after examining such proceedings and requiring from the Magistrate any further information or evidence which it thinks necessary may pass such order in the case as it thinks fit:

Provided that the period (if any) for which any person is imprisoned for failure to give security shall not exceed three years.

(3A) If security has been required in the course of the same proceedings from two or more persons in respect of any one of whom the proceedings are referred to the Sessions Judge or the High Court under sub-section (2), such reference shall also include the case of any other of such persons who has been ordered to give security, and the provisions of sub-sections (2) and (3) shall, in that event, apply to the case of such other person also, except that the period (if any) for which he may be imprisoned shall not exceed the period for which he was ordered to give security.

(3B) A Sessions Judge may in his discretion transfer any proceedings laid before him under sub-section (2) or sub-section (3A) to an Additional Sessions Judge or Assistant Sessions Judge, and upon such transfer, such Additional Sessions Judge or Assistant Sessions Judge may exercise the powers of a Sessions Judge under this section in respect of such proceedings,

(4) If the security is tendered to the officer in charge of the jail, he shall forthwith refer the matter to the Court or Magistrate who made the order, and shall await the orders of such Court or Magistrate.

(5) Imprisonment for failure to give security for keeping Kind of imprisonment. the peace shall be simple.

(6) Imprisonment for failure to give security for good behaviour shall, where the proceedings have been taken under section 108, be simple, and where the proceedings have been taken under section 109 or section 110 be rigorous or simple as the Court or Magistrate in each case directs.

Change:—Sub-sections (3A) and (3B) and the italicised words in sub-section (6) have been added by sec. 21 of the Cr. P. C., Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). Sub-section (6) has been further amended by the Cr. P. Code Second Amendment Act X of 1926. The reasons are stated below.

306. Imprisonment in default of security:—There must be actual failure to give security in order to enable the Magistrate to pass an order under this section. So, an order that the accused shall give security, and in default shall suffer imprisonment, cannot be sustained. This section contemplates that the accused must be separately brought up for sentence if security is not furnished, so that the Court should in its judgment fix a date for the furnishing of security without any order for alternative imprisonment, and then if by that date the accused has not furnished the security, he is to appear and receive sentence.—Ibraya Rowthen, 51 Mad. 178, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 976, 53 M.L.J. 762, 28 Cr.L.J. 1031. Any order which specifies a period of imprisonment in default is to that extent illegal. The penalty for a failure to furnish security is given in sec. 123 (1), Cr. P. Code. The person ordered against must be committed to prison until the period for which he was required to give security expires, or until within such period he furnishes the necessary security. It is evident from this, that no person committed to prison in this way can be detained there if he furnishes the security required of him after his commitment. Consequently, an order stating that he should suffer a period of imprisonment in default is illegal.—Rangi, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 265, 1936 Cr.C. 1138. Imprisonment should follow the failure to furnish adequate security, and should not precede a finding that the security is inadequate. It is illegal for the Magistrate to send a person to jail pending the receipt of the report from the Revenue and police officers as regards the adequacy of the security.—Kaim Khan, 1906 P.R. 18.

A person was ordered to execute a bond for good behaviour for one year and find sureties on 17-12-07, but when he failed to do so, he was, instead of being committed to prison at once, given time to find sureties and finally on 24-2-09 he was sentenced to imprisonment for his failure to find sureties; held that as the one year had already elapsed from the date of the first order, the order for imprisonment under sec. 123 was illegal.—Muthu Gounden, 6 M.L.T. 308, 10 Cr.L.J. 481.

Person already under imprisonment:—If the person against whom an order under this section is passed, is already under imprisonment as a substantive punishment for some offence, the order under this section should not be passed, until after the expiry of the term of imprisonment.—Appa, Rantanlal 765; Rangya, 4 Bom.L.R. 934. A sentence under this section cannot run concurrently with any other sentence of imprisonment which the person is undergoing.—Chinnaswamy, 16 Cr.L.J. 272 (Mad.). See section 120.

Subsequent imprisonment—If the accused while undergoing an imprisonment under this section, is convicted of an offence and sentenced to a term of imprisonment, the sentence for the substantive offence must commence at once, and should not be postponed to take effect after the expiration of the imprisonment awarded under this section—Tulshya, Ratanlal 970; Mulhu Komaran, 27 Mad. 525; Joghi, 31 Mad. 515; Vishnu, 37 Bom 178, 13 Cr.L.J. 849; Diwan Chand, 1895 P.R. 14; Kanji, 5 Bom L.R. 26; Durga, 6 Bom L.R. 1098. See Note 1083 under sec. 397.

Period of imprisonment.—The person failing to give security shall be committed to prison 'until such period expires' i.e., the period of imprisonment in default of security should be the same as the period for which security was demanded under sec. 118. It should be neither for a longer nor for a shorter term. Thus, an order requiring security for good behaviour for a period of six months, and in default, awarding rigorous imprisonment for three months is wrong and bad in form—Ganoo, Ratanlal 584; Karimuddin, 23 All 422; Emp. v. Khushi Muhammad, 31 Cr.L.J. 583, 123 I.C. 835, A.I.R. 1930 Lah 49, 1930 Cr.C. 1. If the Magistrate thinks that the term of imprisonment should be shorter, the proper course is to report the matter to the District Magistrate for taking action under section 124 (2)—Moti, Ratanlal 668. So also, an order awarding imprisonment in default of security for a period longer than that for which the accused was called upon to give security is illegal—Syed Ahmed, 2 Weir 57.

The period of imprisonment must be definite; an order directing the accused to be imprisoned until he gives security is bad—Maidamdi v. Tanipulla, 8 Cal 644.

It is illegal to fix an absolute period of imprisonment (e.g., for one year), since the accused is entitled to be released the moment he furnishes the security; the sentence ought to run "for one year or until such date within that year as the required security be furnished"—Ibraya Rowthan, 51 Mad 178, 53 M.L.J. 762, 28 Cr.L.J. 1034. See also Notes under sub-sec (2), sec. 120, Cr. P. Code.

The order fixing the term of imprisonment which the accused is to undergo in default of furnishing the security is to be fixed by the Sessions Judge and not by the trial Magistrate—Mangal Singh, 28 Cr.L.J. 657, 103 I.C. 193, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 189 following Nanku, 8 I.C. 385, 29 P.R. 1910 Cr., 196 P.L.R. 1910, 11 Cr.L.J. 635; Emp. v. Jafar, 1899 A.W.N. 151 and Emp. v. Jawahir, 1903 A.W.N. 28. See also Abdul Karim, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh 80, 36 Cr.L.J. 1127, 156 I.C. 659, 1935 Cr.C. 606.

307. Sub-section (2):—This sub-section has reference only to the case where default is made in finding security. If the security is given, the section does not apply and no reference to the Court of Session is necessary even though the term of security exceeds one year—Rai Ishri Pershad v. Q-E, 23 Cal. 621 (627); Ram Kishen, 15 A.L.J. 822, 40 All 39, 19 Cr.L.J. 2, 42 I.C. 914. When a reference under this section is pending in the Court of the Sessions Judge, the petitioners can offer security to the Magistrate when they are able to procure it. That implies that the reference to the Sessions Judge, if not disposed of, would automatically come to an end when security is taken. At the same time it follows that the right of appeal given under sec. 406 Cr. P. Code to the person from whom security is demanded revives once he has given security—Emp. v. Muhammad Akbar, 29 Cr.L.J. 236, 107 I.C. 286, A.I.R. 1928 Lah 64.

When a Magistrate passes an order for furnishing security for a period exceeding one year, and default is made, imprisonment for default cannot be awarded by the Magistrate. All that he is empowered to do is to detain the accused pending the order of the Sessions Judge—Myat Aung, 4 L.B.R. 135, 7 Cr.L.J. 412; Mahala, 1914 P.R. 6; Sundar, 21 Cr.L.J. 623 (Lah). Even a Magistrate cannot pass an order of imprisonment, and then send his order for confirmation to the Sessions Judge—Jafar, 1899 A.W.N. 151, because the proceedings are sent to the Sessions Judge under this section not for the purpose of confirming the order of the Magistrate but for passing his own order—Myat Aung, supra.

A person ordered by a Magistrate to be detained in prison under this clause (say, on 25th February) must be considered as a person undergoing a sentence of imprisonment and not merely as an undertrial prisoner detained in custody. Therefore, if a Sessions Judge orders him to be imprisoned under sub-section (3) (say, on 22nd March) the period of imprisonment should be taken to commence from the date of the Magistrate's order (25th February) and not from the date of the Sessions Judge's order (22nd March)—Balak, 8 O.W.N. 888, 32 Cr.L.J. 1186, 134 I.C. 406, 7 Luck. 219, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 387.

'Exceeding one year'—A Magistrate cannot legally amalgamate sections 109 and 110, and require the execution of two bonds for good behaviour for an aggregate period of 18 months, and in default of the same being furnished, commit the accused to prison for 18 months' rigorous imprisonment. At any rate, in such case the proceedings should be referred to the Sessions Judge under the provisions of sec. 123 (2)—Balya, Ratanlal 946.

Reference by Magistrate to High Court:—If the Sessions Judge, on a reference made under this section, refuses to confirm the order of the District Magistrate passed under sec. 118, and discharges the person called upon to furnish security, the Magistrate cannot refer the case to the High Court under sec. 438. It would be contrary to every principle to allow the District Magistrate to report against an order of the Sessions Court to which he is subordinate. If the Magistrate, as the officer, responsible for the peace of his district, is dissatisfied with the order of the Sessions Judge, his proper course is to ask the Public Prosecutor to move the High Court for revision—Jahandi, 23 Cal. 249 (250); Jamna Bai, 28 All. 91. See also Khudabux, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 45, 98 I.C. 101, 21 S.L.R. 48, 27 Cr.L.J. 1253 and Lashkaro, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 203, 170 I.C. 676, 31 S.L.R. 409, 38 Cr.L.J. 961.

308. Sub-section (3):—Procedure on reference:—On a reference made to him under sub-section (2), the Sessions Judge should give notice to the accused—Girand, 25 All 375; Nakhi Lal, 27 Cal. 656; Mangal Singh, 28 Cr.L.J. 657, 103 I.C. 193, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 189, and allow him to be defended by a pleader—Jhojha, 23 Cal 493; Nakhi Lal, 27 Cal 655 (658); Abinash, 4 C.W.N. 797; Amir Bala, 35 Bom. 271, 13 Bom.L.R. 203, 12 Cr.L.J. 257, 10 I.C. 802; Sitaram, 34 Cr.L.J. 813, 144 I.C. 447, 14 P.L.T. 299, A.I.R. 1933 Pat 276, 1933 Cr.C 758, 12 Pat 770. Although the Code has made no provision for giving notice to the accused before disposing a reference under this section, still it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to give such notice; where it was not given, the High Court condemned the procedure as amounting to a denial of justice—Girand, supra.

This sub-section clearly contemplates a decision by the Sessions Judge on the merits of the order demanding security. It does not authorise him to consider sufficiency of the security offered—Gagan, 12 C.W.N. 463, 7 Cr.L.J. 323.

This section gives power to the Sessions Judge to deal with the case on the merits and to pass such orders as the circumstances of the case may require—Amir Bala, 35 Bom. 271, 10 I.C. 802, 13 Bom.L.R. 203, 12 Cr.L.J. 257. It is his duty to consider the evidence and to pass an order after doing so and not as a mere matter of course—Naku, 1910 P.R. 29, 11 Cr.L.J. 637. Where there are several prisoners, the Judge in writing his order should show that he has considered the case of each individual prisoner. Each prisoner has a right to have his case considered on its own merits, and the order must show that this has not been lost sight of—Kalu Mirza, 37 Cal. 91. The Judge must pass his own order (ie. a definite order binding over the accused) and not merely confirm the order passed by the Magistrate—Jafar, 1899 A.W.N. 151; Bahadur, 1 O.W.N. 773, 26 Cr.L.J. 656. Where the order is in reference to section 110, the Sessions Judge, before he confirms the order of the Magistrate, is bound to find a special ground on which the order is passed; and it is not sufficient if he merely finds in general terms that it is for the interests of the community at large that the accused should be bound over to be of good behaviour—Nakhi Lal, 27 Cal. 656 (658).

Retrial—This section does not authorise a Sessions Judge to order the rehearing of a case. He can call for further information if he desires it, or he can consider the evidence on the record and pass such order as he thinks fit—Narayan, 25 Cr.L.J. 1112, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 191. See also Jhajah, 24 Cal 155 where it was decided that the Judge must take himself such evidence as he might require. Perhaps in certain fit cases it might be permissible to a Judge to whom a case has been submitted under clause (2), sec. 123, to refer the case to the High Court under sec 438 with a recommendation that the proceedings be quashed and a re-trial ordered. But he cannot himself order a re-trial—Emp. v. Nim, 33 Cr.L.J. 898, 139 I.C. 783, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 88, 1932 Cr C 528, 26 S.L.R. 200, Ind. Rul. 1932 Sind 144.

Acceptance of security:—An order under this sub-section is an original order and not an order confirming the order of the Magistrate. Therefore, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to decide on the fitness of sureties on a bond ordered by the Sessions Court. When the order is of the latter Court, the adequacy of the security should be decided by that Court—Allahdino, 5 S.L.R. 87, 12 Cr.L.J. 410, 11 I.C. 594. See also Lashkar, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 203, 170 I.C. 676, 31 S.L.R. 409, 38 Cr.L.J. 951. The Calcutta High Court seems to have taken a different view. It is laid down that the clear implication of the provisions of sections 122, 123 and 406A, Cr P. Code taken together, is that the Magistrate is vested with the authority either to accept or reject sureties demandable under sec 110, Cr P Code and it is not open to the Sessions Judge, exercising jurisdiction under this section, to accept or reject the sureties offered. The course open to the Sessions Judge under the law as it stands, is to send the proceedings back to the Magistrate, with his decision on the merits of the case, for taking action under sec 122, Cr P Code—Parbati, 35 Cr.L.J. 952 (956), 149 I.C. 408, 6 R.C. 593, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 482, 1934 Cr C 690, 61 Cal 588; Supdt. & Remembr., Etc v Azizur, 41 C.W.N. 415, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 233, 168 I.C. 716, 38 Cr.L.J. 635, 9 R.C. 873. This is also the view of the Patna High Court—Emp v Narendra, 31 Cr.L.J. 802, 125 I.C. 156, 1930 Cr C 425, 9 Pat 741, A.I.R. 1930 Pat 217. But the High Court refused to set aside an order of the Sessions Judge accepting some persons as sureties in exercise of his powers under sec 123 Cr P Code as nothing disastrous was likely to happen for such acceptance of sureties, even without holding an enquiry—Supdt & Remembr., etc v Azizur, supra.

It is, however, intended that the Magistrate should still take security even though the matter has been referred to the Sessions Judge under sub-section (2) of this section if such security is offered before the Sessions Judge has dealt with the case—Muhammad Afbar, 29 Cr.L.J. 236 (237), 107 I.C. 286, A.I.R. 1928 Lah 64, 9 A.I.Cr.R. 490.

Bail—The Sessions Judge can admit the accused to bail. The provisions of section 498 regarding admission to bail are particularly wide, and the Court of Session may in any case direct any person to be admitted to bail. There are no words in section 123 (2) controlling the very wide provisions of section 498. The Sessions Judge has under sec 123 (2) power to revise the order of the Magistrate passed under sec 118, and he may grant bail, just as in the analogous case of an appeal the Appellate Court can release the accused on bail—Ahmed Ali, 50 Cal 969, 37 C.L.J. 592, A.I.R. 1923 Cal 723, 24 Cr.L.J. 953; Mangal Singh, 28 Cr.L.J. 657, 103 I.C. 193, A.I.R. 1928 Lah 189. See also Note 240.

Imprisonment—Although a Sessions Judge is competent to direct under sub-section (3) that the person be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years, yet it is advisable that the term should always be the same as the period for which security was ordered to be given—Karimuddin, 23 All 422; Myat Aung, 4 L.B.R. 135, 7 Cr.L.J. 412.

The imprisonment ordered by the Sessions Judge should begin from the date of the Magistrate's order. Where the Sessions Judge directed that the period of imprisonment ordered by him should commence from the date of his order and not from the date of the Magistrate's order, held that the order in fact amounted to an enhancement of sentence and that it was undesirable that the Court should do so without special reasons, though it had the power—Allahdad, 17 S.L.R. 160, 26 Cr.L.J. 179, 83 I.C. 883, A.I.R. 1924 Sind 120; Tula Khan, 30 All. 334, 1908 A.W.N. 133, 5 A.L.J. 318 (F.B.); Balak, 32 Cr.L.J. 1186, 134 I.C. 406, 8 O.W.N. 888, 7 Luck. 219, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 381, 1931 Cr.C. 819; Kadu, 37 Cr.L.J. 1003, 161 I.C. 576, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 125, 29 S.L.R. 353, 1936 Cr.C. 802, 9 R.S. 49.

Sub-section (3A):—"We think that where security has been demanded from two or more persons, some or one of whom may be ordered to give security for more than a year, all the parties from whom security is demanded should be dealt with by the Sessions Judge"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

"The object of the new sub-section (3A) is to avoid differences of opinion in a single case between the Magistrate and the Sessions Judge . . . in as much as in a single case one accused person may appeal to the District Magistrate, while the case of another accused person will be referred to the Sessions Judge. The Bombay Government have suggested that where the case of one accused has to be referred to the Sessions Judge under section 123, the case of all should be referred, whether they have given security or not. We have adopted this suggestion"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

It should be noted in this connection that the provisions of section 406 (which provides for appeals against orders requiring security) have been made inapplicable to a case where proceedings have been laid before a Sessions Judge under this sub-section. See section 406, 2nd proviso, newly enacted in 1923.

309. Sub-section (3B):—"This sub-section definitely provides for the exercise of powers under sec. 123 by an Additional Sessions Judge in proceedings transferred to him"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

This sub-section overrules Dayaram, Ratanlal 830 and confirms Benode Behari, 50 Cal 229, 39 C.L.J. 75, 25 Cr.L.J. 573, 27 C.W.N. 996.

310. Sub-section (6):—Kind of imprisonment:—Before 1923, imprisonment under all good behaviour cases could be simple or rigorous according to the discretion of the Magistrate. By virtue of the Amendment Act of 1923 imprisonment under sections 108 and 109 was made simple, and imprisonment under sec. 110 could be simple or rigorous.

But the Cr. P. Code Second Amendment Act X of 1926, has given a discretion to Magistrates to award either simple or rigorous imprisonment in the case of proceedings under sec. 109, on the ground that "most of the persons against whom proceedings are taken under sec. 109 are men for whom simple imprisonment is quite unsuitable"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1925, Part V, p. 214).

Although the imprisonment in default of furnishing security under sec. 110 may be simple or rigorous, still as that section is essentially a preventive rather than a punitive provision, the imprisonment awarded in ordinary cases should be simple. Imprisonment of a rigorous character should not be awarded automatically as a general practice, but the Magistrate has to exercise his discretion and to decide whether on the facts of each case the imprisonment should be simple or rigorous—Gandharp Singh, 42 All 563. In passing a sentence of rigorous imprisonment, the Magistrate should give reason why the imprisonment should be of the severer kind. In the case of a man who has never been convicted of any offence, an order of rigorous imprisonment is unreasonable—In re Umbica, 1 C.L.R. 268.

Section 109 Cr. P. Code is a preventive and not a punitive section, and so, in the absence of special reasons, the type of imprisonment should be simple—Rangi, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 265, 1936 Cr.C. 1138.

Where a person who has been asked to furnish security for good behaviour fails to do so, the Magistrate has no power to order solitary confinement—Kundan, 36 All. 495, 12 A.L.J. 823, 15 Cr.L.J. 616. See also 1933 A.L.J. 777.

It is illegal for a Magistrate to pass a sentence of rigorous imprisonment in a case under sec. 107—Uttam Chand, 26 Cr.L.J. 430, 85 I.C. 46 (All.),

The committal of a person to prison under sec. 123, Cr. P. Code amounts to a sentence of imprisonment within the meaning of sec. 8 of the Madras Borstal Schools Act (V of 1926)—In re Mala Chengader, 35 Cr.L.J. 1153, 150 I.C. 796, 1934 M.W.N. 486, 1934 Cr.C. 802, A.I.R. 1934 Mad 457, 40 M.L.W. 63

310A. Judgment:—In a case of reference under this section it is by no means necessary to write a judgment as if it were an appeal—Allahabad, 26 Cr.L.J. 179, 83 I.C. 883, 17 S.L.R. 160, A.I.R. 1924 Sind 120. The Sessions Judge is, however, bound to examine the evidence himself and come to an independent finding as to the propriety of the order demanding security and the period for and the amount in which it is to be demanded—Mangal Singh, 28 Cr.L.J. 657, 103 I.C. 193, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 189.

124. (1) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter, * * * may be released without hazard to the community or to any other person, he may order such person to be discharged.

(2) Whenever any person has been imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter, the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may (unless the order has been made by some Court superior to his own) make an order reducing the amount of the security or the number of sureties or the time for which security has been required.

(3) An order under sub-section (1) may direct the discharge of such person either without conditions or upon any conditions which such person accepts:

Provided that any condition imposed shall cease to be operative when the period for which such person was ordered to give security has expired.

(4) The Provincial Government may prescribe the conditions upon which a conditional discharge may be made.

(5) If any condition upon which any person has been discharged is, in the opinion of the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate by whom the order of discharge was made or of his successor, not fulfilled, he may cancel the same.

(6) When a conditional order of discharge has been cancelled under sub-section (5), such person may be arrested by any police-officer without warrant and shall thereupon be produced before the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate.

Unless such person then gives security in accordance with the terms of the original order for the unexpired portion of the term for which he was in the first instance committed or ordered to be detained (such portion being deemed to be a period equal to the period between the date of the breach of the conditions of discharge and the date on which, except for such conditional discharge, he would have been entitled to release), the District

"The object of the new sub-section (3A) is to avoid differences of opinion in a single case between the Magistrate and the Sessions Judge ... in as much as in a single case one accused person may appeal to the District Magistrate, while the case of another accused person will be referred to the Sessions Judge. The Bombay Government have suggested that where the case of one accused has to be referred to the Sessions Judge under section 123, the case of all should be referred, whether they have given security or not. We have adopted this suggestion"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

It should be noted in this connection that the provisions of section 406 (which provides for appeals against orders requiring security) have been made inapplicable to a case where proceedings have been laid before a Sessions Judge under this sub-section. 124. (1) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter, * * * may be released without hazard to the community or to any other person, he may order such person to be discharged.

(2) Whenever any person has been imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter, the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may (unless the order has been made by some Court superior to his own) make an order reducing the amount of the security or the number of sureties or the time for which security has been required.

(3) An order under sub-section (1) may direct the discharge of such person either without conditions or upon any conditions which such person accepts.

Provided that any condition imposed shall cease to be operative when the period for which such person was ordered to give security has expired.

(4) The Provincial Government may prescribe the conditions upon which a conditional discharge may be made.

(5) If any condition upon which any person has been discharged is, in the opinion of the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate by whom the order of discharge was made or of his successor, not fulfilled, he may cancel the same.

(6) When a conditional order of discharge has been cancelled under sub-section (5), such person may be arrested by any police-officer without warrant and shall thereupon be produced before the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate.

Unless such person then gives security in accordance with the terms of the original order for the unexpired portion of the term for which he was in the first instance committed or ordered to be detained (such portion being deemed to be a period equal to the period between the date of the breach of the conditions of discharge and the date on which, except for such conditional discharge, he would have been entitled to release), the District

Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate may remand such person to prison to undergo such unexpired portion.

A person remanded to prison under this sub-section shall, subject to the provisions of section 122, be released at any time on giving security in accordance with the terms of the original order for the unexpired portion aforesaid to the Court or Magistrate by whom such order was made, or to its or his successor.

Change:—Sub-sections (3) to (6) have been added by sec. 22 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) "This amendment is mainly intended to enable persons committed to prison under Chapter VIII of the Code to be sent to Industrial Homes and Settlements of the Salvation Army, or to other similar Homes or Settlements, where it may be possible to reform them and make them accustomed to regular work of a kind which may be useful to them after the expiry of their period of detention. It is proposed to give a District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate absolute power to release with or without conditions a person imprisoned for failure to give security, without the intervention of the Court of Session or High Court."—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1921).

311. It is entirely within the discretion of the District Magistrate, who as the head of the District, is responsible for the peace thereof, to determine when and under what circumstances he should act under this section—Chhotia, 1893 A.W.N. 183

The order passed by a District Magistrate under this section may be of an original or of a revisional character; that is, the Magistrate may release a person either on the ground that by reason of something occurring after the order for security, there is no longer any apprehension of a breach of the peace and the person may be safely released, or on the ground that on the evidence taken by the Subordinate Magistrate there was no apprehension of a breach of the peace, and no order for security should have been made—Mare Goud, 37 Mad. 125 (141), 25 M.L.J. 459, 14 Cr.L.J. 546, 21 I.C. 146 (F.B.).

125. The Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may at Power of District Magistrate to cancel any bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour.

any time, for sufficient reasons to be recorded in writing, cancel any bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour executed under this Chapter by order of any Court in his district not superior to his Court.

312. Scope:—This section empowers the District Magistrate to cancel a bond but does not authorise him to order that the person whose bond is so cancelled should be imprisoned until a fresh security bond is given—Baldeo Singh v. Jugal Kishore, 33 All. 624; Panchu, 29 Cal 455.

313. Cancellation of bond:—Ground of cancellation:—The Allahabad High Court (as well as the Oudh Court) has held that a bond can be cancelled only on the ground that it is no longer necessary—Banarsi v. Partab Singh, 35 All 103, 11 A.L.J. 16, 14 Cr.L.J. 63, 18 I.C. 351; Shankar, 41 All 651, 17 A.L.J. 147, 20 Cr.L.J. 206, 49 I.C. 654; and that the District Magistrate, in cancelling a bond, is entitled to look only to the circumstances subsequent to the execution of the bond. He can cancel a bond only on the ground that something has supervened since the date of the first Court's order which satisfies the District Magistrate that in view of the facts since come to light there is no longer any necessity to keep the accused person under bond—Nizamuddin v. Md Ziaul, 44 All. 614, 20 A.L.J. 521, 23 Cr.L.J. 398, 67 I.C. 350, A.I.R. 1922 All. 191; he can cancel a bond for keeping the peace if there is no ground for thinking that there is any likelihood of a breach of the peace—Abdar, 1905

A.W.N. 143. But the District Magistrate is not entitled to look to the circumstances existing at the time of the bond; thus, the fitness or unfitness of the sureties is a matter which can be decided in reference to the circumstances existing at the time of execution of the bond, and the District Magistrate has no power to look to those circumstances and cannot therefore cancel a bond on the ground of unfitness of sureties—Mahabir, 8 O.C. 245, 2 Cr.L.J. 507. In other words, the power conferred by this section to cancel a bond is not to be exercised as in appeal against an order of security to keep the peace—Sita Ram, 39 All 456; Nizamuddin v Md Ziaul, 44 All. 614, 23 Cr.L.J. 398; Ram Din, 24 Cr.L.J. 204 (Oudh); Baluani, 24 Cr.L.J. 616 (Oudh). This section cannot be used by the Magistrate as if he were sitting in appeal and going into the merits of the case. If he thinks that the order is not maintainable on the evidence on record, his duty is not to pass an order under section 125 but to refer the case to the High Court in its revisional side—Nizamuddin v. Md Ziaul, 44 All. 614; Banarsi v. Partab, 35 All 103; Shankar, 41 All 651, 17 A.L.J. 830. Two other Allahabad cases, however, do not support this view. Thus, in Baldeo Singh v Jugal Kishore, 33 All 624 (625), it has been held that a District Magistrate can cancel a bond of the accused on the ground that the surety who stood for him was an unfit person. In another Allahabad case, Lalji, 40 All 140 (virtually dissenting from 35 All 103) it is laid down that there is nothing in the words of sec. 125 to prevent the District Magistrate from cancelling the bond for reasons other than that it is no longer necessary to keep the accused under their bonds; that the District Magistrate can cancel a bond under sec. 125 on the ground that the accused should not have been bound over; and that the District Magistrate can deal with a case under section 125 as in revision, and no reference to the High Court is necessary.

The Patna High Court holds that the only order which a District Magistrate can pass under this section, is an order cancelling the bond directed to be executed by a subordinate Magistrate, on the ground that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace. The District Magistrate is not an appellate or revisional authority, and he has no power to vacate the order of the subordinate Magistrate as ultra vires or to quash the proceedings—Durga Singh v Amar Dayal, 3 P.L.T. 103, 23 Cr.L.J. 281.

But the Calcutta High Court is of opinion that the District Magistrate can cancel the bond on any sufficient ground, and he is not restricted to the grounds which may have arisen subsequent to the date of execution of the bond. The jurisdiction of the District Magistrate under this section is not merely an original jurisdiction but may be exercised as in appeal or revision. He can cancel the bond on the ground that it should never have been required—Nabu Sardar, 34 Cal 1 (F.B.), 11 C.W.N. 25, 4 C.L.J. 428, 4 Cr.L.J. 399 (overruling 32 Cal 948). This decision has been followed by the Punjab, Madras and C.P. Courts. Thus, in Auditta, 1908 P.W.R. 12, 7 Cr.L.J. 348, it has been held that the District Magistrate has full discretion to consider the evidence, and can set aside the order of security on the merits. The Madras High Court also holds that the order under sec. 125 may be either of an original or of a revisional character, and the District Magistrate may cancel a bond on any 'sufficient grounds'. There is no reason to qualify or restrict the ordinary meaning of the words used. The District Magistrate can review the evidence and cancel a bond on the ground that the evidence before the Subordinate Magistrate was not sufficient to justify the passing of the order for security—Mare Goud, 37 Mad 125, 1913 M.W.N. 715, 25 M.L.J. 459, 14 M.L.T. 328, 14 Cr.L.J. 546, 21 I.C. 116 (F.B.). The same view has been taken in C. P.—Dalli, 11 N.L.R. 98, 16 Cr.L.J. 555, 29 I.C. 827; Baines, 23 Cr.L.J. 394, 67 I.C. 346, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 180, 6 N.L.J. 274.

The words 'at any time' show that the District Magistrate may cancel the bond at any time however late, even when there is only one day left for the expiration of the period for which the bond has been executed, the delay in obtaining the material on which the bond is cancelled does not invalidate the order of cancellation—Mare

Gowd, 37 Mad. 125 (145, 146) (F.B.). But an order for the cancellation of the bond cannot be passed before it has been executed—Barka v. Janmejoy, 32 Cal. 948

Right of applicant to be heard:—When a Magistrate is moved to exercise his powers under this section to cancel a bond, the applicant or his pleader should, as a matter of general practice, be heard before the application is rejected—Sita Ram, 39 All. 466, 18 Cr.L.J. 630, 15 A.L.J. 469; Mehr Baksh, 1914 P.L.R. 53, 15 Cr.L.J. 143.

Effect of cancellation:—Where a bond is cancelled on the ground that it is no longer necessary or that it has been wrongly taken, both the accused and the surety will be discharged from all liability—Abdur Rahim, 1905 A.W.N. 143.

314. Transfer of proceedings:—Where the proceedings under sec. 107 instituted in one district were transferred by the order of the High Court to another district, and a 1st class Magistrate of the latter district ordered security to keep the peace, held that it was the District Magistrate of the latter district who had jurisdiction to pass an order under this section for the cancellation of the bond—Guru Prasanna v. Hari Kumar, 23 C.W.N. 958, 20 Cr.L.J. 337.

126. (1) Any surety for the peaceful conduct or good behaviour of another person may at any time apply to a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class to cancel any bond executed under this Chapter within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

(2) On such application being made, the Magistrate shall issue his summons or warrant, as he thinks fit, requiring the person, for whom such surety is bound, to appear or to be brought before him.

Sub-section (3) of this section has been re-numbered as section 126A with certain alterations, by the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). See notes under the next section

315. This section deals with cases in which the surety wishes to withdraw and to have the bond cancelled and it lays down the procedure which is to be adopted when such security becomes useless owing to the withdrawal of the surety—Mahabir, 8 O.C. 245, 2 Cr.L.J. 507.

When the effect of an order discharging a surety is to remit the accused to prison for a term exceeding one year, the Magistrate is bound to refer the case to the Sessions Judge (sec. 123)—Alladino, 5 S.L.R. 87, 12 Cr.L.J. 410, 11 I.C. 594.

126A. When a person for whose appearance a warrant or summons has been issued under proviso to sub-section (3) of section 122 or under section 126, sub-section (2), appears or is brought before him, the Magistrate shall cancel the bond executed by such person and shall order such person to give, for the unexpired portion of the term of such bond, fresh security of the same description as the original security. Every such order shall, for the purposes of sections 121, 122, 123 and 124, be deemed to be an order made under section 106 or section 118, as the case may be.

Security for unexpired period of bond.

This was originally sub-section (3) of section 126. It has been re-numbered as section 126A with the italicised words added, by sec. 23 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). "We think that the procedure set out in sub-sections (2) and (3) of section 126 should apply in the case of a surety subsequently rejected (under sec. 122), and we have added a new clause which makes the necessary amendments in section 126."—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

This section deals with the order passed by a Magistrate on an application by a surety for his discharge and provides inter alia that an order passed under that section shall for the purposes of secs 121, 122, 123 and 124 be deemed to be an order under sec. 118. It, however, makes no mention of sec. 120—Ahmed, 27 Cr.L.J. 865 (867), 20 S.L.R. 163, 96 I.C. 113, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 273 (F.B.)

CHAPTER IX.

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLIES.

127. (1) Any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police station may command any unlawful assembly, or any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, to disperse; and it shall thereupon be the duty of the members of such assembly to disperse accordingly.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta.

316. "Officer in charge":—An order directing the dispersal of an assembly passed by an officer (e.g., Deputy Commissioner of Police) superior in rank to the Police Officer is an order by a lawful authority within the meaning of this section—Emp. v. Tucker, 7 Bom. 42

The power to disperse an unlawful assembly by force is not given by the Code to any police officer below the rank of an officer in charge of a police station—Muhammad Yunus, 50 Cal 318 (323), 25 Cr.L.J. 467, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 517

317. Unlawful assembly:—An assembly may be for lawful purposes, e.g., a religious procession; but it may excite such opposition as to be likely to cause a breach of the peace. If so, it may be called upon to disperse—Tucker, 7 Bom 42; Murlidhar, 1887 P.R. 22.

If an order is promulgated by the Superintendent of Police under sec. 30 of the Police Act (V of 1861) prohibiting persons from organising or promoting processions without a license, and that order is disobeyed the procedure to be adopted is as provided by sec 127 of the Cr P Code, viz., to order the procession to disperse—Harekrishna, 8 P.L.T. 245, 28 Cr.L.J. 443, 101 I.C. 475

Although it may be conceded that the Police Officer's opinion is relevant and may be of great weight, it is impossible to concede that the Criminal Courts have no jurisdiction to determine the legality of the command—Yeshwant, 34 Cr.L.J. 705, A.I.R. 1933 Nag 277, 144 I.C. 232, 1933 Cr.C. 1068, Ind Rul 1933 Nag 215 following Emp v Tucker, 7 Bom 42

This section empowered the Sub-inspector to disperse a lawful procession if there was a reasonable apprehension that there would be a riot, it being immaterial whose action would provoke it—Raghunath, 85 I.C. 823, 47 All 205, 22 A.L.J. 1049, A.I.R. 1925 All 165, 26 Cr.L.J. 599. This view of law was dissented from in Yeshwant, supra

The taking out of a procession with music playing is not an unauthorised use of public road, see Raghunath, 85 I.C. 823, 47 All 205, 22 A.L.J. 1049, A.I.R. 1925 All. 165, 26 Cr.L.J. 599 and Janaki Prasad v. Karamat Husain, 137 I.C. 587, 1931 A.L.J. 624, A.I.R. 1931 All. 674, 53 All. 836. A peaceful and lawful procession cannot be regarded as likely to cause a breach of the peace when it is admitted that not they but some other body of persons is bent on attacking them. Whether an assembly is likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, has to be judged from its own acts and behaviour. If leading the procession itself is not unlawful or intrinsically calculated to create a riot, the disturbance, if it arises, cannot be attributed to the procession itself but to the manner in which it is conducted. Thus the conduct of the processionists apart from the mere act of moving in procession, is the material element which must weigh for the purpose of putting this section in operation. The reasonable and plain meaning is that when it appears that the behaviour of an assembly of five or more persons is such as to indicate that it would be an active party to the disturbance of public peace, or that it is reasonably calculated to provoke others to a breach of the peace; such an assembly may be ordered to disperse under section 127 Cr. P. Code. That section speaks of an actual unlawful assembly and a potential unlawful assembly. In the case of latter assembly there must be evidence to establish that in the immediate future it would develop into an unlawful assembly animated by the common object of disturbance of the peace or that the natural consequence of the assembly itself is to provoke a disturbance. In every case, it is a question of fact to be determined on the evidence relating to the conduct of the assembly—Yeshwant, supra.

Punishment:—Section 127 Cr. P. Code contemplates two kinds of assemblies:—(1) an unlawful assembly within the meaning of sec. 141 I. P. C., (2) an assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of public peace. For, disobeying the command to disperse the former kind of assembly is punishable under sec 145 I. P. Code and the latter under sec. 151 I. P. C.—Yeshwant, 34 Cr.L.J. 705 (707), A.I.R. 1933 Nag 277, 144 I.C. 232, 1933 Cr.C. 1068, Ind. Rul. 1933 Nag. 215

128. If upon being so commanded, any such assembly does not disperse, or if, without being so commanded, it conducts itself in such a manner as to show a determination not to disperse, any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police station, whether within or without the presidency-towns, may proceed to disperse such assembly by force, and may require the assistance of any male person not being an officer, soldier, sailor or airman, in Her Majesty's Army, Navy or Air Force, or a volunteer enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, and acting as such, for the purposes of dispersing such assembly, and if necessary, arresting and confining the persons who form part of it, in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law.

Amendment:—The words "soldier, sailor or airman in His Majesty's Army, Navy or Air force" have been substituted for "or soldier, in Her Majesty's Army" by the Amending Act, 1934 (XXXV of 1934). The Indian Volunteers Act, 1869 (XX of 1869) has since been repealed by the Auxiliary Force Act, 1920 (XLIX of 1920).

318. Scope:—This section, though authorizes arrest in certain cases, has nothing to do with the general power of arrest possessed by a Magistrate and only lays down the circumstances in which an assembly may be legally dispersed by force—Muneshwar Bux Singh v Emp, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 81 (83), 1939 O.W.N. 106, 1939 O.L.R. 71, 1939 R.D. 78, 179 I.C. 644, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 39

Use of fire-arms:—The power of using fire-arms to disperse an unlawful assembly cannot be exercised by any person below the rank of an officer in charge of a police station. An officer-in-charge of a patrol boat, whose powers are no higher than those of an officer-in-charge of an outpost, cannot use fire-arms under this section—Muhammad Yunus, 50 Cal. 318 (323), 25 Cr.L.J. 467, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 517.

The degree of force which may be lawfully used in the suppression of an unlawful assembly depends on the nature of such assembly, for the force used must always be moderated and proportioned to the circumstances of the case and to the end to be obtained. The taking of life can only be justified by the necessity for protecting persons or property against various forms of violence, or by the necessity of dispersing a riotous crowd which is dangerous unless dispersed—Q.-E. v. Subha Naik, 21 Mad. 249 (252).

129. If any such assembly cannot be otherwise dispersed, and if it is necessary for the public security that it should be dispersed, the Magistrate of the highest rank who is present may cause it to be dispersed by military force.

130. (1) When a Magistrate determines to disperse any such assembly by military force, he may require any commissioned or non-commissioned officer in command of any soldiers in Her Majesty's Army or of any volunteers enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, to disperse such assembly by military force, and to arrest and confine such persons forming part of it as the Magistrate may direct, or as it may be necessary to arrest and confine in order to disperse the assembly or to have them punished according to law.

(2) Every such officer shall obey such requisition in such manner as he thinks fit, but in so doing he shall use as little force, and do as little injury to person and property, as may be consistent with dispersing the assembly and arresting and detaining such persons.

131. When the public security is manifestly endangered by any such assembly, and when no Magistrate can be communicated with, any commissioned officer of Her Majesty's Army may disperse such assembly by military force, and may arrest and confine any person forming part of it, in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law; but if, while he is acting under this section, it becomes practicable for him to communicate with a Magistrate, he shall do so, and shall thenceforward obey the instructions of the Magistrate as to whether he shall or shall not continue such action.

* Now the Auxiliary Force Act, 1920 (XLIX of 1920),

132. No prosecution against any person for any act purporting to be done under this Chapter shall be instituted in any Criminal Court except with the sanction of the Provincial Government; and—

- (a) no Magistrate or police officer acting under this Chapter in good faith,
- (b) no officer acting under section 131 in good faith,
- (c) no person doing any act in good faith, in compliance with a requisition under section 128 or section 130, and,
- (d) no inferior officer, or soldier, or volunteer doing any act in obedience to any order which he was bound to obey, shall be deemed to have thereby committed an offence:

Provided that no such prosecution shall be instituted in any Criminal Court against any officer or soldier in His Majesty's army except with the sanction of the Central Government.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" and "Central Government" have been respectively substituted for the words "Local Government" and "Governor General in Council" by section 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

319. Sanction:—Want of sanction under this section will not be cured by sec. 537—In re Permal, 31 Mad. 80, 17 M.L.J. 533.

The power to disperse an unlawful assembly by force is not given by this Code to any Police-officer below the rank of an officer in charge of a police station. The powers of an officer-in-charge of a patrol boat are no higher than those of an officer in charge of an outpost; therefore he has no power to act under this chapter; if he so acts (e.g., fires on an unlawful assembly), his action is illegal and does not fall under sec. 128; and no sanction of the Local Government is necessary for his prosecution for such act—Muhammad Yunus, 50 Cal. 318, 324 (Bhawal Shooting case), 25 Cr.L.J. 467, A.I.R. 1923 Cal 517.

Section 79, I P. C., can only be applied when all the facts are known, i.e., when the trial is over; sec. 132, Cr. P. C., can only operate before the trial begins. Protection given by sec. 79 is a protection against conviction, while the protection given by sec. 132 is a protection against trial. It is impossible to hold that these provisions are identical—M. N. Schamnad v. M. N. Rama Rao, 34 Cr.L.J. 528, 143 I.C. 115, 1932 M.W.N. 1225, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 268, 1933 Cr.C. 371, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad 271.

It cannot be laid down that in order to decide whether a prosecution is barred under sec. 132, Cr. P. Code for want of the sanction of the Local Government only the complaint and the sworn testimony should be referred to—M. N. Schamnad v. M. N. Rama Rao, supra.

The principle of the decision in—Gangaraju v. Kandiboyina Venki, 118 I.C. 102, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 659, 1929 Cr.C. 140, 30 Cr.L.J. 864, 52 Mad. 602, 30 M.L.W. 116, 57 M.L.J. 31, Ind. Rul. 1929 Mad. 742, 1929 M.W.N. 387, is equally applicable to sec. 132 Cr. P. Code the terms of which are as wide as if not wider than, those of sec. 197. The policy of the Legislature is to afford adequate protection to public servants, to ensure that they are not prosecuted for anything done by them in the discharge of their official duties without reasonable cause and if sanction is granted, to confer on the Local Government if they choose to exercise it, complete control of the prosecution—M. N. Schamnad v. M. N. Rama Rao, supra.

Where the defence was that the accused were acting in the discharge of their duties under sections 127 and 128 Cr. P. Code the jury should be told that if they could not accept the case for the prosecution, they would have next to consider the provisions of secs. 127 and 128 Cr. P. Code and determine whether the accused acted or meant to act under those sections and, on their acceptance of the defence case, it followed that in the absence of the sanction of the Governor-General in Council (or the Local Government as the case may be) the prosecution could not be continued and the accused were entitled to an acquittal—Abdul Rahim Mir, 25 C.W.N. 623 (629), 33 C.L.J. 340.

This section is a bar to the prosecution of police-officers purporting to act under Chapter IX of the Cr. P. Code without the sanction of the Local Government. It is not necessary that the accused (ie, police-officers) should prove the existence of an unlawful assembly—Elaya Pillai v. Arulanandan Pillai, 1937 M.W.N. 1243.

CHAPTER X.

PUBLIC NUISANCES.

133. (1) Whenever a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or * * * a Magistrate of the first class considers, on receiving a police-report or other information and on taking such evidence (if any), as he thinks fit,

Conditional order for removal of nuisance that any unlawful obstruction or nuisance should be removed from any way, river or channel which is or may be lawfully used by the public, or from any public place, or that the conduct of any trade or occupation, or the keeping of any goods or merchandise, is injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community, and that in consequence such trade or occupation should be prohibited or regulated or such goods or merchandise should be removed or the keeping thereof regulated, or that the construction of any building or the disposal of any substance, as likely to occasion conflagration or explosion, should be prevented or stopped, or,

that any building, tent or structure or any tree is in such a condition that it is likely to fall and thereby cause injury to persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood or passing by, and that in consequence the removal, repair or support of such building, tent or structure, or the removal or support of such tree, is necessary, or that any tank, well or excavation adjacent to any such way or public place should be fenced in such manner as to prevent danger arising to the public, or, that any dangerous animal should be destroyed, confined or otherwise disposed of, such Magistrate may make a conditional order requiring the person causing such obstruction or nuisance or carrying on such trade or occupation, or keeping any such goods or merchandise, or owning, possessing or controlling such building, tent, structure, substance, tank, well or excavation, or owning or possessing such animal or tree, within a time to be fixed in the order, to remove such obstruction or nuisance; or to desist from carrying on, or to remove or regulate in such manner as may be directed, such trade or occupation; or to remove such goods or merchandise, or to regulate the keeping thereof in such manner as may be directed; or to prevent to stop the erection of, or to remove, repair or support, such building, tent or structure; or to remove or support such tree; or to alter the disposal of such substance; or to fence such tank, well or excavation, as the case may be; or to destroy, confine or dispose of such dangerous animal in the manner provided in the said order; or, if he objects to do, to appear before himself or some other Magistrate of the first or second class, at a time and place to be fixed by the order, and move to have the order set aside or modified in the manner hereinafter provided.

(2) No order duly made by a Magistrate under this section shall be called in question in any Civil Court.

Explanation.—A “public place” includes also property belonging to the State, camping grounds and grounds left unoccupied for sanitary or recreative purposes.

Change:—The entire section has been newly drafted by sec. 24 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). In sub-section (1) the words “when empowered by the Local Government in this behalf” have been omitted: under the previous law, an ordinary Magistrate of the first class could take proceedings under this section only when he was specially empowered by the Local Government: under the present law, all Magistrates of the first class are competent to deal with the case, and no special empowering is necessary. Certain other minor changes have been made in the subsequent paras of this section, as shown by the italicised words.

320. Application of this Chapter:—The provisions of this section should be sparingly used—Manipur v. Bidhu Bhusan, 42 Cal. 158, 18 C.W.N. 1086. The provisions of this Chapter should be so worked as not to become themselves a nuisance to the community at large. Although every person is bound to so use his property that it may not work legal damage or harm to his neighbour, yet on the other hand, no one has a right to interfere with the free and full enjoyment by such person of his property, except on clear and absolute proof that such use of it by him is producing such legal damage or harm; and therefore, a lawful and necessary trade (e.g., tanning) ought not to be interfered with unless it is proved to be injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community—Shadi, 17 P.R. 1888.

A private person has no right to insist that a Magistrate shall pass orders under sec. 133, Cr. P. C. Whether such orders should be passed is a matter of discretion for the Magistrate. If he does not choose to interfere, the party aggrieved has his normal remedy in the Civil Court—Sible Hussain, AIR 1937 All. 785, 1937 A.W.R. 866, 1937 A.L.J. 903, 1938 A.L.R. 10, 172 I.C. 642, 39 Cr.L.J. 148, 1937 A.Cr.C. 165.

This section deals with the condition of things at the time when the order is made. It is not meant to apply to what may happen at some indefinite time in the future or under quite abnormal circumstances. Therefore, a Magistrate is not competent to order an occupation to be prohibited, or a tree to be cut down or a building to be demolished, merely because at some future time the occupation may become injurious to the health of the neighbourhood, or the tree may cause an obstruction to public thoroughfare or the building may become dangerous to passers-by—Gokal Chand, 56 I.C. 446, AIR 1920 Lah. 258, 1 Lah. 163, 21 Cr.L.J. 462; Gokul, 22 A.L.J. 436, 26 Cr.L.J. 104; Rajawqn, 1890 P.R. 5. This section can have no application to something which may become a nuisance, that is a potential nuisance, but applies only where the nuisance is in existence in a way, river or channel which is or may be lawfully used by the public and which is in existence in a public place—Shri Ram, AIR 1935 All. 926, 1935 A.W.R. 1001, 1935 Cr.C. 1140, 1935 A.L.R. 1086, 159 I.C. 198, 37 Cr.L.J. 347; Kalyan Mul Mathur, AIR 1936 Pat. 577, 37 Cr.L.J. 1159, 165 I.C. 542, 1936 Cr.C. 948. An order under sec. 137, Cr. P. C., can only be made, where there is an existing obstruction or nuisance and cannot be made in respect of some future nuisance. But where an order under sec. 137 was not made in respect of some future nuisance but was made in respect of the nuisance which existed when the proceedings under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., commenced, the order is legal even when, on the date of its passing, nuisance was not in existence owing to enforcement of an order under sec. 142, Cr. P. C., to obviate or prevent imminent danger or injury pending the determination of the matter—Rebati Mohan v. Chaital Chandra, 63 Cr.L.J. 5, 38 Cr.L.J. 173, 166 I.C. 221, AIR 1936 Cal. 692, 1936 Cr.C. 954, 9 R.C. 490.

In all criminal proceedings initiated under this section, the Magistrate should bear in mind that he is supposed to be acting purely in the interests of the public, and should be on his guard against any tendency to use the section as a substitute for litigation in the Civil Courts, in order to obtain settlement of private disputes—Farzand Ali v. Hakim Ali, 37 All. 26 (28). Where the alleged obstructions to a public road has been existing for 15 or 16 years, the matter is one to be decided by a Civil Court, and sec. 133 is not intended to be applied in such cases to avoid the necessity of filing a civil suit—Ghurahu v. Sakalraj, 24 A.L.J. 112, 27 Cr.L.J. 27 (29), 91 I.C. 59, AIR 1926 All. 157; Baisakhi Ram, AIR 1930 Lah. 361, 1930 Cr.C. 965, 120 I.C. 796, 31 Cr.L.J. 167; Khair Din v. Wasan, AIR 1935 Lah. 28, 1935 Cr.C. 19, 159 I.C. 374, 37 Cr.L.J. 70, 8 R.L. 381. Chapter X of the Code deals with "public nuisances" and provides a speedy and summary method for dealing with them, in cases of great emergency and where there is imminent danger to the public interest. The fact that an obstruction has been allowed to stand, without objection, in a public place for many years itself indicates that there is no such emergency or imminent danger to the public interest. The existence of a long-standing obstruction cannot, therefore, without proof of something having recently happened, be considered to be a public nuisance—Tulsi Ram, 39 Cr.L.J. 775, 11 R.L. 1939 Lah. 381, 176 I.C. 669, 11 R.L. 225, AIR 1938 Lah. 523, 40 P.L.R. 492; Consolidation Co-operative Society v. Har Govind, 40 Cr.L.J. 758, 183 I.C. 292, 12 R.L. 106, AIR 1939 Lah. 276; Nanumat v. Emp., AIR 1939 Lah. 452, 41 P.L.R. 515, 40 Cr.L.J. 933, 184 I.C. 352, 12 R.L. 211. If the road has been recently constructed, the obstruction can be held to be a recent one, even though the trees in dispute have been in existence for a number of years. If, however, the road was constructed several years ago, then it cannot be said that the trees that have stood alongside the road for a number of years constitute a new obstruction—Consolidation Co-operative Society v. Har Gobind, supra. But no length of enjoyment can legalize a public nuisance involving actual danger to the health of the community—Maksood Ali v. President, Union Board, Garhwa, 40 Cr.L.J. 516, 180 I.C. 852, AIR 1938 Pat. 183, 17 Pat. 669, 20 P.L.T. 288, 5 B.R. 505, 11 R.P. 549, 1939 P.W.N.

95. See also Note 326. See also Jankari Ram v. Saukhi Panjara, 108 I.C. 559, 9 P.L.T. 587, A.I.R. 1928 Pat 268. For contra see Barkhandi, 32 Cr.L.J. 1234, 31 I.C. 783, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 159, 1931 Cr.C. 271; 31 C.W.N. 530, 44 C.L.J. 211.

Where the mills have been working for the last ten years and that too under a license from the Municipal Board which is authorised to grant such licences under the U. P. Municipalities Act, it would not be proper to have recourse to the provisions of this Chapter. The proceedings under this Chapter are of a summary nature and intended to enable Magistrates to deal with cases of emergency and not intended to enable a complainant to obtain, by having recourse to this Chapter, relief which he should seek in the Civil Court—Kedar Nath v. Satish Chandra, 41 Cr.L.J. 99 (101), 184 I.C. 754, 1939 O.W.N. 966, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 75, 1939 O.L.R. 653, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 252.

It is very doubtful if the working of the mills as regulated by the previous order of the Magistrate under this section can be described in law as a nuisance for the purposes of fresh proceedings under this Chapter. The working of the mills after that order is under the order of the Criminal Court. Further, the law does not contemplate a continued interference with the carrying on of the trade. Where in such a case a fresh complaint is made, the Magistrate should leave the complainant to move either the Municipal Board or to seek his redress in the Civil Court—Kedar Nath v. Satish Chandra, supra.

An order under this section should be passed for removal of a chabutra which has been unlawfully erected over a public way. The fact that in the particular case the public may have lot of room to go along the road without needing to walk upon that particular site, has nothing whatever to do with the case—Sallu Mal, 32 Cr.L.J. 160, 128 I.C. 604, A.I.R. 1930 All 751, 1930 Cr.C. 1007, Ind. Rul. 1931 All 76. See also Jagoshau v. Madan, 28 Cr.L.J. 910, 105 I.C. 238, 6 Pat. 428, 8 P.L.T. 452.

This Chapter does not apply to Presidency Towns as Presidency Magistrates are not empowered to act under this Chapter.

321. Secs. 133 and 144:—Sec. 144 is more general and sec. 133 is more specific; therefore, nuisances specially provided for in this section are taken out of the general provisions of sec. 144—Anonymous, 2 Weir 54; Huri Mohun, 10 W.R. 53. But where an order prohibiting a nuisance cannot be made under this section, e.g., an order prohibiting burial in certain places on sanitary grounds, it should be made under the more general sections (143 or 144)—Anonymous, 2 Weir 64.

322. Secs. 133 and 147:—Sec. 147 and sec. 133 are entirely independent provisions and neither section can be used to throw any light on the interpretation of the other, the object, scope and language being totally different. If there is any over-lapping, that merely means that in some cases where a public way is concerned, the Magistrate may have alternative procedures open to him. At the same time there is no reason why the restricted operation of sec. 147 as compared with the corresponding previous provision, should of itself enlarge the powers given by sec. 133—Ram Sagar Mondal v. Alek Naskar, 26 C.W.N. 442 (454), 49 Cal. 682 (697), A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 59 (F.B.).

Section 133 is not a bar to a proceeding under sec. 147. The fact that sec. 133 expressly provides for an order by the Magistrate directing the removal of an obstruction to a pathway does not necessarily imply that a similar order cannot be passed under sec. 147—Karuppana v. Kandasami, 26 M.L.J. 223, 15 Cr.L.J. 362. But when proceedings have been taken under sec. 133, no order can be passed under sec. 147—Abdool Rackman v. Safar Ali, 15 C.W.N. 667, 12 Cr.L.J. 43, 9 I.C. 262.

Under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., the Magistrate has power to bring about the removal of an obstruction from any way lawfully used by the public. The existence of this section would explain why mandatory action has not been prescribed under sec. 147, Cr. P. C.—Usmar Ali v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 297, 1938 N.L.J. 139, 175 I.C. 234.

323. Nature of proceedings:—Proceedings under this section are more of the nature of civil than of criminal proceedings, and the person against whom proceedings are taken under this section is not an 'accused' person within the meaning of sec. 342. He can give evidence on his own behalf and may be examined on oath—Hirananda, 9 C.W.N. 983. Proceedings under this Chapter are not proceedings in respect of offences, and further inquiry cannot be ordered under sec. 436 if the proceedings are dropped by the Magistrate—Srinath v. Ainaddi, 24 Cal 395. But orders passed on proceedings under this chapter are orders passed in a 'criminal trial' for the purpose of sec. 15 of the Letters Patent, and no appeal lies against an order passed by a single Judge of the High Court under sec. 439 revising an order of the Magistrate—Subbayya v. Ramayya, 39 Mad 537, 16 Cr.L.J. 349.

It is doubtful if a Magistrate can continue with two proceedings under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., side by side with regard to practically the same subject matter, because the danger is that by this procedure, a Magistrate may get a chance of reviewing an order which he had already passed. This is a procedure which is not contemplated by the Cr. P. C.—Kalyan Mal Mathur, AIR, 1936 Pat. 577, 37 Cr.L.J. 1159, 165 IC 542, 1936 Cr.C. 948.

Magistrates empowered:—All first class Magistrates are now authorised to take action under this section, and it is no longer necessary that they should be specially empowered by the Local Government. In the United Provinces and in C. P., the Local Government may invest Municipal Boards with the powers of a District Magistrate to institute proceedings under this section. See sec. 57 of N W P Municipalities Act XV of 1883, and sec. 86 of the C P Municipal Act XVIII of 1889.

Presidency Magistrates are not empowered to act under this chapter. In nuisance cases in Presidency towns, they act under the Penal Code, the Police Acts, the Municipal Acts and other local enactments, dealing with special kinds of nuisances.

Third class Magistrates cannot hold any inquiry under this chapter—Masaddar v. Ismulla, 50 CLJ 291, 1929 CrC 660 (661), 57 Cal 666, 34 CWN 228.

Where a first class Magistrate, after hearing some evidence, ordered the opposite party to appear before him and, on their appearance before him, he did not hear the case but sent it for final disposal to a second class Magistrate, the procedure was illegal. According to the section, the original order to the opposite party should have been to appear before himself or the second class Magistrate. After the order to appear before himself was given, he should have proceeded with the case and as far as can be seen from the Code, he had no power at that stage to send it for disposal to another Magistrate—Umrao Singh v. Kanwar Lal, 39 Cr.L.J. 603, 175 IC 517, AIR 1938 Lah 323, 10 R.L. 733.

Taking such evidence (if any):—The expression "on taking such evidence, if any, as he thinks fit" does not make it incumbent on the Magistrate to hold an inquiry before making a conditional order under sub-sec. (1) of this section. If a Magistrate were to come to a finding ex parte that there was an encroachment on the public road before he made an order for the opposite party to put in a written statement and produce evidence it would be merely, in most cases, a waste of time, and no such procedure is laid down by the section. It is after the parties have appeared before the Magistrate that he makes his enquiry and comes to his finding—Abdul Shakur, AIR. 1931 All 257, 130 IC 627, 1930 A.L.J. 1335, 1931 CrC 417, Ind Rul 1931 All 291, 32 Cr.L.J. 565.

324. Unlawful obstruction:—Obstruction to a public road is a nuisance though no practical inconvenience is caused—Umrao, 23 All. 84; Kedar Nath, 23 All. 159. And it is absolutely irrelevant with what motive an obstruction upon the public highway is caused—Kedar Nath, supra. Encroachment upon the public road is an obstruction and a nuisance by itself, even though it may not cause any inconvenience. The question of the sufficient width of the road being left for public use, is no ground for allowing the encroachment or obstruction to continue. The public has a right to use every inch of the public path—Jagroshan v. Madan, 6 Pat. 428, 28 Cr.L.J. 910 (911), 8 P.L.T. 452, AIR 1927 Pat. 265. But, where the accused occupied a portion of the road (by putting up a stall) with the permission of the Notified Area authorities, the Magistrate had no power to pass an order under this section—Mul Chand, 8 O.W.N. 651, 32 Cr.L.J. 1165, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 397, 1931 Cr.C 829, Ind. Rul. 1932 Oudh 352.

A dam constructed across a public river which amounts to an obstruction to the river and causes damage to the lower riparian owners, may be ordered to be removed under this section—Jagannath v. Chandika, 6 O.L.J. 616, 21 Cr.L.J. 55. Where a cattle market is situated in a congested part of the town, so that owing to the cattle having to be driven through narrow and congested lanes, obstruction and inconvenience are caused to the public, it may be suppressed by an order under this section—Mahendra, 22 Cr.L.J. 582 (Cal.).

The obstruction must be permanent, and not temporary—Dewrao, 6 Bom.L.R. 358; and it must be an existing obstruction; a Magistrate cannot make any order as to what should be done in case of future obstructions—Kashi v. Yar Md., 21 W.R. 10. See also Note 320. Thus, where a solid and vigorous branch of a tree is 15 feet above the level of a road in a village, it cannot be said that at such a height it causes an obstruction, having regard to the normal traffic, and it cannot be ordered to be cut down, merely because it is likely at some future time and under abnormal circumstances to prove an obstruction—Gokul, 22 A.L.J. 436, 26 Cr.L.J. 104, A.I.R. 1924 All. 667, 83 I.C. 664. See also Consolidation Co-operative Society v. Har Gobind, in Note 320. An owner or occupier of land has no right to allow his trees to overhang his neighbour's lands and he cannot acquire such a right by prescription. A person has a right to abate the nuisance himself and if the neighbour's trees overhang his lands he is entitled to cut the branches away to the line of the boundary and he can do so without notice if he could do so without entering upon the neighbour's lands. An action is certainly open, for either damages or an injunction, where damage has been caused. On the other hand he is not entitled to an action where the damage to his land is merely prospective—Putraya v. Krishna Gota, A.I.R. 1935 Mad 31, 67 M.L.J. 442, 40 M.L.W. 639, 152 I.C. 579, 1934 M.W.N. 1188, following Laksmi Narain v. Tara Prosanna, 31 Cal. 944, 8 C.W.N. 710; Hari Krishna v. Shankar Vithal, 19 Bom 420; Ram Lal v. Dalgamjan, 5 All 369, 1883 A.W.N. 58; Vishnu Jagannath v. Vasudeo Raghunath, A.I.R. 1918 Bom. 68, 47 I.C. 629, 43 Bom 164 and Guru Sami v. Jerumal Raja, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 815, 122 I.C. 789.

Where a proceeding under this section is instituted against a number of persons for various acts of unlawful obstruction to a public way, it is essential that the order should state accurately with regard to each person the specific obstruction made by him which he is required to remove, unless it is alleged that all the persons are jointly responsible for all the obstructions complained of—Ramohan, 44 Cal. 61 (65), 20 C.W.N. 1171, 17 Cr.L.J. 409.

Where on a complaint being made to a Magistrate that a certain person had erected a platform on a public thoroughfare and had thereby obstructed it, the Magistrate ordered that such portion of the platform as might be obstructing the highway should be removed, held that the order was vague; the Magistrate ought to have definitely pointed out and marked off how much of the platform should be removed—Jhau Lal, 23 A.L.J. 43, 26 Cr.L.J. 731.

Under this section, it is only the power to order the removal of an obstruction (e.g., a bund) which is given to a Magistrate. There is no provision for the reconstruction of a bund which has once been removed under this section—Rahimuddin v. Sher Ali, 40 C.L.J. 597, 26 Cr.L.J. 517 (518).

325. "Public"—"Public place":—The provisions of this section apply to those cases where the obstruction is caused to a public thoroughfare—In re Chundernath, 5 Cal. 875; Jagannath v. Parmeshwar, 36 All 209; In re Maharana, 22 Bom. 988. It is not necessary that the way should be one which is generally used by the public; it is sufficient if the way is one which is or may be lawfully used by the public—Hriday v. Shib Chandra, 10 Cr.L.J. 210, 3 I.C. 7 (Cal.); Churaman, 12 A.L.J. 1024, 15 Cr.L.J. 724, 26 I.C. 172; Bens Prasad v. Sarjoo, 20 Cr.L.J. 556 (Pat.); Rangi v. B. N. W. Ry.

4 P.L.T. 402, 24 Cr.L.J. 855, 74 I.C. 1047. The Magistrate is to decide whether it is a public way or place—Khushi, 24 Cr.L.J. 457. A railway land is not necessarily a public place—Rangi v. B. N. W. Ry., supra.

River or channel:—Where the urani (i.e., a tank) is a public urani, the water-course carrying the water to it must be held to be a public water-course and any interference with that water-course will fall under this section—Ramaswami v. Ramanaathan, 27 Cr.L.J. 105 (106), 91 I.C. 537, 1925 M.W.N. 663, 22 M.L.W. 470, A.I.R. 1926 Mad 165.

In order that action may be taken under this section for the removal of an unlawful obstruction, the way, river or channel where the obstruction is made must be one of public use, and the obstruction must be of that public use. An obstruction which is not caused to the people in general but to a certain number of agriculturists of a particular village using a certain channel, does not fall under this section—Munna Tewari v. Chandrabali, 50 All. 871, 26 A.L.J. 1285, 29 Cr.L.J. 661 (662), 110 I.C. 213, A.I.R. 1928 All 627, following In re Maharana, 22 Bom. 988; Harnandan Lal v. Rampalak, A.I.R. 1939 Pat 460, 18 Pat. 76, 40 Cr.L.J. 837, 184 I.C. 47, 20 P.L.T. 748, 12 R.P. 212, 6 B.R. 6, 18 Pat 76, 1939 P.W.N. 346. The number of persons claiming the right and the nature of right itself will no doubt be the criteria on which conclusions may be arrived. The best criterion will be to see whether the right is vested in such a large number of persons as to make them a community or class. (Per Mohammad Noor, J.). A public right does not depend upon the number of individuals who enjoy it. It is, generally speaking, that which must be enjoyed by members of the general unascertained mass of the public: vide Desai's Dictionary of Legal Terms and the decision in Queen-Emp. v. Jasoda Nand, 20 All. 501, 1898 A.W.N. 141. (Per Varma, J.)—Harnandan Lal v. Rampalak, supra.

Where the public have acquired a right to ford a river at a particular place, obstruction to this public right by erecting a bund in the river, which has the effect of rendering it unfordable, is obviously within the purview of this section—Zaffer Nauab v. Emp., 32 Cal 930, 2 Cr.L.J. 762. But a field, which is on a lower level than the adjoining fields and over which surplus water of those adjoining fields used to flow into a tank, even if it could be described as a channel, is not such a channel as had been or could lawfully be used by the public, and action cannot be taken under this section for the removal of any obstruction from it—Jagannath v. Parmeshwar, 36 All. 209, 15 Cr.L.J. 229, 23 I.C. 181, A.I.R. 1914 All 213.

An obstruction to a private path (In re Balaji, 4 Bom.L.R. 882; Gouri Shankar v. Bhagalu, 11 O.L.J. 659, 81 I.C. 942, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 130, 1 O.W.N. 356, 25 Cr.L.J. 1118), or to a private drain (Shoodun, 5 W.R. 58), or to a private channel (Jagannath v. Parmeshwar, 36 All. 209) does not come within the purview of this section.

Where a person raised the level of his low-lying land with the result that it prevented the flow of surplus rain water from the adjoining lands causing an overflow into other lands, he cannot be proceeded against under this section—Corbet v. Sonaula, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 150, 34 Cr.L.J. 679, 144 I.C. 75, following Jagannath v. Parmeshwar, supra. But where the cultivators of two villages were affected, it was held that the case was close to the border line between private and public nuisances and that there was not sufficient reason for interference on revision on this point—Bharosa, 34 All. 345, 13 I.C. 999, 9 A.L.J. 355, 13 Cr.L.J. 183.

Where a bandh constructed and owned by the owner of a village had the effect of closing the passage of water from that village to a channel situate towards the south-east of the said bandh with the result that the fields of another village owned by another party had become water-logged and the crops over a considerable area held by a number of tenants had been entirely destroyed, the erection of the bandh amounted to a public nuisance within the meaning of sec 268, I. P. C., so as to justify a Magistrate in passing an order under this section—Bhagwan Bakhsh Singh v. Emp., 28 Cr.L.J. 203, 99 I.C. 939, 4 O.W.N. 75, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 122, 7 A.I.Cr.R. 440. See also Jagannath v. Chandika in Note 324.

Where there is a catchment area in the centre of which there is a water-course which is obstructed and the water which flows into the water-course is attempted to be carried away by the persons proceeded against under this section to their own village tank and the way they do it is by building a bund and cutting a new channel and by cutting down a new portion of the old bund of the catchment area which has existed for 30 years and more and the effect of which is to make the water falling on the catchment area run away in a direction different from that of the water-course and to prevent it falling into a public urani (i.e., a tank), that can be held to be an obstruction to the water-course and the order of the Magistrate directing those persons to restore the embankment of the catchment area to its original condition and to close the newly opened channel and to remove all obstructions caused by them to the free flow of water to the public urani is within the scope of this section—Ramasami v. Ramanathan, 27 Cr.L.J. 105 (106), 91 I.C. 537, 1925 M.W.N. 663, 22 M.L.W. 470, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 165.

A latrine which is not built on any public place but on a man's own private land is not a nuisance. If its use leads to a nuisance to the neighbours, the owner may be directed to remove the nuisance and not to remove the latrine itself—Gauri Shankar, 26 A.L.J. 86, 29 Cr.L.J. 233, 107 I.C. 242, A.I.R. 1928 All 128; Shri Ram, A.I.R. 1935 All. 926, 37 Cr.L.J. 347, 159 I.C. 198, 1935 Cr.C. 1140, 1935 A.W.R. 1004, 1935 A.L.R. 1086. See also Note 331.

If a private right is set up by the defendant, the procedure of the new section 139A will apply.

326. Nuisance:—As to nuisances under the Penal Code, see secs. 268 to 294A, I P.C.

Gaming-house :—Keeping a gaming-house is a nuisance if crowds of disorderly persons flock there and cause annoyance to the public—Thandavarayudu, 14 Mad 364.

Burning ghat :—A burning ghat may not itself be a nuisance, but if the ghat or ground is in such an offensive state or if cremation is performed upon it in such a way as to be a source of injury, annoyance or danger to the neighbouring people, it will become a nuisance—Indra Nath, 25 Cal 425, 2 C.W.N. 113. See also Muhammad Mohidin Sait v. The Municipal Commissioners of the City of Madras, 25 Mad. 118 (130).

Graveyard :—An order prohibiting the use of a graveyard is not such as can be made under this section—Sheo Saran Lal v. Lal Mohamad Lal, 12 C.W.N. 70

Privy :—If a privy is allowed to remain in such a condition as to be a nuisance to passers by lawfully using a public place or way, proceedings to cause the nuisance to be abated may be instituted under this section—In re Balaji, 4 Bom.L.R. 882; Gauri Shankar and Shri Ram in Note 325 and Note 331

Slaughtering cattle, though it might be offensive to the prejudice and sentiments of a community, is not a nuisance—Hadgee Mozhur Ali, 25 W.R. 72. But see Maksood Ali v. President, Union Board, Garhwa, 40 Cr.L.J. 516, 180 I.C. 852, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 183, 17 Pat. 669, 20 P.L.T. 288, 5 B.R. 505, 11 R.P. 549. See also Sahabaz Khan v. Umrao Puri, 30 All. 181 in this connection. The act of a manager of a bone mill in permitting a large stock of bones to remain uncovered in the open air for a long time so as to become rotten and to emit a smell noxious to the neighbouring people or passers-by, constitutes a public nuisance—Berckefeld, 34 Cal. 73. A noise which is injurious to the physical comfort of the community is a nuisance—Krishna Mohan v. A. K. Guha, 32 C.L.J. 42, 21 Cr.L.J. 669, Munnalal v. Sridhar Rao, 36 Cr.L.J. 591, 154 I.C. 365, A.I.R. 1934 Nag 193, 17 N.L.J. 54, 1934 Cr.C. 892. There is no authority for distinguishing the meaning of the word "community" in this section either from the word "public" or the "neighbours". A man cannot carry on a trade or occupation or keep goods or merchandise that is injurious to the health or physical comfort of his neighbour or of the public without becoming liable to an order under sec. 133, Cr. P. Code merely on the ground that there may be some part of the community which is not affected. Under sec. 133 a Magistrate can forbid the applicant to work the engine of his factory, which makes considerable noise, from 9 P.M. to 5 A.M.—Raghumandan, A.I.R. 1931 All. 433, 53 All. 706, 1931 A.L.J. 912, 1931 Cr.C. 705.

A private owner may be guilty of acts done on his private property, if it gives rise to a public nuisance to those living in the neighbourhood. Therefore, the owner of a cremation ground may fairly be held to create a nuisance, if he allows the cremation of bodies upon the ground to be so performed as to annoy or endanger the lives and properties of persons living in the vicinity—Indra Nath, 25 Cal. 425, 2 C.W.N. 113.

A nuisance is not legalised by long enjoyment. No prescriptive right can be acquired to commit; maintain or continue a public nuisance involving actual danger to the health of the community.—Sheikh Mohidin, 2 Weir 59; Municipal Commissioners v. Mahomed Ali, 16 W.R. 6, 7 B.L.R. 499; Balaji, 4 Bom.L.R. 882; Jagroshan v. Madan Pande, 6 Pat. 428, 28 Cr.L.J. 910 (911). See also Note 320. Thus, an old slaughter-house can be removed, if it becomes offensive to the health of the neighbourhood—Municipal Commissioners v. Mahomed Ali, supra.

Cesspool :—Section 133, Cr. P. C., does not permit the removal of a construction of a proposed cesspool on the ground that it may prove a nuisance in the future. Preventive action in respect of an anticipated but non-existent nuisance, is limited to the construction of any building or the disposal of any substance which is likely to occasion conflagration or explosion. Except for this, before any unlawful obstruction or nuisance can be removed, it is necessary that such unlawful obstruction or nuisance should be in existence. A covered cesspool such as was in process of construction is not an obstruction. When completed it may or may not be a nuisance, but it cannot be postulated either by common sense or by the conditions of the Code that it is going to be a public nuisance—Ambharose v. Sundarlal, 35 Cr.L.J. 1414, 151 I.C. 754, 17 N.L.J. 158, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 230, 1934 C.C. 1088. The question whether a cesspool is a public nuisance depends generally speaking upon the circumstances which can best be ascertained by an inspection of the locality—Rajjoo Lal, A.I.R. 1934 All. 325, 148 I.C. 615, 1934 Cr.C. 409, 1934 A.L.R. 429, 35 Cr.L.J. 708, 1934 A.L.J. 1179, 4 A.W.R. 1608.

327. Injurious trade or occupation :—The proprietor of a cremation ground who puts his land at the disposal of any one who wishes to cremate a dead body, cannot be said to be carrying on any trade or occupation, merely because he makes his profit by charging a high rent from a tenant who sells wood to the persons coming to cremate a dead body—Indra Nath, 25 Cal. 425.

Para 3 deals only with trades which are in themselves injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community, and not with those which are in themselves innocent, but in the course of which the manager or prier commits a public nuisance—Bariro, 1888 P.R. 47; Calcutta Steam Navigation Co., 35 C.W.N. 115, 32 Cr.L.J. 235, 58 Cal. 854, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 757, 1930 Cr.C. 1157, 129 I.C. 106. Thus, keeping a house of public entertainment is not by itself an offensive trade—Bariro, supra. In the above Calcutta case (35 C.W.N. 115), Ghose, J., has expressed the opinion that the addition of the words "the conduct of" by the Amendment Act of 1923 has widened the scope of the section; it is no longer confined to trades or occupations which are injurious in themselves, but it also applies to cases of trades which become injurious by reason of the conduct of them. Where the noise of the mill causes discomfort to the residents of the locality, action can be taken under this section—Munnalal v. Sridhar Rao, 36 Cr.L.J. 591, 154 I.C. 365, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 193, 17 N.L.J. 54, 1934 Cr.C. 892.

This section relates to an existing state of affairs and not to the possibility of future results. If an occupation is perfectly innocent at present, the mere fact that it may in future become offensive to the neighbours, is no ground for issuing an order under this section. Thus, where there is no evidence that the occupation of manufacturing bricks is in itself injurious to the health or that the petitioners were so working

Where there is a catchment area in the centre of which there is a water-course which is obstructed and the water which flows into the water-course is attempted to be carried away by the persons proceeded against under this section to their own village tank and the way they do it is by building a bund and cutting a new channel and by cutting down a new portion of the old bund of the catchment area which has existed for 30 years and more and the effect of which is to make the water falling on the catchment area run away in a direction different from that of the water-course and to prevent it falling into a public urani (i.e., a tank), that can be held to be an obstruction to the water-course and the order of the Magistrate directing those persons to restore the embankment of the catchment area to its original condition and to close the newly opened channel and to remove all obstructions caused by them to the free flow of water to the public urani is within the scope of this section—Ramasami v. Ramanathan, 27 Cr.L.J. 105 (106), 91 I.C. 537, 1925 M.W.N. 663, 22 M.L.W. 470, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 165.

A latrine which is not built on any public place but on a man's own private land is not a nuisance. If its use leads to a nuisance to the neighbours, the owner may be directed to remove the nuisance and not to remove the latrine itself—Gauri Shankar, 26 A.L.J. 86, 29 Cr.L.J. 233, 107 I.C. 242, A.I.R. 1928 All. 128; Shri Ram, A.I.R. 1935 All. 926, 37 Cr.L.J. 347, 159 I.C. 198, 1935 Cr.C. 1140, 1935 A.W.R. 1004, 1935 A.L.R. 1086 See also Note 331.

If a private right is set up by the defendant, the procedure of the new section 139A will apply.

Slaughtering cattle, though it might be offensive to the prejudice and sentiments of a community, is not a nuisance—Hadgee Mozhur Ali, 25 W.R. 72. But see *Maksood Ali v. Therefore, the owner of a cremation ground may fairly be held to create a nuisance, if he allows the cremation of bodies upon the ground to be so performed as to annoy or endanger the lives and properties of persons living in the vicinity—Indra Nath, 25 Cal 425, 2 C.W.N. 113.

A nuisance is not legalised by long enjoyment. No prescriptive right can be acquired to commit, maintain or continue a public nuisance involving actual danger to the health of the community—Sheikh Mohidin, 2 Weir 59; Municipal Commissioners v. Mahomed Ali, 16 W.R. 6, 7 B.L.R. 499; Balaji, 4 Bom L.R. 882; Jagroshan v. Madan Pande, 6 Pat. 428, 28 Cr.L.J. 910 (911). See also Note 320. Cesspool :—Section 133, Cr. P. C., does not permit the removal of a construction of a proposed cesspool on the ground that it may prove a nuisance in the future. The question whether a cesspool is a public nuisance depends generally speaking upon the circumstances which can best be ascertained by an inspection of the locality—Rajoo Lal, A.I.R. 1934 All 325, 148 I.C. 615, 1934 Cr.C. 409, 1934 A.L.R. 429, 35 Cr.L.J. 708, 1934 A.L.J. 1179, 4 A.W.R. 1608.

327. Injurious trade or occupation :—The proprietor of a cremation ground who puts his land at the disposal of any one who wishes to cremate a dead body, cannot be said to be carrying on any trade or occupation, merely because he makes his profit by charging a high rent from a tenant who sells wood to the persons coming to cremate a dead body—Indra Nath, 25 Cal 425.

Para 3 deals only with trades which are in themselves injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community, and not with those which are in themselves innocent, but in the course of which the manager or prier commits a public nuisance—Barro, 1888 P.R. 47; Calcutta Steam Navigation Co., 35 C.W.N. 115, 32 Cr.L.J. 235, 58 Cal 854, A.I.R. 1930 Cal 757, 1930 Cr.C. 1157, 129 I.C. 106. Thus, keeping a house of public entertainment is not by itself an offensive trade—Barro, supra. In the above Calcutta case (35 C.W.N. 115), Ghose, J., has expressed the opinion that the addition of the words “the conduct of” by the Amendment Act of 1923 has widened the scope of the section, it is no longer confined to trades or occupations which are injurious in themselves, but it also applies to cases of trades which become injurious by reason of the conduct of them. Where the noise of the mill causes discomfort to the residents of the locality, action can be taken under this section—Munnalal v. Sridhar Rao, 36 Cr.L.J. 591, 154 I.C. 365, A.I.R. 1934 Nag 193, 17 N.L.J. 54, 1934 Cr.C. 892.

This section relates to an existing state of affairs and not to the possibility of future results. If an occupation is perfectly innocent at present, the mere fact that it may in future become offensive to the neighbours, is no ground for issuing an order under this section. Thus, where there is no evidence that the occupation of manufacturing bricks is in itself injurious to the health or that the petitioners were so working it that the health of any one was being injured, an order under this section can be made in anticipation of the occupation being injurious to the health of the community in future—Gokal Chand, 1 Lah. 163, 21 Cr.L.J. 462. See also Note 320

The word "community" means public or neighbours. Hence an act which is injurious to the physical comfort of the neighbours must be held to be injurious to the physical comfort of the community—Raghunandan, 136 I.C. 621, 33 Cr.L.J. 331, 53 All. 706, 1931 A.L.J. 912, 1931 Cr.C. 705, A.I.R. 1931 All. 433. But where a trade (burning of lime) had been carried on for the last 45 years without any objection being raised by the majority of the public, the Magistrate cannot pass an order under this section on the complaint of a few neighbours who had recently come to the locality and deliberately chosen to reside there—Lalman v. Bishambar, 1932 A.L.J. 49, 33 Cr.L.J. 524 (526); A.I.R. 1932 All. 159, 54 All. 359, 137 I.C. 626, 1932 Cr.C. 169, 17 A.I.Cr.R. 156. Where a flour mill caused vibrations to the premises of two neighbours who alone complained of nuisance and there was no evidence whatever to suggest that any similar nuisance or inconvenience was caused to anybody else, this section had no application as any damage or inconvenience that might be caused to their premises by the working of the engine must be regarded as a private nuisance which might perhaps justify civil action on their part—Rameshwar, 40 Cr.L.J. 444, 180 I.C. 511, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 92, 41 Bom.L.R. 84.

In order to bring a trade or occupation within the operation of this section, it must be shown that the interference with public comfort was considerable and a large section of the public was affected injuriously—Fazal Din, 1911 P.L.R. 117, 12 Cr.L.J. 146, 9 I.C. 891. The working of rice-husking machines through the whole night in a residential quarter is a public nuisance, being injurious to the comfort of the whole neighbourhood—Phiraya, 1904 P.R. 9. A lawful necessary occupation such as tanning ought not to be interfered with unless it is proved that it is injurious to the health of the community—Shadi, 1888 P.R. 17. Cultivation of maize, jowars, or bujree within a short distance from the town, is not an injurious occupation—Moti Shah, 1889 P.R. 39. A person who opens a new market close to an existing market in the village cannot be held to be carrying on a trade or occupation that is injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community; nor does the fact that the people in one market are sometimes forcibly dragged from it to the rival one, giving rise to mutual recrimination and abuse, justify an order under this section—In re Moidin, 2 Weir 62; Moidin v. Abdulla, 14 M.L.J. 207. But the Magistrate can in such a case take action under sec. 144 (see Note 373).

The discharge, into a river, of an effluent from an industrial factory which might be injurious to the health of the people who use the water in such stream, can be prohibited by an order under this section. But such pollution must be convincingly proved before any order can be passed against the wrong-doer; and it can be proved only after scientific inquiry and cannot be decided merely upon the opinion of the neighbouring villagers—Deshi Sugar Mill v. Tapsi Kahar, 8 P.L.T. 302, 28 Cr.L.J. 317, 100 I.C. 541, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 506.

A prostitute who behaves orderly and quietly and creates no open scandal by riotous living and causes no actual discomfort to the neighbourhood, cannot be removed from her house merely on the ground of her bad character—Nando Kumaree v. Anund Mohan, 24 W.R. 68. So also, the mere existence of houses of prostitutes by the roadside or the fact that they ply their trade in their houses, cannot affect the physical comfort of the passers-by—Basanta, 5 C.W.N. 566. But where they are on the public road soliciting passers-by, their occupation is certainly injurious to the comfort of the community and may be stopped by an order under this section—Nur Jan, 1900 P.R. 2; though for the purposes of the Penal Code such an act does not amount to a public nuisance within the meaning of sec. 268 of that Code—Nanni, 22 All. 113.

If a person carries on a trade (e.g., working a lime-kiln) after obtaining a license from the Municipality, the Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order under this section directing him to take precautions so as to prevent his trade from being injurious to the health of the community.' But it is generally inexpedient that a Magistrate should take action in such cases, because such matters are left by the Legislature to the control of the Municipal Boards—Lalman v Bishambhar, 1932 A.L.J. 49, 33 Cr.L.J. 524 (525), A.I.R. 1932 All. 159, 54 All. 359, 137 I.C. 626, 1932 Cr.C. 169. See also Kedar Nath v. Satish Chandra in Note 320.

Under the old law (before 1923), if a trade or occupation was found to be offensive, the Magistrate had to pass an order totally prohibiting it; under the present law, it may be ordered to be regulated instead of being totally suppressed.

The Magistrate has no power, while ordering a party to stop the occupation of brick-making, to order him to fill up the pits made by him. The 'removal' of the trade or occupation does not mean the restoration of status quo filling up the pits—Bhagat Ram, 51 All. 489, 30 Cr.L.J. 561 (562), A.I.R. 1929 All. 114, 1929 A.L.J. 177, 116 I.C. 21. It is evident that under cl. (2) of this section it is only the power to order removal of an obstruction which is given to the Magistrate. There is no provision for reconstruction of a bundh which has once been removed under this section—Rahmaddi v. Sher Ali, 26 Cr.L.J. 517, 85 I.C. 357, 40 C.L.J. 597, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 399. See also Ramaswami v. Ramanathan, 27 Cr.L.J. 105, 91 I.C. 537, 1925 M.W.N. 663, 22 M.L.W. 470, A.I.R. 1926 Mad 165.

328. Building likely to fall:—There must be proof that the state of the building is dangerous in præsenti and not in future. That the building might become dangerous by another man altering the adjoining premises in future or undermining the building in question, is not a ground of action under this section—Rajawan, 1890 P.R. 5.

Person living, etc., in the neighbourhood —This section is limited to injuries likely to be caused to passers-by or "to persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood," i.e., those persons who are living actually in the alleged dangerous building or in the servant's houses in the compound belonging to it, as well as those members of the public whose ordinary avocations may take them to the neighbourhood of the building complained of. Therefore, a Magistrate cannot, under this section, order the owner to repair his house which is standing in its own compound at a distance from the public road—Jasodanand, 20 All. 501.

329. Fencing a tank:—Where a tank is used as reservoir for water, the Magistrate can order to have it fenced to prevent accidents; but where it is proved to be injurious to the health and comfort of the community, he may treat it as a public nuisance and cause it to be filled by—In re Bistoo, 10 W.R. 27.

Filling up excavations:—An order to fill up and bring in to one level with the adjacent land, excavations made for taking mud for the manufacture of bricks, is illegal, as the Magistrate can only order them to be fenced, even if they are by the side of a public way—In re Sulemanji, 22 Bom. 714. Cf 51 All. 489 cited in Note 327, ante.

Clearing of a tank or filling it up:—The Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order under this section to remove the nuisance from a tank either by re-excavating or by filling it up or by clearing the water weeds—Kiran Chandra v. Ramesh, 27 C.W.N. 459 (461), 72 I.C. 77, A.I.R. 1923 Cal 589, 24 Cr.L.J. 317.

Fencing a well:—Where a well adjoining a road is dangerous to the public as well as to the existence of the road, an order under sec. 133 can direct the construction of such works only as are necessary for the safety of the public and not of works necessary for the safety or improvement of the road—Aluvala Guruviah, 31 Mad 280 (282).

330. Procedure to be strictly followed:—Where a Magistrate commences proceedings under sec. 133, he is not at liberty to proceed otherwise than in conformity with the rules laid down in this chapter. He cannot dispose of the case summarily under sec. 144—Pitti Singh, 8 W.R. 37; Jassian v. Mangladha, 29 Cr.L.J. 530, 109 I.C. 354, 9 Lah L.J. 522, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 95.

Taking evidence :—Before passing a conditional order under this section a Magistrate is not bound to take evidence, because the proceedings under this section are entirely ex parte; but he should do so before making the order absolute under sec. 137—Srinath v. Ainaddi, 24 Cal. 395; Abdul Shakur, 130 I.C. 627, 1930 A.L.J. 1935, A.I.R. 1931 All. 257, 1931 Cr.C. 417, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 291. But see Consolidation Co-operative Society v. Har Gobind, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 276. The report or other information whereon the Magistrates took action before making the conditional order, is no evidence against the opposite party—Raimohon, 44 Cal. 61 (64), 20 C.W.N. 1171.

331. Nature of order:—An order under this section is ex parte—Srinath v. Ainaddi, 24 Cal. 395, 1 C.W.N. 217; Rai Mohan, 44 Cal. 61, 20 C.W.N. 1171.

The order should be directed to particular individuals, and must not be general, except in cases of emergency, to which Chapter XI applies, when they can be addressed to the public generally—Jokhu, 8 All. 99 (100).

The order under this section must not be vague; it must be such that the persons to whom it is directed will be able to learn from its contents what they are ordered to do, for the purpose of complying with it—Kali Mohan v. Nakari, 11 C.L.J. 114, 11 Cr.L.J. 213, 5 I.C. 722. If the order is ambiguous and open to two interpretations, the one most favourable to the accused will be adopted—Parbutty, 16 Cal. 9.

The order must be conditional, and not absolute. Every order should state the time within which and the place where the person to whom it is issued may appear and move to have it set aside—Braja Kanta, 9 Cal. 637. The Code itself calls the order under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., a conditional order and that under sec. 142, Cr. P. C., an injunction. The forms are entirely different, and the form in which the conditional order is expressed is such as not to amount to an injunction—Hargovind Dullabh Jiwan v. Kikabhai Rahimatullah, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 84 (85), I.L.R. 1938 Nag. 348, 176 I.C. 257, 11 R.N. 45. This section clearly contemplates that in suitable cases the order initially made may be modified and the modified order may be allowed to stand—Jhan Lal, 26 Cr.L.J. 731, 86 I.C. 219, 23 A.L.J. 43, A.I.R. 1925 All. 310.

When in a proceeding under this section, instituted against a number of persons, it is alleged that various unlawful obstructions have been caused upon a public way, it is essential that the order should state accurately, with regard to each person, the specific obstruction made by him, which he is required to remove, unless it is alleged that all the persons are jointly responsible for all obstructions mentioned. No person can be called upon under this section to remove an obstruction not caused by himself—Rai Mohan, 44 Cal. 61 (65), 17 Cr.L.J. 409, 35 I.C. 969, 20 C.W.N. 1171; Khem Chand, 28 Cr.L.J. 1036, 106 I.C. 220, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 187.

And lastly, the order must be confined to the removal of the nuisance only, and should not direct the removal of the whole thing; for instance, in the case of a tank, the order should be to fence the tank and not to fill up the tank—Bistoo, 10 W.R. 27. If the Magistrate finds a burning ghat to be a nuisance, he cannot order the removal of the ghat itself but can order the removal of the nuisance, i.e., he can take such steps as would result in the cremation ceasing to be a nuisance—Indra Nath, 25 Cal. 425. In a case where sparks from a forge might set fire to a cotton stored in an adjoining building, the Magistrate cannot order the removal of the forge, but should order its construction in such a way that sparks shall not issue out of it into the open air—In re Lahanu, Ratanlal 872. If the branch of a tree is likely to fall on passers-by, the Magistrate should not order the tree to be cut down but may secure the safety of the public by ordering proper support to be given so as to prevent the branch from falling—Gokul, 22 A.L.J. 436, 26 Cr.L.J. 104, A.I.R. 1924 All. 667. If the use of a latrine is made in such a way as to be a nuisance to the neighbours, the Magistrate should order the owner to remove the nuisance of the misuse and not to remove the latrine itself—Gauri Shankar v. Srikrishna, 26 A.L.J. 86, 29 Cr.L.J. 233,

A.I.R. 1928 All. 128, 107 I.C. 242; Shri Ram, A.I.R. 1935 All. 926, 1935 A.W.R. 1004, 1935 Cr.C. 1104, 1935 A.L.R. 1086, 159 I.C. 198, 37 Cr.L.J. 347. But the removal of the latrine may be ordered in a case where it adjoins a well, the water of which the public drink and there is danger of injury to the health of the public—Mahabir Prasad v. Dhanusdhari Prasad, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 409, 163 I.C. 514, 1936 Cr.C. 641, 1936 P.W.N. 358. Where the facts found on proper evidence were that the noise made by the factory engine was such as to be a serious nuisance to the neighbours, meaning thereby a considerable number of people living in the neighbourhood, preventing them from sleeping at night and concentrating on their work during the day, the proper order to make was, not that the factory should be closed, but that the working of the engine should be forbidden between the hours 9 P.M. to 5 A.M.—Rameshwar, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 92 (95), 41 Bom.L.R. 84. See also Raghunandan Prasad, A.I.R. 1931 All. 433, 1931 Cr.C. 705, 136 I.C. 621, 33 Cr.L.J. 331, 53 All. 706, 1931 A.L.J. 912. But where the only dispute between the parties was whether the trade which was being carried on by the opposite party should be ordered to be stopped, there was no dispute that it should be regulated in any manner and the opposite party were insisting that they were carrying on their trade in a proper manner and that it was in those circumstances not a nuisance, it is not within the province of a Court of Revision, when the matter has been decided against them, to impose some conditions which the evidence does not justify and to which the minds of the parties were never directed—Maksood Ali v. President, Union Board, Garhwa, 40 Cr.L.J. 516 (518), 180 I.C. 852, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 183, 17 Pat. 669, 20 P.L.T. 288, relying on Municipal Commissioners of the Suburbs of Calcutta v. Muhammad Ali, 7 B.L.R. 499, 16 W.R. Cr. 6 and Municipal Commissioners for the Suburbs of Calcutta v. Amanat Ali, 7 B.L.R. 516.

An order for the removal of a house which is said to represent an encroachment or obstruction on a public way cannot be supported when there is no finding as to the extent to which the house in question encroaches upon it. The extent of the encroachment should be ascertained by relaying the map on the ground or otherwise and should be definitely specified in the order—Bhagat v. Ramrup, 21 C.L.J. 116, 27 I.C. 224; Jhau Lal, 26 Cr.L.J. 731, 86 I.C. 219, 23 A.L.J. 43, A.I.R. 1925 All. 310. But where the Magistrate passed an order for removal of the obstruction from a particular settlement dag, which was well-defined in the settlement record and, when notice was served upon the opposite party to show cause under this section, he did not object on the ground of vagueness of the notice, the order was not liable to be set aside—Rajani Kanta v. Ibrahim, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 507 (508), 33 C.W.N. 748, 57 Cal. 252.

See also the last paragraph of Note 327.

332. Dropping of proceedings:—If a Magistrate is satisfied that there are no sufficient grounds for taking action under this section, he can drop the proceedings—Issur Churn v. Kali Churn, 8 Cal. 883. The High Court will seldom interfere with the exercise of the discretion by the Magistrate, leaving the petitioner to have recourse to his ordinary rights in the Civil Court if he has any cause of action against the opposite party—Jogendra v. Rakhal, 14 C.W.N. cxix.

Proceedings once dropped can be revived, if sufficient cause is known—Ishan Chandra v. Prasanna, 5 C.W.N. 173.

See also para 345

Further inquiry:—Section 437 (now 436) enables a superior Court to direct further inquiry in case of offences. But proceedings under this chapter are not proceedings in respect of offences, and therefore sec. 437 (now 436) cannot apply. So, if a Magistrate drops proceedings under this section, neither the District Magistrate nor the Sessions Judge can order further inquiry under sec. 437 (now 436)—Srinath v. Amuddi, 24 Cal. 395, 1 C.W.N. 217. The proper procedure for the District Magistrate in such a case is to refer the matter to the High Court—Indra Nath, 25 Cal. 425, 2 C.W.N. 113; Prithipal, 2 O.W.N. 549, 26 Cr.L.J. 1251, 88 I.C. 995.

Fresh proceedings:—There is nothing in the law to prevent the Magistrate drawing up fresh proceedings based on proper materials—Satish v. Krishna, 34 C.W.N. 957 (1959), 32 Cr.L.J. 189, 128 I.C. 810, A.I.R. 1931 Cal 2, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 106, 1931 Cr.C. 34.

333. Orders not under this section:—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction under this section to pass the following orders :—

(1) An order regarding the custody and guardianship of children—Anon., 2 Weir 66 (67).

(2) An order directing a person not to cultivate his land—Dhan Singh, 1 A.L.J. 615.

(3) An order on a person to lop off branches of a tree of his, which overhung a certain house and might afford facility to thieves—Hiralal, 1883 A.W.N. 22.

(4) An order to close a graveyard—Sheo Saran v. Lal Md., 12 C.W.N. 70.

(5) An order prohibiting persons to drink the water of a certain well—Sheoamber, 1893 A.W.N. 145.

(6) A general order prohibiting the public to frequent the roads and places of a certain village between certain hours—Komul Kisto, 12 C.L.R. 231.

(7) An order calling upon a person to repair a well, and upon his failure to do so, directing him to pay a fine, wherefrom the Magistrate ordered the well to be repaired, is an illegal order—Tatya, Ratanlal, 50

334. Civil Suits:—No suit will lie in a Civil Court to set aside an order passed under this section, and the Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to question or set aside such order—Chandra Seekar, 12 W.R. 18 (F.B.); Ujalamoyi v. Chandra 4 B.L.R. 24. Thus, a Civil Court has no jurisdiction to order a road which has been declared by the Magistrate as a public road to be closed—Rooke, 11 W.R. 434 (Civil). But in spite of an order under this section a suit will lie for a declaration under sec. 42 of the Specific Relief Act against any one of the public who claims to use the road as a public road—Chuni Lal v. Ram Kishan, 15 Cal. 460 (F.B.); Gooroo v. Probhoo, 19 W.R. 426 (Civil); Mutty Ram v. Mohi Lal, 6 Cal 291; Nilkanthappa v. Magistrate, 6 Bom. 670; Secretary of State v. Jethabhai Kalidas, 17 Bom. 293. For contra see Khodabuksh v. Manglai, 14 Cal. 60 which was overruled by the Full Bench in Chuni Lal v. Ram Kishan, supra.

A Magistrate's order under this section is not a conclusive determination of the question of title; it is, therefore, competent to a Civil Court to try the question whether a land is private property or a public place—Mutty Ram v. Mohi Lal, 6 Cal. 291, so also, it is open to the party to bring a declaratory suit against any member of the public who use the road as a public one—Chuni Lal v. Ram Kishan, 15 Cal. 460. The suit for a declaration of private right can be brought against persons who initiated proceedings under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., without impleading any other member of the public—Sheikh Ekbar Ali v. Anu Manjhi, 14 C.W.N. cxxxix.

Para. 2, sec. 133, Cr. P. C., prevents the Civil Court from questioning the order duly made by a Magistrate under sec. 133 which empowers the Magistrate to pass a conditional order. There is no such bar to the absolute order of a Magistrate being questioned in Civil Court. A similar clause does not appear in sec. 140, Cr. P. C., which deals with an absolute order. The proceedings under sec. 133 are more or less summary and the Magistrate's decision goes so far as to fix upon the party who must go to the Civil Court to get a civil dispute decided—Dulchand, A.I.R. 1929 All. 833, 51 All. 1025, 121 I.C. 560, 1929 Cr.C. 358.

To such a suit the Secretary of State cannot properly be made a party—Chunni Lal v. Ram Kishan, 15 Cal. 460 (470) (F.B.). Nor can the plaintiff sue the Magistrate personally, for the Magistrate has only acted in the discharge of his legal duty in a judicial character—Chunni Lal v. Ram Kishan, 15 Cal. 460 (466), following Ujalamoyi v. Chandra, supra and Meechoo v. Ravenshaw, 11 Beng.L.R. 9, 19 W.R. 345; Nilkanthappa v. Magistrate, 6 Bom. 670. But the public roads being vested by sec. 37 of Bombay Act V of 1879 in the Government of Bombay, who are thus "interested to deny" the plaintiff's title to the land, the plaintiff (subject to the discretion of the Court) is entitled to a declaration as against the Government (i.e., the Secretary of State for India in Council) of his right to the land under sec. 42 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877)—Secretary of State v. Jethabhai Kalidas, 17 Bom. 293 (298). See also Nilkanthappa v. Magistrate, 6 Bom. 670.

The existence of the Magistrate's order under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., does not of itself shift the onus of proof from the defendant to the plaintiff who is in possession—Secretary of State v. Jethabhai Kalidas, 17 Bom. 293 (299).

335. Revision:—The High Court can interfere when there is no evidence or no reasonable evidence on record to justify the Magistrate's finding or where the finding arrived at is perverse or such as no reasonable man could have arrived at on the evidence produced—Abdul Wahid v. Abdullah, 45 All. 656 (661). Thus, the High Court will interfere where an attempt has been made to abuse the powers of the Court, that is, where the Magistrate has given a decision regarding matters which properly lie within the cognizance of Civil Courts (as for instance, in a case when a private right has been set up by a party)—Abdul Wahid v. Abdullah, 45 All. 656 (657), 21 A.L.J. 529, 74 I.C. 849.

When the High Court has power to confirm the order of the Magistrate, there is no ground for holding that it has not also power to modify that order to such extent as may seem fit—Manohar, 30 Cr.L.J. 670 (672), 116 I.C. 786, 1929 A.L.J. 385, A.I.R. 1929 All. 220, Ind. Rul. 1929 All. 610.

But it is not the practice of the High Court to entertain an application in revision unless the party aggrieved had first moved the Sessions Judge under secs. 435 and 438—Rash Behari v. Phani Bhushan, 48 Cal. 534, 22 Cr.L.J. 650.

336. Party:—An order under this section, and, any order under the subsequent sections of this chapter is an order against a particular individual. When that individual dies, the order ceases to have any effect and must be considered spent, and the Magistrate would not be entitled to act under sec. 140 (2). If he considers it necessary to issue another order against the successor of the deceased, he must take separate proceedings—Jugal Kishore, 26 A.L.J. 405, 29 Cr.L.J. 445 (446), 108 I.C. 565, A.I.R. 1928 All. 300, 9 A.I.Cr.R. 434.

There can be no doubt that an order under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., binds the person against whom the order is passed and nobody else—Ram Sahai v. Uttama, 36 Cr.L.J. 144, 152 I.C. 737; Jugal, 108 I.C. 565, 26 A.L.J. 405, 29 Cr.L.J. 445, A.I.R. 1928 All. 300.

336A. Costs:—There is no provision in Chapter X of Cr. P. C., for the payment of costs by any party to the proceeding—Rahimaddi v. Sher Ali, 26 Cr.L.J. 517, 85 I.C. 357, 40 C.L.J. 597, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 399.

134. (1) The order shall, if practicable, be served on the person against whom it is made in manner Service or notification of order. herein provided for service of a summons.

(2) If such order cannot be so served, it shall be notified by proclamation, published in such manner as the Provincial Government may by rule direct, and a copy thereof shall be stuck up at such place or places as may be fittest for conveying the information to such person.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

337. Service of notice:—In case of service of a conditional order under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., the procedure, which is provided by sec. 71, Cr. P. C., cannot be made use of unless service in the manner mentioned in sections 69 and 70 cannot be effected by the exercise of due diligence—Beni v. Jadu, 43 C.L.J. 113, 31 C.W.N. 148, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1208. If personal service is not practicable, the order may be affixed to the house of the defendant—Narayan, 12 Mad. 475 (477). It is not open to resort to the procedure laid down in cl. (2) of this section when no attempt was made to serve the order through any relative as laid down in sec. 70, or by affixing to the petitioner's house as laid down in sec. 71—Abdul Jabbar, 36 Cr.L.J. 736, 155 I.C. 416, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 251, 39 C.W.N. 141, 60 C.L.J. 474, 1935 CrC 333. The terms of this section are directory and ought to be followed; but an omission to follow its provisions is a mere irregularity and does not nullify the order—Parbutty, 16 Cal 9; Abu Hussain Shaikh v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 641 (646), A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 358; Madan Kishore, 41 Cr.L.J. 414 (415), 187 I.C. 135, 21 P.L.T. 231. Thus, the non-service of notice does not invalidate the order if the parties admit that they knew of the existence of the notice—Hochan v. Elliot, 5 W.R. 4. Where the parties had information of the order, it is immaterial that the mode in which it was brought to their notice was not in strict accordance with the provisions of this section—Nur Jan, 1900 P.R. 2; Khushi Ram, 4 Lah. 224 (229), 24 Cr.L.J. 457. So, where the persons against whom the order was made were residents of a Mohalla, and the order instead of being served on them personally was stuck up in some conspicuous place of the Mohalla, and the parties came to know of the order, held that the service of the order, though irregular, did not affect its validity—Khushi Ram, supra. Service of notice on agent is sufficient when it is not shown that the party was kept in ignorance of what was going on—Emp. v. Ram Bilas, 30 All. 364.

135. The person against whom such order is made shall—

Person to whom order is addressed to obey or show cause or claim jury.

(a) perform, within the time and in the manner specified in the order, the act directed thereby; or

(b) appear in accordance with such order and either show cause against the same, or apply to the Magistrate by whom it was made, to appoint a jury to try whether the same is reasonable and proper.

338. Application to show cause or for jury:—Since the proceeding under sec. 133 is in the first instance entirely ex parte, and since the report or other information whereon the Magistrate has taken action before making the conditional order under section 133 is no evidence against the opposite party, it is consequently desirable that reasonable opportunity should be given to the opposite party to show cause as contemplated by this section and to adduce evidence as prescribed by section 137—Rai Mohan, 44 Cal. 61 (64), 20 C.W.N. 1171, 35 I.C. 969.

Under this section a party cannot both show cause and apply for a jury at the same time; he has the right to adopt only one of the alternatives—Kishori Lal, 13 C.W.N. 367, 10 Cr.L.J. 494, 4 I.C. 72; Jiblal v. Gena, 24 Cr.L.J. 492, 72 I.C. 956, 4 P.L.T. 15, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 229. This section gives persons against whom conditional orders have been passed under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., three alternatives: they may carry out the order, or they may appear and show cause against the order, or they may apply to the Magistrate to appoint a jury to try whether the order is reasonable or proper, that is to say, they have the choice of obedience to the order, or the choice of being heard by one tribunal but not by two; they have a choice of being heard by a Magistrate or they have the choice of being heard by a jury. The purpose of the section is clear. They must either obey the order or show cause why the order should not have been made. They can be heard once in their defence but they cannot be heard twice—Jethanand v. Shikarpur Municipality, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 24 (25), I.L.R. 1939 Kar, 179, 41 Cr.L.J. 364, 186 I.C. 723.

The application for the appointment of a jury must be made to the Magistrate by whom the conditional order under sec. 133 was made. Where the defendant appears and demands a jury under sec. 135, the matter must be disposed of by the Magistrate issuing the conditional order, and not by any other Magistrate to whom the case might have been referred for inquiry. If the defendant does not demand a jury but appears and shows cause, the Magistrate who issued the conditional order under sec. 155 may make over the case to any other Magistrate for disposal—Jagroshan v. Madan Pande, 6 Pat. 428, 8 P.L.T. 452, 28 Cr.L.J. 910 (911), A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 265, 105 I.C. 238; Angappa v. Perumal, 43 Mad. 316, 37 M.L.J. 313, 1919 M.W.N. 696, 20 Cr.L.J. 761, 53 I.C. 489. See also Manipur v. Bidhu Bhushan, 26 I.C. 146, 42 Cal. 158, 18 C.W.N. 1086, 15 Cr.L.J. 698. See also Notes 343A and 355.

339. Claim of private right:—If the person against whom an order under sec. 133 is made claims a private right of way, the question as to the existence of the private right is to be decided by the Magistrate himself and not to be left to the jury—Kailash v. Ram Lal, 26 Cal. 869 (870). See sub-section (3) of sec. 139A.

When a person has applied for a jury and a jury has been appointed, the party cannot set up the plea that he caused the obstruction under a claim of private right to the way—In re Lachman, 22 All. 267; Ram Bilas, 30 All. 364. This is now made clear by the new section 139A. According to the procedure laid down in that section, as soon as the defendant appears before the Magistrate, the latter shall question him as to whether he claims a private right; even if the defendant applies for a jury, still the Magistrate shall question him whether he has any such claim, before the Magistrate proceeds to appoint a jury; and the defendant, if he has any such claim, will have to state and substantiate it before the Magistrate, and will not be allowed to set up any such claim before the jury.

The application for a jury will operate as a waiver of the plea of a claim of private right. Once a jury is appointed on the application of the person against whom an order has been made under sec. 133, it is not open to him at a later stage to set up a claim of right to the subject of contention and to have his claim determined by the Magistrate before the jury proceed with the matter—Ah Yway v. Ma Gyi, 7 Bur.L.T. 23, 15 Cr.L.J. 269, Abdul Shakur, 130 I.C. 627, 1930 A.L.J. 1335, A.I.R. 1931 All. 257, 1931 Cr.C. 417, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 291, 32 Cr.L.J. 565. The Patna and Lahore High Courts took a different view and held that there could not be a waiver of a mandatory provision such as was contemplated by sec. 139A, Cr. P. Code—Mahadeo Lal v. Hossaini Pandey, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 199, 31 Cr.L.J. 53, 120 I.C. 289, Ind. Rul. 1930 Pat. 1; Hamid Ali, 32 Cr.L.J. 250, 129 I.C. 222, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 1046, 1930 Cr.C. 1222, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 158.

Before the Magistrate makes an enquiry under sec. 139A, Cr. P. C., as to whether there is evidence in support of the denial of the existence of a public way, the petitioner need not elect to have the matter fixed by a jury under sec. 135. It is still open to the petitioner to elect to have the matter tried by a jury after it has been decided by the Magistrate that there is no reliable evidence in support of the denial of the existence of the public way—Shamji Tricumdas v. Rab Moye, 56 C.L.J. 249, 34 Cr.L.J. 532, 143 I.C. 178, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 318.

136. If such person does not perform such act or appear and show cause or apply for the appointment of a jury as required by section 135, he shall be liable to the penalty prescribed in that behalf in section 188 of the Indian Penal Code, and the order shall be made absolute.

Consequence of his failing to do so.

340. Object of section:—The provisions of this section are stringent, because the intention is to create facilities for conditional orders, which Magistrates are authorised to pass under this chapter, becoming final without needless delay, and thereby promptly to ensure public safety—Narayan, 12 Mad. 475 (478). Therefore, an order under this section must be passed without delay. Where a conditional order passed under section 133 was made absolute four years later, the High Court treated the final order as resting on no conditional order and reversed it—In re Rangabai, 23 Bom.L.R. 844, 22 Cr.L.J. 605.

341. Order absolute:—If the person neither performs the act nor appears and shows cause, nor applies for a jury, he can be punished at once, without its being necessary to wait until an order absolute has been passed. The words are “and the order shall be made absolute”—Bishambar, 13 All. 577 (579). Where an order has become absolute under this section, it cannot be questioned in any subsequent proceedings even if its legality were not fully established—Nur Jan, 1900 P.R. 2. This section conclusively presumes that the conditional order was correctly made, and it is not competent to the party to go behind the order and question its validity in proceedings under sec. 188, I. P. Code—Narayana, 12 Mad. 475 (478); Bishambar, 13 All. 577 (579). But where the Magistrate makes an order which he had no jurisdiction to pass, the party affected by it can go behind the order—Jasodanand, 20 All. 501.

Even though an order has been made absolute under this section by reason of the party not being able to attend on the date fixed, the Magistrate can set aside the ex parte order on the appearance of the party. In such a case the Magistrate must proceed to record evidence as provided by sec. 137 and shall then either make the order absolute again or shall drop the proceedings, as the case may be—Ramsaram v. Ram Lagan, 19 Cr.L.J. 214, 4 Pat.L.W. 50, 43 I.C. 790. But see Shahabuddin v. Abdul Kader in Note 360.

342. No further notice necessary:—Whenever the time fixed in the order under sec. 133 has been allowed by the defendant to pass without compliance with the order or without protest, the liability to punishment attaches at once, and no further notice is necessary under sec. 140—Aluvala Guruviah, 31 Mad. 280 (282). See Note 360 under sec. 140.

137. (1) If he appears and shows cause against the order, Procedure where he the Magistrate shall take evidence in the appears to show cause. matter as in a summons-case.

(2) If the Magistrate is satisfied that the order is not reasonable and proper, no further proceedings shall be taken in the case.

(3) If the Magistrate is not so satisfied, the order shall be made absolute.

343. Scope:—An order under this section can only be made, where there is an existing obstruction or nuisance and cannot be made in respect of some future nuisance. But the Magistrate is not precluded from making a final order under this section owing to the fact that he had made an order under sec. 142, Cr. P. C., which was complied with—Rebati Mohan v. Chattai Chandra, 63 C.L.J. 5, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 692, 38 Cr.L.J. 173, 166 I.C. 221, 1936 Cr.C. 954, 9 R.C. 490.

343A. 'Magistrate':—The power to issue a conditional order belongs only to the Magistrate mentioned in the beginning of Sec. 133. The power to appoint a jury also belongs to the Magistrate who made the conditional order (see sec. 135). But the Magistrate who is to hold the inquiry under sec. 137 need not be the Magistrate who made the order under sec. 133; the Magistrate in sec. 137 is the Magistrate before whom the party is ordered to appear (see sec. 133); he may be either the Magistrate himself who issued the conditional order, or a Magistrate of the first or second class mentioned in the last para of sec. 133 (1). This seems to be the meaning of secs. 133 and 137 read together. Therefore, where a Magistrate issuing a conditional order under sec. 133 required certain persons to appear before a 2nd class Magistrate, the latter can exercise his powers under sec. 137 and can take evidence, confirm the conditional order or stay further proceedings. See In re Narasimha, 9 Mad. 201; Preonath v. Gobordhone, 25 Cal. 278; Venkanna, 2 Weir 61; Jagroshan v. Madan, 6 Pat. 428, 8 P.L.T. 452, 28 Cr.L.J. 910, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 265. See also Notes in paras. 347 and 357A.

344. Taking evidence:—When a party appears to show cause, the Magistrate is bound to take evidence as in a summons case. He cannot make the order absolute without taking evidence—Jassi, 20 A.L.J. 692, A.I.R. 1922 All. 335, 25 Cr.L.J. 266; In re Mahadaji, 11 Bom. 375; Bechan, 47 All 341, A.I.R. 1925 All 614, 26 Cr.L.J. 905; Sant Sahai v. Lachman Singh, 9 O.L.J. 64, 23 Cr.L.J. 250; Attar Singh v. Hari Singh, 27 P.L.R. 764, 28 Cr.L.J. 60; Kalyan Mul Mathur, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 577, 37 Cr.L.J. 1159, 165 I.C. 542, 1936 Cr.C. 948. Even if the party appears after the time fixed in the order, but before the case is taken up, the Magistrate is bound to hear his objection and take evidence for the order he has to make—In re Bistoo, 10 W.R. 27. The absence of the objector at an adjourned hearing after he has once appeared to show cause, will not absolve the Magistrate of his duty of taking some evidence at least before making the order absolute—In re Ram Singh, 2 Bom.L.R. 818; Bechan (supra). The Magistrate cannot act solely on his own opinion; he is bound to take evidence as the basis of his order which he is to make—Doraisami v. Sudarsana, 17 M.L.T. 142, 16 Cr.L.J. 207; In re Mahadaji, 11 Bom. 375; Kolandavela, 2 Weir 62; Shadi, 17 P.R. 1888 (Cr.); Sita Ram, 32 P.R. 1917, 41 I.C. 1000, 18 Cr.L.J. 888; Khair Din v. Wasan, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 28. It is illegal for him to make the order absolute solely on the report of a Tahsildar. He must go into the evidence adduced by the defendant and record his findings—Ismail v. Banda, 20 A.L.J. 657; 27 Cr.L.J. 864, 95 I.C. 944; Ran Bahadur v. Bhagwati, 27 Cr.L.J. 1254, 3 O.W.N. 844; Abdul Karim, A.I.R. 1927 All. 381, 49 All 453, 25 A.L.J. 424, 28 Cr.L.J. 294; Achhru, 11 Lah. 247, 31 Cr.L.J. 880 (881), 31 P.L.R. 503, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 662, 125 I.C. 613. The report or information received by the Magistrate before passing the conditional order under sec. 133, is no evidence against the other party (the proceeding under sec. 133 being entirely ex parte) and the Magistrate cannot act upon it but is bound to take evidence in the presence of the opposite party—Srinath v. Ainaddi, 24 Cal. 395, 1 C.W.N. 217; Raimohan, 44 Cal. 61, 20 C.W.N. 1171, 17 Cr.L.J. 409, 35 I.C. 969, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 207; Rameshwar, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 92, 41 Bom.L.R. 84, 40 Cr.L.J. 444, 180 I.C. 511, 11 R.B. 301. The Magistrate cannot, on perusing the statements of the parties, but without taking any evidence, cancel the order under sec. 133, Cr. P. C.—Ganga Prosad v. Khatish Chandra, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 21, 118 I.C. 863, 30 Cr.L.J. 973. The provisions of sec. 137 (1), Cr. P. C., are imperative and the failure of the Magistrate to follow the same vitiates the entire proceedings—Tirkha v. Nanak, 28 Cr.L.J. 291 (292), 49 All 475, 25 A.L.J. 377, A.I.R. 1927 All 350, 100 I.C. 371; Kishori Lal, 13 C.W.N. 367 (369), 10 Cr.L.J. 494, 4 I.C. 72; Upendra v. Rampal, 10 C.L.J. 482. The provision of clause (1) of this section mandatory and before making the order absolute it is imperative that evidence should be taken as in a summons case. The Magistrate could not, without recording evidence, act on his own opinion—Jagan Nath, 28 Cr.L.J. 510, 101 I.C. 894, A.I.R. 1927 All 825, Khair Din v. Wasan, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 28, 37 Cr.L.J. 70, 159 I.C. 374, 1935 Cr.C. 19. Such action on the part of the Magistrate in ignoring the clear provisions of this section amounts to a substantial error and cannot be cured by sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Khair Din v. Wasan, supra, following Bhura v. Tara, 49 All 170, 28 Cr.L.J. 159, 25 A.L.J. 155, A.I.R. 1927 All 267, 99 I.C. 415. He also cannot, even with the consent of the parties, refer the matter to a subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and report, and then pass the final order on the basis of that report; he must take the evidence himself—In re Kariyappa, 47 Bom. 89, 24 Bom L.R. 807, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 384; he cannot base his decision upon the information gathered from a personal local inspection, instead of taking evidence, even though the parties agree to abide by his decision—Upendra v. Rampal, 10 C.L.J. 482, 11 Cr.L.J. 1, 4 I.C. 436; Ram Chandra, 35 Cr.L.J. 1020, 15 P.L.T. 288, 1934 Cr.C. 737, 149 I.C. 839, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 316; Doraiswami v. Sudarsana, 17 M.L.T. 142; Ramohan, 20 C.W.N. 1171, 17 Cr.L.J. 409, 35 I.C. 969, 44 Cal. 61 (64); Kalisaday v. Sidheswar, 23 C.W.N. 1054, 50 I.C. 658, 20 Cr.L.J. 322; Biru v. Gokul, 20 Cr.L.J. 217, 49 I.C. 777 (Pat.); Mulchand, 8 O.W.N. 651, 32 Cr.L.J. 1165 (1166), A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 397, 1931 Cr.C. 829, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 352, 132 I.C. 800; Kanhaiya Lal, 24 O.C. 267, 22 Cr.L.J. 765, 64 I.C. 285; Tirkha v. Nanak, 49 All. 475, 25 A.L.J. 377, A.I.R. 1927 All. 350, 100 I.C. 371, 28 Cr.L.J. 291 (292); Achhru, supra; Ramekwar, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 92, 41 Bom L.R. 84, 11 R.B. 301, 40 Cr.L.J. 444, 180 I.C. 511; Bhoora v. Tara Singh, A.I.R. 1927 All. 267, 99 I.C. 415, 28 Cr.L.J. 159, 49 All. 270, 25 A.L.J. 155. The correctness of the above view cannot be doubted. The Court is not expected to base its judgment on its own inspection note which may however necessitate no more than technical compliance with law that there should be substantive evidence apart from the inspection note which is merely to aid it in appreciating the evidence before the Court. This being so, the Magistrate should have examined, at least, the complainant—Rajjo Lal, A.I.R. 1934 All. 325, 1934 A.L.J. 1179, 1934 Mr.C. 409, 35 Cr.L.J. 708, 148 I.C. 615. This section does not authorise a Magistrate to assume the role of an arbitrator, even though the parties agree to his doing so, and to pass an order after a local inquiry without recording evidence—Chandra Mandal v. Ram Mandal, 25 C.L.J. 349, 40 I.C. 738, 21 C.W.N. 926, 18 Cr.L.J. 738; Upendra v. Rampal, 10 C.L.J. 482, 11 Cr.L.J. 1, 4 I.C. 436; Bhoora v. Tara Singh, supra. Such action on the part of the Magistrate in ignoring the clear provisions of sec. 137 amounts to a substantial error of law (and not a mere error of procedure) and cannot be cured by sec. 537—Bhoora v. Tara Singh (supra).

A conditional order under sec. 133 cannot be made absolute without the first party being called upon to adduce evidence in support of his claim, even though the second party does not, after showing cause under sec. 135, appear to give evidence in support of the denial of the right claimed by the first party—Akhoy v. Lalchand, 31 C.W.N. 963, 28 Cr.L.J. 859 (860), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 96, 104 I.C. 635.

Onus:—It is not correct to say that the burden of proof is on the person against whom the conditional order is made. Sec. 137, Cr. P. C., provides that the Magistrate has to take evidence as in the summons case. That means that the complainant has to make out a prima facie case, that is to say, he has to produce before the Court legal evidence which would justify a finding that what is complained of amounts to a public nuisance—Rameshwar, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 92 (95), 41 Bom L.R. 84, 40 Cr.L.J. 444, 180 I.C. 511, 11 R.B. 301.

345. Dropping of proceedings:—See Note 332 under sec. 133. The Magistrate cannot make an order dropping the proceedings under sub-section (2) of this section without taking evidence in the matter as directed by sub-section (1)—Shew Kelaan v. Nayan, 22 Cr.L.J. 239 (Cal.). Where in a proceeding in respect of an alleged obstruction to a public way, the Magistrate made a conditional order but dropped the proceedings on the opposite party taking the objection that the Court had no jurisdiction to proceed with the inquiry on the ground that the identical way had previously been the subject-matter of an inquiry under sec. 133 by a Court of competent jurisdiction, held that the Magistrate was bound to take evidence as prescribed by sub-section (1) of this section; it was open to the Magistrate after taking evidence to consider whether there was a complete answer to the case against the opposite party or whether the case was one where the parties should be referred to the Civil Court for the determination of a matter which the Magistrate considered he could not decide—Sarojebasini v. Sripati, 42 Cal. 702, 16 Cr.L.J. 415, 19 C.W.N. 332.

345A. Sub-section (3):—An order under this sub-section is not like an order under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., which spends itself in 60 days. If the order under this sub-section is not good on account of nuisance having been already abated, it should not be allowed to remain in force as in case of future proceedings it is apt to be used against the person against whom it is passed—Kalyan Mal Mathur, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 577, 37 Cr.L.J. 1159, 165 I.C. 542, 1936 Cr.C. 948

346. Procedure:—When the accused appears to show cause against the notice the Magistrate ought to take evidence in the matter as in a summons case—Mul Chand, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 397, 8 O.W.N. 651, 32 Cr.L.J. 1165, 1931 Cr.C. 829, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 352, 132 I.C. 800; Sarojbashini v. Sripati, supra; Attar Singh v. Hari Singh, 28 Cr.L.J. 60, 99 I.C. 92, 8 L.L.J. 557, 27 P.L.R. 764.

As in a summons-case, the complainant shall first begin by calling his witnesses, who may then be cross-examined by the other party. After the complainant has finished, the other party shall let in his evidence—Hingu, 31 All. 453, 6 A.L.J. 685 (686), 10 Cr.L.J. 297, 3 I.C. 482. The opposite party is not bound to produce evidence until the party who has set the law in motion has produced his evidence—Indar, 11 A.L.J. 931, 15 Cr.L.J. 23, 22 I.C. 167; In re Dakshinamurthi, 18 Cr.L.J. 848 (Mad.), 41 I.C. 672; Raghunandan Saran Das, 38 Cr.L.J. 29, 3 B.R. 107, 9 R.P. 234, 165 I.C. 942, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 639, 17 P.L.T. 791, 1936 Cr.C. 1070, 1936 P.W.N. 926. But it is clearly for the person proceeded against to produce evidence in support of his denial of a public right of way in an inquiry under sec. 139A, Cr. P. C.—Raghunandan Saran Das, supra.

A party cannot be required to give evidence under sec. 137, Cr. P. C., not until the enquiry under sec. 139A, Cr. P. C., was concluded—Etray, 33 C.W.N. 201, 49 C.L.J. 49, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 879

Before making an enquiry under this section the Magistrate must comply with the provision of sec. 139A and come to a finding whether there was any reliable evidence in support of the denial of the public right—Dhanonjoy v. Nagendra, 31 Cr.L.J. 767, 124 I.C. 832, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 144, 1930 Cr.C. 144. See also Digambar, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 676, 146 I.C. 406, 1933 Cr.C. 1489, 35 Cr.L.J. 54. An order under this section passed without making the inquiry enjoined under sec. 139A (1) cannot stand—Narsingh v. Rameshwar, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 360, 17 P.L.T. 399, 37 Cr.L.J. 846, 1936 Cr.C. 560, 163 I.C. 402, 1936 P.W.N. 332.

When a Magistrate passed a conditional order under sec. 133, and on the day fixed the accused put in a written statement to the effect that no obstruction to the public thoroughfare had been caused, and produced a number of witnesses who deposed to the same effect, but the Magistrate without recording any evidence for the prosecution made the order absolute under this section, it was held that the Magistrate's order was illegal, since he should have proceeded as in a summons-case—Sia Ram, 1917 P.R. 32; Jassi, 20 A.L.J. 692, 25 Cr.L.J. 266.

The Court is bound at the party's request to compel the attendance of witnesses—Bhomar v. Digambar, 6 C.W.N. 548.

Reference to Jury:—Reference to jury is entirely optional with the party against whom the order is made; but if he applies for a jury, he is bound by their verdict. If no reference is made, the order made by the Magistrate under this section will become final—Khodabuksh v. Monglai, 14 Cal. 60.

347. Illegal order:—Where a conditional order under sec. 133 was passed without jurisdiction, the subsequent order under this section confirming the conditional order is also illegal—Jaswant Singh, Ratanlal 516.

Illegality of procedure can be cured:—Where a Magistrate, instead of taking the evidence himself as provided by this section, sent the case to a subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and report, and then made the order absolute on the basis of that report, held that there was a complete disregard of the imperative provisions of this section. It is not a mere irregularity of procedure but a grave illegality which cannot be cured under sec. 537 even by the consent of the parties—Kariyappa, 47 Bom. 89, 24 Bom.L.R. 807, 23 Cr.L.J. 587.

347A. Stay of Proceedings:—After the Magistrate's finding under sec. 139A, Cr. P. C., that there was no reliable evidence in support of the denial of the public right, the applicant instituted a civil suit for a declaration that no such public right existed and made an application to the Magistrate for staying his proceedings till the decision of the civil suit. Held, that the procedure under sec. 137, Cr. P. C., should take place and the Magistrate should make a final order under that section without staying proceedings. As the criminal proceeding was first instituted, the proceeding to be stayed would not be the criminal proceeding but it would be the civil suit. The order of the Magistrate can be enforced in accordance with the provisions of sec. 140, Cr. P. C., even if the Civil Court comes to a contrary decision—Kalika Prosad v. Shiam Kishore, 35 Cr.L.J. 1445, 151 I.C. 897, 1934 A.L.J. 342, A.I.R. 1934 All. 131, 1934 Cr.C. 189, 4 A.W.R. 561. See also Note 353A.

138. (1) On receiving an application under section 135 to appoint a jury, the Magistrate shall—

Procedure - where he claims jury.

- (a) forthwith appoint a jury consisting of an uneven number of persons not less than five, of whom the foreman and one-half of the remaining members shall be nominated by such Magistrate, and the other members by the applicant;
- (b) summon such foreman and members to attend at such place and time as the Magistrate thinks fit; and
- (c) fix a time within which they are to return their verdict.

(2) The time so fixed may, for good cause shown, be extended by the Magistrate.

348. Section imperative:—This section leaves no discretion to the Magistrate, and he is bound to appoint a jury, when he is asked to do so—Anon, 2 Weir 63. Both sections 137 and 138 are imperative in their terms. The Magistrate has no discretion in the matter; he is bound to take the action which those sections lay down—Kishori Lal, 13 C.W.N. 367 (369), 10 Cr.L.J. 494, 4 I.C. 72. If he refuses to do so, he acts illegally—Gaunde Rai, 1887 P.R. 19; In re Mothoor, 2 C.L.R. 509.

349. Appointment of jury:—The Magistrate to whom an application to appoint a jury is made cannot delegate that duty to another Magistrate—Vithu, Ratanlal 460.

The word 'forthwith' must be interpreted in a reasonable way; it merely means that the Magistrate shall appoint the jury as soon as he reasonably can. Therefore, where the Magistrate appointed the jury 2 days after and parties applied for a jury, held that the terms of this section were substantially complied with, and there was no unreasonable delay—Khushi Ram, 4 Lah 224 (229).

The appointment or the cancelment of appointment of a jury must be made in the presence of the parties and not behind their back—In re Chundernath, 5 Cal 875.

In nominating the foreman and one-half of the remaining members of the jury, it is the duty of the Magistrate to exercise his own independent judgment and not to accept persons who may be put forward by the complainant—Upendra v. Khitish, 23 Cal. 499; Kalash v. Ram Lal, 26 Cal 869; In re Kothari, 31 Bom L.R. 79, A.I.R. 1929 Bom 79, 117 I.C. 333, 30 Cr.L.J. 785 (786). The following persons should not be appointed as jurors:—(a) Complainant and his witness; because it is plainly against the principles of right and equity that a person should be compelled to submit his case to the arbitration of his adversary—Brindaban v. Dwarka, 22 W.R. 47; (b)

Friends and supporters of the complainant—Farjand Ali v. Hakim Ali, 37 All. 26, 12 A.L.J. 1241, 26 I.C. 632, 16 Cr.L.J. 40; Mir Imam, 1897 P.R. 4 : (c) Nominees of the party interested in upholding the Magistrate's order (i.e., nominees of the complainant)—Rajah Shatyananda v. Camperdown Pressing Co., 21 W.R. 43; Kaliash v. Ram Lall, 26 Cal. 869 (870); Upendra v. Kshitish, 23 Cal. 499; In re Kothari, supra

In case of encroachment of the property of the District Board, a member of the District Board can be nominated by that Board to serve on the jury—Abdul Shakur, 1930 A.L.J. 1335, 32 Cr.L.J. 565, 130 I.C. 627, A.I.R. 1931 All. 257, 1931 Cr.C. 417, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 291.

A Magistrate has no power to veto the appointment of a person nominated by the applicant—Mir Imam, 1897 P.R. 4.

The summons to jury should specify the time and place when and where the jurors should attend—Ram Saran, 5 All. 7.

350. Jury improperly constituted:—If the Magistrate appoints the foreman of the jury alone, the jury is not a properly constituted one—Dino Nath v. Hur Gobind, 16 W.R. 23. Where one of the five jurors remains absent, and the foreman substitutes a juror in the place of the absent one, he acts illegally because he has no such power, and the jury is not legally constituted—Bhyrub, 10 C.L.R. 193. If one of the jurors declines to act or remains absent, the Magistrate cannot proceed with the inquiry unless he appoints another juror in his place—Uma Charan v. Joshein, 11 Cal. 84.

A jury consisting of less than five persons is not a properly constituted one, and an order based on the verdict of such a party is invalid—Ajit v. Jamatulla, 22 Cr.L.J. 511 62 I.C. 335 (Cal.).

The jury is not legally constituted when the Magistrate appoints the entire jury himself, instead of appointing the foreman and half the jury, and leaving the other half to be nominated by the parties—Khem Chand, 28 Cr.L.J. 1036, 106 I.C. 220, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 187.

It is doubtful whether sec. 537, Cr. P. C., can cure the irregularity in respect of the appointment of jury in as much as it is an irregularity which goes to the root of the proceedings—Mahadeo Lal v. Hossain Pandey, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 199, 120 I.C. 289, 31 Cr.L.J. 53, Ind. Rul. 1930 Pat. 1. The irregularity in the appointment of the jury by itself would not be ground for setting aside the proceedings—Digamber, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 676, 146 I.C. 406, 1933 Cr.C. 1489, 35 Cr.L.J. 54.

351. Procedure:—This chapter does not lay down any rules as to the procedure which a jury appointed under this section should adopt in inquiring into a matter submitted to them—Ram Bilas, 30 All. 364. The jury is bound to hear the parties and their witnesses. They cannot decide a matter referred to them merely on local inspection without taking evidence—Kaliash v. Ram Lall, 26 Cal. 869 (870); Adhar Chandra v. Ambika, 6 C.W.N. 886.

352. Verdict after time fixed:—Where a jury appointed under this section had considered the matter referred to them, and the individual members of the jury had given in their opinion to the foreman, but he sent in his report after the time fixed but before a final order was made by the Magistrate, it was held that the Magistrate should act on the verdict of the jury, and should not appoint a second jury—Sk. Nazumuddy v. Hasim Khan, 21 W.R. 51.

Extension of time—The power conferred by sub-section (2) for the extension of time for delivery of verdict can be exercised by the Magistrate only and cannot be delegated to the foreman of the jury—Kedar Nath, 23 All. 159.

353. Reference to arbitration:—As the dispute under this chapter is of a public nature, in which public interests are involved, the case cannot be referred to arbitrators by agreement of parties—Rajabalam v. Nawlak, 2 P.L.T. 6, 22 Cr.L.J. 327; Ajit Shaikh v. Jamatullah, 22 Cr.L.J. 511 (Cal.).

353A. Institution of Civil Suit:—The fact that the civil suit has been instituted is no bar to the proceedings and it is within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to continue proceedings under sec 138, Cr. P. C.; the civil suit may take a long time, in the meantime it is quite competent to the Magistrate to decide the matter summarily under the Cr. P. C.—Shamji Tricumdas v. Ram Moyee, 56 C.L.J. 249, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 218, 34 Cr.L.J. 532, 143 I.C. 178. See also Banku, 58 Cal. 1088, 35 C.W.N. 571, 32 Cr.L.J. 1240, 134 I.C. 918, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 787, 1931 Cr.C. 1005, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 918 quoted in Note 360 and Note 347A.

139. (1) If the jury or a majority of the jurors find that the order of the Magistrate is reasonable and proper as originally made, or subject to a modification which the Magistrate accepts, the Magistrate shall make the order absolute, subject to such modification (if any).

(2) In other cases, no further proceedings shall be taken under this Chapter.

354. Verdict of the jury:—The jurors are not to give their individual and separate opinions to the Magistrate, but they are to consult together and then express their collective opinion through their foreman—Khushali Ram, 18 All. 158. The findings of all the jurors need not agree in every detail; but if all the members agree that the order of the Magistrate, as a whole, is improper, the jurors shall be counted together as unanimously objecting to the order—Nakari, 25 W.R. 31. Where one of the five jurors declined to act, and the remaining four being equally divided in opinion, the Magistrate declined to pass any order under sec. 139, and struck off the case, held that the course adopted by the Magistrate was irregular; he should have summoned a fresh jury and commenced the inquiry afresh—Uma Churn v. Joshein, 11 Cal. 84.

The only thing which the jury is to consider whether the conditional order passed by the Magistrate under sec. 133 is reasonable and proper. They cannot enter into the question of rights of parties—In re Chundernath, 5 Cal. 875; Mutukdhari v. Hari-madhab, 9 C.W.N. 72, 31 Cal. 979; Md Ashrafuddin v. Sh. Karim Baksh, 18 C.W.N. 1148, 15 Cr.L.J. 515; Dulalram v. Baishnab, 10 C.W.N. 845; Nasaruddi v. Akiluddi, 3 C.W.N. 345, 3 C.L.J. 360. See Note 359 under sec. 139A.

Verdict of majority:—The 'majority' means a majority of the persons appointed, and a majority of the person attending—Durga Charan v. Sashi, 13 Cal. 275. Moreover, all the persons appointed as jurors must act, and the verdict of the majority must be the verdict of the majority of the persons appointed. Therefore, where one juror out of five was all along absent, the Magistrate cannot accept the verdict of the four persons who attended, treating it as the verdict of the majority—Promotha v. Basanta, 11 Cr.L.J. 402 (Cal.), 6 I.C. 777. So also, a decision by three out of five, in the absence of the other two is invalid—Kedar Nath, 23 All. 159; Durga Charan v. Sashi, 13 Cal. 275. So again, a verdict is defective when four out of five jurors were present at the time of the local investigation and one was absent. Such a verdict is illegal and cannot be acted upon, and a fresh jury should be appointed—Srimati Dasya v. Nibaran, 24 C.W.N. 928, 21 Cr.L.J. 448, 31 C.L.J. 371, 56 I.C. 260. Where out of five jurors two only saw the place, and the third never visited it, but passed his opinion solely on what had been told him by the other two, it was held that the opinion of the so-called majority was not that of a legal majority—Petambar v. Nasaruddi, 25 W.R. 4.

355. Magistrate bound by verdict:—A Magistrate is not at liberty to take only a part of the verdict; he is bound to be guided by their whole decision. If any part of their verdict is ambiguous, he can ask them to express their opinion clearly—Poholee, 12 W.R. 28.

If the jury finds the Magistrate's order to be wrong, he is bound by the verdict and must stop further proceedings. It is only when the jury finds the Magistrate's order to be reasonable and proper that he can proceed to enforce the order—Ibid

The Magistrate must accept the verdict in its entirety. If one part of the verdict is erroneous (e.g., if the verdict provides for reconstruction of an obstruction) the whole verdict must be rejected. The Magistrate cannot split up the verdict and accept that part of the verdict which is correct, rejecting the portion which is erroneous—Rahimaddi v. Sher Ali, 40 C.L.J. 597, 26 Cr.L.J. 517 (518).

Remitting the case to another Magistrate:—In all cases where the counter-petitioner elects to leave the matter to the decision of a jury the case has to be disposed of by the Magistrate who passed the order under sec. 133, Cr. P. C. If the effect of passing an order directing the counter-petitioner to show cause before some other Magistrate is to transfer all further proceedings to such Magistrate, and to divest the Magistrate who passed the order of all jurisdiction, it is difficult to see why the application under section 135, clause (b), Cr. P. C., or the duty of empanelling a jury under sec. 138, Cr. P. C., should be cast on the Magistrate who passed the order, or why the verdict should be submitted to him and not to the other Magistrate. On receipt of the verdict of the jury the Magistrate, who passed the conditional order, is not competent to remit the case for disposal to the other Magistrate before whom the counter-petitioner was asked to show cause in the conditional order. The Magistrate, who passed the conditional order, is alone competent to deal with the case further and must dispose of the case himself. The words "the Magistrate" in sec. 139, clause (1), Cr. P. C., refers to the Magistrate to whom application has to be made under sec. 135, clause (b), Cr. P. C., to empanel a jury and who under sec. 138, Cr. P. C., does so—Angappa v. Perumal, 43 Mad. 316 (318), 37 M.L.J. 313, 1919 M.W.N. 696, 20 Cr.L.J. 761, 53 I.C. 489. See also Notes 338 and 343

Reference to High Court:—The decision of the jury appointed under sec. 138 is not a proceeding in a Criminal Court which the District Magistrate can call for and examine and refer to the High Court under sec. 435—Anon, Ratanlal 336

139A. (1) Where an order is made under section 133 for the purpose of preventing obstruction, nuisance or danger to the public in the use of any way, river, channel or place, the Magistrate shall, on the appearance before him of the person against whom the order was made, question him as to whether he denies the existence of any public right in respect of the way, river, channel or place, and, if he does so, the Magistrate shall, before proceeding under section 137 or section 138, inquire into the matter.

Procedure where existence of public right is denied

(2) If in such inquiry the Magistrate finds that there is any reliable evidence in support of such denial, he shall stay the proceeding until the matter of the existence of such right has been decided by a competent Civil Court; and, if he finds that there is no such evidence, he shall proceed as laid down in section 137 or section 138, as the case may require.

(3) A person who has, on being questioned by the Magistrate under sub-section (1), failed to deny the existence of a public right of the nature therein referred to or who, having made such denial, has failed to adduce reliable evidence in support thereof, shall not in the subsequent proceedings be permitted to make any such denial, nor shall any question in respect of the existence of any such public right be inquired into by any jury appointed under section 138.

356. This section has been newly added by sec. 26 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923).

The procedure which ought to be followed by the Magistrate in case a bona fide claim of right is set up by the petitioner, was not laid down in any section of this chapter under the previous law. But a large volume of case law had gathered round this point, which the Legislature has now thought fit to crystallize into a new section.

"The principal question in connection with this clause is whether, as provided in the Bill, questions of title in relation to rights of way and the like should, for the purposes of the Chapter, be finally decided by the Magistrate, or whether the almost uniform decisions of the High Courts, which lay down that the Magistrate must stay proceedings if he is satisfied that the question has been raised bona fide, should be followed. We prefer to accept the latter view as laid down in Manipur Dey v. Bidhu Bhusan Sirkar, 42 Cal. 158; and we have provided for it, as a special case, in new section 139A"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

The leading case on this subject is Manipur Dey v. Bidhu Bhusan Sirkar, 42 Cal. 158, 18 C.W.N. 1086, 15 Cr.L.J. 693 (referred to in the above Report of the Joint Committee) which has laid down the following important propositions of law: If the party against whom the order is contemplated to be passed under sec. 133 raises a question that the pathway is not a public property in the sense of the provisions of this section, the Magistrate trying the case should be careful not only to decide as to whether the pathway in question is situate on a private land or is for public use, but he should, even when the claim of the objector is not sustained, find whether the claim is bona fide or is set up only to oust the jurisdiction of the Court. If the Magistrate finds that the claim which is set up is a mere pretence, he should then proceed to pass a final order and make the rule issued by him absolute. If, however, he finds that the claim, although not substantiated, is not a mere pretence and is not raised to oust the jurisdiction of the Court but that it is raised bona fide, he should stay his hand and refer the party to the Civil Court. And if the party within a reasonable time does not have recourse to the Civil Court, the Magistrate may then proceed to make the rule absolute.

Where the defendant does not deny the existence of a public road at the place alleged to have been encroached, but merely denies that he has encroached upon it, this section has no application—Ghurahu v. Shakal Raj, 24 A.L.J. 112, 27 Cr.L.J. 27 (29).

Section misplaced:—This section has been wrongly placed. It should really have found place immediately after sec. 135. When a notice has been issued under sec. 133 and been duly served under sec. 134, the person to whom the notice has been issued must then perform the act or appear to show cause why he should not. If he decides to show cause he will also have to decide whether he wants the matter to be tried by a jury, and if he does want it to be so tried he will make the claim. At this stage sec. 139A should have been introduced, for it is provided that upon the party's appearance the Magistrate shall ask him as to whether he denies the existence of any public right in respect of the way, etc. It is only after the question contained in sec. 139A has been decided that the Magistrate will then, if he decides to go on with the case, proceed under sec. 137 to take evidence, or if an application has been made for a jury, he will under sec. 139 proceed to the appointment of the jury—Raghunandan v. Shew Nandan, 1932 A.L.J. 339, 33 Cr.L.J. 618 (619), A.I.R. 1932 All. 366, 138 I.C. 556, 1932 Cr.C. 441.

Application of the section:—Where the second party admitted in his written statement that the river which is said to have been obstructed was a public river, but contended that the obstruction which was said to have been put up, was not in the river and was upon the land which was his khas land and not a portion of the river, strictly speaking, sec. 139A did not apply. But the language of the section is so general that in such a case as this the Magistrate should exercise a good discretion in following the direction of the law, but the omission to do it does not necessarily vitiate the entire proceeding. The omission is at the most an irregularity which is cured by sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Rajani Kanta v. Ibrahim, 33 C.W.N. 748, 57 Cal. 252, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 507. This section is imperative—Munna Lal, 27 Cr.L.J. 473 (474), 93 I.C. 697, 24 A.L.J. 361, A.I.R. 1926 All. 390. It is, however, doubtful whether there can be a waiver of a mandatory provision such as is contained in sec. 139A, Cr. P. C.—Mahadeo Lal v. Hossaini Pandey, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 199, 120 I.C. 290, 31 Cr.L.J. 53, Ind. Rul. 1930 Pat. 1. See also Mt. Ram Kali v. Kripa Shanker, 55 All. 866, A.I.R. 1933 All. 615, 35 Cr.L.J. 4, 146 I.C. 327, 1933 Cr.C. 987.

Under sec. 139A (2), Cr. P. C., proceedings under Ch. 10, Cr. P. C., are to be taken in two distinct stages. Where obstruction to the use by the public of any way is alleged and denied, the question to be decided at the threshold of the case is whether the denial of the existence of the public right claimed is well founded. It is generally desirable that the Magistrate should record a definite finding in terms of sec. 139A (2), though, if the record otherwise indicates that he did find that the denial of the public right was well founded, the requirements of sec. 139A (2) would be made out. The Court and the parties should distinctly understand when the case enters on the second stage of the proceedings provided by sec. 137, Cr. P. C., so that the evidence not of the preliminary character contemplated by sec. 139 (2), but such as is contemplated by sec. 137 be produced—Gangadhar, A.I.R. 1936 All. 150, 37 Cr.L.J. 422, 161 I.C. 309, 1936 A.L.J. 116, 1936 Cr.C. 178. See also Etra in Note 346.

The provisions of sec. 139A, Cr. P. C., that an inquiry should be held are intended to protect the rights of a person against whom it is proposed to pass an order under sec. 133, Cr. P. C. They are not intended to enable any person complaining of a construction to compel the Magistrate to hold an inquiry into the rights of the parties concerned—Sibte Husain, A.I.R. 1937 All. 785, 1937 A.W.R. 865, 1937 A.L.J. 903, 1938 A.L.R. 10, 172 I.C. 642, 39 Cr.L.J. 148, 1937 A.Cr.C. 165.

357. Bona fide claim:—Before the enactment of this section, the law was that if a person against whom an order was made under sec. 133 to remove an obstruction from a public way, claimed it as a private way, the Magistrate had to determine whether the claim was bona fide or not—Kailash v. Ram Lall, 26 Cal. 869 (870); Matukdhar v. Hari Madhav, 31 Cal. 979; Manipur Dey v. Bidhu Bhusan, 42 Cal. 158; Upendra v. Kshitish, 23 Cal. 499; Sk. Imrat v. Amjad, 2 P.L.J. 67; Thakur Sao v. Abdul Aziz, 4 Pat. 783, 27 Cr.L.J. 9; Khushi Ram, 4 Lah. 224 (226). It was further held that the question whether the claim set up by the defendant was a bona fide one or not was to be decided by the Magistrate himself and could not be left to the jury—Kailash v. Ram Lall, 26 Cal. 869 (870); Matukdhar v. Hari-madhab, 31 Cal. 979; Khushi Ram, supra; Md. Ashrafuddin v. Sh. Karim Baksh, 18 C.W.N. 1148, 15 Cr.L.J. 515.

Under the present section, however, the Legislature has very carefully avoided any reference to any consideration of the bona fides of the claim set up by the opposite party. The Court has now been directed to consider whether there is any reliable evidence in support of his denial of the public right—Manohar, 1929 A.L.J. 385, 116 I.C. 786, 30 Cr.L.J. 670 (671); Raghunandan v. Shew Nandan, 1932 A.L.J. 339, 33 Cr.L.J. 618 (619), 138 I.C. 556, A.I.R. 1932 All. 366.

357A. Procedure:—As soon as the accused appears before him, the Magistrate is bound to question him as to whether he denies the existence of any public right in respect of the way, river, etc., and if he does so, the Magistrate shall, before proceeding under sec. 137 or 138, inquire into the matter. It is the duty of the Magistrate to follow the above procedure without waiting for the objection to be raised by the accused, and the Magistrate cannot refuse to inquire into the matter because the objection was not taken until a late stage of the case—Sk. Sadur v. Sabarali, 29 C.W.N.

649, 26 Cr.L.J. 1168; Raghunandan Saran Das, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 639, 38 Cr.L.J. 29, 165 I.C. 942, 17 P.L.T. 791, 1936 Cr.C. 107, 3 B.R. 107, 9 R.P. 234. If the existence of a right way is not denied or if there is no reliable evidence in support of the denial, the Magistrate should then proceed to the inquiry under secs. 137 and 138, Cr. P. Code—Raghunandan Saran Das, supra. See also Thakur Sao v. Abdul Aziz, 4 Pat. 783, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 170, 91 I.C. 41, 27 Cr.L.J. 9, 7 P.L.T. 136; Atu Mohammad v. Abdul Rahaman, 38 Cr.L.J. 1056, 171 I.C. 279, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 676, 39 P.L.R. 484, 10 L.R. 181; Manohar Lal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 452, 41 P.L.R. 515, 40 Cr.L.J. 933, 184 I.C. 352, 12 R.L. 211; Mul Chand, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 397, 8 O.W.N. 651, 32 Cr.L.J. 1165, 1931 Cr.C. 829, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 352, 132 I.C. 800; Chunni, 40 Cr.L.J. 143, 178 I.C. 742, A.I.R. 1938 All. 653, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 640, 1938 A.Cr.C. 105, 1938 A.L.J. 1013. In the last case it was held to be incumbent on the Magistrate to question the opposite party, even when there was nothing in the written statement, which they filed in obedience to the notice to show cause, to show that they denied the existence of a public way. See also Note 339.

When the opposite party denies the existence of the public right, the Magistrate's first duty is to make the inquiry under this section, and until this inquiry is completed, he cannot order the party to adduce evidence under sec. 137—Etraj Mandal, 33 C.W.N. 201, 30 Cr.L.J. 622, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 879; Rahanaddy v. Hasanali, 30 C.W.N. 648, 27 Cr.L.J. 878. See also Narsingh v. Rameshwar, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 360, 17 P.L.T. 399, 37 Cr.L.J. 846, 163 I.C. 402, 1936 Cr.C. 560, 1936 P.W.N. 332; Mahabir Prasad v. Pitamber Prasad, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 267, 1933 Cr.C. 1001, 29 N.L.R. 361, 146 I.C. 601, 35 Cr.L.J. 145. If, instead of doing so, he at once proceeds under section 137 to take evidence from the complainant, the trial is vitiated by wrong procedure and the final order is liable to be set aside—Raghunath, A.I.R. 1925 All. 311, 28 A.L.J. 187, 86 I.C. 809, 26 Cr.L.J. 873; Munna Lal, 24 A.L.J. 361, 27 Cr.L.J. 473; Manohar, 32 P.L.R. 11, 32 Cr.L.J. 621 (622), 130 I.C. 834, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 62, 1931 Cr.C. 142; Raghunandan v. Shew Nandan, 1932 A.L.J. 339, 1932 Cr.C. 441, A.I.R. 1932 All. 366, 33 Cr.L.J. 618 (619), 138 I.C. 556; Govinda Goundan v. Ayi Goundan, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 465, 1939 M.Cr.C. 42, 1939 M.W.N. 409, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 649, 49 M.L.W. 476, 40 Cr.L.J. 813, 183 I.C. 567, 1 L.R. 1939 Mad. 1030, 12 R.M. 316. Where the Magistrate neither asked the defendant as to whether he denied the existence of a public right, nor took any evidence, but passed the order on a mere local inspection, held that the order was illegal—Mulchand, 8 O.W.N. 651, 32 Cr.L.J. 1165 (1166), 132 I.C. 800, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 352, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 397, 1931 Cr.C. 829.

If the existence of a public right is denied and there is some reliable evidence in support of the denial, or any question of title or easement is involved, the Magistrate should not proceed to decide those questions but it is incumbent upon him to stay his hand until the matter of the existence of the public right is decided by a competent Civil Court—Matabbar v. Golam, 57 Cal. 368, 32 Cr.L.J. 33, 127 I.C. 762, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 890, 1930 Cr.C. 798; Sohan Lal, 9 O.W.N. 115, 33 Cr.L.J. 384, 136 I.C. 836, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 120, 1932 Cr.C. 193; Bishnath v. Khurshed, 9 O.W.N. 141, 33 Cr.L.J. 809 (811), 139 I.C. 737, 1932 Cr.C. 191, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 118; Chhedai Lal, 40 Cr.L.J. 286, A.I.R. 1939 All. 116, 179 I.C. 970, 1938 A.L.J. 1145, 11 R.A. 399, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 841. Instead of staying proceedings under this section the Magistrate cannot proceed to order that each party should produce his evidence, apparently under sec. 137, Cr. P. C.—Sitaram v. Bodri, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 218, 16 P.L.T. 179, 36 Cr.L.J. 1051, 156 I.C. 1006, 1935 Cr.C. 581. If there is no such evidence the Magistrate must proceed under sec. 137 or 138 before making the rule absolute—Nirsu, 147 I.C. 804, 1934 Cr.C. 338, 35 Cr.L.J. 488, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 145, 14 P.L.T. 778; Chhedai Lal, supra. It is clearly for the person proceeded against to adduce evidence in support of his denial of a public right of way and the Magistrate ought to make a finding whether the existence of a public right is denied or not, and if it is denied whether there has been produced or not reliable evidence in support of the denial. If the existence of a right of way is not denied or if there is no reliable evidence in support of the denial, the Magistrate should then proceed to the enquiry under secs. 137 and 138 Cr. P. C.—Raghunandan Saram Das, 38 Cr.L.J. 29, 3 B.R. 107, 9 R.P. 234, 165 I.C. 942, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 639, 17 P.L.T. 791, 1936 Cr.C. 1070, 1936 P.W.N. 926. Proceedings under sec. 139A, Cr. P. C., should be taken before the proceedings under sec. 137, Cr. P. C.—Ata Mohammad v. Abdul Rahman, 38 Cr.L.J. 1056, 171 I.C. 279, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 676, 39 P.L.R. 484, 10 R.L. 181. Where no inquiry was made under this section and the Magistrate made the rule absolute under sec. 137, simply looking into papers filed by both parties, the order was without jurisdiction—Uma Kanta v. Kalipada, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 790, 37 C.W.N. 823, 146 I.C. 558, 1933 Cr.C. 1357, 35 Cr.L.J. 89; Mt. Ram Kali v. Kripa Shanker, A.I.R. 1933 All. 615, 1933 Cr.C. 987, 146 I.C. 327, 35 Cr.L.J. 4, 55 All. 862. See also Hamid Ali, 32 Cr.L.J. 250, 129 I.C. 222, 1930 Cr.C. 1222, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 1046 and Narsingh v. Rameshwar, supra.

Inquiry by Subordinate Magistrate:—This section contemplates an inquiry by the Magistrate himself who initiated the proceedings under sec. 133, and he cannot depute another Magistrate to make the inquiry and report. The Magistrate has to see whether there is or is not reliable evidence in support of the denial of the existence of the alleged public right, and this is a matter, better determined by the Magistrate if he has heard the evidence himself than if he merely read the report of a subordinate Magistrate—Masaddar v. Isamullah, 57 Cal. 666, 34 C.W.N. 228 (229), 50 C.L.J. 291, 1929 Cr.C. 660.

The Magistrate mentioned in sec. 139A, Cr. P. C., must be the Magistrate before whom a person is ordered to appear under the last sentence of sec. 133 (1) Cr. P. C. He need not be a Magistrate with first class or higher powers who took cognizance originally—Ata Mohammad v. Abdul Rahman, 38 Cr.L.J. 1056, 171 I.C. 279, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 676, 39 P.L.R. 484, 10 R.L. 181.

Dispute between Government and private individual:—In case of a dispute between the Government and a private individual as to the right to the ground on which an encroachment is alleged to have been made by the latter by building a wall, a Magistrate should not proceed under this section, until the dispute is settled in a Civil Court—Jeysang, Ratanlal 378; Ram Singh, 2 Bom.L.R. 818.

357B. Reliable Evidence:—Reliable evidence is evidence of reliable persons. What is really meant is not that the Magistrate should weigh the evidence produced by both sides and then come to the conclusion which he believes or which he prefers, but the Magistrate should take the evidence as it stands and see whether on the face of it, if there was no evidence to the contrary, he could come to the conclusion that the evidence was false and was, therefore, unreliable—Hari Kishore v. Kanshi Ram, 29 Cr.L.J. 254, 107 I.C. 485, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 664. All that the Magistrate has to satisfy himself about is that the evidence put forward is not false. It is possible that the Civil Court may not consider the evidence as sufficient to substantiate the existence of the private road in the land but such a finding can only be delivered by the Civil Court, not by the Magistrate. The Magistrate has simply to satisfy himself that there is no reason to think that the evidence is false. If he finds any reason to enable him to treat the evidence as false, then alone he has power to continue the proceedings. The Magistrate has therefore to consider the evidence solely from the point of view of the person who produces it and find whether the evidence considered ex parte is genuine and tends prima facie to support the existence of the private right or the non-existence of any public right as urged by the party. If the Magistrate finds that the evidence is reliable it ousts his jurisdiction—Mahabirprasad v. Pitamberprasad, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 267, 1933 Cr.C. 1001, 29 N.L.R. 361, 146 I.C. 601, 35 Cr.L.J. 145. The duty of a Magistrate under this section is merely to see whether the denial of the public right is frivolous or not. If the person who denies that right is able to produce some evidence which prima facie, there is no reason to disbelieve, it is not for the Magistrate to examine evidence on the other side by way of rebuttal and so forth and attempt to arrive at some final decision—Muhammad Khalil, 37 Cr.L.J. 343, 160 I.C. 854, 1936 A.L.J. 75, A.I.R. 1936 All. 356. See also Emp. v. Batuk, A.I.R. 1936 All. 142, 37 Cr.L.J. 365, 160 I.C. 889, 1936 A.L.J. 76, 1936 Cr.C. 140. Reliable evidence in the sense in which the term is used in sec. 139A, Cr. P. C., means evidence on which it is possible for a competent Court to place reliance. It does not mean evidence which definitely establishes the title to the land because if that was the meaning of the term, it would be unnecessary in any case to refer the matter to the Civil Court at all. It was obviously the intention of the Legislature that questions of title should not be decided in a summary proceeding by a Magistrate in a Criminal Court. Under the provisions of sec. 139A it is his duty merely to see that any claim to a piece of land alleged to be a public place or a public way is not frivolous—Janardan Sarup, 38 Cr.L.J. 200, 166 I.C. 376, A.I.R. 1937 All. 12, 1936 A.L.J. 1285, 1937 A.L.R. 28, 9 R.A. 405; Chhedi Lal, 40 Cr.L.J. 286, 179 I.C. 970, A.I.R. 1939 All. 116, 1938 A.L.J. 1145; Chunni, 40 Cr.L.J. 143, 178 I.C. 742, A.I.R. 1938 All. 653, 1938 A.L.J. 1013. What sec. 139A, Cr. P. C., requires is that a Magistrate should be satisfied that there is reliable evidence in support of the denial of the public right. The moment he finds that, he has to stop his hands and leave the matter for the Civil Court to decide. As to what is reliable evidence, it will depend upon the circumstances of each case. But a good test seems to be this, that if the evidence adduced stands un rebutted the public nature of the right will be demolished—Harnandan Lal v. Rampalak, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 460 (462), 18 Pat. 76, 1939 P.W.N. 346, 40 Cr.L.J. 837, 184 I.C. 47, 20 P.L.T. 748, 6 B.R. 6, 12 R.P. 212. Before the amendment, no doubt, it was permissible and proper for the Magistrate to take evidence on both sides. But now what is to be decided is whether the denial of the public right by the second party is supported by any reliable evidence and if there is any reliable evidence in support of such denial, the Magistrate has no option but to stay his hands and to refer the parties who moved the Magistrate to take action to go to the Civil Court—Govinda Goundan v. Ayi Goundan, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 465, 1939 M.Cr.C. 42, 49 M.L.W. 476, 1939 M.W.N. 409, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 649, 40 Cr.L.J. 813, 183 I.C. 567, 11 L.R. 1939 Mad. 1030, 12 R.M. 316.

The jurisdiction of the Criminal Court is not ousted by the fact that the person proceeded against is the owner of the land, but, at any rate, the fact of the ownership is a very solid fact, and in the majority of cases will undoubtedly provide "reliable evidence" within the meaning of cl. (2) to this section in the absence of very cogent evidence, on the other side—Mt. Ram Kali v. Kripa Shanker, A.I.R. 1933 All. 615 (616), 55 All. 866, 35 Cr.L.J. 4, 146 I.C. 327, 1933 Cr.C. 987.

The settlement record, showing that the land alleged to have been encroached upon is the land of the opposite party, is reliable evidence within the meaning of this section—Debendra v. Chairman, Local Board, Asansol, 25 Cr.L.J. 1080, 81 I.C. 904, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 268; Satish v. Krishna, 34 C.W.N. 957 (958), 32 Cr.L.J. 189, 128 I.C. 810, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 2, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 106, 1931 Cr.C. 34; Sitaram v. Badri, 36 Cr.L.J. 1051, 156 I.C. 1006, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 218, 1935 Cr.C. 581, 16 P.L.T. 179; Nur Ali v. Natha, 28 Cr.L.J. 247, 99 I.C. 119, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 745; Emp. v. Batuk, supra.

Where the opposite party produced a deed of sale to show that they had acquired a title in the land upon which they had built, the record of a settlement to show that their transferor had a title in the land and two maps to show that the path at one time passed along the edge of their field and outside it, it cannot possibly be said that their denial of the public right of way over the land is frivolous or that it is entirely unsupported by evidence and thus is obviously a matter which can only properly be decided by a competent Civil Court—Kundan Lal, 40 Cr.L.J. 375, 180 I.C. 495, A.I.R. 1939 All. 187, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 711, 11 R.A. 465, 1939 A.Cr.C. 31.

The existence of a genuine dispute as to title suitable for decision by the Civil Court is sufficient ground for staying proceedings under this section—Munna v. Chandrabati, 29 Cr.L.J. 661, 110 I.C. 213, 26 A.L.J. 1285, A.I.R. 1928 All. 627, 50 All. 871.

The Magistrate should not have disposed of the case himself in face of the fact that the question of title was involved and there appeared to be 'reliable evidence' in support of the second party's title within the meaning of this section—Sohan Lal, 33 Cr.L.J. 384, 136 I.C. 839, 9 O.W.N. 115, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 120, 1932 Cr.C. 193.

358. Sub-section (2):—The law requires first of all that the party shall appear before the Magistrate and deny the existence of the public right in question, secondly, that he shall produce some reliable evidence, and thirdly, that such evidence shall be legal evidence and shall support the denial. If these three conditions are satisfied, then the Magistrate's jurisdiction ceases to exist—Thakur Sao v. Abdul Aziz, 4 Pat. 783, A.I.R. 1926 Pat 170, 27 Cr.L.J. 9. The Magistrate's jurisdiction is not ousted merely by reason of the defendant raising a bona fide claim of right, but he is entitled to proceed with the case, and is not bound to refer the parties to a Civil Court—Ram Sagar v. Alek Naskar, 49 Cal 682 (F.B.), 26 C.W.N. 442; Abdul Wahid v. Abdullah, 45 All. 656 (660), 21 A.L.J. 529

It is only in cases where the Magistrate finds that there is no reliable evidence in support of the denial that he is empowered by sub-sec (2) of sec. 139A to proceed further in the matter. Without such finding he has no jurisdiction to make the order absolute—Abul Sayeed v. Damodar Prasad, 36 Cr.L.J. 588, 154 I.C. 871, 16 P.L.T. 218, A.I.R. 1935 Pat 138, 1935 Cr.C. 335

The inquiry directed to be made under this section is something quite distinct from the inquiry which may have to be held later under sec. 137. The Legislature has laid down nothing as to what form the inquiry shall take. It may be of infinite variety according to the circumstances of the cases. The Magistrate is left an absolute discretion as to how far he will go or upon what materials he will act in considering whether the defendant has a case in support of his denial. But the defendant must produce some reliable evidence; it is not because he produces material of some sort that the Court is bound to stay the proceedings—Manohar, 1929 A.L.J. 385, A.I.R. 1929 All 202, 30 Cr.L.J. 670 (671, 672). The Magistrate is not entitled to demand that the evidence shall be sufficient to satisfy him that no public right exists. All he has to see is whether there is any reliable evidence in support of the denial of the public right—Ude Singh v. Mohammada, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 856, 110 I.C. 330, 30 P.L.R. 687, 10 Lah 151, 29 Cr.L.J. 698 (699). This section only requires evidence and not proof, and the only condition is that upon the materials before him, the Magistrate has no reason to think the evidence false. The Magistrate has no jurisdiction to weigh the evidence and to determine on which side the balance leans. He has no jurisdiction to inquire into the actual existence of the public right claimed by the petitioners—Thakur Sao v. Abdul Aziz, 4 Pat. 783, 27 Cr.L.J. 9. This section does not authorise a Magistrate to look into the question of title and decide for himself whether the accused's case is or is not true—Munna Lal, 24 A.L.J. 361 (363), A.I.R. 1926 All 390, 93 I.C. 697, 27 Cr.L.J. 473. If the person who alleges that a public path has been obstructed is unable to show that a public pathway exists, the Magistrate is certainly neither required nor entitled to act as if it had been found that a public pathway did exist; and in the absence of evidence of actual dedication, the person defending the case under sec 133 has merely to adduce reliable evidence to show that the use of path by the public has not been sufficiently long to establish a prescriptive right. The fact that the pathway might have been used for 2½ years would not warrant the Magistrate enforcing its use as public path against the wishes of the owner, who is perfectly entitled to close it if he pleases—Harisadhan v. Teknaram, 36 Cr.L.J. 367, 153 I.C. 471, 15 P.L.T. 386, A.I.R. 1934 Pat 438, 1934 Cr.C. 948, where Janki Ram v. Saukhi Panjara, 108 I.C. 559, 9 P.L.T. 587 was referred to. See also Pran Nath, 33 C.W.N. 915, 57 Cal. 526 in this connection. A permissive way can be obstructed at pleasure by the owner or tenant of the land over which it runs—Durga v. Sashi, 13 Cal. 275 (278).

The inquiry contemplated by this section is not an elaborate inquiry with regard to the rights of the parties, and the Magistrate must not arrogate to himself the functions of a Civil Court. He has only to see that the party has produced some evidence in support of his claim, which does not seem to be unreliable, and the Magistrate need not examine all the witnesses produced by the parties—Satish v. Krishna, 34 C.W.N. 957 (1959), 32 Cr.L.J. 189, 128 I.C. 810, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 2, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 106, 1931 Cr.C. 34. It is clearly for the person proceeded against to adduce evidence in support of his denial of a public right of way—Raghunandan Saran Das, 38 Cr.L.J. 29, 165 I.C. 942, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 639, 17 P.L.T. 791, 1936 Cr.C. 1070, 1936 P.W.N. 926. The duty of a Magistrate under this section is merely to see whether the denial of the public right is frivolous or not—Muhammad Khalil, A.I.R. 1936 All. 356, 160 I.C. 854, 1936 Cr.C. 420, 37 Cr.L.J. 343, 58 All. 739, 1936 A.L.J. 75, 1936 A.L.R. 168, 8 R.A. 657; Janardan Sarup, 166 I.C. 376, A.I.R. 1937 All. 12, 38 Cr.L.J. 200, 1936 A.L.J. 1285, 1937 A.L.R. 28, 9 R.A. 405. In order that the Magistrate may satisfy himself whether there is reliable evidence, he may allow cross examination of the witnesses adduced by the defendant. But the inquiry being of a summary character, it is not intended that the complainant should be required to adduce evidence to contradict the case sought to be made out by the defendant—Kishorimohan v. Krishnobihari, 58 Cal. 461, 32 Cr.L.J. 1187, 134 I.C. 574, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 527, 1931 Cr.C. 679, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 862; Chunni, 40 Cr.L.J. 143, 178 I.C. 742, A.I.R. 1938 All. 653, 1938 A.L.J. 1013. The Magistrate cannot allow the complainant to produce definite evidence to the contrary and then proceed to weigh the evidence on both sides, in order to decide finally whether the alleged public right does or does not exist—Chunni, supra, following Muhammad Khalil, supra and Janardan Sarup, supra. See also Govinda Goundan v. Ayi Goundan, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 465 (466), 1939 M.Cr.C. 42, 49 M.L.W. 476, 1939 M.W.N. 409, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 649, 1 I.L.R. 1939 Mad. 1030.

If the Magistrate finds that there is some evidence in support of the party denying the public right, all he has to do is merely to stay the proceedings until the matter is decided by a Civil Court. The Magistrate cannot compel either party to go to the Civil Court—Rozan, 52 All. 592, 31 Cr.L.J. 839, 125 I.C. 452, 1930 A.L.J. 815, A.I.R. 1930 All. 658, Ind. Rul. 1930 All. 660; Manohar, 1929 A.L.J. 385, Ind. Rul. 1929 All. 610, 30 Cr.L.J. 670 (672), 116 I.C. 786, A.I.R. 1929 All. 220; Bihari, 39 Cr.L.J. 791, 176 I.C. 755, 11 R.N. 77, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 512. The Court is not directed to quash the proceedings altogether but to stay the proceedings. There is no obligation on the Magistrate to force the opposite party or any particular party into Court—Ram Sahaai v. Uttama, 36 Cr.L.J. 144, 152 I.C. 737, A.I.R. 1935 All. 79, 4 A.W.R. 959, 1934 All. L.R. 1031; Hari Chand v. Durga, 28 Cr.L.J. 363, 100 I.C. 971, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 227. For contra see Bram Chetan v. Jasbir, 30 Cr.L.J. 360, 114 I.C. 782, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh. 85, 5 O.W.N. 1131, Ind. Rul. 1929 Oudh. 190.

If the denial is proved, the Criminal Court stays its hands. Then it will be the business of the other party to bring a civil suit. If he does not bring a civil suit, the denial is established. If he goes to the Civil Court and succeeds, the Magistrate may proceed to pass an order absolute under sec. 140 (1)—Rozan, supra.

Where a Magistrate came to the conclusion that the existence of a public pathway had not been established and directed that the proceedings should be dropped under sec. 137 (2), Cr. P. C., it was held that he should have stayed proceedings under sec. 139A, Cr. P. C., until the matter of such right has been decided by a competent Civil Court, but the form which he adopted for this order had the same effect as that of an order under this clause of sec. 139A and there was no necessity for interference on that account—Harisadhan v. Teknarin, 36 Cr.L.J. 367, 153 I.C. 471, 15 P.L.T. 386, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 438, 1934 Cr.C. 984. See also Debi Dayal v. Manao, 29 Cr.L.J. 244, 107 I.C. 333, 5 O.W.N. 78, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh. 632.

What has now to be considered is very different from what was necessary to be determined before the amendments of 1923. Under sec. 139A, what has to be seen is whether the denial of public right by the second party is supported by any reliable evidence. If it is, the Magistrate has to stay his hands until the matter of the existence of such right has been decided by a competent Civil Court. Under the law, as it is at present, it is the party moving for proceedings under sec. 133 or somebody interested in asserting such right, who has got to go to the Civil Court to establish its existence. The Magistrate's order directing the second party to go to the Civil Court is not one which can any longer be made under the law. The Magistrate cannot proceed with the case on the failure of the second party to go to the Civil Court within a reasonable time—Khusa Mandal v. President, Gopalnagar Union Board, 38 C.W.N. 391, 59 CLJ 290, 61 Cal. 390, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 545, 151 I.C. 691, 1934 Cr.C. 785, 35 Cr.L.J. 1374; Govinda Goundan v. Ayi Goundan, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 465, 1939 M.Cr.C. 42, 49 M.L.W. 476, 1939 M.W.N. 409, (1934) 1 M.L.J. 649, I.L.R. 1939 Mad. 1030.

359. Sub-section (3):—Question shall not be inquired into by Jury:
 —The questions as to whether the place is a public way or not, is to be decided by the Magistrate himself and not to be left to the jury. The jury is not competent to decide the question whether there is or is not a public right of way. They can merely find whether the Magistrate's order as originally made is reasonable and proper (sec. 139)—Kailash v. Ram Lal, 26 Cal. 859 (870); Matuk Dhar v. Hari Madhab, 31 Cal. 979; Sheikh Imrat v. Sheikh Amjad, 2 P.L.J. 67; Khushi Ram, 4 Lah. 224 (231), 24 Cr.L.J. 457. The case of Ram Bilas, 30 All. 364 (where it was held that it was within the competence of the jury to decide as to the validity of an objection that the way alleged to have been obstructed was not a public way) is no longer good law.

140. (1) When an order has been made absolute under section 136, section 137 or section 139, the Magistrate shall give notice of the same to the person against whom the order was made, and shall further require him to perform the act directed by the order within a time to be fixed in the notice, and inform him that in case of disobedience he will be liable to the penalty provided by section 188 of the Indian Penal Code.

(2) If such act is not performed within the time fixed, the Magistrate may cause it to be performed, and may recover the costs of performing it, either by the sale of any building, goods or other property removed by the order, or by the distress and sale of any other moveable property of such person within or without the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction. If such other property is without such limits, the order shall authorise its attachment and sale when endorsed by the Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property to be attached is found.

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith under this section.

360. No order under this section should be passed without first proceeding under sec. 139A, Cr. P. C.—Munna Lal, 27 Cr.L.J. 473 (474), 93 I.C. 697, 24 A.L.J. 361, A.I.R. 1926 All. 390.

It would seem reasonable to infer that "the Magistrate" who is to issue notice under this section is indicated in sec. 137, Cr. P. C.—In re Narasinha, 9 Mad. 201 (202). See also Note 343A.

A person who neither complies with the order passed under sec. 133, nor protests against it within the time fixed, can be prosecuted under sec. 136 without further notice being given under this section—Aluvala v. Guruvich, 31 Mad. 280 (282);

Bishambar, 13 All. 577. Notice is necessary only when the Magistrate makes an order absolute under sec. 137 or 139. A distinction is made between sec. 136 on the one hand, and secs. 137 and 139 on the other. The two latter sections do not declare the liability to punishment, but only speak of the order being made absolute, and consequently notice is necessary in order to give the defendant an opportunity of complying with the order absolute. But sec. 136 declares that the liability to punishment attaches as soon as the time fixed in the conditional order expires without compliance, and consequently no notice is necessary to give further time for compliance with the order. It is submitted, therefore, that reference to sec. 136 should be omitted from sec. 140.

Sub-section (1) is mandatory; sub-section (2) is merely directory. If the jury reports that the Magistrate's order is reasonable and proper, the Magistrate is bound to make the order absolute (sec. 139) and is bound under sub-section (1) of this section to require the party to carry out the order within a certain time, in spite of the fact that the party has filed a civil suit and obtained a temporary injunction. The Magistrate has no discretion in this matter. But when the second stage contemplated in sub-section (2) is reached, the Magistrate has a discretion and can, after taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case, decide whether he would give the direction referred to in sub-section (2) or whether he thinks it expedient to leave the matter where it is until the conclusion of the civil suit. It is, however, open to the parties to come to the High Court and say that such an order is not expedient and proper. It would have to be shown that the Magistrate in exercising his discretion had not done so judiciously; otherwise the High Court will not set aside the order—Banku, 58 Cal. 1088, 35 C.W.N. 571 (572), 32 Cr.L.J. 1240, 134 I.C. 918, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 787, 1931 Cr.C. 1005, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 918.

Effect of death of the person against whom the order was made:— See Jugal Kishore in Note 336.

Cancellation of order by succeeding Magistrate:—If a final order is passed by a Magistrate under this chapter, a succeeding Magistrate cannot go behind the order and question its legality, as if he were sitting in judgment over it as a Court of Appeal. Therefore, if an application is made under this section to the succeeding Magistrate for the enforcement of an order passed by a preceding Magistrate, the former cannot reject the application on the ground that the order passed by his predecessor was an illegal order—Kiran Chandra v. Ramesh, 27 C.W.N. 459, 72 I.C. 77, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 589, 24 Cr.L.J. 317. A Magistrate had no jurisdiction to cancel an order passed by his predecessor for removal of a nuisance under sec. 133, on the ground that one of the parties to the proceedings had not been properly served with notice or on the ground that the nuisance was in existence for a long time—Shahabuddin v. Abdul Kader, 31 C.W.N. 530, 44 C.L.J. 211, 28 Cr.L.J. 30, 99 I.C. 62, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 70. But see Ramsaran v. Ram Lagan in Note 341.

Costs:—The question as to from which party or parties the costs for the removal of a nuisance should be recovered, has to be determined upon a consideration of the question as to the parties upon whom the notices in connection with the proceedings were served; it is unjust to make an order for recovery of costs from a party who was not actually served with any notice of the said proceedings—Shahabuddin v. Abdul Kader, supra.

Sub-sec. (3):—The order of the Magistrate directing refund of deposit is not ultra vires and cannot be questioned in the Civil Court—Seonarain v. Sakhi Chand, 18 Cr.L.J. 305, 38 I.C. 417.

This section lays down the procedure on order being made absolute and the consequences of disobedience of the order. If a Magistrate causes the act ordered to be performed, then that order cannot be questioned in the Civil Court, and no suit can be maintained in the Civil Court to prevent the Magistrate from carrying his order into effect. Clause (3) of this section says that no suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith under this section. It would be mere trifling with the Act to hold that the Civil Court can give relief to the aggrieved persons against the order of the Magistrate when the Act says that no suit in respect of anything done by him shall lie—Kedar Nath v. Satish Chandra, 41 Cr.LJ 99 (100), 184 I.C. 754, 1939 O.W.N. 966, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 75, 1939 O.L.R. 653

Sec. 188, I. P. C.—A question as to the validity of the final order made in the proceedings under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., cannot be raised at the trial of the accused under sec. 188, I. P. C.—Supdt v. Khoda Baksha, 35 Cr.LJ. 778, 148 I.C. 808, 60 Cal 1336, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 242, 1934 Cr.C. 364

141. If the applicant, by neglect or otherwise, prevents the appointment of the jury, or if from any cause the jury appointed do not return their verdict within the time fixed or within such further time as the Magistrate may in his discretion allow, the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit, and such order shall be executed in the manner provided by section 140.

361. Jury failing to return verdict:—If the jury fails to return a verdict within the time allowed by law, the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit. Therefore, where on the failure of the jury to return a verdict, the Magistrate inspected the spot and called for a report from the police and thereafter confirmed his original order, held that the final order was perfectly legal—Shyamsundar, 24 A.L.J. 165, A.I.R. 1926 All. 658, 96 I.C. 645, 27 Cr.LJ 981 When the majority of the jurors perversely refuse to return a verdict for fear of displeasing either party, the Magistrate can discharge them and appoint a new jury—Girwar Lal v Bansidhar, 44 All. 575, 20 A.L.J. 472, 23 Cr.LJ 276, 66 I.C. 420; A.I.R. 1922 All 297 The verdict of three jurymen out of five, two of them did not express any opinion, and one of whom abstained altogether from the enquiry, cannot be regarded as a finding of the majority of the jurors under sec 139, Cr P. C., on which the Magistrate can act But at the same time the Magistrate is competent to act under sec 141, Cr P C., and pass such orders as he may think fit—Durgacharan v Sashi, 13 Cal 275 (279) Where upon failure of the jury to return their verdict, the petitioners appeared before the Magistrate and prayed for appointment of a fresh jury, it was held that the Magistrate ought to have appointed a new jury and should not have made the original order absolute—Shib Chandra v Hriday, 12 C.W.N 1047, 8 Cr.LJ 233 Under this section, the Magistrate upon failure of the jury to return a verdict, has a discretion to pass such order as he thinks fit Therefore, where the foreman of the jury simply returned the papers without a verdict, the Magistrate had jurisdiction to make the order absolute—Jiblal v Gena, 4 P.L.T. 15, 24 Cr.LJ 492, 72 I.C. 956, A.I.R. 1923 Pat 229. But it is desirable that under such circumstances the Magistrate should inquire into the case and should give the party an opportunity of showing cause and procuring evidence, before he makes the order absolute under this section—Jiblal v. Gena, supra; Ajodhya Tewari, 4 P.L.T. 13, 73 I.C. 327, A.I.R. 1923 Pat 131, 24 Cr.LJ. 583 But if, upon the failure of the jury to return their verdict, the petitioners did not take any action to move the Magistrate for taking evidence on their behalf, the Magistrate was justified in making the order absolute—Kishori Lal, 13 C.W.N 367, 10 Cr.LJ. 494, 4 I.C. 72. There will be cases, as for example where the jury is unable to report within the time fixed for reasons beyond the control of the applicant, where it would be improper for the Court not to hear the applicant and allow him to show cause before the order was made absolute; but where the applicant has been negligent or obstructive and has wilfully abstained from appearing before the jury, which had been appointed at his instance to settle the dispute, there is no obligation whatsoever on the Court to issue notice to him before confirming the provisional order which had been passed under sec. 133—Pyare Lal v. Dwarka, 36 Cr.LJ 1472, 158 I.C. 759, 1935 A.L.J. 1089, A.I.R. 1936 All. 65.

In this section the word "discretion" is used in relation to the extension of time within which the jury is to give their verdict. It is not used in relation to the order passed by the Magistrate. It is clear, however, that as the words "the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit" are used, it means of course that the Magistrate has a discretion as to the order he should pass and that discretion means a judicial discretion. The Magistrate cannot under this section pass an arbitrary or capricious or whimsical order, but instead of applying to that order, what we may call the test of inquiry, it would perhaps be better to apply the test of reason. The order passed by the Magistrate under this section must be a reasoned order. It must be such an order as the Court in appeal can uphold, allowing, of course for the fact that orders under this Chapter, as under Ch. 10, are only quasi-judicial orders and that the Magistrate on the spot is the better judge of facts than are Judges some hundreds of miles away. There is nevertheless, nothing in the section which can require a Magistrate, after a jury has failed to function, to hold a further inquiry, if he has before him material upon which he can pass a reasonable order under this section. The case is, however, somewhat different when persons in good faith have chosen a trial by jury and, through no fault of their own, their chosen tribunal fails to hear and try their case. They cannot claim, then, they are entitled that their case should be heard by the Magistrate as a summons case under sec. 137 (1), Cr. P. C., but the Magistrate would clearly desire in such circumstances that they should be given an opportunity briefly to state their case—Jethanand v. Shikarpur Municipality, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 24 (25), I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 179, 41 Cr L.J. 364, 186 I.C. 723.

142. (1) If a Magistrate making an order under section 133 considers that immediate measures should be taken to prevent imminent danger or injury of a serious kind to the public, he may, whether a jury is to be, or has been, appointed or not, issue such an injunction to the person against whom the order was made, as is required to obviate or prevent such danger or injury pending the determination of the matter.

(2) In default of such person forthwith obeying such injunction, the Magistrate may himself use, or cause to be used, such measures as he thinks fit to obviate such danger or to prevent such injury.

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith by a Magistrate under this section.

362. Scope:—Sec. 142, Cr. P. C., is not an independent section, but is controlled in its effects by sec. 133, Cr. P. C. A reference to sec. 133, Cr. P. C., shows that the section is confined to certain matters which are specifically mentioned therein and cannot be brought into play to govern or control other matters which are quite extraneous to it. It is nowhere contemplated by sec. 142, Cr. P. C., that it would govern cases where an imminent breach of the peace is apprehended. The "serious injury" or the "imminent danger" contemplated by sec. 142, Cr. P. C., refers to the injury or danger emanating from those things themselves which are specified in sec. 133, Cr. P. C., and consequently sec. 142 is limited in its scope. An order under sec. 142 can, therefore, be passed only if an injury or danger specified in sec. 133, Cr. P. C., is apprehended and not otherwise—Mirza Mohammad Ashraf, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 101, I.L.R. (1937) 18 Lah 303, 39 P.L.R. 863, 171 I.C. 941.

This section intends the order to meet an immediate danger or injury and its object is to prevent that injury pending the determination of the case under sec. 133 or 137, Cr. P. C. The Magistrate not only is not precluded from making a final order under sec. 137, Cr. P. C., but secs. 133, 137 and 142, Cr. P. C., taken together clearly mean that the Magistrate, in spite of making an order under sec. 142, is intended to proceed with the case and make a final order under sec. 137—Rebati Mohan v. Chattal Chandra, 63 C.L.J. 5, 38 Cr.L.J. 173, 166 I.C. 221, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 692, 1936 Cr.C. 954, 9 R.C. 490.

Where a Magistrate who makes an order under this section, subsequently directs further inquiry to be made, the Magistrate must be held to have abandoned the proceedings under this section, and he should have proceeded under secs. 136 and 137 instead of fining the party under sec. 188, I. P. C.—Brojendra, 21 W.R. 86.

No injunction can be issued under this section when the danger has passed away—Indoobhooshun, 1 W.R. 8.

143. A District Magistrate or Sub-Divisional Magistrate, or any other Magistrate empowered by the Provincial Government or the District Magistrate in this behalf, may order any person not to repeat or continue a public nuisance, as defined in the Indian Penal Code or any special or local law.

Magistrate may prohibit repetition or continuance of public nuisance.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

363. Scope:—Under this section no Magistrate can prohibit what was lawful before the date of his order, and thereby make such an otherwise legal act, committed after the date of the order, punishable as a nuisance under the Indian Penal Code—Saminadha Pillai, 19 Mad 464 (469), 6 M.L.J. 181. The object of this section is to give the Magistrate summary powers to issue an order against a person who is repeating or continuing a public nuisance, that is to say, who has repeated an act which has already been forbidden by a competent tribunal. It is not for original use. So the second party, who is alleged to have committed the nuisance, must have the right to set up a defence on the merits and the summary order under this section should not be made without giving him an opportunity of being heard under the other sections of Chap. X of the Cr. P. C.—Jagadish v. Dhanushdari, 36 Cr.L.J. 187, 152 I.C. 708, 15 P.L.T. 253, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 305, 1934 Cr.C. 728; Joku, 8 All 99; Sahabat Ali Mirdha v. Emp., 41 C.W.N. 638. The order passed by the Magistrate under this section, without drawing up a proceeding, without taking evidence, and without giving an opportunity to the second party to substantiate their case, is wholly without jurisdiction and illegal. Further the order made by the Magistrate under this section without an adjudication about the existence of the public nuisance as contemplated in the section by a competent Court, is bad in law and illegal—Jogendra v. Sheikh Anju, 36 Cr.L.J. 591, 154 I.C. 663, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 108, 38 C.W.N. 1070, 1935 Cr.C. 102. Sec. 143, Cr. P. C., is obviously only applicable where there has been a preliminary consideration under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., and the Magistrate has passed an order under sec. 133 prohibiting public nuisance. Then if there is any danger of the nuisance being repeated, an order under sec. 143 can be passed. The terms of sec. 143 show that this is what is meant. Where an order under sec. 143 was passed ex parte, there having been no opportunity for the accused to show cause against it, the order convicting them for the breach of that order, which is illegal, cannot be maintained—Sahabat Ali Mirdha v. Emp., 41 C.W.N. 638.

This section contemplates the prevention of a repetition, or the continuance of a public nuisance by the party against whom an order under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., has already been passed. There can be no doubt that an order under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., binds the person against whom the order is passed and nobody else. No order can, therefore, be passed under sec. 143, Cr. P. C., against a person who was not a party in any earlier proceedings when orders under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., were passed—Ram Sahai v. Uttama, 36 Cr.L.J. 144, 152 I.C. 737, A.I.R. 1935 All. 79, 1935 A.L.J. 18.

It is true that in order that action can be taken under this section the nuisance must be "a public nuisance, as defined in the Indian Penal Code or any special or local law," but that does not exclude the conclusion that the nuisance, repetition of which may be forbidden under this section must be a nuisance which has been made a subject of action under sec. 133, Cr. P. C., and the following section. In short this section does not apply to "original proceedings," but applies only to subsequent proceedings when a nuisance has been made the subject of inquiry and adjudication under the sections which precede it. It, therefore, follows that this section does not stand alone but is supplementary to the sections which precede it—Haji Sulleman Yusuf Kumbhar, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 124, 41 Cr.L.J. 727, 189 I.C. 353.

363A. Revision:—It was formerly held that orders under sec. 143 were not open to revision under this Code (though they were open to revision under the Letters Patent) because they were not 'proceedings' within the meaning of sec. 435—Bisheshur, 1892 A.W.N. 102. But now by reason of the omission of sub-section (3) of sec. 435 by the Amendment Act of 1923, orders under sec. 143 will henceforth be liable to revision under this Code.

CHAPTER XI.

TEMPORARY ORDERS IN URGENT CASES OF NUISANCE OR APPREHENDED DANGER.

144. (1) In cases where, in the opinion of a District Magistrate, a Chief Presidency Magistrate, Sub-Divisional Magistrate, or of any other Magistrate not being a Magistrate of the third class specially empowered by the Provincial Government or the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the District Magistrate to act under this section, there is sufficient ground for proceeding under this section and immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable, such Magistrate may, by a written order stating the material facts of the case and served in manner provided by section 134, direct any person to abstain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management, if such Magistrate considers that such direction is likely to prevent or tends to prevent obstruction, annoyance or injury, or risk of obstruction, annoyance or injury to any person lawfully employed, or danger to human life, health or safety, or a disturbance of the public tranquillity, or a riot, or an affray.

(2) An order under this section may, in cases of emergency or in cases where the circumstances do not admit of the serving in due time of a notice upon the person against whom the order is directed, be passed ex-parte.

(3) An order under this section may be directed to a particular individual, or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place.

(4) Any Magistrate may, either on his own motion or on the application of any person aggrieved, rescind, or alter any order made under this section by himself or any Magistrate subordinate to him, or by his predecessor in office.

(5) Where such an application is received, the Magistrate shall afford the applicant an early opportunity of appearing before him either in person or by pleader and showing cause against the order; and, if the Magistrate rejects the application wholly or in part, he shall record in writing his reasons for so doing.

(6) No order under this section shall remain in force for more than two months from the making thereof, unless in cases of danger to human life, health or safety or a likelihood of a riot or an affray, the Provincial Government, by notification in the official Gazette, otherwise directs.

Change:—This section has been amended by sec 27 of the Cr. P. C Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). The reasons of amendment have been stated below in their proper places

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by sec 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

364. Application of this section:—The power conferred by this section upon a Magistrate is an extraordinary power and the Magistrate should resort to it only when he is satisfied that other powers with which he is entrusted are insufficient. Moreover, the authority of the Magistrate should be exercised in defence of rights rather than in their suppression, in repression of illegal, rather than in interference with lawful acts—Sundram, 6 Mad. 203 (221), 2 Weir 77. Even in the case of an order in an emergency under this section, the Magistrate's action should be directed rather against the wrong-doers than the wronged, though the nature of the emergency may make it necessary for a time, in the public interest, to interfere with the lawful exercise of private rights. But, in any case, the authority of Magistrates should be exercised in defence of rights rather than in their suppression, in repression of illegal rather than in interference with lawful acts—Jasoda Lekhray v Emp., AIR. 1939 Sind 167. (169), 40 Cr L J. 703, 182 I.C. 698, I L R. 1939 Kar 662, 12 RS 31. See also Jafar Husam v Peary Lal, infra. His first duty is to secure to every person the enjoyment of his rights under the law, and by measures of precaution to deter those who seek to invade the rights of others, but if he apprehends that the lawful exercise of right may lead to civil tumult and he doubts whether he has available a sufficient force to repress such tumult or to render it innocuous, regard for the public welfare is allowed to override temporarily the private rights and the Magistrate is authorised to interdict its exercise—Muthialu v. Bapun, 2 Mad 140; Tekait Kunj Behari v Bhiko, 5 C.W.N 329. The first duty of the Government is the preservation of life and property, and to secure this end power is conferred by this section on its officers to interfere even with the ordinary rights of the members of the community—Sundram, 6 Mad 203, 2 Weir 77.

Courts, Civil as well as Criminal, exist for the protection of rights, and therefore the authority of a Magistrate should ordinarily be exercised in defence of rights rather than in their suppression; when an order in suppression of lawful rights has to be made, it ought not to be made unless the Magistrate considers that other action that he is competent to take is not likely to be effective, and the order, if made, should never be disproportionate to but should always be, as far possible, commensurate with the exigencies of any particular situation—Sumner v. Jogendra, 34 Cr.L.J. 334 (337), 142 I.C. 319, Ind. Rul. 1933 Cal. 262, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 348, 1933 Cr.C. 420; Thakin Aung Bala v. District Magistrate, Rangoon, 40 Cr.L.J. 645, 182 I.C. 23, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 181, 1939 Rang L.R. 294, 11 R.R. 516. Ordinarily a person desiring to do what he is lawfully entitled to do should have the support of those responsible for law and order. Orders under this section are to be directed not against those who desire to do what the law permits them to do, but against those who attempt to prevent the exercise of a legal right—Jafar Husain v. Peary Lal, 36 Cr.L.J. 955, 156 I.C. 595, A.I.R. 1935 All. 575. See also Jasoda Lekhraj v. Emp., supra. It is only in exceptional circumstances where emergency of the gravest character is made out that a Court would be justified in the exercise of its powers under this section to make an order which would have the effect of interfering with the exercise of the private rights of individuals—Ganesh v. Lalit, 35 Cr.L.J. 1252, 151 I.C. 183, 38 C.W.N. 388, 1934 Cr.C. 754, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 513. To give the Magistrate jurisdiction under this section all that is required is that he shall be of opinion that there is sufficient ground to proceed under this section and that immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable and that the direction he proposes to make is likely to prevent or tends to prevent a disturbance of the public tranquillity or a riot or an affray. In such circumstances private rights must give way whatever be the subject matter of dispute: in particular it is immaterial that the dispute relates to land, as the great majority of dangerous disputes do. Given the necessary condition an order cannot be impugned as without jurisdiction merely because it was arbitrary, for instance an order stopping kurbani or an order of stopping music before a mosque—Radhe v. Jairam, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 714 (716), 1929 Cr.C. 586, 31 Cr.L.J. 466, 123 I.C. 73.

When a breach of the peace is anticipated action is to be taken against the potential law-breakers and not against the peaceful citizens whom it is expected that the law-breakers will molest—Khazan Chand, 28 Cr.L.J. 345, 100 I.C. 825, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 430, following Md. Ismail v. Barkat Ali, 71 I.C. 506, 26 C.W.N. 904, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 483, 24 Cr.L.J. 154 and Blong, 82 I.C. 42, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 767, 25 Cr.L.J. 1178, 6 P.L.T. 130, 3 Pat.L.R. 41 (Cr.). Where there is a conflict between a public interest and a private right, the former must prevail. And so, although the Hindus may have obtained from a competent Civil Court a declaration of their right to conduct processions with music before mosques, the Magistrate may, in the interest of the public peace, prohibit the Hindu from taking any such procession in any street where there are mosques—In re Viswanadha Rao, 51 Mad. 1006, 55 M.L.J. 442, 30 Cr.L.J. 31 (32) (F.B.). An order under sec. 144 may sometimes interfere with the legal rights of individuals, but when such interference is necessary, it is duty of the Magistrate to limit it as much as possible; and for that purpose he should afterwards hold an inquiry into the circumstances and determine whether as a matter of fact the act prohibited as likely to lead to a breach of the peace is within or in excess of the legal rights of the person forbidden to do it. If it is found that a man is doing that which he is legally entitled to do, and that his neighbour chooses to take offence thereat and to create a disturbance in consequence, it is clear that the duty of the Magistrate is not to continue to deprive the first of the exercise of his legal rights, but to restrain the second from illegally interfering with the exercise of legal rights—Abdool v. Lucky Naram, 5 Cal. 132 (134, 135); Ramnad v. Kader, 62 M.L.J. 392, 33 Cr.L.J. 605 (608), A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 294; Blong, 25 Cr.L.J. 1178, 82 I.C. 42, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 767, 6 P.L.T. 130, 3 Pat.L.R. 41 (Cr.); F. E. Chrestien v. Carter, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 512, 20 P.L.T. 374, 1939 P.W.N. 402, 40 Cr.L.J. 895, 181 I.C. 240, 6 B.R. 30, 12 R.P. 232. It is the obvious duty of the Executive to uphold the civil rights declared by its own Civil Courts. No doubt, the interests of the public peace are paramount, but where the Magistrate is aware that there will probably be a disturbance of the petitioner's civil rights at recurring seasons every year, it is his duty to exhaust every measure at his disposal to uphold the declared civil rights before he abandons the attempt, and he should resort to sec. 144 only if there is no time or opportunity for any other course. If there is time or opportunity, the Magistrate may bind over those persons who threaten to interfere with the petitioner's civil rights, to keep the peace, or may get down sufficient force to meet the crisis. It is not a proper course to do nothing to meet the crisis, and then call in sec. 144 to tide him over it—Venkatasubba, 100 I.C. 709, 25 M.L.W. 375, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 368, 7 A.I.Cr.R. 531, 52 M.L.J. 298, 28 Cr.L.J. 325 (326); Venkatasubbayya v. Md Falauddin, 52 M.L.J. 651, 28 Cr.L.J. 509 (510), 101 I.C. 893, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 611, 8 A.I.Cr.R. 146.

Moreover, this section was never intended to vest a Magistrate with powers to decide disputes of a civil nature between private individuals and to usurp the functions of a Civil Court. It is not permissible for a Magistrate, under the cover of an order under this section, to dispossess a particular individual of certain property and to deliver possession of it to another—Hafizuddin v. Laborde, 50 All. 414, 28 Cr.L.J. 991 (992), 105 I.C. 815, A.I.R. 1928 All. 14, 26 A.L.J. 83.

It cannot be the intention of the law that a Magistrate should compel the owner of property to submit to trespass upon it merely because the trespasser is prepared to use force. The Magistrate should not enforce any use of the private property (e.g. performance of ceremonies upon it) against the person in possession thereof unless it is established either by a decree of a Civil Court or as the result of some enquiry under sec 147, Cr P C, that the persons claiming the right to use it have justification for their claim—Abdul Majeed v. Emp, 40 Cr.L.J. 383, 180 I.C. 499, A.I.R. 1939 All 182, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 852.

There is nothing in the section requiring the Magistrate to uphold rights whether constitutional or otherwise; there is nothing in the section requiring the Magistrate to hold a judicial inquiry into the rights of the parties involved. This section is the one single section in Chapter XI and that chapter is headed 'Temporary orders in urgent cases of nuisance or apprehended danger'. Once a Magistrate is of opinion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding under this section, once a Magistrate considers that there is 'apprehended danger' which can only be averted by directing a person or persons to abstain from a certain act which may result in danger to human life or a disturbance of the public tranquillity or a riot or an affray, he is entitled to make an order directing that person or those persons to abstain from such act even though such act was otherwise lawful, even though such person or persons may be acting lawfully in the exercise of a right. This section is intended to provide for an emergency, and it is idle to contend that in an emergency when a riot is apprehended and when there is apprehension of a serious disturbance of the public tranquillity the Magistrate is required to deliberate upon and decide the rights of the parties before acting—Pir Gul Hassan v Emp, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 230 (232), 40 Cr.L.J. 823, 183 I.C. 641, 1 I.R. 1939 Kar, 751, 12 R.S. 67.

364A. Clauses (1) and (2)—Order to whom to be addressed:—

A careful perusal of the first two clauses of this section leaves no doubt that they are confined to the case of an individual person or persons to whom a notice may be issued directing them to refrain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in their possession or management. Under these two clauses no order can be issued to the general public—Sat Narain v Emp, A.I.R. 1939 All 746, 41 Cr.L.J. 121, 185 I.C. 172, 1939 A.L.J. 1061.

365. Magistrate empowered:—Since the power to be exercised under this section is an extraordinary power, the law is careful to confer this power upon those Magistrates alone whose discretion is prominently guaranteed by their responsible position or by selection—Sundram, 6 Mad 203. When a Magistrate passes an order under this section, the record should show in clear and unmistakable terms the authority under which he professes to act—Thudamawara, 1 Rang. 49, 2 Bur.L.J. 22, 24 Cr.L.J. 727, 74 I.C. 65, A.I.R. 1923 Rang 146.

A Magistrate who is only in charge of the current files of the Court of the Sub-divisional Magistrate, while he is on tour, has jurisdiction to pass final orders under this section. The fact that the Sub-divisional Magistrate has returned from tour on the morning on which the order is passed but where it is not known that he would attend the Court and he does not do so until late, does not invalidate the order—Abdul Majid v. Nripendra Nath, 35 Cr.L.J. 881, 38 C.W.N. 556, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 393.

In the Punjab, all Magistrates of 1st and 2nd class have been empowered to act under this section—Punjab Gazette, 1883, Part I, p. 52. So also in Upper Burma. In Bombay, Assistant Superintendents of Police have been empowered to act under section 144. See Bombay Gazette, 1883, Part I, 396.

By the Amendment Act of 1923, third class Magistrates have been expressly prohibited from being empowered under this section. "We do not think that powers under section 144 should be granted to a Magistrate of the third class, and we have provided for this by a small amendment"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

366. Conditions precedent:—The first thing which a Magistrate has got to be satisfied about is that there is sufficient ground for proceeding under this section and a immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable; and the second element which has got to be established is that the Magistrate should consider that the direction which he is about to give, is one which is likely to prevent or tends to prevent, obstruction, annoyance or injury to any person lawfully employed or danger to human life, health or safety or a disturbance of the public tranquillity or a riot or any affray—Ganesh v. Lalit, 35 Cr.L.J. 1252, 151 I.C. 183, 38 C.W.N. 388, 1934 Cr.C. 754, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 513. Before taking action under this section the Magistrate should be of opinion that immediate prevention or speedy remedy is necessary, and he should state in the order the materials upon which his opinion as to the urgency of the matter is based—Karoolal v. Shyam Lal, 32 Cal. 935; Hafizuddin, 50 All. 414, 28 Cr.L.J. 991 (992), 105 I.C. 815, A.I.R. 1928 All. 14, 26 A.L.J. 83; Motilal, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 513, 33 Bom.L.R. 1178, 1931 Cr.C. 945, 134 I.C. 1237, 33 Cr.L.J. 75; Jokhu, 8 All. 99 (102). The Magistrate must decide as a matter of fact whether the dispute is likely to lead to a breach of the peace or a disturbance of public tranquillity. Where this essential preliminary to assuming jurisdiction is not found to exist, his order must be deemed to be an order having no legal force and any expression of opinion contained therein must be deemed to be void of legal force or effect—Vattahara S. J. v. Reverend Koshi, A.I.R. 1937 Mad 494, 38 Cr.L.J. 892, 170 I.C. 390, 1937 M.Cr.C. 180, 1937 M.W.N. 636, 45 M.L.W. 473. This section is to be applied in cases of urgency, and should not be allowed to take the place of any other provision of law (e.g., sec. 133) which might be more appropriate. And before proceeding under this section, the Magistrate should hold an inquiry and record the urgency of the matter—Kamini v. Harendra, 38 Cal. 876. Jurisdiction under this section depends on the urgency of the case, and the mere statement of the Magistrate that he considered the danger to be imminent, is not sufficient to give him jurisdiction if the facts set out by him show that really there was no urgent necessity for taking action—Chandra Nath v. E. I. Ry., 23 C.W.N. 145, 19 Cr.L.J. 951. But where the order purports to have been passed as an emergency measure upon a police report, the Magistrate was the sole and the best judge of the emergency which constrained him to pass the order under this section—Abdul Samad, 35 Cr.L.J. 472, 147 I.C. 672, 11 O.W.N. 74, 1934 Cr.C. 257; Jang Bahadur, 25 Cr.L.J. 433, 77 I.C. 721. The record of the Magistrate should disclose the existence of an emergency which called for an ex parte order under this section or that there was no sufficient time to serve notice on the party affected thereby. But a Magistrate ought not to treat a case as a case of emergency merely because some people threaten to commit a breach of the peace, unless he had no sufficient police or other force at his command to prevent an immediate breach of the peace and unless he is further unable to find out the persons threatening to commit a breach of the peace as to bind them over to keep the peace—Venkataramana, 1917

M.W.N. 724, 19 Cr.L.J. 56, 6 M.L.W. 456, 43 I.C. 88, 22 M.L.T. 323. A reasonable connection must be established between the act prohibited and the apprehended danger which, it is feared, will lead to a disturbance of the public tranquillity. The likelihood of such disturbance owing to the act prohibited must be a reasonable and proximate one, and the connection between them must not be speculative or distant. Thus, an order prohibiting the wearing of Gandhi caps is improper, because the connection between the Gandhi caps and the civil disobedience movement which disturbs public tranquillity is only a distant and probable one—Satyanarayana, 60 M.L.J. 378, 1931 Cr.C. 332 (335), A.I.R. 1931 Mad 236, 1930 M.W.N. 841, 3 M.Cr.C. 395, 131 I.C. 449, 33 M.L.W. 632, 32 Cr.L.J. 744, 16 A.I.Cr.R. 361.

The word "annoyance" in this section is not restricted to physical annoyance but includes mental annoyance—Ganesh, 55 Bom. 322, 32 Cr.L.J. 507 (509), 130 I.C. 396, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 135, 33 Bom.L.R. 59, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom 252, 1932 Cr.C. 183

A Subordinate Magistrate passing an order under this section sought to use his own judicial mind on the report of the police, and to come to his own conclusion whether a temporary and urgent order ought to be passed, and should not be guided entirely by the "instructions" issued by the District Magistrate (which are not legally binding on him), though he ought to give due respect to the advice of the District Magistrate—Govinda v. Perumal, 38 Mad. 489 (490).

An order under this section must be based upon proper evidence. In the absence of such evidence, the Magistrate cannot pass an order merely on the complaint of one party—Chandra Kanta, 20 C.W.N. 981, 17 Cr.L.J. 464. But it cannot be laid down as a general proposition that an order under this section cannot be passed without taking evidence—Jagrupa v. Chotey Narain, 37 Cr.L.J. 95 (97), 159 I.C. 455. So also, the Magistrate cannot act upon mere surmise or assumption, or merely on the strength of a Police report without hearing the petitioner or giving him an opportunity of being heard—Bhyroo, 11 W.R. 46; Banu v. Wooma, 21 W.R. 26. A proceeding under this section is a judicial proceeding, and a Magistrate cannot dispose of such a proceeding by examining witnesses behind the back of the parties and on the strength of a local inspection of which he gave no notice to the parties—Govinda Ram v. Basantlal, 7 Pat. 269, 30 Cr.L.J. 302 (304), A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 46.

A Magistrate who is to make an order under this section is not competent to delegate his functions to some other Magistrate; it is, however, competent for him to depute another Magistrate to make an enquiry and submit a report and then to act on the report so submitted after applying his mind to the materials contained therein and coming to his own conclusion as to their sufficiency or otherwise—Sumner v. Jogendra, 34 Cr.L.J. 334, 142 I.C. 319, Ind. Rul. 1933 Cal. 262, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 348, 1933 Cr.C. 420

367. Order—Nature and contents:—

Orders under this section are judicial and not administrative—Belvi, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 325 (326), 33 Bom.L.R. 673, 1931 Cr.C. 581, 32 Cr.L.J. 1144, 134 I.C. 344. See also Muthusami v. Thaugammal, 53 Mad. 320, 58 M.L.J. 148, 31 Cr.L.J. 324, 121 I.C. 833, A.I.R. 1930 Mad 242, 1930 Cr.C. 273, Ind. Rul. 1930 Mad 241, 31 M.L.W. 16, 1930 M.W.N. 82. See Note 382.

(a) The order must be in writing; the words in the section are 'written order'. There must be a written order directed to the accused and duly promulgated, before he can be prosecuted for disobedience of the order—Mul Raj, 1905 P.R. 36. As this section empowers a Magistrate to interfere materially with the liberty of the subject, it is necessary that he should promulgate his order in terms sufficiently clear to enable the public, or persons affected by it, to know exactly what it is which they are prohibited from doing—Sorab v. Shavaksha Balliwala, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 33, 36 Bom.L.R. 1129, 36 Cr.L.J. 547, 154 I.C. 637, 1935 Cr.C. 68, 7 R.B. 359; Thakin Aung Bala v. District Magistrate of Rangoon, 40 Cr.L.J. 645, 182 I.C. 23, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 181, 1939 Rang L.R. 294, 11 R.R. 516.

(b) The order must be an order which is absolute and definite in terms. Section 144, clauses (a) and (b) do not contemplate the passing of a conditional order to be made absolute later on. The order for injunction under sec. 144 must be an absolute and definite order and it must be left to the party to apply for rescinding the order by taking recourse to the procedure laid down in sub-secs. 4 and 5 of the said section. An order in the alternative form, directing a person either to refrain from doing certain acts or to show cause against the order of injunction, does not come within the terms of sec. 144—Emp. v. Bhola Giri Mohunt, 40 C.W.N. 640, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 259, 37 Cr.L.J. 696, 162 I.C. 827, 1936 Cr.C. 486, 63 C.L.J. 137, 8 R.C. 662. But see Balaram Dey v. Pran Ram Chatterjee, 38 Cr.L.J. 915, 170 I.C. 499, 41 C.W.N. 897, 65 C.L.J. 460, I.L.R. (1937) 2 Cal. 475, 10 R.C. 150, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 406.

(c) The order must contain a statement of the "material facts" which the Magistrate considers to be the facts of the case, and upon the footing of which he bases his order—Karoolal v. Shyamlal, 32 Cal. 935, 9 C.W.N. 864; Hafizuddin, 50 All. 414, 28 Cr.L.J. 991 (992), 105 I.C. 815, A.I.R. 1928 All. 14, 26 A.L.J. 83; Motilal, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 513, 33 Bom.L.R. 1178, 134 I.C. 1237, 33 Cr.L.J. 75, 1931 Cr.C. 945. See also Ardeshtir Phirozshaw Murzban, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 42 (43), 41 Bom.L.R. 1253. A mere recital of the fact that in the opinion of the Magistrate there was sufficient ground for proceeding under this section is not enough; the order should state the material facts relating to the case in order to show that there was justification for making the order—Blong, 25 Cr.L.J. 1178, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 767, 82 I.C. 42, 6 P.L.T. 130, 82 I.C. 42, 3 Pat.L.R. 41 (Cr.). The material facts include the circumstances showing why the Magistrate was temporarily unable to prevent a breach of the peace by intending peace-breakers—Venkataramana, 22 M.L.T. 323. Where the order did not state the material facts, it was set aside—Karoolal v. Shyamlal, 32 Cal. 935, 1 C.L.J. 216, 2 Cr. L.J. 215, 9 C.W.N. 864; Govinda Chetty, 27 M.L.J. 628, 14 Cr.L.J. 658; Thakin Aung Bala v. District Magistrate, Rangoon, 40 Cr.L.J. 645 (646), 182 I.C. 23, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 181, 1939 Rang.L.R. 294, 11 R.R. 516.

(d) The order must be specific and definite in its terms. An order that the petitioner should not go to a particular village and should not allow any of his servants or relatives or friends to go there, is of the most indefinite character as to time and person—Golam Md. v. Bhuban, 2 C.W.N. 422. Similarly, an order directing the petitioners not to commit any act which is likely to induce a breach of the peace, and not to take forcible possession of a village not in their possession, is indefinite and bad in law—Bibi Kulsam v. Umatul, 11 C.W.N. 121. When there is reference in the order to customary rule and to customary timings in the matter of taking out tazias the order is quite clear and very definite. It is for the party to find out what the customary rules and timings were if they wished to take out tazias in the procession—Emp. v. Nizam Khan, 35 Cr.L.J. 699, 148 I.C. 518, 11 O.W.N. 384, 9 Luck. 543, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 162. An order prohibiting a person from holding a hat on "next Sunday", with a direction that the order will stand good for 2 months, is meaningless. If an order is not clear and free from ambiguity, it would not be right to prosecute anybody for disobeying it—Ambika v. Benode, 36 C.W.N. 248 (249), 33 Cr.L.J. 518, 137 I.C. 816, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 288, 1932 Cr.C. 214, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 383.

(e) The order must be confined to the particular act for which the danger is apprehended; any order prohibiting a course of conduct or an occupation involving a series of acts done at certain intervals and spread over a period of time (e.g., an order prohibiting inoculation) is illegal and must be set aside—Anonymous, 2 Weir 67. Moreover, the thing which is prohibited must be clearly stated. It is not proper to leave in doubt as to whether the persons are prohibited from doing a thing or not—Ganesh, 55 Bom. 322, 32 Cr.L.J. 507 (509), 130 I.C. 396, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 135, 33 Bom.L.R. 59, 1931 Cr.C. 183, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 252.

(f) The duration of the order must be co-extensive with the emergency, it should not be wider than is necessary to prevent the emergency. The Magistrate cannot issue an order intending to have effect for all time—Muthialu v. Bapun, 2 Mad. 140; In re

Pedda Chari, 2 Weir 74. Thus, the Magistrate is not competent to pass an order directing that all processions should stop music when passing a certain place of worship at any time, when it is not shown that assemblies are held in the place for the purpose of worship at all hours of the day—Muthalu v. Bapun, supra; Pedda Chari, supra; Ramnad v. Kadar, 62 M.L.J. 392, 33 Cr.L.J. 605 (608).

(g) Except where the order is addressed to the public generally under sub-section (3), the persons against whom the order is directed must be specified. An order addressed to "you and any other persons who are or may be concerned in the project" is too vague, because it is impossible to say who are the persons who are or may be concerned in the project—Ganesh, supra.

(h) The terms of the notice must follow the terms of the order in pursuance of which the notice is issued—Abdul Majid v. Nripendra Nath, 35 Cr.L.J. 881, 38 C.W.N. 556.

(i) See Ardeshir Phirozshaw Murzban in Note 369.

368. Service of order:—The order must be served in the manner provided by sec. 134, i.e., served personally. If it is not served personally, and not brought to the notice of the accused, a conviction under sec. 188, I. P. C., for disobedience of the order is illegal—Lakshmidas, 14 Bom 165 (167); Reg v. Sukar, Ratanlal 30. It is not necessary to read the direction as to the mode of service as going absolutely to the validity of the order. The terms of sec. 134 and the notification in the Gazette are directory, and ought to be followed, and that it is irregularity when they are not; but it does not follow that the order is a nullity in consequence. When the order was brought to the actual knowledge of the person sought to be affected by it, it is sufficient to bring the case under sec. 188, I. P. C.—Parbatty, 16 Cal. 9 (12); Abu Hussain Shaikh v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 641 (646), AIR 1940 Cal 358. Even if there has been irregularity in the method of promulgation of the order, that in itself would not make it ultra vires, so as to prevent the conviction of any person who, being proved to have had knowledge of the order, nevertheless disobeyed it—Madan Kishore, AIR 1940 Pat. 446 (447), 21 P.L.T. 231, 187 I.C. 135, 41 Cr.L.J. 414, 1940 P.W.N. 469. It is only if the order cannot be served in the manner provided for service of summons that the publication of a proclamation under sub-sec. (2), sec. 134, may be resorted to—Abdul Jabbar, 36 Cr.L.J. 736, 155 I.C. 416, AIR 1935 Cal 251, 39 C.W.N. 141, 60 C.L.J. 474, 1935 Cr.C. 333.

If a person takes the trouble to go to a Magistrate and gets an order upon another person restraining him from doing something, prima facie it is very unlikely for him not to take steps so that the other person may know of the restraint imposed upon him—Aswini, 32 Cr.L.J. 680, 131 I.C. 271, 53 C.L.J. 64, AIR 1931 Cal 262, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal 447, 1931 Cr.C. 294.

Where the order which was promulgated to the general public was not the formal order which was drawn up by the Magistrate but was merely an inadequate precis of that order which gave no sufficient information with regard to the acts from which the members of the public had been directed to abstain, the service of such a precis would be insufficient for the purpose of enabling the Court to sustain the conviction of the accused persons under sec. 188, I. P. C., for disobedience of that order—Abu Hussain Shaikh v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 641 (646), AIR 1940 Cal 358.

369. Abstain from certain act:—The words 'certain act' mean a definite act. An order directing a person not to collect rents from the ryots generally, without mentioning any particular ryots, is not an order to abstain from a 'certain act'—Abaqeswari v. Sideswari, 16 Cal. 80; Ananda v. Carr Stephen, 19 Cal 127; Prem Chand v. Dharm Das, 9 C.W.N. 392; Prosunna, 8 C.L.R. 231. See also Golam v. Ehuban, 2 C.W.N. 422 and Bibi Kulsum v. Umatul, 9 C.W.N. 392. See also Golam v. Ehuban, 2 C.W.N. 422 and Bibi Kulsum v. Umatul, 11 C.W.N. 121 cited in Note 367 above. But an order directing a person not to interfere with the management of a particular temple or a particular mutt, is a direction to abstain from a 'certain act'.

and is a valid order under this section—Ramanadhan v. Murugappa, 2 Weir 611, 24 Mad. 45; Vanamamalai, 3 Mad 354, 2 Weir 67; Abbi Reddi, 18 Mad 402. So also, an order directing the trustee of a Vaishnavite temple to abstain from interfering with the conduct of Adhyapakam service is an order restraining a person from doing a certain act and is valid—Srinivasathathachariar, 19 Cr.L.J. 933, 47 I.C. 657 (Mad.).

The Magistrate can pass orders requiring the people to abstain from certain acts, i.e., he can pass negative orders; this section does not empower him to pass positive orders requiring people to do particular things, e.g., an order directing a person to remove himself from the district by the next available train—Sasmal, 58 Cal. 1037, 53 C.L.J. 175, 32 Cr.L.J. 592 (593), 130 I.C. 872, 1931 Cr.C. 295, A.I.R. 1931 Cal 263; Thakin Ba Thoung, 35 Cr.L.J. 1300, 151 I.C. 211, 12 Rang 283, 1934 Cr.C. 717, A.I.R. 1934 Rang 124. Under this section a Magistrate is entitled to make a restrictive order preventing the opposite party from doing an act; but the section does not enable him to make a mandatory order directing the opposite party to do some act—Kusum Kumari v. Hem Nalini, 38 C.W.N. 115, 34 Cr.L.J. 1192, 146 I.C. 169, 6 R.C. 181, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 724, 1933 Cr.C. 1274, 63 Cal 11; Satish Chandra v. Lokendra Lal, 39 C.W.N. 1053, 61 C.L.J. 579. Distinguishing the case of Kusum Kumari v. Hem Nalini, supra, it has, however, been laid down that by its very terms sec. 144, Cr. P. C., empowers the Magistrate to direct a person to take certain order with certain property in his possession and the Magistrate has, therefore, jurisdiction to direct a person to cut the bundh erected by him—Balaram Dey v. Pran Ram Chatterjee, 38 Cr.L.J. 915, 170 I.C. 499, 41 C.W.N. 897, 65 C.L.J. 460, I.L.R. (1937) 2 Cal 475, 10 R.C. 150, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 406. This section not only empowers a Magistrate to direct a person to abstain from a certain act but also empowers a Magistrate to direct a person "to take certain order with property in his possession or under his management," if the Magistrate considers that such direction is likely to prevent, or tends to prevent, amongst other things, a disturbance of the public tranquillity. This part of the section clearly empowers a Magistrate to pass a mandatory order on persons in possession of property if it is necessary in the opinion of the Magistrate that such action should be taken for the purposes enumerated in the section—Lachmi Narayan Singh v. Nandkishore Singh, 41 Cr.L.J. 98, 184 I.C. 723, 20 P.L.T. 850, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 57, 6 B.R. 79. But where a person has rightly or wrongly taken possession of the disputed land and has erected boundary pillars and fence round it, it is difficult to understand how a Criminal Court can start a proceeding under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., with a view to dispossess him from the disputed land. No doubt sec. 144, Cr. P. C., gives a Magistrate the power to pass an order to prevent an immediate breach of peace but that section by its terms does not authorize him to pass any mandatory order. All that the Magistrate can do under that section is to direct any person to abstain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management. In other words, the section empowers a Magistrate to pass a restrictive order. The removal of the fence is not an act which the Magistrate is authorized by the section to direct a person to do—Bimala Kanta Bagchi v. Sanat Kumar Ghosh, 40 Cr.L.J. 144, 178 I.C. 945, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 610, 19 P.L.T. 620.

The Magistrate ought to say in precise and definite language what it is that he is directing a person to abstain from doing by the order made under this section and to say that he is to refrain from doing something which a third party does not approve is not an order which complies with this section—Ardeshr Phirozshaw Murzban, A.I.R. 1910 Bom. 42 (44), 41 Bom L.R. 1253.

370. "Take certain order with respect to property":—Property whether moveable or immovable:—It has been held in Goluck Chunder, 12 W.R. 38 that the power conferred by this section refers only to and is restricted to immovable property of the kind set forth in the next Chapter. The Magistrate cannot make an order regarding the custody of money, in respect of which a breach of the peace is likely to take place. See also Ananda v. Carr Stephen, 19 Cal. 127 (129) which lays down that this section relates to interference or dealing of some kind with the land itself or something erected or standing on the land. But there is nothing in the section to justify this view.

Property outside jurisdiction :—No order can be made by a Magistrate under this section when the property in respect of which the order is made is situated outside the local limits of his jurisdiction—Roop Lal v. David, 2 C.W.N. 572.

371. Orders under this section :—The following orders can be lawfully passed by a Magistrate under this section.—

(a) An order prohibiting burials in certain places on sanitary ground—Khaja Bhoj, 2 Weir 64;

(b) An order directing that two rival sects of Muhammadans should enter and worship in a particular mosque only at particular hours—Abdulla, 24 Mad. 262;

(c) An order prohibiting a procession on the ground that the Magistrate would not be able to prevent a breach of the peace with the force at his disposal—Arumuga v. Perumalsuamy, 15 Cr.L.J. 30 (Mad.);

(d) An order that certain persons should abstain from interfering with the Badves in the performance of their daily puja of the god Vithoba, is a valid order, if the Magistrate is of opinion that the interference with the puja is likely to cause annoyance to the worshippers—In re Vasudeo Apaji, 4 Bom L R 582;

(e) An order prohibiting a meeting, if owing to the prevalence of ill-feeling between certain persons likely to attend the meeting, a breach of the peace is to be apprehended—Nga Ts v. Maung Kyaw, 11 Bur L T 59, 18 Cr L J 512, 39 I C 580, 2 U B R. 157;

(f) An order prohibiting slaughter of any cow or bullock within a specified boundary—Abdul Gafur, 27 I C 670, 16 Cr L J 190; see also Shahbaz Khan v. Umrao Puri, 30 All 181 and Note 372 (s) in this connection

(g) An order restraining a person from building a wall—Kusum Kumari v. Hem Nalini, 38 C W N 115, 34 Cr L J 1192, 146 I C. 169, A I R 1933 Cal 724, 1933 Cr C 1274, 63 Cal 18;

(h) An order prohibiting the wearing of Gandhi caps if it has any reasonable connexion with disturbance of the peace or public tranquillity—Satyanarayana, 32 Cr.L.J. 744, 131 I C 449, 1930 M.W.N. 841, A I R 1931 Mad 236, 69 M L J. 378, 33 M L W. 632, 1931 Cr.C. 332, Ind Rul 1931 Mad 513;

(i) An order directing a person to cut the bundh erected by him—Balaram Dey v. Pran Ram Chatterjee, 38 Cr L J 915, 170 I C 499, 41 C.W.N 897, 65 C L J 460, I.L.R. (1937) 2 Cal. 475, 10 R C 150, A I R 1937 Cal 406; Lachmi Narayan Singh v. Nandkishore Singh, 41 Cr L J. 98, 184 I C 723, 20 P L T. 850, 6 B R 79.

372. Improper orders under this section :—A Magistrate is competent to issue an order directing a person to abstain from certain act or to take certain order with certain property; and such an order can be passed under this section, only when the object of the order is to prevent obstruction, annoyance or injury to any person or danger to human life, health or safety, or a disturbance of the public tranquillity or a riot or an affray, and when immediate prevention or speedy remedy is necessary. Therefore, the following orders, not being orders of the above description, are not valid under this section.—

(a) An order directing the ryots to refrain from reaping the crops they have sown, unless they pay the Government rent—Isab, 8 C W N 373

(b) An order stopping the erection of an embankment on the ground that the erection may cause loss to the opposite party—Ram Autar v. Krishnaput, 13 C.W.N. 188, 4 I C. 577.

(c) An order prohibiting a person to excavate a tank in his own land on the apprehension that the house of the opposite party would go down into the bed of the tank—Kamini v. Harendra, 38 Cal 876, 13 Cr L J 126

(d) An order directing the owner of a building which has fallen down on his own land, to re-erect the building—Rahmatulla, 17 All 485, 1895 A W N. 96.

(e) An order that prostitutes who had built huts, should remove their huts, because people visiting them will endanger their lives by having to cross a railway line—In re Direshwar, 2 C.W.N. 70.

(f) An order directing the removal of an embankment whereby adjacent lands are in danger of being flooded—Anon, 5 M.H.C.R App. 19.

(g) An order directing the removal of a dam which obstructs the flood of water through an irrigation channel—Prayag, 9 Cal. 103.

(h) An order regulating boat traffic at a certain landing place on the ground that the over-crowding of boats was dangerous to the health of the residents of the town—Pratap, 25 Cal. 852, 2 C.W.N. 593.

(i) An order passed with the consent of parties, that certain articles with respect to which there was a dispute, should be removed to the custody of the Court—Leong Mow v. Tchung, 12 C.W.N. 1044, 8 Cr.L.J. 230; or an order directing the village Munsiff to take possession of the disputed property—Baganathi v. Velayee, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 88, 17 Cr.L.J. 190.

(j) An order directing that certain persons should continue to live in the haveli in which they were at the date of the order, and that a police guard should keep watch on the outer door, only allowing certain specified persons to enter the haveli—Faizulnissa v. Faiz Md., 1878 P.R. 33.

(k) An order directing a division of crops between two rival landlords—Umatal v. Nemai, 32 Cal. 154.

(l) An order forbidding people of either party to read prayers in a mosque, on account of an apprehension of a breach of the peace (there being at the time an ill-feeling between the parties regarding the management of the mosque) is illegal—Haji Md. Ismail v. Barkat Ali, 26 C.W.N. 904, 24 Cr.L.J. 154, 71 I.C. 506.

(m) An order directing a party to dig a channel—Subramania Iyer, 15 Cr.L.J. 291, 22 I.C. 499.

(n) An order to fill up an excavation—Kusum Kumari v. Hem Nalini, 38 C.W.N. 115, 146 I.C. 169, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 724, 1933 Cr.C. 1274, 34 Cr.L.J. 192, 63 Cal. 1, 6 R.C. 181.

(o) An order to remove a jetty which had been already completed—Satish Chandra v. Lokendra Lal, 39 C.W.N. 1053, 61 C.L.J. 579.

(p) An order which prohibited from putting up national flags in private houses—Sriramamurti, 32 Cr.L.J. 763, 60 M.L.J. 370, 1931 Cr.C. 362, 131 I.C. 649, 1930 M.W.N. 819, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 242, 33 M.L.W. 640, Ind. Rul. Mad. 553.

(q) An order forbidding a person who claimed an interest in certain properties from collecting any rent from the rayats on the properties—Abayeswari v. Sidheswari, 16 Cal. 80; Ananda v. Carr Stephen, 19 Cal. 127; Prem Chand v. Dharam Das, 9 C.W.N. 392.

(r) An order directing a person to remove the fence erected on a plot of land in his possession—Bimala Kanta Bagchi v. Sanat Kumar Ghosh, 40 Cr.L.J. 144, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 610, 178 I.C. 945, 19 P.L.T. 620.

(s) An order which is addressed to the general public and is to the effect that nobody shall sacrifice a cow within a radius of a mile from certain villages—Babu v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 228 (230), A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 241, 1940 O.L.R. 43, 185 I.C. 745, 1940 O.W.N. 118. See also Note 371 (f) in this connection.

(t) An order prohibiting a person from collecting rents from tenants on certain lands—Prem Chand v. Dharamdas, 9 C.W.N. 392. See Note 369.

Order partly valid and partly invalid :—If part of an order is bad as being vague, it does not make the whole order bad, if the other portion is clearly separable. If a prohibition is directed against A and certain other persons, and the order against those persons is illegal, it may nevertheless be valid as against A—Ganesh, 55 Bom. 322, 33 Bom.L.R. 59, 32 Cr.L.J. 507 (510).

373. Orders regarding hats or markets :—A Magistrate may direct one of the two rival hat-holders to change the day of his hat, so as not to interfere with the days of the hat of the other proprietor, if the Magistrate is of opinion that the holding of two hats on the same day will lead to a breach of the peace—Abbas Ali v. Ilm Meah, 14 W.R. 46; or he may direct that one of two rival hat-holders should not hold his hat on the same day as another—Bykuntha, 18 W.R. 47; Nagendra v. Rakhal Das, 23 C.W.N. 141, 20 Cr.L.J. 113, 49 I.C. 97; Parameshwar, 3 P.L.T. 268; or where a new hat is established within half a mile of an old one, the Magistrate may order the new hat-holder to abstain from holding his hat on certain days—Mitterjeet v. Raj Kumar, 18 W.R. 22. But the Magistrate cannot direct one of the two hat-holders to hold his hat on particular days, e.g., Saturdays and Tuesdays only, for though the section empowers the Magistrate to make an order prohibiting a person from holding his hat on certain specified days (viz., the days on which the rival hat is held), the law does not empower him to direct that hats shall be held only on certain days, leaving the party no option to hold his hat on some other days on which his rival does not hold his hat—Shyamanand, 31 Cal. 990, 8 C.W.N. 781. See also Ambika v. Benode in Note 367.

A general order prohibiting the holding of hats for an indefinite period is illegal—Bidhu Ranjan v. Ramesh, 11 C.W.N. 223, 5 Cr.L.J. 43; Parameshwar, 3 P.L.T. 268. An order prohibiting certain persons from establishing a hat at certain places, and giving a vague direction not to interfere in any way with the trade of another hat, is improper—Satish Chandra, 11 C.W.N. 79, 4 Cr.L.J. 433. The most appropriate section in cases like this is sec 107, Cr. P. C., by which a Magistrate may bind down parties for a length of time—Ibid.

The right to hold a hat is a man's lawful right and he has the right to establish the hat in the place and on the days most advantageous to him (Sheeo Chunder v. Suddut Ally, 4 W.R. 12) provided that no breach of the peace is caused by any dispute between two hat-holders. Therefore, an order of a Magistrate directing that one of the two rival hat-holders should not hold his hat opposite to that of the other but should hold it a mile away is illegal, because such an order would render the hat of no use to him—Shurut Chunder v. Bama Churn, 4 C.L.R. 410. A general order prohibiting a person absolutely from holding a hat within an extensive area is illegal, for a person is entitled to exercise all rights of ownership on his property, and the holding of a hat on one's own property is not a wrongful act—Banwari v. Pranab Krishna, 26 C.W.N. 663, 35 C.L.J. 397, 24 Cr.L.J. 164, 71 I.C. 516, A.I.R. 1922 Cal 569; Saligram v. Baijnath, 35 Cr.L.J. 1057, 150 I.C. 118, 14 P.L.T. 740, A.I.R. 1934 Pat 104, 1934 Cr.C. 198, Rakhal Das, 19 C.W.N. 248, 13 Cr.L.J. 511, 15 I.C. 655.

An order can be passed under this section only on the grounds specified in the section, viz., on grounds of apprehended danger, etc. Thus, an order to close a hat can be passed on the ground that it was very near to another hat, and a breach of the peace was apprehended—Bholanath v. Komuruddin, 20 W.R. 53. Thus, where the owner of a market forcibly dragged vendors to the market and otherwise molested the public by conducting passers-by into the market with the object of making them buy there instead of in the adjacent bazar, held that the Magistrate was justified in prohibiting the owner from holding the market for a certain period—Ram Gopal v. Narayandas, 55 Cal 1077, 32 C.W.N. 613, 29 Cr.L.J. 423 (425), A.I.R. 1928 Cal 446. But an order prohibiting a party from holding a hat on a particular day cannot be passed merely on the ground that another party had long been used to hold a hat on the adjacent land on the following day—Bance Madhab v. Wooma Nath, 21 W.R. 26. Even where there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace, the likelihood must be imminent; a Magistrate cannot restrain the holding of a hat merely because there is already a hat existing, and the ulterior consequence of holding the new hat may be a breach of the peace—Rakhal Das, 19 C.W.N. 248, 13 Cr.L.J. 511, 15 I.C. 655. See also Ambika v. Benode in Note 367. If disturbance is anticipated, the proper procedure would be to act under sec 107—Benowari v. Pranab Krishna, 26 C.W.N. 663, 35 C.L.J. 397, 24 Cr.L.J. 164, 71 I.C. 516, A.I.R. 1922 Cal 569; Bidhu Ranjan v. Ramesh, 11 C.W.N. 223, 5 Cr.L.J. 43; Satish, 11 C.W.N. 79; Saligram v. Baijnath, 35 Cr.L.J. 1057, 150 I.C.

118, 14 P.L.T. 740, A.I.R. 1934 Cr.C. 198; Hanstraj v. Abdul Jabbar, 36 Cr.L.J. 1268, 157 I.C. 760, 16 P.L.T. 624, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 461. It is now settled law that a Magistrate, as an emergency measure, has power to stop, by an order under this section, the holding of a hat, or the exercise of his rights by a man on his own land. But a man, who holds a hat on his own land, is perfectly entitled to do so and that by itself is not a wrongful act. Competition in trade, unless illegal methods are adopted, is not a wrongful act. When a rival business is started in close proximity to a previously established business the person interested in the latter is bound to object to the former and some sort of strained feeling is inevitable. This by itself is no ground for restraining the newcomer from carrying his trade unless he is doing or is likely to do any wrongful act which may lead to a breach of the peace. In such a case the best course is to prohibit the doing of the wrongful act or if necessary, to bind down the wrong-doer under sec 107, Cr. P. C. But an order more or less of a permanent nature is not justified under this section which is meant for speedy remedy—Rama Barik v. Emp, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 185 (186), 41 Cr.L.J. 463, 187 I.C. 511, 1939 P.W.N. 616. See also Saligram v. Baijnath, supra.

When a person sold goods at the hat simply as a trader he could not be prosecuted for disobedience of an order under this section forbidding holding the hat; inasmuch as the words "holding the hat" in the order were used in the sense of holding as owner or manager and not as buyers or sellers—Parbutty, 16 Cal 9 (13).

In Bengal there is no such thing as a market franchise or the right to hold a market conferred by grant from the Crown, nor can such right be acquired by prescription, and the proprietor of an old hat therefore has no monopoly or privilege which is entitled to protection and no immunity from competition—Sumner v. Jogendra, 34 Cr.L.J. 334, 142 I.C. 319, Ind. Rul. 1933 Cal. 262, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 348, 1933 Cr.C. 420.

It is open to a Magistrate to make the order in such terms as holding a hat at or near a place in order that it may not be possible for the party against whom such an order is made to evade the terms of the order by removing the hat, the holding of which is sought to be prevented, to a short distance; at the same time it is perfectly clear that before a notice containing such terms is issued, there must be a proper determination of the question as regards the limits within which the order is to be operative. But where the notice that was issued was couched in terms wider than the terms of the order itself, it becomes illegal—Abdul Majid v. Nripendra Nath, 35 Cr.L.J. 881, 38 C.W.N. 556, 148 I.C. 773, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 393, 1934 Cr.C. 534, 6 R.C. 480. See also Abu Hussain Shaikh v. Emp., 44 C.W.N. 641.

373A. Processions with music:—It is, on the one hand, a right recognized by law that an assembly lawfully engaged in the performance of a religious worship or religious ceremonies shall not be disturbed. It is, on the other hand, a right recognized by law that persons may, for a lawful purpose, whether civil or religious, use a common highway by parading it attended by music, so that they do not obstruct the use of it by other persons. If persons passing in procession attended by music pass a place in which others are assembled and engaged in public worship which the music would tend to disturb, it is the duty of the persons composing the procession to refrain from such disturbance; but assemblies for purposes of worship are held scarcely in any place at all hours and generally at appointed hours, and therefore it is unnecessary that there should be a rule that persons should not at any time pass along a high road in the neighbourhood of a recognized place of worship, if attended by music. If indeed the procession be of a religious character, the prohibition of it may be as real an interference with the free exercise of religion as in allowing it to proceed past an assembly engaged in worship attended with such circumstances as to disturb that worship, and if no religious procession is to be allowed to pass a recognised place of worship, whether persons are or are not at the time there assembled and engaged in religious worship, the members of a numerous sect might close every high way to the processions of a sect to which they are opposed by erecting in the neighbourhood of each highway a place of worship—Muthiala Chetti v. Bapun Saib, 2 Mad. 140. The first duty of Government is the preservation of life and property, and, to secure this end, power is conferred on its officers to interfere with even the ordinary rights of members of the community. There is a distinction between rights which have a primary and rights which have a secondary claim to such protection as the Government can afford; and where the Government cannot protect both classes of rights, it may and it ought to abandon the latter to secure the former. In this view, it matters not whether the exercise of the rights of procession is of ancient usage or a novelty; the Government is not bound to deprive some members of the community of the services of the force that is found necessary for the protection of their lives and property to enable others to exercise a right which not only is not indispensable to life or to the security of property, but, creates an excitement which endangers both. In affording special protection to persons assembled for religious worship or religious ceremonies, the law points to congregational rather than private worship, and it may fairly be required of congregations that they should inform the authorities of the hours at which they customarily assemble for worship, in order that the rights of other persons may not be unduly curtailed. An order, prohibiting a private householder from hearing music in his house at any hour of the day or night throughout the year, because the house was adjacent to a place of religious worship, illustrates the intolerance an indiscreet Magistrate may countenance—Sundram, 6 Mad 203 (FB). The right to conduct religious processions in the public streets is a right inherent in every person provided he does not thereby invade the rights of property enjoyed by others, or cause a public nuisance or interfere with the ordinary use of the streets by the public, and subject to such directions or prohibitions as may be issued by the Magistrate to prevent obstructions to the thoroughfare or breaches of the public peace. Every member of the public, and every sect, has a right to use the public streets in a lawful manner, and it lies on those who would restrain him in its exercise to show some law or custom having the force of law depriving him of the privilege—Sadagopachariar v. Rama Rao, 26 Mad 376. Persons of whatever sect are entitled to conduct religious processions through public streets so that they do not interfere with the ordinary use of such streets by the public and subject to such directions as the Magistrates may lawfully give to prevent obstructions of the thoroughfare or breaches of the public peace—Saiyid Manzur Hasan v. Saiyid Muhammad Zaman, 86 IC. 236, AIR 1925 PC 36, 52 IA 61, 47 All 151, 48 MLJ. 23, 21 MLW 239, 6 PLT 115, 23 ALJ. 179, 27 Bom LR 170, 2 O.W.N 53, 29 C.W.N 486, 3 Pat LR. 300 (P.C.), following Parthasaradi Ayyangar v. Chimna Krishna Ayyangar, 5 Mad 304 (309); Jafar Husain v. Pearey Lal, 36 Cr.LJ 955, 156 IC 595, AIR. 1935 All 575. There can be no doubt that the Adi-Dravidas have a civil right to take a procession along all public streets, just as any other persons may have; whereas the caste residents have no right at all to object. Ordinarily those responsible for law and order should see that persons exercising their rights have the support of the police and the magistracy but cases do of course arise where in the interest of public peace, persons should be prevented from exercising their rights. If the Adi-Dravidas for example are anxious to conduct the procession, not to honour Sri Thiruvalluvar but in order to irritate and annoy the caste residents of the streets, then the Magistrate would be justified in placing some restraint upon their processions; but unless the Magistrate is satisfied that the Adi-Dravidas had no bona fide desire to do honour to the saint he should not pass an order under sec 144, Cr. P C, unless he is quite satisfied that there is no other means within his power of preventing a breach of the peace. The fact that the Adi-Dravidas have been exercising restricted rights in the past was rightly taken into account, but it is not in itself a sufficient ground for refusing them protection in the exercise of their full rights—Shanmuga Pandaram v. K Ponnuswami Iyer, 39 Cr.LJ 886, 177 IC 436, AIR 1938 Mad. 714, 47 MLW 441, 1938 MWN 606, (1938) 2 MLJ 160, 11 RM 326.

The District Magistrate is undoubtedly the person who is to look after the peace of his district and naturally in cases of sudden emergency it may be necessary to restrict a person from exercising a perfectly lawful right. But it should not be necessary to prevent that person not only in a particular occasion in the near future but for all time from exercising that right because it would be too much trouble to render him adequate protection against persons who intend to disobey the law. Any interruption of the procession by the Muhammadans so long as it is conducted in accordance with the decree of the Civil Court, which the Hindus obtained, is undoubtedly an infraction of the law and for the Government to state that they are not prepared to prevent the infraction of the law and to restrain law-breakers from interfering with lawful rights is practically to abdicate all authority. Orders under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., are certainly not intended to be used as a means of depriving the citizens of lawful rights which have been declared by competent Courts. Those who obstruct may have, if necessary, to be bound over to keep the peace or it may be necessary to introduce armed force to compel them to do so—Venkata Subrayya v. Muhammad Falaiddin, 28 Cr.L.J. 509, 101 I.C. 893, 52 M.L.J. 651, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 611, 8 A.I.Cr.R. 146. But even when the Hindus obtained from a competent Civil Court a declaration of their right to conduct processions subject to certain limitation, it is not the duty of the authorities who are responsible for the preservation of the public peace to enforce the decree in all circumstances and at all costs—Viswanatha Rao, 30 Cr.L.J. 31, 112 I.C. 853, 1928 M.W.N. 615, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 1049, 55 M.L.J. 442, 28 M.L.W. 406, 51 Mad. 1006, Ind. Rul. 1929 Mad. 71 (F.B.). See also Pir Gul Hassan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Sind 230 (233), I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 751, 183 I.C. 641, 12 R.S. 67, 40 Cr.L.J. 823.

An absolute prohibition of all processions in all streets, secular and religious, without even fixing any time limit during day or night is prima facie unreasonable, and if such orders are passed repeatedly without making any sort of enquiry as to the relative rights of the parties, it would be clutching at a more extensive jurisdiction by issuing a permanent injunction restraining the parties from taking processions for a pretty long time and such a course is an indirect evasion by the Magistracy of the law as laid down in sec. 144, Cr. P. C.—Ramnad v. Kadar, 33 Cr.L.J. 605, 138 I.C. 354, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 294, 62 M.L.J. 392, 1932 M.W.N. 144, 35 M.L.W. 366, 1932 Cr.C. 280, Ind. Rul. 1932 Mad. 566.

When a Magistrate has made an order under the Cr. P. Code forbidding a person or body of persons from using a highway for the purposes of processions, such an order invests the person or persons interdicted with a cause of action if they allege it to be an infringement of their legal rights, though such order be in itself ultra vires and no special damage be alleged or proved. Similarly, a person or body of persons who claim a right to go in procession along a public highway can bring a declaratory suit to establish that right against a person who threatens to obstruct it without allegation or proof of special damage—Velan Pakkiri Taragan v. Subbayan Samban, 42 Mad. 271 (F.B.). This is also the view of the Calcutta High Court—Mohamed Abdul Hafiz v. Latif Hossain, 24 Cal. 524. Their Lordships of the Privy Council upheld this view in preference to the contrary view expressed by the Bombay High Court in 2 Bom. 457, 18 Bom. 693 and 34 Bom. 571; Saiyid Manzur Hasan v. Saiyid Muhammad Zaman, 29 C.W.N. 486, 86 I.C. 236, A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 36, 52 I.A. 61, 47 All. 151, 48 M.L.J. 23, 21 M.L.W. 239, 6 P.L.T. 115, 23 A.L.J. 179, 27 Bom.L.R. 170, 2 O.W.N. 53, 3 Pat.L.R. 300 (P.C.).

373B. Public Speech:—Every man has a right to express his opinions in public and in general he should be entitled to the support of the Police and Magistracy in the expression of those opinions. Provided that these opinions are made with a genuine desire to convince people and not to irritate them, he ought not to be muzzled merely because those who dislike these opinions threaten opposition. Where interference with the right to speak is expected, the opponents should ordinarily be prohibited from interfering and not the reformers from speaking. Occasions do, however, arise when in the interest of peace private rights have to be encroached upon by those responsible for public order. The Police cannot always have a number of men posted wherever persons are expressing opinions which may call upon them to the wrath of the people among whom they are speaking. This is particularly the case during elections, when public meetings are many and when feelings run high. Where some persons were not prohibited from expressing their opinions altogether but were told only that they should not do so within a furlong of a temple near which a number of orthodox Brahmins live, it is impossible to say that there was no justification at all for the Sub-Magistrate's order. He is in the best position to know how far it is necessary to interfere with the lawful rights of a person or body of persons to express their opinions. As long as a Magistrate bears in mind the fact that normally the Police should protect persons who are exercising their rights, even though the exercise of those rights might be objected to by others, the High Court will not be ready to interfere in revision—R. S. Srikantha Iyer, 38 Cr L.J. 582, 1937 M Cr C. 48, 1937 M.W.N. 56, 45 M.L.W. 249, 168 I.C. 720, 9 R.M. 625, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 311. Every citizen has a right to ventilate his grievances either in public or in private and ask for redress. This right should not be curtailed so long as it is exercised in a lawful manner. It is an illegal assumption of power to issue an order under this section on a pretended apprehension of the danger of the breach of the public peace. The principle on which Magistrates should act in exercising the power under sec 144, Cr P C., is correctly laid down in Sumner v. Jogendra, supra (Note 364). Thakin Aung Bala v District Magistrate, Rangoon, 40 Cr L.J. 645 (646), 182 I.C. 23, A.I.R. 1939 Rang 181, 1939 Rang L.R. 294, 11 R.R. 516.

373C. Liberty of the Press:—Prima facie, in a country which enjoys liberty of the press a person is entitled in his newspaper to publish any news, and make any comments, which he chooses, provided that he does not infringe any provision of law. A Magistrate acting under this section may no doubt restrict that liberty. But he should only do so if the facts clearly make such restriction necessary in the public interest, and he should not impose any restriction which goes beyond the requirements of the case—Ardeshir Phirozshaw Murzban, A.I.R. 1940 Bom 42 (43), 41 Bom.L.R. 1253, 41 Cr L.J. 319 (321), 186 I.C. 477.

373D. Effect of order under this section:—An order under this section restraining a certain person from going upon the land of another, should not be treated as a substantive evidence of possession of the latter, in a case of rioting which subsequently takes place in respect of the possession of the land. No importance should be attached to a temporary injunction under this section which is intended only for emergencies. Having regard to the peculiar jurisdiction conferred by this section, no inference can be drawn from it as to the possession of either party—Gita Prasad, 5 P.L.T. 656, 25 Cr L.J. 919, A.I.R. 1925 Pat 17, 81 I.C. 535, 3 Pat L.R. 27 (Cr.).

In an order under this section the observation as regards possession of a particular party, is simply an incidental observation in order to enable the Magistrate to make an order under this section. The observation cannot have the force of an order under sec 145, Cr. P C., and is, therefore, of no use in determining the question of actual possession, if the question arises in a subsequent proceeding—Munni Lal v Gatti, 26 Cr L.J. 1229 (1231), 88 I.C. 845, 6 P.L.T. 746, A.I.R. 1925 Pat 514; Jagernath v Ramjas, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 584, 146 I.C. 557, 1933 Cr.C. 1345, 35 Cr L.J. 88. For the effect of an order under this section in a subsequent proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., see Kishori Lal v Srinath, 36 Cal. 370 (372), 13 C.W.N. 530, 1 I.C. 817, 9 Cr L.J. 399. The orders under this section can only refer to a point of time when they were passed and assuming that what was stated therein on the question of possession, was anything more than the opinion of the Courts which passed those orders, those orders cannot show who came to be in possession when the statutory period during which these orders remained operative was at an end—Rani Shashi Mukhi v. Sarat Chandra, 31 C.W.N. 310 (312). See also Saddique v Mohid, 32 Cr L.J. 208, 129 I.C. 85, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 556, 1930 Cr.C. 1110, Ind Rul 1931 Pat 69 and Jayanti v Middleton, 27 Cal 785, 4 C.W.N. 562. Any expression of opinion on the question of possession in favour of one party or the other under sec 144, Cr P. C., is not of a permanent nature. Such an order is passed in summary proceedings and cannot affect the real rights of the parties on the question of possession—Sri Bhagwat Lal v. Bachu Pandey, 41 Cr.L.J. 384, AIR 1940 Pat. 364, 186 I.C. 806 An order under section 144, Cr. P. C., does not establish possession—Udit Narayan Patwari, 39 Cr.L.J. 778 (780), 176 I.C. 715, AIR 1938 Pat. 369, 19 P.L.T. 336, 1938 P.W.N. 542, 4 B.R. 750, 11 R.P. 100. Orders in proceedings under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., cannot, of course, be taken as decisive of the rights of either of the parties, but the nature of the proceeding and its conclusion may be referred to when the history of the property is in question—Jamuna Singh v. Zulmi Singh, 39 Cr.L.J. 721, 176 I.C. 260, 4 B.R. 690, 11 R.P. 77, AIR 1938 Pat. 455; Jainuddin Ahmad Sheikh v. Kari Kant Doss, 1938 P.W.N. 390 Although the order under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., may not be taken for the purpose of establishing the complainant's possession, it is relevant for the purpose of testing the bona fides of the accused's claim—Ramkishun Agarwalla v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 361 (362), AIR 1938 Pat. 131. Such an order decides nothing about the respective rights of the parties and may be no more than an interference with private rights required in a temporary emergency—F. E. Chrestien v. Carter, AIR 1939 Pat. 512, 20 P.L.T. 374, 1939 P.W.N. 402, 40 Cr.L.J. 895, 184 I.C. 240, 6 B.R. 30, 12 R.P. 232. See also Vattahara, S. J. v. Reverend Koshi, infra.

The order of the District Magistrate under sec. 144 (4), Cr. P. C., rescinding an order of injunction under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., cannot properly be treated as a license to commit criminal trespass; still less as a license to riot—Bachu Singh, 40 Cr.L.J. 337 (338), AIR 1939 Pat. 314.

On a petition presented under sec. 145 (4), Cr. P. C., an order is passed which really does not purport to be passed under sec. 145 or 144, Cr. P. C., and does not in fact purport to be an order passed in the exercise of any jurisdiction conferred on the Magistrate by any section of the Cr. P. Code or any other provision of law. The Magistrate did not decide as a matter of fact whether the dispute was likely to lead to a breach of the peace or a disturbance of public tranquillity. This essential preliminary has not been found to exist and in this state of affairs his order must be deemed to be an order having no legal force, and any expression of opinion contained therein must be deemed to be void of legal force or effect. There is no order which requires to be formally set aside or modified in revision, the order complained of being one which has really no legal force or effect—Vattathara, S. J. v. Reverend Koshi, 38 Cr.L.J. 892, 170 I.C. 390, 45 M.L.W. 473, 1937 M.W.N. 637, 10 R.M. 198, AIR 1937 Mad. 494, 1937 M.Cr.C. 180.

374. Order contrary to Civil Court decree:—The Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order the effect of which would be to interfere with the orders of a Civil Court—In re Rahmatulla, 17 All 486; Umatul v. Nemai, 32 Cal. 154. It is the duty of the Criminal Court to respect the opinions of the Civil Courts, and no order contrary to that of the Civil Court should be passed by a Magistrate under this section when the Civil Court has passed an order of temporary injunction against one party—Murari v. Aiyasami, 1922 M.W.N. 612, AIR 1933 Mad. 15, 69 I.C. 369, 23 Cr.L.J. 689. Where the landlords of a certain share in an estate had obtained a decree in a Civil Court for arrears of rent and for ejectment of their tenants, and also obtained possession under the decree, but the Magistrate at the instance of the tenants passed an order prohibiting the landlords from interfering with the possession of the tenants as the landlords were unable to point out the particular lands of which they had obtained possession under the decree, held that the order was illegal, being contrary to the Civil Court decree, as its effect would be to deprive the landlords of the lands to which they were entitled under the decree; held further that it was on the tenants to show what lands they held from the landlords—Gobinda Sahai v. Sims, 6 C.W.N. 466. Where a person purchasing some property at a sale in execution of a mortgage-decree is put in possession of the same, a Magistrate is not competent under this section to order the purchaser or any of his subordinates to refrain from entering upon the lands and the properties—Roop Lal v. David Manook, 2 C.W.N. 572. See also Abdul Lal, 28 C.W.N. 732.

It is the duty of the Criminal Court to give all the help provided by law to the man who has been put in possession of a property by the Civil Court. It would be illegal for a Magistrate to start a proceeding under sec. 145, to try and decide the question of possession between the auction-purchaser, who was given possession of the property by the Civil Court a few days before, and the judgment-debtor who was ousted from it. It is his duty to recognize the delivery of possession given by the Civil Court, give effect to it and forbid any interference with such possession by the judgment-debtor under this section—Mahabir, AIR 1934 Pat. 565 (569), 36 Cr.L.J. 146, 152 I.C. 591, 15 P.L.T. 819, 1934 Cr.C. 1218

375. Question of title:—A Magistrate acting under this section has no business to adjudicate upon rights and has no jurisdiction to decide upon any question of title or possession; the only question before him is whether a breach of the peace is imminent and to make an order with the object of preventing a breach of the peace—Appala Narasimhulu v. Mahant, 11 M.L.J. 122. In recording an order under this section, the Magistrate should not go beyond the necessities of the case and come to a certain conclusion with regard to the rights of the parties—Joint Agents v. Chandra Ketu, 34 Cr.L.J. 717, 144 I.C. 228, AIR 1933 Pat. 185, 1933 Cr.C. 516, 14 P.L.T. 379, Ind. Rul. 1933 Pat. 221. Therefore, a Magistrate's order directing the petitioner to take certain idols into the house of a certain person on the ground that the latter is entitled to them according to long usage, is illegal—Kamal v. Jatindra, 8 C.W.N. 376. The propriety of an order whereby the Magistrate assumes the function of the Civil Court and makes an order which practically amounts to an order of ejectment on grounds of title, may certainly be questioned though he may be technically justified by the fact that he records his apprehension of a breach of the peace—Chhakan Ram v. Raghunath Ram, 36 Cr.L.J. 474, AIR 1935 Pat. 145, 154 I.C. 184

376. Notice to file statements:—This section does not authorise a Magistrate to issue notice upon the parties for filing written statements before the Court on a fixed date. The issue of such a notice under this section is beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. Such a notice being in effect a notice contemplated by section 145 (1), although professedly issued under sec. 144, the High Court in revision ordered the Magistrate to convert the proceedings under sec. 144 into proceedings under Chapter XII, and to complete the proceedings by following the procedure prescribed by Chapter XII—Kaniz Amina, 3 P.L.J. 243, 19 Cr.L.J. 869

377. Sections 144, 145—Dispute relating to immoveable property:—Section 144 is a larger and more general section than sec. 145. An order under sec. 144 can be made under various circumstances including a danger of a breach of the peace arising from disputes as regards possession, sec. 145 is of limited scope and applies only where there is a danger of a breach of the peace due to such dispute. The former section is discretionary, the latter is mandatory. Therefore, where the special condition of sec. 145 is fulfilled, sec. 144 yields to sec. 145, so that when the Magistrate finds that there is a real dispute tending to a breach of the peace, he is bound to institute a proceeding under sec. 145, irrespective of any order that he might have originally made under section 144—Sheobalak v. Kamaruddin, 2 Pat. 94 (107), 3 P.L.T. 573, 23 Cr.L.J. 549, 68 I.C. 419, AIR. 1922 Pat. 435 (F.B.); Govind Ram v. Basantlal, AIR 1929 Pat. 46 (48), 7 Pat. 269, 30 Cr.L.J. 302, 114 I.C. 466, 11 P.L.T. 134; Viru Kamu v. Dewandas Jhamandas, AIR 1940 Sind 158. Section 144 is intended for cases requiring an "immediate prevention or speedy remedy". Section 145 is an ordinary measure of precaution when breach of the peace is "likely"—Agni Kumar v. Mantazaddin, 30 Cr.L.J. 69 (76), 56 Cal. 290, 32 C.W.N. 1173, AIR 1928 Cal. 610, 113 I.C. 181, 48 C.L.J. 193 (F.B.). It cannot be said that in every case of dispute regarding land, sec. 144 is inappropriate, and proceedings ought to be had under sec. 107 or sec. 145, Cr.P.C. A Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order under sec. 144 in a case where one party not in good faith is merely setting up a pretence of claim and not a bona fide dispute, but it cannot be considered to be a good practice habitually to prejudice without evidence, both the merits of the dispute and the question whether it is bona fide. Magistrates are entrusted with wide powers to enable them to discharge their important duty of providing for the prevention of a breach of the peace, but such powers are not intended to be habitually used for the settling of disputed points which call for a decision on evidence—Jāgrupa v. Chotey, 37 Cr.L.J. 95 (97), 159 I.C. 455.

Where there is a dispute regarding possession of immoveable property between the rival parties, and a breach of the peace is likely to ensue, the proper procedure to be adopted by the Magistrate is to pass an order in a proceeding under sec. 145 deciding the question of possession on evidence, and not an order in a proceeding under this section—Parkar v. Ram Khalawan, 11 C.W.N. 271; Kaniz Amina, 3 P.L.J. 243, 74 I.C. 65, A.I.R. 1918 Pat. 663, 19 Cr.L.J. 869, 4 P.L.W. 354; Inderdeo v. Durga Prasad, 37 Cr.L.J. 378, 160 I.C. 945, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 59, 17 P.L.T. 22, 1936 Cr.C. 83; Gobinda v. Basanti Lal, 7 Pat. 269, 30 Cr.L.J. 302 (304); Tarapada, 1 P.L.T. 72, 55 I.C. 193, 21 Cr.L.J. 241; Bimala Kanta Bagchi v. Sanat Kumar Ghosh, 40 Cr.L.J. 144, 178 I.C. 945, 19 P.L.T. 620, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 610. If there is a dispute regarding possession of land likely to cause a breach of the peace, and requiring a definite decision regarding the possession of land, the normal procedure for the Magistrate to follow is that laid down in sec. 145, Cr. P. C., unless the claim of one party is on the face of it a mere pretence so that it can be said that there is no real dispute. Though a Magistrate's power under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., are very wide the Court must deprecate the habitual and unjustifiable use of sec. 144, Cr. P. C., as a substitute for secs. 107 and 145, Cr. P. C.—Damon Gope v. Het Narain Singh, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 382, 1940 P.W.N. 49. By adopting a procedure under sec. 145, in such a case, the Magistrate puts himself in a position to effectively and conclusively settle the dispute between the parties. Otherwise the dispute might still exist at the end of two months—Jayanti, 27 Cal. 785 (787, 788), 4 C.W.N. 62; Tarapada, supra; Bhairo, infra; Jhaman v. Thakuri, 1 P.L.T. 369, 21 Cr.L.J. 625, 57 I.C. 445; Viru Kamu v. Dewandas Jhamandas, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 158. Section 144 applies only where possession is either undisputed or clear beyond any shadow of doubt; but where possession relating to immoveable property is disputed, the proper procedure is to take proceedings under sec. 145 which will permanently settle the dispute so far as the Criminal Courts are concerned—Bhairo, 57 I.C. 662, 1 P.L.T. 377, 21 Cr.L.J. 646; Kishori v. Anand, 31 Cr.L.J. 1005, 126 I.C. 293, 10 P.L.T. 862, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 162, 1930 Cr.C. 258; Latifan v. Md. Ibrahim, 28 Cr.L.J. 1039, 106 I.C. 233; Gouri Dutt v. Gobind, 1 P.L.T. 44, 20 Cr.L.J. 829, 53 I.C. 829; Tarapada, supra; Madan v. Ful Chand, 2 P.L.T. 484, 22 Cr.L.J. 685. This section ought not to be utilised in a dispute regarding the possession of land except against a party whose claim is made in good faith. The correct standpoint from which to view the propriety of order under this section is that of the Magistrate at the time when he passed it and in the light of the materials then before him. The Court will not be acute or critical in respect of them. An order which was proper when made, may at any later date appear in the light of further events or further materials unnecessary and it will then be rescinded from the date at which it so appears—Radha v. Jairman, 31 Cr.L.J. 466, 123 I.C. 73, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 714, 1929 Cr.C. 586.

Section 144 is of general application, and contains nothing which ousts the Magistrate's jurisdiction in case of a bona fide dispute as to possession of land. Therefore, where sec. 107 or 145 will meet with the requirements of the case, sec. 144 is not an appropriate remedy, and if it is found that the danger is not so imminent and that it can be otherwise averted, an order under sec. 144 will be without jurisdiction—Sheobalak v. Kamaruddin, 2 Pat. 94, 3 P.L.T. 573, 23 Cr.L.J. 549 (F.B.); Munni Lal v. Gatti, 6 P.L.T. 746, 26 Cr.L.J. 1229, 88 I.C. 815, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 514. See Damon Gope v. Het Narain Singh, supra.

The hands of the executive should not be tied by the Courts when they have been deliberately left free by the Legislature. On the practical side also it would be manifestly oppressive to subject an unoffending citizen in possession to the harassment now attendant on proceedings under sec. 145, whether an opponent who is merely attempting to secure possession or is otherwise advancing a thin and untenable claim to possession, is or feigns to be about to occasion a breach of the peace. When a Magistrate finds on the materials before him that there is no bona fide dispute as to actual possession but one party is merely trying to get into possession of property which is held by another, he may take action under this section—Lachman Das v. Ramchhabila, 30 Cr.L.J. 510, 115 I.C. 683, 10 P.L.T. 542, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 415, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 235.

It is only where there is a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning any land or water or boundaries thereof and the dispute requires to be decided on evidence that resort to sec. 145, Cr. P. C., becomes necessary; and it must be remembered that for this purpose the dispute has to be a real dispute and not a mere pretence on behalf of one of the contesting parties. The judicial pronouncements are clear that where there is no such real dispute, orders under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., are not improper. There may even be occasions where an order is first appropriately passed under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., and the proceeding is afterwards converted into one under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., in order to pass an even more appropriate and permanent order. But where there was not a bona fide dispute about possession at all and what had happened was that while B was continuing in his possession R was trying to take it by means R called peaceable but which appeared to the Police and the Magistrate to be very likely to lead to breach of the peace, it was not obligatory on the Magistrate to drop the proceeding under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., and to act under sec. 145 Cr. P. C.—Bhuneshwar Prasad v. Rommoy Roy, 41 Cr L J 417, A I R 1940 Pat. 492, 187 I.C. 139, 1940 P.W.N. 461. In the case of bona fide disputes with regard to possession of land the proper method of dealing with the dispute is by a proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., and not by a proceeding under sec. 144, Cr. P. Code—Bhikkali Tewary v. Achaibar Koer, 41 Cr L J 451, 187 I.C. 349, 21 P.L.T. 326, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 471, 1940 P.W.N. 465.

Though where there is a bona fide dispute of possession between the parties, the Magistrate ought to proceed under sec. 145 and not under sec. 144, the High Court will not interfere with the order under sec. 144 after it has spent its force by reason of the expiry of the two months to which its effect is confined—Jagernath v. Ramjas, 35 Cr.L.J. 88, 146 I.C. 557, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 584, 1933 Cr.C. 1345. See also Bhuneshwar Prasad v. Rommoy Roy, supra.

The use of sec. 144 is a suitable method of avoiding a breach of the peace, only if it is clear that the claim of the party creating the disturbance is not a claim made in good faith—Kaniz Amina, 3 P.L.J. 143, 47 I.C. 65, 4 P.L.W. 354, 19 Cr.L.J. 869. Where it is clear upon the materials before the Magistrate that one of the parties is in possession, and that another person whose claim to possession is a mere pretence, is threatening to interfere with that possession, the Magistrate is bound to maintain the party in possession, and forbid the party who is not in possession by a summary order under sec. 144, if immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable. Sometimes it may even be necessary to take action against the party who is actually in possession; but in every case it must be shown that the conditions required by sec. 144 exist. What the Court deprecates is the habitual and unjustified use of sec. 144 as a substitute for sections 107 and 145—Per Mullick, J., in Sheobalak v. Kamaruddin, 2 Pat. 94 (101) 23 Cr.L.J. 549 (F.B.); Ahmed Ali v. Sahed, 33 C.W.N. 858, 30 Cr.L.J. 1027 (1029). If on the expiry of the injunction under sec. 144, there is any further apprehension of a breach of the peace, the appropriate procedure would be to take proceedings under sec. 145 (but not under sec. 107)—Abinash v. Lokenath, 19 Cr.L.J. 367, 44 I.C. 591 (Cal.). See also Note 234 under sec. 107.

The subsistence of an order under sec. 144 does not take away the power of the Court to take proceedings under sec. 145. Therefore, where in a dispute between the trustees of a temple as to the possession and management of the temple and its properties, an order under sec. 144 was passed, and during the subsistence of that order proceedings under sec. 145 were initiated, and pending final orders the properties were attached and a Receiver was appointed, held that the procedure was not illegal—Gopala v. Krishna-sudamy, 27 M.L.T. 234, 21 Cr.L.J. 73, 54 I.C. 473, 11 M.L.W. 459. Where a person simply wants to enforce his right the Criminal Courts ought not to lend him their aid under this section. Therefore, no order should be passed against a trustee in possession under this section on the application of a person who claims to be the trustee appointed by the Madras Hindu Religious Endowment Board—Vythialinga v. Ramanuja, 30 Cr.L.J. 1010, 119 I.C. 166, A.I.R. 1929 Mad 845, Ind. Rul 1929 Mad. 918. So also, when proceedings are initiated under sec. 144 with respect to land, the possession with regard to which is honestly disputed, the Magistrate would be acting properly in converting the proceedings into those under sec. 145, and making an order under the latter section—Nandkishore v. Bikan Singh, 3 P.L.T. 570, 65 I.C. 856, 23 Cr.L.J. 200; Sheobalak v. Kamaruddin, 2 Pat. 94, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 435, 3 P.L.T. 573, 23 Cr.L.J. 549, 68 I.C. 419 (F.B.) (per Jwala Prasad, J.); Gobind Ram v. Basantilal, A.I.R. 1929 Pat 46 (48), 7 Pat. 269, 30 Cr.L.J. 302, 114 I.C. 466, 11 P.L.T. 134.

It is true that where one party who is clearly in the wrong threatens to disturb the rights of another who is in actual possession of the land, the provisions of sec. 145 have no application. The proper course when there is a real dispute regarding land is to proceed under sec. 145, since otherwise the effect might be to bind down one of the parties to the dispute, without any adjudication on the question as to which of the two parties is in possession. Where there is a real dispute as to the possession of immoveable property, it will be necessary before proceedings under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., can be properly instituted against any party, to ascertain which of the parties to the dispute is in possession of the land, which can more conveniently be done by proceedings under sec. 145—Saddique v. Mohid, 32 Cr.L.J. 208, 129 I.C. 85, A.I.R. 1930 Pat 556, 1930 Cr.C. 1110 following Shama Charan, 90 I.C. 442, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 610, 26 Cr.L.J. 1562, 6 P.L.T. 766. Where the dispute is with regard to the possession of immoveable property a proceeding under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., is a poor substitute for a proceeding under sec. 145 which settles once for all so far as the Criminal Courts are concerned, the question of possession with regard to a particular piece of immoveable property—Puran v. Ramjhari, 36 Cr.L.J. 655, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 224, 1935 Cr.C. 618, 155 I.C. 88. See also Inderdeo v. Durga Prasad, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 59.

It is always enough that the Magistrate adopts any proper method to meet the emergency if there happen to be several methods to choose from; his choice is not to be considered in the light of the fact that at a later stage when the emergency can be viewed on a different basis, another method may be adjudged to have been a more proper or the most or rather the most satisfactory method in the circumstances—Harihar v. Upendra, 35 Cr.L.J. 1009, 149 I.C. 959, 13 Pat. 76, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 308, 1934 Cr.C. 729.

378. Clause (2)—Ex parte order:—An ex parte order can be made only in cases of emergency—Joyanti v. Middleton, 4 C.W.N. 562, 27 Cal. 785; Jokhu, 8 All. 99; Mahammadi Molla, 2 C.W.N. 747; Abdul Majid v. Nripendra Nath, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 393 (395), 35 Cr.L.J. 881, 38 C.W.N. 556, 148 I.C. 773, 1934 Cr.C. 534, 6 R.C. 480; or in cases where the circumstances do not admit of the serving in due time of a notice upon the person against whom the order is directed—Abdul Majid v. Nripendra Nath, supra. Ordinarily, in proceedings under this section, notice should be issued upon the person against whom the order is made, and an opportunity afforded to him to show cause why it should not be passed—Tirunarasinha, 19 Mad 18; Muhammadi Molla, 2 C.W.N. 747.

In case of ex parte orders, the record of the Magistrate should disclose the existence of emergency which called for such ex parte orders and should show that there was no sufficient time to serve notice on the party affected thereby—Venkataramana, 22 M.L.T. 323, 19 Cr.L.J. 56, 1917 M.W.N. 724, 6 M.L.W. 456, 43 I.C. 88. The record of the Magistrate should indicate with reasonable fullness the materials on which he concluded that there was an emergency to justify the passing of the ex-parte order—Ibid.

See Ramnad v. Kader in Note 380A.

379. Clause (3)—Order to whom to be addressed:—This sub-section has nothing to do with the nature of the order, but is merely one of the four sub-sections which refer to the manner of promulgation and to the duration of an order under sub-section (1)—Madan Kishore, 41 Cr L J 414, 187 I.C. 135, 21 P L T 231. See also Abdul Karim Shorash, infra. Where a Magistrate issued a proclamation forbidding the cultivators of a certain place to spread night-soil on their fields so as to cause disease, it was held that the order was ultra vires and not within the scope of this section, because the order issued by the Magistrate was not directed to the “public generally” but was directed to a portion of the community—Jokhu, 8 All 99 (101). The words “public generally” are not restricted to the corporate body pursuing its public avocations but also means the whole number of individuals who in the circumstances cannot be particularly addressed. The proper interpretation of this section is that the order may be directed to a particular individual, but when owing to the number of particular individuals, it is impracticable for the Magistrate to address each of them individually, an order under this section may be issued to the whole number of particular individuals designated as the “public generally”; and such order will have the same effect as a separate order served upon each particular individual, provided, of course, that it has been so promulgated that it has come to his knowledge. Therefore, a general order to the effect that no person should sacrifice or cause to be sacrificed any cow or bullock within a certain specified boundary and period, is a legal order—Abdul Gaffur, 18 O C 70, 16 Cr L J 190, 27 I C 670 (671).

“When frequenting or visiting a particular place” —The plain meaning of sub-sec. (3), read in the light of sub-sec. (1), is that, in the circumstances set forth in sub-sec. (1), a Magistrate may not only direct an individual to abstain from a certain act or acts but may also issue a similar direction to members of the public generally, provided in the latter case the prohibition is limited to occasions on which the members of the public may frequent or visit a particular place. In other words, it would not be legal to issue a general prohibition to the public to abstain from a certain act but an order to the public generally to abstain from a certain act on the occasions when they happened to visit a particular place would be valid. The language is also sufficiently wide to cover residents in a particular locality but, in either case, it is, of course, essential that the place covered by the order and also the act prohibited should be described with reasonable precision, whether such place be an entire district or a particular street in a town and whatever the nature of the prohibited act may be. The law does not contemplate the prohibition of the frequenting or visiting of the “particular place” to which reference is made in sub-sec (3) but the prohibition of some act on an occasion on which such place is frequented or visited. It would not, therefore, be reasonable to suppose that it could have been the intention of the Legislature to empower a Magistrate by means of an order under sec 144, Cr P C, to restrain the movements of the members of the public before they had occasion to frequent or visit the district over which he had jurisdiction by forbidding them to frequent or visit the district at all. Subject to the above-mentioned qualification, sec. 144, Cr. P C., gives a Magistrate full power to restrain the activities of the public within his jurisdiction by issuing orders of a general nature—Abu Hussain Shaikh v Emp, 44 CWN 611 (645), AIR 1910 Cal 358, following Nagendra v Rakhal Das, 23 CWN 141 and Niharendu Dutt Majumdar v Emp, AIR. 1939 Cal 703, 43 CWN 1061, (1939) 2 Cal. 507, 184 I C 856 and distinguishing Ashutosh v Haris, 29 CWN 411 and Abdul Majid v Nripendra Nath, 35 Cr L J 881, 38 CWN 556, 148 I C 773, 6 R.C. 480, AIR 1934 Cal 393, 1934 CrC 534. The order may be directed either to a particular person, or to the public generally; but it can be directed to the public generally only when frequenting or visiting a particular place, such for instance, as a market or a park or other place within a specified boundary. There is no power to direct the public generally simpliciter—Motilal, 33 Bom.L.R. 1178, 1931 Cr.C. 954, 134 I.C. 1237, Ind Rul. 1932 Bom 21, A.I.R. 1931 Bom 513, 33 Cr.L.J. 75; Belvi, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 456, 33 Bom.L.R. 673, 32 Cr.L.J. 1144, 134 I.C. 344, 1931 Cr.C. 581, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 325; Ponnappa Aiyangar v. Venamamalai Ramanuja Jeer, A.I.R. 1920 Mad 847, 53 I.C. 483, 20 Cr.L.J. 755. Where, owing to the prevalence of cholera, the District Magistrate issued a notification in the form of a proclamation forbidding the inhabitants of a city to give caste-dinners, it was held that the order not being directed to a particular person nor to the public when frequenting a particular place, but to persons attending caste-feasts which are held in private houses, was illegal—Lakshmidas, 14 Bom. 165 (167). The Magistrate has no power to issue an order under this section to the general public prohibiting the printing or publication or circulation of false and alarmist reports, statements or rumours, which have the effect of promoting communal tension and causing fear and alarm to the public, by any written word, in newspapers or in leaflets, or by any other means as no order can be issued to the public generally except when "frequenting or visiting a particular place". This is a clear limitation placed by the law upon the power given to the Magistrate to issue an order to the general public under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., and any order which ignores this limitation must be held to be bad in law—Sat Narain v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 All 746, 41 Cr.L.J. 121, 185 I.C. 172, 1939 A.L.J. 1061, I.L.R. 1939 All. 934, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 711, 1939 A.Cr.C. 169. Similarly, an order directing all persons in Surat City to abstain from interfering with the destruction of dogs is ultra vires, as the Magistrate has power only to direct an order to a particular individual or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place—Bhagubhai, 16 Bom.L.R. 684, 16 Cr.L.J. 98, 27 I.C. 146, A.I.R. 1914 Bom 198. The Calcutta High Court likewise holds that an order which directs the public in general to abstain from attending hat is illegal, since it is not until the public attend the hat that the order can be binding on them. The order can only be issued to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place—Asutosh v. Harish, 29 C.W.N. 411, 26 Cr.L.J. 874, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 625, 86 I.C. 810; Abdul Majid v. Nripendra Nath, 35 Cr.L.J. 881, 38 C.W.N. 556, A.I.R. 1934 Cal 393, 1934 Cr.C. 534, 148 I.C. 773. The words "frequenting ... place" are intended to extend rather than to limit the scope of the order, and mean not only casual or frequent visitors from outside the limits of the locality, but include the residents of the locality as well—Abdul Gafur, 18 O.C. 70, 16 Cr.L.J. 190, 27 I.C. 670 (672), A.I.R. 1915 Oudh 188. Sub-section (3) of sec. 144, Cr. P. C., has nothing to do with the nature of the order but is one of four sub-sections which refer to the manner of promulgation and to the duration of an order under sub-sec. (1). When, because of the number of persons to be directed, it is impracticable for the Magistrate to issue notice to each individual he can issue an order to the public generally, including, besides residents, persons who may frequent or visit a particular place and such order will be effective against each individual to whose knowledge it has come—Abdul Karim Shorash, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 80, 17 Lah. 515, 38 P.L.R. 964, 167 I.C. 284, 38 Cr.L.J. 354.

An order directed to the public when frequenting public or private streets in a particular city, is sufficiently definite as to comply with the requirements of this section. People can have no real difficulty in recognising when they are in the streets of a particular town, and it is only when in that situation that people are forbidden to organise or take part in processions—Sarab, A.I.R. 1935 Bom 33, 36 Bom.L.R. 1129, 36 Cr.L.J. 547, 154 I.C. 637, 1935 Cr.C. 68, 7 R.B. 359.

The word "public" means a place whether publicly or privately owned, which at the time when the order is passed the public frequent or visit, as, highways or places of public resort, or private houses in which public meetings are held. Therefore, an order prohibiting the residents of a town hoisting national flags is illegal under this section, because the Magistrate has no authority to prevent private persons from hoisting flags in their private houses which are not frequented or visited by the public—Sriramamurthy, 131 I.C. 649, 1930 M.W.N. 849, A.I.R. 1931 Mad 242, 33 M.L.W.

640, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 553, 60 M.L.J. 370, 1931 Cr.C. 362 (365), 32 Cr.L.J. 763. The scope of an order passed under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., against the public generally is narrower than that passed against an individual and served personally on him. Although the word "public" has not been used with the expression "particular place" still the law intends not only that the particular place should be specified but also that it should be a place which is frequented or visited by the public—Babu v. Emp, 41 Cr.L.J. 228 (230), A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 241, 1940 O.L.R. 43, 185 I.C. 745, 1940 O.W.N. 118. Moreover, the place must be a "particular" place, i.e., a definite or specified place; an order prohibiting a procession within the whole of the municipal limits of a town and all public places within such limits, or in all the streets of a city, is illegal—Motilal, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 513, 134 I.C. 1237, 33 Cr.L.J. 75, 33 Bom.L.R. 1178, 1931 Cr.C. 945 (946); Belvi, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 325, 1931 Cr.C. 581, 134 I.C. 344, 33 Bom.L.R. 673, 32 Cr.L.J. 1144. The words "particular place" should not be confined to a restricted area but should be construed as meaning a well-defined area regarding the boundaries of which the public can be in no doubt. It is necessary that the operation of orders under this section should be kept within the narrowest possible limits, and that the place or locality to which they are applied, should be so clearly defined as to enable the public to know at once what the prohibited area is to obviate the possibility of the people disobeying the order through ignorance of the place to which it is applied—Vasant B. Khale, 152 I.C. 701, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 375, A.I.R. 1934 Cr.C. 1212, 36 Bom.L.R. 753, 36 Cr.L.J. 130, 59 Bom. 27; Qamar-ud-din, 36 Cr.L.J. 951, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 679, 156 I.C. 526, 37 P.L.R. 515. The fact that the order forbade meetings in so large a place as the Lahore District did not make the order illegal although it might have made the order difficult to enforce for one reason or another—Abdul Karim Shorash, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 80, 17 Lah. 515, 38 P.L.R. 964, 167 I.C. 284, 38 Cr.L.J. 354. No distinction should be drawn between a particular place and an area. An order under this section addressed to the public forbidding them to hold meeting in any area within a subdivision is a definite order and it does not contravene the provisions of this section. It is necessary to distinguish carefully between the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to make an order and a possible practical difficulty in showing that it has been disobeyed. It does not follow that because it is difficult for the Crown to secure a conviction, that the order itself was made without jurisdiction—Niharendu Dutt Majumdar v. Emp, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 703, 43 C.W.N. 1061, (1939) 2 Cal. 507, 184 I.C. 856. There is no reason why the limits of the Union Committee, if clearly and specifically defined, should not be considered as describing a particular place—Madan Kishore, 41 Cr.L.J. 414 (416), 187 I.C. 135, 21 P.L.T. 231, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 446, 1940 P.W.N. 469. The expression "a particular place" appears to be sufficiently wide to include the whole district over which a Magistrate may have jurisdiction—Abu Hussain Shaikh v. Emp, 44 C.W.N. 641 (645), A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 358, following Abdul Karim Shorash, supra.

380. Clause (4)—Rescinding or altering an order:—When an ex parte order is made it is clear from the provision of this clause that a party aggrieved might appear before the Magistrate who had made the order ex parte and ask him to rescind or alter the order and cl (5) of this section says that where such an application is received the Magistrate shall afford to the applicant an early opportunity of appearing before him, whether in person or by a pleader, and showing cause against the order—Abdul Majid v. Nripendra Nath, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 393 (395), 35 Cr.L.J. 881, 38 C.W.N. 556, 148 I.C. 773, 1934 Cr.C. 534, 6 R.C. 480. A Magistrate who passed an order under this section, without taking evidence, can afterwards cancel the order, if after hearing the evidence he finds that there is no reason to apprehend a breach of the peace—Mohun Sardar v. Obhoy, 13 W.R. 72. Application for rescinding or modifying ex parte orders under this section should be disposed of as quickly as possible, but it is not illegal to put off an inquiry for a reasonable time within two months—Satish, 11 C.W.N. 79, 4 Cr.L.J. 433; Surendra v. Gostha Behari, 37 C.W.N. 962. It is not proper for a Magistrate to pass an ex parte order under this section and when its propriety or legality is challenged to postpone the hearing of the matter from time to time until about the termination of the force of the order. Such matters ought to be disposed of quickly in order to avoid unnecessarily encroaching on the civil rights and liberties of the subject—Banwari v. Prabban Krishna, 26 C.W.N. 663, 35 C.L.J. 397, 24 Cr.L.J. 164, 71 I.C. 516, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 569. See also Mooka Pandaram v. Sinnu Muthiriyar, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 167 (169), 38 Cr.L.J. 125, 166 I.C. 77, 1936 M.W.N. 1089, 44 M.L.W. 686, 71 M.L.J. 761, I.L.R. 1937 Mad. 171, 9 R.M. 328.

An order passed under this section by a Joint Magistrate, while acting as a District Magistrate, can be rescinded or altered, after his reversion to the post of Joint Magistrate by the next District Magistrate, and the latter cannot transfer an application for rescission or alteration to the former—Sudarsanam v. Srinivasachari, 16 Cr.L.J. 74 (Mad.). But see Kusum Kumari v. Hem Nalini, 38 C.W.N. 115 quoted in para 380A. The jurisdiction conferred by sec. 144 (4), Cr. P. C., is neither appellate nor revisional, and that jurisdiction is a special one that can be exercised only if the actual terms of the section are strictly satisfied. Therefore, a Magistrate, who ceased to be in charge of a sub-division, has no power to rescind or alter the order made by a Magistrate subordinate to the Sub-divisional Magistrate though the matter was properly before him on transfer before he became functus officio. It is clear from sec. 530 (1), Cr. P. C., that when any Magistrate not empowered by law issues an order under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., his proceedings shall be void. This observation applies with equal force to a case like this—Serugan Chettiar v. Karuppan Chettiar, 38 Cr.L.J. 864, 1937 M.W.N. 210, 45 M.L.W. 367, 170 I.C. 193, 10 R.M. 152, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 487.

The District Magistrate can rescind or alter an order of a subordinate Magistrate not only on the ground that having regard to circumstances which had happened since the passing of the order, the reason for its having been passed does no longer exist so that an alteration or rescission of the order is necessary as a corollary, but he can also (sitting as it were in appeal or revision) reverse the order of the subordinate Magistrate on the ground that it never ought to have been made—Sheobalak v. Kamaruddin, 2 Pat. 94 (F.B.), 3 P.L.T. 573, 23 Cr.L.J. 549 (overruling Cheddi Lal v. Mahabir, 2 P.L.T. 650, 23 Cr.L.J. 27). It is within the competence of the District Magistrate to rescind any order under this section if the order is wrong and he may also do so when he finds that the order is not required for immediate prevention of a breach of the peace—Manu Khan v. Sundar Singh, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 313, 15 P.L.T. 216. The Madras High Court holds that the jurisdiction conferred by this clause upon a Magistrate to rescind or alter an order made by himself or by any subordinate Magistrate or a predecessor, is neither an appellate nor revisional jurisdiction, but is a special jurisdiction conferred by the statute. Therefore, sec. 439 (5) does not bar a revision petition to the High Court. But the High Court should not encourage direct applications for revision when there is some Magistrate who can alter or rescind the order—Pitchai v. Md Atham, 63 M.L.J. 594, 33 Cr.L.J. 826 (827), 139 I.C. 773, 1932 M.W.N. 726, 36 M.L.W. 461, 56 Mad. 149, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 720.

A District Magistrate in cancelling an order of the subordinate Magistrate is not competent to substitute an order of his own in the nature of an innovation. Thus, where in a case of dispute as regards immoveable property, the subordinate Magistrate started a proceeding under this section, and considering the claims of the second party to be a mere pretence, passed an order against such second party, but the District Magistrate under clause (4) cancelled the Sub-Magistrate's order and substituted an order of his own, prohibiting the first party from cutting crops, it was held that the order of the District Magistrate was in the nature of an innovation and therefore without jurisdiction and must be set aside—Ganpat, 3 P.L.T. 287, 19 Cr.L.J. 880, 47 I.C. 76, 4 P.L.W. 357. See also Ramkrishna v. Qamr-ud-Din, 29 Cr.L.J. 478, 109 I.C. 126. While it is open to the superior Magistrate to alter the order, he cannot alter the party to be affected by the order. Where a Subordinate Magistrate allows a certain party to perform a certain festival on a certain day, it cannot be prohibited by the superior Magistrate on an application by another party under sec. 144 (4).

Cr. P. C., or, where a Subordinate Magistrate prohibits one party from doing a certain act, the superior Magistrate cannot under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., prohibit the opposite party from doing that act. Jurisdiction is given to him by this sub-section only to alter or rescind the order by which the petitioners before him are said to be aggrieved, and he may remove altogether the grievance complained of or reduce its extent as it were, but he cannot make a new order which would constitute a fresh grievance to a party not before him—Serugan Chettiar v. Karuppan Chettiar, 38 Cr.L.J. 864, 1937 M.W.N. 210, 45 M.L.W. 367, 170 I.C. 193, 10 R.M. 152, A.I.R. 1937 Mad 487; Ramaswami Aiyangar v. Ramaswami Patrachar, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 509, 1938 M.W.N. 974; Panchkhesar Kuar v. Madho Singh, 1938 P.W.N. 709, 19 P.L.T. 796

Although a District Magistrate may rescind or alter an order made by a subordinate Magistrate, still he cannot direct the subordinate Magistrate to initiate proceedings under section 145 instead of under sec. 144; because it is the subordinate Magistrate who has to satisfy himself by the exercise of his own independent judgment and upon proper materials as to the existence of a reasonable apprehension of danger, and the District Magistrate acts illegally in interfering with the discretion by directing him to substitute proceedings under sec. 145 in place of proceedings under sec. 144—Kailash v. Kunja Bihari, 24 Cal 391, 1 C.W.N. 393; Tilok Rai, 2 P.L.T. 392, 71 I.C. 785; Cheddil Lal v. Mahabir, 2 P.L.T. 650, 23 Cr.L.J. 27; Kedar Nath v. Bijoy, 33 C.W.N. 723, 1929 Cr.C. 385, A.I.R. 1939 Cal 751. If the District Magistrate is of opinion that proceedings under sec. 144 had been wrongly drawn up and that the right course would be to take action under sec. 145, the proper course for the District Magistrate would be to make a reference to the High Court under sec. 438—Kedar Nath v. Bijoy, supra.

It is open to a superior Magistrate to rescind or alter an order passed by a Subordinate Magistrate, even though the Subordinate Magistrate has himself passed an order on a petition to rescind or alter the order—R. S. Srikanta Iyer, 38 Cr.L.J. 582, 168 I.C. 720, 1937 M.W.N. 56, 45 M.L.W. 249, 9 R.M. 625, A.I.R. 1937 Mad 311, 1937 M.Cr.C. 48. When an order was passed under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., by a Magistrate subordinate to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, the power of the District Magistrate to entertain an application under sub-sec. (4) of sec. 144 is not lost by reason of the fact that the Sub-divisional Magistrate, who is subordinate to him, had already dealt with an application made under that sub-section to him. But he has no power to suspend the order, pending the hearing of such an application. He cannot also exercise a power of transfer in a case of this kind—Mooka Pandaram v. Sinnu Muthuriyan, 38 Cr.L.J. 125 (126), 166 I.C. 77, 1936 M.W.N. 1089, 44 M.L.W. 686, 1936 M.Cr.C. 307, 71 M.L.J. 761, A.I.R. 1937 Mad 167, 11 R.M. 1937 Mad 171, 9 R.M. 328. See also 16 Cr.L.J. 74, 26 I.C. 661. But even assuming that there is no power of transfer, the order of transfer cannot be regarded as void and cannot be set aside merely on that ground in view of sec. 529 (f), Cr. P. C., and also of sec. 531 of the same Code—Serugan Chettiar v. Karuppan Chettiar, 38 Cr.L.J. 864, 1937 M.W.N. 210, 45 M.L.W. 367, 170 I.C. 193, 10 R.M. 152, A.I.R. 1937 Mad 487.

Notice :—This section permits any authority which has the power to rescind or alter an order to do so after hearing only the party who applies for it and thus hearing can be completed without delay, and there is no particular reason why there should be a stay or suspension before such hearing. It is not a case in which the other side has to be given notice and has to be heard. In all these cases under this section it is really the liberty of the subject that is affected by the original order and though this interference might be made by the Magistrate at the instance of or when moved by some private individual the superior authority can always rescind or alter the order without hearing the person at whose instance the original order was passed, the only limitation on his power being that he should hear the party who applies for rescission or alteration before declining to do so—Mooka Pandaram v. Sinnu Muthuriyan, supra.

Evidence :—The order under this clause is judicial and the Magistrate must keep an open mind and record not necessarily the whole but at least a reasonable portion of the evidence essential for the judicial determination of the objections rather than say that his opinion could not be changed by any such evidence and refuse to record any evidence—Belvi, 32 Cr.L.J. 1144, 134 I.C. 344, 33 Bom.L.R. 673, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 325, 1931 Cr.C. 581, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 456. When an ex parte order is called in question under this clause, the normal procedure should be for evidence to be recorded in the usual way by examination and cross-examination of witnesses in open Court—Satyanarayan, 32 Cr.L.J. 744, 131 I.C. 449, 1930 M.W.N. 841, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 236, 60 M.L.J. 378, 33 M.L.W. 632, 1931 Cr.C. 332, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 513. See also 7 Pat. 269 quoted in para 366.

Intermediate order :—Except orders contemplated by sub-section (4) (i.e., orders of rescission or alteration) no other intermediate order can be made while an order under sec. 144 is still in force. When the High Court has issued a rule in any case, it takes full seisin of the case, and it is the High Court alone that can pass ad interim orders in the case. The Magistrate against whose order the rule is issued has no such jurisdiction—Satish Chandra, 11 C.W.N. 79. See also Mooka Panduram v. Sinnu Muthuriyan, supra and Pitchai v. Md. Attham in Note 382.

Revival of order :—When a Magistrate set aside his order and struck the case off the file, he had no power to revive it without a fresh proceeding—Bradley v. Jameson, 8 Cal. 580.

380A. Sub-section (5) :—The provision of this sub-section is mandatory. Where, therefore, without giving an opportunity to the applicant to support his application, the District Magistrate dismissed it summarily, the order cannot stand—Thakin Aung Bala v. District Magistrate, Rangoon, 40 Cr.L.J. 645 (647), 182 I.C. 23, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 181, 1939 Rang.L.R. 294, 11 R.R. 516.

In view of the provisions of sub-sections (4) and (5) it can be stated that the function of the Magistrate does not stop with the passing of the ex parte order, under sub-section (1), but it is his duty to give an early opportunity to any person aggrieved by that order to appear and show cause against it, in order to see whether such order has to be rescinded or altered. For such a purpose, he has to consider whether the claims advanced by one or other of the parties are within or in excess of their natural rights and whether any alterations or restrictions to the order already passed are reasonably necessary, in order to obviate undue hardship to any of the parties, and to see that protection is given to the persons who act within the bounds of their legal and natural rights without being molested by the breakers of law—Ramnad v. Kader, 62 M.L.J. 392, 33 Cr.L.J. 605 (607), 138 I.C. 354, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 294, 1932 M.W.N. 144, 35 M.L.W. 366, 1932 Cr.C. 280, 5 M Cr.C. 102. See also Abdul Majid v. Nripendra Nath and Mooka Pandaram v. Sinnu Muthuriyan in Note 380.

If a Magistrate had power to make an order under cl (1) of this section he has also power to make an order under cl (4), even if he had ceased to exercise the power under cl. (1) in the meantime—Kusum Kumari v. Hem Nalini, 38 C.W.N. 115.

381. Clause (6)—Duration of order :—The period of sixty days begins to run from the date on which notices are issued—Puran v. Ramjhari, 36 Cr.L.J. 655, 1935 Cr.C. 618, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 224, 155 I.C. 88; not from the date when it was made absolute—Thomson, 13 C.W.N. 195, 11 Cr.L.J. 12, 4 I.C. 590. See also Bhuneswar Prasad v. Rommoy Roy, 41 Cr.L.J. 417 (419), A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 492, 187 I.C. 139, 1940 P.W.N. 474. An order under this section is temporary and is to remain in force for only two months. An order for perpetual injunction passed under this section is beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate—Shcodin, 10 All. 115; Bradley v. Jameson, 8 Cal 580; Gopi Mohun v. Taramoni, 5 Cal 7; In re Meyyaru Ammal, 1914 M.W.N. 169, 15 Cr.L.J. 145; Remjit v. Luchman, 7 C.W.N. 140. Thus, an order prohibiting a landlord from ever holding kats on his land on certain days is illegal—Gopi Mohun v. Taramoni, 5 Cal. 7. So also, an order that a certain person should abstain from taking any part in the management till another is duly evicted from management, is ultra vires—Ramanadhan v. Murugappa, 24 Mad 45; so also, an order that no rents should be collected from the tenants by their contending landlords until their rights have been established by a Civil Court—Prosonna, 8 C.L.R. 231; or an order directing a party not to interfere with the land without the order of a competent Court—Remjit v. Luchman, 7 C.W.N. 140

Non-specification of time :—An order under this section is not bad merely because it does not state that its operation is confined to two months or some shorter period. Under this sub-section, it will be presumed, in the absence of anything to the contrary, that the direction of the order is limited to the full period of two months—Ram Nath, 24 Cal. 897, 6 C.L.J. 186, 11 C.W.N. 942, 6 Cr.L.J. 194; Ponnappa v. Vanamamalai, 1919 M.W.N. 872, 53 I.C. 483, 10 M.L.W. 480, 20 Cr.L.J. 755. In another case the Madras High Court has held that an order which is indefinite as to time is to that extent without jurisdiction—Muthukumaraswami v. Md. Rowther, 42 M.L.J. 352, 23 Cr.L.J. 401.

Extension of time by successive orders :—A Magistrate cannot by passing successive orders, extend the operation of this section beyond the time limit prescribed by this section—Satish, 11 C.W.N. 79, Bisseswar, 17 Cr.L.J. 200, 20 C.W.N. 758, 24 C.L.J. 272, 34 I.C. 312; Ram Gopal v. Narayandas, 32 C.W.N. 613 (615), 55 Cal. 1077, 47 C.L.J. 452; Gouri Dutt v. Govind, 1 P.L.T. 44, 20 Cr.L.J. 829; Murari v. Ayyasami, 1922 M.W.N. 612, 23 Cr.L.J. 689, 69 I.C. 369, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 15. If there is really a very serious danger of a breach of the peace he can take action under section 107—Rash Behari v. Jagnarain, 3 P.L.J. 130, 19 Cr.L.J. 365, 44 I.C. 589; Ganesh v. Nader Ali, 13 C.W.N. cclxviii. But he cannot, under the shelter of this section, assume a jurisdiction to prohibit persons by a permanent injunction, by arbitrary and successive renewals of orders under this section—Govinda v. Perumal, 38 Mad. 489, 16 Cr.L.J. 629, 30 I.C. 453; Ramnad v. Kader, 62 M.L.J. 392, 33 Cr.L.J. 605 (608); Remjit v. Luchman, 7 C.W.N. 140. The Magistrate cannot extend the time by repeating or confirming the original order—Thompson, 13 C.W.N. 195 (196), 11 Cr.L.J. 12, 4 I.C. 590. Nor can the period be extended by drawing up the same order once more and merely adding a large number of persons to whom it is directed. Such a proceeding is an attempt to evade the provisions of this clause and is illegal—Ashutosh v. Hans Chandra, 29 C.W.N. 411, 26 Cr.L.J. 874, 86 I.C. 810, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 625. See also Inderdeo v. Durga Prasad, 37 Cr.L.J. 378, 160 I.C. 915, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 59, 17 P.L.T. 22, 1936 Cr.C. 83. See also Vedappan v. Perman, 30 Cr.L.J. 119, 113 I.C. 279, 52 Mad. 69, 55 M.L.J. 621, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1108, 28 M.L.W. 506, 1928 M.W.N. 779.

It is not open to a Magistrate by passing repeated orders under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., to avoid the decision of a dispute which may be appropriately dealt with under sec. 145 or sec. 107, Cr. P. C. The power given by sec. 141 is essentially an emergent power which has sometimes to be passed in disregard of private rights. An order of that kind cannot possibly be allowed by repetition to spell more or less permanent interference with private rights. To repeat such an order on the ground of maintaining the status quo is to compel the unsuccessful party to resort to the Civil Court even though the Criminal Court may have done nothing to look into the rights of the parties, and further, indirectly to prolong the effect of the original order beyond the period of two months fixed in sub-sec. (6) of the section. Such a use of the section is altogether unwarrantable—F. E. Chrestien v. Carter, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 512, 20 P.L.T. 374, 1939 P.W.N. 402, 40 Cr.L.J. 895, 184 I.C. 240, 6 B.R. 30, 12 R.P. 232; Bindeshwari Singh v. Raghunandan Mahto, 41 Cr.L.J. 578, 188 I.C. 330, 21 P.L.T. 413, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 559, 6 B.R. 648. There is no justification for periodical recourse to sec. 144, Cr. P. C., on the plea of emergency in cases where emergency exists only by reason of neglect of the authorities to take proper order when the facts first came to their notice. In other words what the Court deprecates is the habitual and unjustifiable use of sec. 144, Cr. P. C., as a substitute for secs. 107 and 145, Cr. P. C.—Viru Kamu v. Devarandas Jhamandas, A.I.R. 1940 Sind. 158, following Shebalak v. Kamaruddin, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 435, 68 I.C. 149, 23 Cr.L.J. 549, 2 Pat. 94, 3 P.L.T. 573 (F.B.)

Extension of time by Local Government :—The last three lines of this section lay down that the Local Government may extend the order in cases of danger to human life, etc., and it can extend the order for any length of time. The fact that the heading of this Chapter refers to "temporary orders" does not support the contention that the Local Government has only power to extend the order for a definite and very limited time. The Legislature has not seen fit to limit the time for which the force of the order may be extended by the Local Government, and under the terms of this section it is competent to the Local Government to extend the order so long as the danger which is apprehended continues to exist. Moreover, in extending the order, it is not necessary for the Local Government to state its reasons or even to state the fact of a likelihood of a riot or affray or other danger which it apprehends—Bhure Mal, 45 All. 526 (527), 24 Cr.L.J. 689, 73 I.C. 801, A.I.R. 1923 All. 606.

382. Revision:—Sub-section (3) of section 435, which disallowed the powers of revision of the High Court, the Sessions Judge, etc., in respect of proceedings under sec. 144, has now been omitted by the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923; and the effect of the omission is to overrule all the cases in which it was held that the High Court had no power under secs. 435 and 439 of this Code to interfere in revision with orders under this section. Under the old law, the High Court could revise an order passed under this section, not by virtue of sec. 439 of the Code but by virtue of the powers conferred upon it by sec. 15 of the Charter Act (Govinda v. Perumal, 38 Mad. 489; Bradley v. Jameson, 8 Cal. 580; Abayeswari v. Shideswari, 16 Cal. 80) and this power could be exercised only by the Chartered High Courts and not by non-chartered High Courts, e.g., the Chief Courts or the Judicial Commissioners' Courts. Moreover, under the old law, the High Court could revise an order passed under sec. 144, only when the order was ultra vires or without jurisdiction—Ananda v. Carr Stephen, 19 Cal. 127; Roop Lal v. David Monook, 2 C.W.N. 572; Isab, 8 C.W.N. 373; Partap Chunder, 25 Cal. 852; Prayag, 9 Cal. 103; Arunachalam v. Ponnuswami, 42 Mad. 64; Palaniappa v. Dorasamy, 18 Mad. 402; Gopi Mohon v. Taramoni, 5 Cal. 7. Under the present law, the High Court, both chartered and non-chartered (as also the Sessions Judge, and the District Magistrate), can call for the record of a proceeding under this section; and the order may be revised by the High Court on any ground whatsoever. In a recent Madras case, however, it was said that an order of a Magistrate acting under sec. 144 was merely administrative in character, and was not the order of a Court, and therefore, it was not liable to be revised by the High Court under sec. 435—Vedappan v. Perinan, 52 Mad. 69, 55 M.L.J. 621, 30 Cr.L.J. 119, 113 I.C. 279, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1108, 28 M.L.W. 506, 1928 M.W.N. 779 (following Nataraja v. Rangasami, 47 Mad. 56, 58). But this ruling has been rightly disapproved of in a more recent case—Muthusami v. Thangammal, 53 Mad. 320, 58 M.L.J. 148, 31 Cr.L.J. 324 (328), 121 I.C. 833, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 242, 1930 Cr.C. 273, Ind. Rul. 1930 Mad. 241, 31 M.L.W. 16, 1930 M.W.N. 82 where it was held that the High Court had jurisdiction to interfere in revision with orders passed under this section. See also Thakin Ba Thoung, 35 Cr.L.J. 1300, 151 I.C. 211, 12 Rang. 283, 1934 Cr.C. 717, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 124; Sumner v. Jogendra, 34 Cr.L.J. 334 (337), 142 I.C. 319, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 318, 1933 Cr.C. 420, Ind. Rul. 1933 Cal. 262; Gebinda Ram v. Basantilal, 7 Pat. 269, 30 Cr.L.J. 302, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 46 and Note 367.

The High Court has to consider not merely the legality of the orders but their propriety as well—Sumner v. Jogendra, supra. The High Court has power to consider under sec. 435, Cr. P. C., whether a Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order under this section—Thakin Ba Thoung, supra.

The High Court does not ordinarily interfere in revision with an order under this section when other remedies are open to the aggrieved party, especially because the High Court is unwilling to reject the opinion of the Magistrate responsible for the peace of his locality that there was an emergency which justified an ex parte order—Venkataramana, 22 M.L.T. 323, 19 Cr.L.J. 56. See also Pir Gul Hassan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Sind 230 (231), 40 Cr.L.J. 823, 183 I.C. 611. The Magistrate who knows the local conditions is the best Judge as to whether the emergency exists or not, and the High Court does not lightly interfere with the discretion of the Magistrate—

Ganesh, 55 Bom. 322, 33 Bom.L.R. 59, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 135, 32 Cr.L.J. 507 (509). Where the elements essential to an order under this section are shown to exist upon materials before the Court, the High Court will respect the opinion of the local authorities both as to the gravity of the danger and as to the steps necessary for the maintenance of peace. But if the grounds for action as stated in the order are either unfounded in fact or insufficient in law, or if there is an absence of any near or reasonable connection between the prohibited act and the supposed danger to public tranquillity, then it is the duty of the High Court to interfere in revision—Sriramamurthi, 131 I.C. 649, 1930 M.W.N. 849, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 242, 33 M.L.W. 640, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 553, 60 M.L.J. 370, 1931 Cr.C. 362 (365); Satyanarayana, 60 M.L.J. 378, 1931 Cr.C. 332 (335), 32 Cr.L.J. 744; 131 I.C. 449, 1930 M.W.N. 841, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 236, 33 M.L.W. 632, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 513.

As a Court of Revision the High Court has to consider not merely the legality of the orders but their propriety as well—Sumner v Jogendra, supra.

Where an order is passed against a person under this section the proper procedure is to apply under sub sec (4) to the District Magistrate who has power to set aside the prohibitory order. The petitioner is, however, justified in coming direct to the High Court when his application under the said sub-section is adjourned for hearing for over 15 days—Surendranath v Gostha Behari, 37 C.W.N. 962. See also Pitchai v Md Atham quoted in Note 380, where it was further held that the High Court had power of stay of execution of an order, positive or negative, passed under this section.

While setting aside an order under this section the High Court can, under sec 561A, Cr. P. C., direct the opposite party to redeliver the register and the goods to the applicant who was originally in possession of the same—Hafizuddin v Laborde, 50 All. 414, 28 Cr.L.J. 901, 105 I.C. 815, A.I.R. 1928 All. 14, 26 A.L.J. 83. See also Leong Mow v Tchuun Chun, 12 C.W.N. 1044, 8 Cr.L.J. 230; Bhagirathi v Valayee, 33 I.C. 830, 1916 M.W.N. 88.

The High Court will never reimpose an order under this section which the District Magistrate who is responsible for the peace of the district does not wish and in his discretion has rescinded—Manu Khan v Sunder Singh A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 313, 15 P.L.T. 216.

Efflux of time :—The High Court can set aside an order under this section even though two months had expired from the date thereof—Chandra Nath v E. I. Ry., 28 C.L.J. 483, 47 I.C. 803, 23 C.W.N. 145, 19 Cr.L.J. 951; Bisheshwar, 20 C.W.N. 758, 34 I.C. 312, 17 Cr.L.J. 200, 24 C.L.J. 272, 34 I.C. 312; Chandrakanta, 20 C.W.N. 981, 17 Cr.L.J. 464, 36 I.C. 144; Dabiruddin, 31 Cr.L.J. 804, 125 I.C. 273, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 131, 1930 Cr.C. 131. See also Thomson, 13 C.W.N. 195, 4 I.C. 590, where no orders were found to be necessary. But the High Court will not send the matter back to the Magistrate notwithstanding that the order has expired so that he may begin the proceedings again, as regards the petitioners' showing cause against the order—Dabiruddin, supra.

The Bombay High Court set aside an order under this section even after the expiry of two months when it was represented that a certain number of persons were convicted and the prosecution of others was contemplated for disobeying the order—Belvi, 32 Cr.L.J. 1144, 131 I.C. 344, 33 Bom.L.R. 673, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 325, 1931 Cr.C. 581, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 456. It is open to the High Court, if it thinks that an order ought never to have been made, to set it aside, although before the action can be taken the order may have ceased to be in operation—Ardeshir Phiroozshaw Murzban, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 42, 41 Bom.L.R. 1253, 41 Cr.L.J. 319 (320), 186 I.C. 477.

In Gorinda v. Perumal, 38 Mad. 489 (490), and Kupper v. Poomalai, 47 M.L.J. 439, 25 Cr.L.J. 1304, 82 I.C. 472, 1924 M.W.N. 675, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 896 the Madras High Court declined to set aside the order, as the two months during which the order would remain in force were almost expiring on the date of hearing. In Muthuswami v. Thangammal, 53 Mad. 320, 58 M.L.J. 148, 31 Cr.L.J. 324, 121 I.C. 833, A.I.R. 1930

382. Revision:—Sub-section (3) of section 435, which disallowed the powers of revision of the High Court, the Sessions Judge, etc., in respect of proceedings under sec. 144, has now been omitted by the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923; and the effect of the omission is to overrule all the cases in which it was held that the High Court had no power under secs 435 and 439 of this Code to interfere in revision with orders under this section. Moreover, under the old law, the High Court could revise an order passed under sec. 144, only when the order was ultra vires or without jurisdiction—*Ananda v. But this ruling has been rightly disapproved of in a more recent case—*Muthusami v. Where an order under this section purported to decide upon the rights of the parties the High Court is entitled to interfere, even if the order spent itself—Joint Agents v. Chandra Ketu, 34 Cr.L.J. 717, 144 I.C. 228, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 185, 1933 Cr.C. 516, 14 P.L.T. 379, Ind. Rul. 1933 Pat. 221. In certain cases where the High Courts found that the party against whom the order was passed was seriously prejudiced, they interfered with the order under this section even after the expiry of the period of sixty days—Puram v. Ramjhari, 36 Cr.L.J. 655, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 224, 155 I.C. 88. See also Dhanraj v. Bharat, 6 P.L.T. 253, 26 Cr.L.J. 260, 84 I.C. 324 and Saligram v. Baijnath, 35 Cr.L.J. 1057, 150 I.C. 118, 14 P.L.T. 740, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 104, 1934 Cr.C. 198; Jagrupa v. Chotey, 37 Cr.L.J. 95 (98), 159 I.C. 455; Panchkesar Kuar v. Madho Singh, 1938 P.W.N. 709, 19 P.L.T. 796. In the recent case of Bhuneshwar Prasad v. Rommoy Roy, 41 Cr.L.J. 417 (419), A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 492, 187 I.C. 139, 1940 P.W.N. 474, the Patna High Court in revision entered into the question of merits of an order under this section although it expired long ago. An order which has been deliberately passed under this section when the Magistrate knew and had been told that he should proceed under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., if necessary, cannot be left alone merely because it is time-expired, for it is impossible to encourage the Magistrate to use his powers in that way—Bindeshwari Singh v. Raghunandan Mahto, 41 Cr.L.J. 578, 188 I.C. 330, 21 P.L.T. 413, 6 B.R. 648, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 559.

The Lahore High Court refused to interfere with an order under this section, which had already expired, but considered its validity in—Qamar-ud-Din, 36 Cr.L.J. 951, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 679, 156 I.C. 526, 37 P.L.R. 515. See also 16 Cr.L.J. 272, 28 I.C. 160. But see Khazan Chand, 28 Cr.L.J. 345, 100 I.C. 825, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 430 where the order was set aside.

Where the order under this section ceased to be in force by efflux of time the High Court should not interfere with it in revision. If the applicants feel aggrieved against that order they have their remedy in the Civil Court by the filing of a declaratory suit—Abdul Samad, 35 Cr.L.J. 472, 147 I.C. 672, 11 O.W.N. 74, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 87, 1934 Cr.C. 257.

Stay of execution:—The High Court has power of stay of execution of an order positive or negative, passed under sec. 141, Cr. P. C.—Pitchai v. Md. Atham, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 720 (721), 63 M.L.J. 591, 33 Cr.L.J. 826, 139 I.C. 773, 1932 M.W.N. 726, 36 M.L.W. 451, 56 Mad. 149. See also Note 380 under the heading "Intermediate order".

Provisions of sub-section (4), if bar:—In some cases the High Court would decline to interfere in revision if no application had been made to the Magistrate. But where part of the order under this section was rescinded by the Magistrate before there was time to make any application to him, the fact that the petitioner did not avail himself of the remedy under sec. 144 (4), Cr. P. C., is no ground for refusal to interfere in revision by the High Court—Ardeshtur Phirozshaw Murzban, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 42, 41 Bom.L.R. 1253, 41 Cr.L.J. 319 (320), 186 I.C. 477. See also Pitchai v. Md. Altham in note 380.

383. Reference:—An order under this section not being a judicial proceeding, a District Magistrate cannot refer it to the High Court, but can himself deal with it in his executive capacity—Anon., Ratanlal 129; or the party aggrieved by the order may apply to the District Magistrate to recall the order, and failing him, to the Local Government—Mad. H. C. Pro., 5-12-1879. In view of the deletion of cl. (3), sec. 435 Cr. P. C., by the Cr. P. Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) a reference can now be made to the High Court under sec. 438 Cr. P. C. See Satish Chandra v. Lokendra, infra, where such a reference was made.

384. Punishment:—See sec. 188, I P. C.

The Magistrate issuing the order under this section cannot himself punish a man for disobeying his order—Chandra Kanta, 20 C.W.N. 981, 17 Cr.L.J. 461; Tatya, Ratanlal 50; Brojonath, 4 C.W.N. 226.

385. Civil suit:—An order under this section is not a bar to the institution of a civil suit by the party on whom the order is made. Therefore, where the plaintiffs and the defendants are owners of adjoining properties and the defendants have obtained an order of the Magistrate under sec. 144 preventing the plaintiffs from erecting certain buildings on their own property, without adjudication of the private rights of the parties, it is open to the plaintiffs to sue the defendants for a declaration that they are entitled to make use of their property and erect building on it as they desire, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with them in so doing; and the order under section 144, far from being a bar to such suit, would itself furnish the cause of action for the suit—Baba Sah v. Mahomed Hussain, 42 M.L.J. 179, 15 L.W. 68, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 123.

Suit for malicious prosecution:—A suit for damages for malicious prosecution can be based on the institution of proceedings under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., provided that the necessary facts are established. The institution of proceedings under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., may be at the instance of a party to the quarrel which is likely to lead to a breach of the peace; it may be at the instance of some disinterested person or as in great majority of cases, it may be at the instance of the Police or as a result of action suo motu by the Magistrate. The action for malicious prosecution as a result of such proceedings would normally be brought only in the case of proceedings brought at the instance of a party to the quarrel, though that need not necessarily be the only ground for such an action. But it should not be thought that any unwarranted attempt to secure a Magistrate's order under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., will justify a suit for malicious prosecution. There must, in order to sustain such a suit, be proof that the defendants moved the Magistrate to take proceedings and that proceedings were taken. It must be shown that the final termination was in favour of the plaintiff. The plaintiff must prove that the institution of the proceedings was malicious and that it was without reasonable and probable cause. Further, it must in all such cases be proved that there was legal damage suffered as a consequence of the institution of these proceedings. In ordinary criminal prosecutions, the damage will be inferred from the very fact of an accusation of a crime involving moral turpitude and necessarily damning the good name of the accused. But when Courts are dealing with quasi civil proceedings such as those under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., in order to establish the essential fact of damage, it is not sufficient merely to prove that there was a petition in which an allegation was made of a danger to the public peace by the withholding of a private right—Narayana, Mudali v. Peria Kalathi, 41 Cr.L.J. 677 (678), 188 I.C. 801, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 783, 49 M.L.W. 664, 1939 M.W.N. 593, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 296.

386. Proceedings, judicial:—Inquiries under this section before an order is issued are judicial proceedings within the meaning of sec. 4 (m); and the Magistrate can take action under sec. 476 if he thinks that false evidence has been given before him in such proceedings—Tirunarasimhachari, 19 Mad. 18. (Section 476 as amended in 1923 is no longer limited to judicial proceedings, but applies to any proceeding) See also Belvi, 32 Cr.L.J. 1144, 134 I.C. 344, 33 Bom.L.R. 673, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 325, 1931 Cr.C. 581, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 456; Muthuswami v. Thangammal, 121 I.C. 833, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 242, 31 M.L.J. 324, 53 Mad. 203.

386A. Disobedience of the order:—Where the offence complained of is disobedience of his own order the Subdivisional Officer has no power to take cognizance of a case under sec. 188 I. P. C. He must make a complaint under sec. 195 Cr. P. C. Section 487 Cr. P. C., prohibits the trial of the case under sec. 188 I. P. C., in these circumstances by the Magistrate—Satish Chandra v. Lokendra, 39 C.W.N. 1053, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 251, 61 C.L.J. 579; Chandra Kanta, 20 C.W.N. 981, 17 Cr.L.J. 464, 36 I.C. 144; Q.-E. v. Abdulla Saheb, 24 Mad. 262. -

When an order under sec. 144 Cr. P. C., is found to be without jurisdiction, obviously the subsequent order under sec. 188 I. P. C., for its disobedience is also without jurisdiction—Satish Chandra v. Lokendra, 39 C.W.N. 1053, 61 C.L.J. 579, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 251.

An order made under this section cannot operate for more than two months unless Government otherwise directs. When such an order is withdrawn on a particular date, the position is exactly the same as if the original order had been restricted to that date, and it is clear that a person can be charged with committing an offence against the order at the time when it was in operation. The fact that he was tried after the order had ceased to be in operation seems to be entirely irrelevant—Rajendrasing Ramsing, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 195, 42 Bom.L.R. 356, 41 Cr.L.J. 675, 188 I.C. 744.

A Magistrate should not sanction a prosecution (now complaint) under sec. 188 I. P. C., unless he thinks that all the elements necessary for a conviction are present—Projapat, 14 C.W.N. 234, 11 Cr.L.J. 49, 5 I.C. 49.

It is the duty of the prosecution in a case under sec. 188, I. P. C., to prove by positive evidence that the accused had knowledge of the order with the disobedience of which he is charged and that a proof of general notification promulgating the order, does not satisfy the requirements of the section—Abdulla, 63 I.C. 865, 22 Cr.L.J. 725; Sheikh Abdul, 31 C.W.N. 340, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 306, 100 I.C. 830, 45 C.L.J. 202, 28 Cr.L.J. 350; Ramdas, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 28, 99 I.C. 36, 44 C.L.J. 250, 51 Cal. 152, 28 Cr.L.J. 4; Niharendu Dutt Majumdar, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 703, 43 C.W.N. 1061, (1939) 2 Cal. 507, 181 I.C. 856; Madan Kishore, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 446, 21 P.L.T. 231, 187 I.C. 135, 41 Cr.L.J. 414, 1940 P.W.N. 469. Whether a person has knowledge of the order promulgated must be a matter of evidence. When the order had been promulgated for several weeks, there had been disturbances in the city and notices containing the order had been posted up at various places in the city, it is scarcely conceivable that the applicants had no knowledge of the order passed—Shander. The question of knowledge must generally be a matter of inference—Madan Kishore, supra.

Where there was nothing to show that the disobedience of an order under sec. 144 Cr. P. C., caused or tended to cause annoyance, injury, obstruction or a riot, the High Court set aside the order sanctioning prosecution under sec. 188 I. P. C.—Projapat, 14 C.W.N. 234, 11 Cr.L.J. 49, 5 I.C. 49; Sujal v. Samiruddin, 22 C.W.N. 599, 19 Cr.L.J. 739, 46 I.C. 515; Dabiruddin, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 131, 31 Cr.L.J. 804, 125 I.C. 273, 1930 Cr.C. 131. See also 1932 M.W.N. 1073 and Madan Kishore, supra. The Oudh Chief Court dissented from the above view, which was also expressed in Ram Gopal, 32 Cal. 793, holding that it seemed to go beyond the express provisions of law as embodied in the explanation to sec. 188, I. P. C.—Niaz Khan, 35 Cr.L.J. 699, 148 I.C. 518, 11 O.W.N. 381, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 162.

386B. Copy:—A party has a right to know what the information was on which the Magistrate acted under this section in order to show that it was unfounded or insufficient and is entitled to a copy of the said information—Srirammurthy, 32 Cr L.J. 763 (764), 131 I.C. 649, 1930 M.W.N. 849, 60 M.L.J. 370, A.I.R. 1931 Mad 242, 33 M.L.W. 640, 1931 Cr.C. 632, Ind Rul 1931 Mad 553.

CHAPTER XII.

DISPUTES AS TO IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

In proceedings under this Chapter, the Magistrate should distinctly indicate under what section of the Code he takes proceedings. It should not be left to the higher Courts to speculate to see under what section the order was passed—Srinivasa v. Raghunathan, 18 Cr L.J. 295 (Mad.).

145. (1) Whenever a District Magistrate, Sub-Divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied from a police-report or other information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists concerning any land or water or the boundaries thereof, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he shall make an order in writing, stating the grounds of his being so satisfied, and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend his Court in person or by pleader, within a time to be fixed by such Magistrate, and to put in written statements of their respective claims as respects the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute.

(2) For the purposes of this section the expression "land or water" includes buildings, markets, fisheries, crops or other produce of land, and the rents or profits of any such property.

(3) A copy of the order shall be served in manner provided by this Code for the service of a summons upon such person or persons as the Magistrate may direct, and at least one copy shall be published by being affixed to some conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute.

(4) The Magistrate shall then, without reference to the merits of the claims of any of such parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute, peruse the statements so put in, hear the parties, receive all such evidence as may be produced by them respectively, consider the effects of such evidence, take such further evidence (if any) as he thinks necessary, and, if possible, decide whether any and which of the parties was at the date of the order before mentioned in such possession of the said subject:

Procedure where dispute concerning land, etc., is likely to cause breach of peace.

Inquiry as to possession

Provided that, if it appears to the Magistrate that any party has within two months next before the date of such order been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed, he may treat the party so dispossessed as if he had been in possession at such date:

Provided also, that, if the Magistrate considers the case one of emergency, he may at any time attach the subject of dispute, pending his decision under this section.

(5) Nothing in this section shall preclude any party so required to attend, or any other person interested, from showing that no such dispute as aforesaid exists or has existed; and in such case, the Magistrate shall cancel his said order, and all further proceedings thereon shall be stayed, but, subject to such cancellation, the order of the Magistrate under sub-section (1) shall be final.

(6) If the Magistrate decide that one of the parties was or should under the first proviso to sub-section
 Party in possession to retain possession until legally evicted. (4) be treated as being in such possession of the said subject, he shall issue an order declaring such party to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law and forbidding all disturbance of possession until such eviction, and when he proceeds under the first proviso to sub-section (4), may restore to possession the party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed.

(7) When any party to any such proceeding dies, the Magistrate may cause the legal representative of the deceased party to be made a party to the proceeding, and shall thereupon continue the inquiry, and if any question arises as to who the legal representative of a deceased party for the purpose of such proceeding is, all persons claiming to be representatives of the deceased party shall be made parties thereto.

(8) If the Magistrate is of opinion that any crop or other produce of the property, the subject of dispute in a proceeding under this section pending before him, is subject to speedy and natural decay, he may make an order for the proper custody or sale of such property, and, upon the completion of the inquiry, shall make such order for the disposal of such property, or the sale-proceeds thereof, as he thinks fit.

(9) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, at any stage of the proceedings under this section, on the application of either party, issue summons to any witness directing him to attend or to produce any document or thing.

(10) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to be in derogation of the powers of the Magistrate to proceed under section 107.

Change:—The amendments as shown by the italicised words have been made by sec. 27 of the Crim. Pro. Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923). The reasons have been stated below in proper places

387. Object and scope of section:—Section 145 is intended only to provide a speedy remedy for the prevention of breaches of peace arising out of disputes relating to immoveable property by maintaining one or other of the parties in possession—Debi Prasad v. Sheodal, 30 All 41, 4 A.L.J. 705, 6 Cr.L.J. 352; Tatapada v. Nural Haq, 32 Cal 1093, 2 C.L.J. 280; Krishna Kamini v. Abdul, 30 Cal. 155; Manindra v. Barada Kanta, 30 Cal. 112, 6 C.W.N. 417; Ram Chandra v. Monohar, 21 Cal 29. The object of this section is to enable a Magistrate to intervene and pass a temporary order in regard to the possession of property in dispute, having effect until the actual right of one of the parties has been determined by a competent Civil Court—Daulat v. Rameswari, 26 Cal 625, 3 C.W.N 461; Kunja Behari v. Khetra, 29 Cal. 208.

The purpose the legislature had in view is the prevention of a breach of the peace. If that object is not attained by an order purporting to be made under this section, it must be taken to have been without jurisdiction—Anesh Mollah v. Ejaharuddi, 5 C.W.N. 428 (431), 28 C.W.N 446. The object of this section is not to provide parties with an opportunity of bringing their civil disputes before a Criminal Court or of manœuvring for position for the purpose of subsequent civil litigation though that is often the effect of such proceedings, but to arm the Magistrate concerned with an additional weapon for maintaining peace within the area for which he is responsible—Chellapathi v. Subba, 30 Cr.L.J. 340 (341), 52 Mad 241, 114 I.C 626, 55 M.L.J. 693, 28 M.L.W. 664, 1928 M.W.N. 921, A.I.R. 1928 Mad 1230, Ind. Rul. 1929 Mad 305.

A prohibition of the kind mentioned in sec. 171 of the Indian Companies Act (VII of 1913) is not meant to override an express enactment in sec. 145 Cr. P. C. A Magistrate can, therefore, draw up proceedings under sec. 145 against the Liquidator of a company without obtaining leave of the Court, especially where the Liquidator is equally responsible for the proceedings, and in effect invited the intervention of the Police and the Magisterial proceedings which followed—S. N. Mukherjee v. Krishna Dassie, 34 Cr.L.J. 640, 37 C.W.N 932, 1933 Cr.C. 705, A.I.R. 1933 Cal 433, 143 I.C. 795, Ind. Rul. 1933 Cal. 484.

Litigants often resort to section 145 as an easy way of getting possession without the expense, delay and trouble of a civil suit regarding the land in dispute, and Courts should be on guard against an abuse of legal powers—Ma Ma Gyi, 2 Bur.L.J. 295, 25 Cr.L.J. 1161. Section 145 is frequently misapplied in practice, and parties try to use the Criminal Courts for the settlement of what are really civil disputes in order to evade the Court-fees of civil cases. This fact should make Magistrates careful not to be induced by the pleaders before them into allowing what is really a civil case to be argued in a Criminal Court with a consequent waste of public time and to the detriment not only of other litigants but also of the Magistrate himself—In re Mallappa, 28 Bom.L.R. 488, 27 Cr.L.J. 734 (735). Any person is entitled to use force within limits for the protection of his property against forcible invasion, and also to say that he intends to do so in the event of an apprehended forcible invasion being made. But he has no right to use force for the recovery of his property, and the situation becomes grotesque when he goes to a Magistrate and says he intends to do so and apprehends there will be a fight over the matter, as the party in possession is sure to resist, and asks the Magistrate to prevent it. He must go to a Civil Court to regain possession or get his possession confirmed; obviously the only thing for the Magistrate to do on such an application would be to bind over the applicant to keep the peace. The object of this section is only to prevent a breach of the peace and not to protect or maintain any body in possession. Courts should take action under this section only if there is a report or information of a breach of the peace and the same cannot be obviated without an order under this section—Phutanja, 25 Cr.L.J. 1109, 81 I.C. 933, A.I.R.1925 Nag 142.

Pendency of a suit under sec. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) with regard to the property in dispute certainly cannot take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to initiate proceedings under this section, if he finds reasonable grounds for apprehending that without such proceedings a breach of the peace may be caused—Kishori v. Srinath, 13 C.W.N. 530 (532), 35 Cal. 370, 1 I.C. 817, 9 Cr.L.J. 399. See also Note 443A.

388. Sections 107, 144 and 145:—As to whether a Magistrate should proceed under secs. 107, 144 or 145, in case of disputes relating to immoveable property between the rival parties likely to cause a breach of the peace, see Notes 234 and 377 under secs. 107 and 144, where the subject has been fully discussed.

Whatever force be given to the word "shall" in the first sub-section of sec. 145, Cr. P. C., it need in no way embarrass any Magistrate in exercising his discretion. If he is of opinion that an order under sec. 107, Cr. P. C., will meet the case and proposes to make one he has only to make it to justify himself in holding that the dispute no longer is likely to cause a breach of the peace; he can do this either without taking action under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., or at any stage of proceedings under that section. If he thinks that the case calls for action under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., he can take such action and if he thinks this sufficient to prevent the likelihood of a breach of the peace he can postpone all action under sec. 145, Cr. P. C.—Agni Kumar v. Mantazaddin, 32 C.W.N. 1173 (1183), 56 Cal. 290, 48 C.L.J. 193, 30 Cr.L.J. 69, 113 I.C. 181, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 610 (F.B.). The word "shall" in sec. 145, Cr. P. C., is mandatory, and what is pertinent and permissible in the initial stage of the police report, namely, to prevent a breach of the peace by an urgent order under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., ceases to be so and the mandatory obligation under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., is cast upon the Magistrate by the report of the police disclosing a bona fide dispute as to possession of the property to start at once a proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. C.—Gobind Ram v. Basantilal, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 46 (48), 7 Pat. 269, 30 Cr.L.J. 302, 114 I.C. 466, 11 P.L.T. 134.

Where a Magistrate initiated proceedings under secs. 144 and at a later stage intimated to the parties who were present in Court his intention to draw up proceedings under sec. 145, held that he was not guilty of any irregularity—Chadhari v. Raja Ramsingh, 19 Cr.L.J. 296 (Pat). See also Gopala v. Krishnasamy, 54 I.C. 473, 21 Cr.L.J. 73, 11 M.L.W. 459, 27 M.L.T. 234. See Notes 377 and 470A.

See also Phutania v. Emp., in Note 387.

390. "Is satisfied":—Unless the Magistrate is satisfied that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace, he cannot proceed under this section—H. V. Low & Co. v. Manindra, 3 Pat. 809 (814); and he ought not to assume jurisdiction in those cases where the suggested apprehension of a breach of the peace is merely colourable and made to induce to deal with matters properly cognizable by the Civil Courts—Obhoy Chandra v. Md Sabir, 10 Cal. 78 (80).

It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule so as to specify the sufficiency of the materials upon which a Magistrate ought to be satisfied before he assumes jurisdiction in any particular case. And the High Court will not ordinarily examine whether the grounds upon which the Magistrate was satisfied of the existence of the likelihood of a breach of the peace afford a reasonable foundation for his conclusions—Kulada v. Danesh, 33 Cal. 33 (43), dissenting from Dhanpat v. Chatterpat, 20 Cal. 513.

In the preliminary order it is not sufficient to refer to a police report as giving information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists without stating the Magistrate's satisfaction that the report is correct. The provisions of sub-sec. (1), sec. 145 are clear and must be observed and the making of a preliminary order should not be allowed to lapse into mere routine as if it were the filling up of a printed form—Munnulal, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 78, 17 N.L.J. 231. But where the Magistrate has relied on the police report which is on the record, his reference to that constitutes a sufficient ground—Sheoprasad Shiram v. Govindram Hardit, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 265 (266), 1940 N.L.J. 375.

Power of High Court or Sessions Judge, etc., to direct proceedings—The Magistrate must satisfy himself and use his own discretion as to the necessity of proceedings. Therefore neither the High Court nor the Sessions Judge has power to order a Magistrate to take proceedings under this chapter—Manindra v. Barada, 30 Cal 112; Govinda Chandra, 20 Cal 520 (526). If the Magistrate is satisfied that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace, the High Court cannot direct him to be satisfied as to such likelihood and to take proceedings under this section—H. V. Low & Co v. Manindra Chandra, 3 Pat. 809 (814). So also, the High Court has no power to direct the revival of proceedings after they have been stayed by the Magistrate—Manindra v. Barada Kanta, 30 Cal 112.

Where a Subdivisional Magistrate, having regard to the circumstances of the case, came to the conclusion that proceedings under sec. 144 should be taken, and made an order accordingly, the District Magistrate had no authority to direct the Subdivisional Magistrate to institute proceedings under sec. 145—Kaliash v. Kunja Behari, 24 Cal 391, 1 C.W.N. 393. See also Note 380. The question whether proceedings under sec. 145 should or should not be taken is entirely a matter within the Magistrate's own discretion, and a District Magistrate has no authority to direct him to institute the proceedings. But where proceedings were at first instituted under sec. 145 by the Deputy Magistrate in respect of a portion of land, but the District Magistrate directed him to include the whole of the disputed land in the proceedings, and it appeared that the police report and other materials before the Deputy Magistrate disclosed the existence of a dispute concerning the whole of the land, and the Deputy Magistrate thereafter included the entire land in the proceedings, held that the action of the Deputy Magistrate was not improper—Nrupendra v. Sasadhar, 34 C.W.N. 82 (85), 31 Cr.L.J. 923, 125 I.C. 750, AIR 1929 Cal 805, 1929 Cr.C. 574, Ind. Rul. 1930 Cal. 622, 50 C.L.J. 287.

Refusal to take action—The only case in which a Magistrate can refuse to take action under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., is when he is not satisfied that there is a danger of a breach of the peace. But where the police reported that there was a danger of a breach of the peace and he never said that there was no such danger, his duty was to proceed under sec. 145 and to issue notices to the parties. The procedure of the Magistrate in considering the evidence given in another case as evidence in the case, even though the other case was pending in his own Court as a Revenue Court, and dismissing the application under sec. 203 Cr. P. C., on the basis of the same, was entirely unauthorized and illegal. Section 203, Cr. P. C., has nothing to do with proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C.—Subhan, AIR 1939 Oudh 15, 1938 O.W.N. 1099, 1938 A.W.R. (C.C.) 99, 1938 O.A. 904, 1938 A.Cr.C. 137, 1938 O.L.R. 475, 178 I.C. 252, 40 Cr.L.J. 33. See also Ram Manorath v. Kaushal in Note 394.

But where a Subdivisional Magistrate refused to take proceedings under section 145 because in his opinion there was no sufficient ground for such proceedings, the District Magistrate was competent to take such proceedings himself, if he was of a different opinion, and the refusal of the Sub-divisional Magistrate could not operate as a bar to such proceedings—Baida Nath v. Nibaran, 29 Cal. 242, 6 C.W.N. 290; Benoy Chandra v. Kala Chand, 43 C.L.J. 586, 27 Cr.L.J. 1083 97 I.C. 59, AIR 1926 Cal 1049. See also B. B. Biswas v. Muchiram Mahata, in Note 475.

391. Police-report—It is a safe general rule for a Magistrate to refuse to take action at all under this section except on a report from the Police which should not be a mere forwarding of a report made to the Police by one of the parties, even with a record of the enquiry made by a Police Officer in the matter, but a definite statement of opinion by a responsible officer that he apprehends that there will be a disturbance which he cannot prevent himself and he, therefore, desires the exercise of the higher powers of the Magistrate to prevent it. The absence of such a report is an almost conclusive indication of the absence of any likelihood of a breach of the peace, unless the Police Officers concerned are hopelessly inefficient—Phutania v. Emp., 25 Cr.L.J. 1109 (1111), 81 I.C. 933, AIR 1925 Nag 142.

A Police report upon which a Magistrate bases his initial order under this section should contain a statement of the facts from which the Magistrate may be satisfied as to the existence of a likelihood of a breach of the peace. But there is no inflexible rule that the police report must show that the disputing parties are actually assembling men or doing some other specific overt acts—Kulada Kinkar v. Danesh, 33 Cal. 33 (42), 10 C.W.N. 257, 2 C.L.J. 271, 2 Cr.L.J. 670. When a Police Report sets out the subject matter of dispute, the cause of dispute, its nature, the apprehension that unless action is taken the breach of the peace will ensue, the report contains sufficient material for the Magistrate to act upon—Muhammad Araf v. Satramdas Sakhimal, 37 Cr.L.J. 1030 (1031), 164 I.C. 969, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 143, 9 R.S. 60, 1936 Cr.C. 859. A police report which sets out sufficiently substantial reasons for believing that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace relating to a certain land exists, is a good foundation of proceedings under this section—Dhanput v. Chatterput, 20 Cal. 513 (517). But a police report which does not state that there was any apprehension of a breach of the peace, is not sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction—Radha Gobind v. Gossain Mohendra, 6 C.W.N. 340.

But a Magistrate is no way bound to act on all that is stated in the Police report—Laldhari v. Sukdeo, 27 Cal. 892; Ahmed Ali v. Sabib, 33 C.W.N. 858, 30 Cr.L.J. 1037, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 468, 49 C.L.J. 428. He is to exercise his own independent judgment upon the materials placed before him, and to arrive at a conclusion as to whether upon those materials there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace. He would not be justified in acting merely upon an expression of opinion by the police—Ganga Bishun v. Rajo, 5 P.L.T. 252, 83 I.C. 693, 26 Cr.L.J. 133, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 787; Kulada v. Danesh, 33 Cal. 33 (42); Ahmed Ali v. Sabid, supra; Ganikhan, 28 Cr.L.J. 929, 105 I.C. 449, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 81. Therefore the fact that the police report stated that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace, would not by itself take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to proceed under this section, if upon a consideration of the materials before him and by exercising his own independent judgment he came to the conclusion that there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace—Ganga Bishun v. Rajo, supra; Kulada v. Danesh, supra. Where the police report showed that the parties disputing over a tank were big Zemindars, and that although there was nothing to show that a breach of the peace was likely to happen, yet such a breach was not impossible, it was held that the Magistrate ought not to proceed upon such report, which was merely an expression of opinion by the Police—Maharaj Bahadur v. Ranjit Singh, 11 C.W.N. 835, 6 Cr.L.J. 36; Surjakanta v. Jogodindra, 11 C.W.N. 198.

The report of the police officer of the district of F was to the effect that a breach of the peace was likely to take place in consequence of a dispute concerning a piece of water lying partly in the Sub-Division of M within the district of D and partly in the district of F. The report came before the Magistrate of M who thereupon took proceedings under this section in respect of water lying within his jurisdiction. There can be no valid objection to such a proceeding by reason of want of jurisdiction—Ishan v. Garth, 6 C.W.N. 378, 29 Cal. 885.

Evidentiary value :—A Police report is not itself evidence, although it may be sufficient to justify a Magistrate in taking action under this section—In re Bhadreswari, 16 W.R. 17, 7 B.L.R. 329. The police report and the evidence contained therein about the factum of possession is inadmissible in evidence except for the purpose of initiating the proceedings—Kulbans v. Ram Singh, 1 P.L.T. 501, 21 Cr.L.J. 735, 58 I.C. 159.

392. "Other information" :—The Magistrate may act on any information and without any formal complaint being made before him. He is not confined to evidence recorded on oath—In re Kishore Mohun, 19 W.R. 10. The word "information" does not refer to any particular way in which a Magistrate's attention should be drawn. It is wide enough to cover the knowledge of the Magistrate derived by reading the petition filed by the parties in another proceeding which satisfies him that a breach of the peace was imminent—Jhaman v. Thakuri, 1 P.L.T. 369, 21 Cr.L.J. 625, 57 I.C. 449.

No definition is given to the words "other information", and the omission to use a technical term such as affidavit, evidence, or verified statement, indicates that the widest possible latitude has been allowed in the matter. Therefore, a Magistrate does not act without jurisdiction when he bases his preliminary order under this section on a petition which is signed by the responsible pleaders and the applicant and which sets out, in detail, the history of the dispute and the property, which is the subject matter of dispute, and the particulars about the incidents which are likely to lead to a breach of the peace—Madho v. Tilak, 35 Cr.L.J. 1460, 151 I.C. 853, 1934 Cr.C. 893, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 194. But when the petition contains no information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists, such application cannot by any means justify the Magistrate's taking action under this section—A. Meah v. Steel Brother & Co. Ltd., 39 Cr.L.J. 708, 176 I.C. 266, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 229, 11 R.R. 40. It is impossible to lay down any rule as to the amount of evidence which should satisfy a Magistrate. If a Magistrate believes the statement of one witness to be true, he is at perfect liberty to act upon it for the purpose of passing an order under sec. 145 (1). It is not incumbent upon him to hold a preliminary inquiry himself by examining further witnesses, nor is it necessary for him to call for a report from the police—Bibi Asghari, 36 Cr.L.J. 656 (664), 155 I.C. 169, 1935 O.W.N. 454, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh. 316, 1935 O.L.R. 257. See also U. Pyinnay v. U. Kilatha, 32 Cr.L.J. 637, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 51, 1931 Cr.C. 153, Ind. Rul. 1931 Rang. 127; Ahmad Din v. Juwan, 27 Cr.L.J. 801, 95 I.C. 465, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 550.

But a telegram is not a sufficient information—In re Hari Lal, 22 Bom. 949 (956); so also a statement made by a witness in the course of a trial that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists—Gobin Chandra, 20 Cal. 520 (525), or a mere petition by an officer in the employ of a party interested in the dispute, that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists, is not a sufficient basis of proceedings under this section—Tirumalraja v. Lodd Gobind Dass, 29 Mad. 561, 16 M.L.J. 419, 5 Cr.L.J. 91. But see 24 Cr.L.J. 304, 72 I.C. 32.

393. Dispute:—The Magistrate's jurisdiction under this section depends upon there being a dispute likely to create a breach of the peace; and when the parties appear before the Magistrate, if they are able to show, or if it otherwise appears to him that there is no dispute, or no such dispute as is likely to induce a breach of the peace, the Magistrate should hold his hands and not proceed further—Gobind v. Abdul Sayad, 6 Cal. 835. Thus, when the rights of the parties have been determined by a competent Court, the dispute is at an end, and it is the duty of the Magistrate to maintain the right of the successful party, and the defeated party will not be allowed to invoke the aid of the Magistrate and the police to neutralise the effect of the decree of the competent Civil Court—Gobind v. Abdul, 6 Cal. 835; Daulat v. Rameswar, 26 Cal. 625; Sims v. Johurry, 5 C.W.N. 563; Kunja Behari v. Khetra Pal, 29 Cal. 208. See Note 438 infra. The proper course for a Magistrate to pursue, if the defeated party does any act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace, is to take action under sec. 107—Gobind v. Abdul, 6 Cal. 835; Amrteshwari v. Darpa Narain, 7 C.W.N. 558; Subba Nayak v. Trincall, 7 Mad. 460.

The term 'dispute' means a reasonable dispute, a bona fide dispute, a dispute between parties who have each some semblance of a right or supposed right—Gobind v. Abdul Sayad, 6 Cal. 835. In every case in which a Magistrate finds that there is a bona fide dispute about land, no matter how erroneous the contention of one or other of the parties may be, he ought to adopt the procedure laid down in sec. 145. But if the Magistrate comes to the conclusion that the defendants are wrongfully and without any bona fide claim seeking to eject the other party by force and a breach of the peace is imminent, he is not bound to act under this section but is justified in making an order under sec. 107—Ram Baran, 28 All. 406. A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court had recently laid down that the words "bona fide" should not be imported into

A Police report upon which a Magistrate bases his initial order under this section should contain a statement of the facts from which the Magistrate may be satisfied as to the existence of a likelihood of a breach of the peace. But there is no inflexible rule that the police report must show that the disputing parties are actually assembling men or doing some other specific overt acts—*Kulada Kinkar v. A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court had recently laid down that the words "bona fide" should not be imported into this section, for if the Magistrate has to decide whether the dispute is bona fide or not, it would be to require him to go into the question of the merits or the claims of a party to a right to possess the subject of dispute, which he is forbidden to do by sub-section (4)—Agni Kumar v. Mantazaddin, 56 Cal. 290, 48 C.L.J. 193, 32 C.W.N. 1173, 30 Cr.L.J. 69, 113 I.C. 181, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 610, (F.B.). The likelihood of a breach of the peace is sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction. The weight to be attached to a previous order of a Civil or Criminal Court is a question for the consideration of the Magistrate—Gaya Prasad v. Ram Sarobeth, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 471, 15 P.L.T. 453, 1934 Cr.C. 1064. But see Dharsingh, 17 N.L.J. 239. The Magistrate, in spite of delivery of possession by the Civil Court, has jurisdiction to start a case under this section—Agni Kumar v. Mantazaddin, supra. See also Rajendra Narayan v. Chintamani, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 151 (152), 1938 P.W.N. 526, 19 P.L.T. 632, 40 Cr.L.J. 339, 180 I.C. 322.

394. Likelihood of breach of peace:—It is essential for a proceeding under this section that the Magistrate should be satisfied, either from a police report or from other information, that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace; the mere fact that there is a dispute concerning land is not sufficient by itself to give him jurisdiction—Kulada v. Danesh, 33 Cal. 33 (42), 2 Cr.L.J. 670, 2 C.L.J. 271, 10 C.W.N. 257. This section is enacted in order that the Magistrate may prevent a breach of the peace; the fact that there is a danger of a breach of the peace must be put in the forefront of his proceedings, and he must give the parties notice that it is to prevent a breach of the peace that he is taking action under this section. He has no jurisdiction in a matter of dispute relating to immovable property, which primarily appertains to a Civil Court, unless he is fully satisfied that there is a danger of a breach of the peace—Hira Lal, 1932 A.L.J. 1087, 142 I.C. 775, 1933 Cr.C. 165, A.I.R. 1933 All. 96, 34 Cr.L.J. 449. If there is nothing on the record to show that he was satisfied to the existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, his action under this section was illegal—Ganga Prasad v. Narain, 15 All. 391 (395). The basis of the proceeding is the likelihood of a breach of the peace. Therefore, where in his order directing the issue of a proceeding under this section, the Magistrate was of opinion that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace but that as the dispute was one relating to possession, section 145 was applicable, held that the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction—Sib Narayan v. Satish, 24 C.W.N. 621, 21 Cr.L.J. 593. Where the Magistrate came to the conclusion from a perusal of the police report that no likelihood of a breach of the peace existed, he acted rightly in refusing to start proceedings under this section—Ram Manorath v. Kaushal, 10 O.W.N. 310, 1933 Cr.C. 559 (560), 34 Cr.L.J. 934, 145 I.C. 299, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 253. See also Subhan in Note 390.

What is to be understood by the use of the words "dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists," is that the dispute must exist and it should be of such a character as likely to cause a breach of the peace unless proceedings are now taken under sec. 145, Cr. P. C. In other words, proceedings are to be taken under that section in order to avert a breach of the peace which would otherwise take place due to the existence to a dispute between the parties. Therefore, where the police report on which the Magistrate relies does not show that there was any likelihood of a breach of the peace at the time when the proceedings were drawn up by it but it shows that there was a possibility of a collision between the parties at a future time namely, about two months from that date, it was not sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Magistrate to proceed under this section—Stewart v. Hubert Hughes, 118 I.C. 892, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 341, 30 Cr.L.J. 977, 49 C.L.J. 391, 33 C.W.N. 509, Ind. Rul. 1929 Cal. 700. But in the case of Kulada v. Danesh, 33 Cal. 33, 10 C.W.N. 257, 2 C.L.J. 271, 2 Cr.L.J. 670 (F.B.), it was decided that the introduction of words such as, "imminent" or "immediate" into the section, giving it a stronger significance than the words used in the section, was not justified. The section requires that there must be a present dispute, and that there must be likelihood of a breach of the peace. That is to say, there must be a present fear, that it is probable that there will be a breach of the peace owing to the dispute, unless proceedings are taken under the section. Of course that does not mean that orders under this section are to be made when somebody comes and says that he fears that a breach of the peace will occur before they can prevent it. The procedure under this section is intended to deal with conditions in which the parties responsible for law and order have an existing fear that unless steps are taken under the section, a breach of the peace will occur before they can prevent it. Where the words of the police report are that the cultivating season is near at hand and that a breach of the peace is feared, the Magistrate has jurisdiction to take action under this section—Hari Charan v. Sherali, 33 Cr L.J. 305, 136 I.C. 475, AIR 1932 Cal. 60, 35 C.W.N. 1003, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 203.

This section does not say that a breach of the peace must be imminent and that the opposite party has not sufficient time to go to the proper Court. In fact no case can be made legal under this chapter if it is necessary to prove that it is impossible to have sufficient time to go to the proper Court, because obviously it is as easy to file a plaint in a Civil Court as to file a complaint in a Criminal Court. This chapter is intended to provide a speedy remedy in case of disputes in order that the matter may be settled temporarily, while more lengthy civil proceedings take place—Todar Mal, 53 All 215, 32 Cr L.J. 309 (310), 1930 A.L.J. 1439, 124 I.C. 441, 1931 Cr C. 14, A.L.R. 1931 All. 14; Balram v. Gangoo, 28 N.L.R. 154, 33 Cr L.J. 937 (938), 140 I.C. 231. (Contra—Chote Lal, 25 Cr L.J. 227). The Magistrate must decide in each case whether there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace, and it is not enough on the one hand that the breach is merely probable, nor is it necessary that it should be immediate or 'imminent' as indicating a higher degree of chance of the event happening than is denoted by the 'likelihood' of it—Kulada Kinkar v. Danesh, 33 Cal 33 (45); Hari Charan v. Sherali, 35 C.W.N. 1003 (1004), AIR 1932 Cal 60, 33 Cr L.J. 305; Balmukund, 1 S.L.R. 50, 8 Cr L.J. 170. (Contra—Damodar v. Syamanand, 7 Cal 385, at p. 387). If there be no present danger of a breach of the peace, the fact that a breach may happen at a future time will not justify an order under this section—Stewart v. Hubert, 33 C.W.N. 509, 30 Cr L.J. 977, 49 C.L.J. 491; Hari Charan v. Sherali, supra. A mere finding that the parties are in a contesting mood, without any finding as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace, is insufficient—Munnu Lal v. Harde Ram, 29 O.C. 23, 12 O.L.J. 256, 26 Cr L.J. 944. But where the Magistrate found that there was a quarrel, and there was evidence to show that one party wanted to take forcible possession, held that there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace—Munnu, 8 O.W.N. 1182, 33 Cr L.J. 46 (48), 134 I.C. 120, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 428, AIR 1932 Oudh 21, 1932 Cr C. 53.

There must be a likelihood of a breach of the peace on the date on which the Magistrate draws up proceedings. He cannot take proceedings on the strength of a Police report which is more than three months old, when he has no information that a breach of the peace is likely to occur at the time of his taking action—Chhedi Lal v. Mahabir, 2 P.L.T. 650, 23 Cr L.J. 27; Anadi v. Sukh Chand, 58 Cal 388, 34 C.W.N. 899 (910), 32 Cr L.J. 398, 129 I.C. 610, AIR 1930 Cal 715, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal 226, 1930 Cr C. 1115.

Where at the date of the initial order the materials before the Magistrate do not disclose the existence of such dispute as is likely to result in a breach of the peace, the order made by him would be without jurisdiction, and the defect is not remedied even if it appears from the evidence taken in the course of the trial that there was at the date of the initiation of the proceedings, a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace—Kali Kissen v. Anund, 23 Cal 557 (562); Gobind Chandra, 20 Cal. 520 (525). But this view has been dissented from in Kulada v. Danesh, 33 Cal 33 (45).

The primary object of this section is the preservation of peace. Therefore, if it is found during the proceedings that there is no likelihood of the peace being disturbed, there is no necessity for the Magistrate to continue the proceedings—Pamshandra v. Manohur, 21 Cal 29. If the Magistrate, after some inquiry comes to the conclusion that there is no longer any danger of a breach of the peace, or the dispute no longer exists, he can refuse to draw up a preliminary order—Moolyamal v. Ali Md., 18 S.L.R. 278, 26 Cr.L.J. 1333; Kamulammal v. Vavu Rowther, 4 L.W. 57, 17 Cr.L.J. 138. See Notes under sub-section (5).

If the Magistrate is satisfied as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace he has jurisdiction to make an order in writing stating the grounds of his being so satisfied and requiring the parties concerned to put in written statements in respect of the fact of actual possession. There is nothing in the Code which directs the Magistrate in the course of the subsequent enquiry to record evidence on the question whether the dispute is or is not likely to cause a breach of the peace. The absence of such evidence on the record cannot be considered a sufficient reason for interfering with the final order—Ram Prasad v. Ram Adhar, 28 Cr.L.J. 847, 104 I.C. 463, 4 O.W.N. 834, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 359. The law does not require the Magistrate to record an express finding in his judgment (final order) that a breach of the peace was imminent. Such a finding in respect of the existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace is a matter to be considered in relation to the preliminary order—Maqimunnissa v. Ahmedunnissa, 2 O.W.N. 704, 90 I.C. 541, 26 Cr.L.J. 1581; Chiranjil Lal v. Mahadeo Prasad, 34 Cr.L.J. 480, A.I.R. 1932 All. 683 (684), 1932 A.L.J. 819, 1932 Cr.C. 938. Where the Magistrate in his preliminary order found that the dispute was likely to cause a breach of the peace, it was not necessary for him to repeat in the final order that such an apprehension existed. The essential requisite to give the Magistrate jurisdiction under sec. 145 is that he should be satisfied that a dispute exists regarding land or water before he makes the preliminary order. Once he is so satisfied, his subsequent action relates to procedure and not jurisdiction and in this respect not liable to be set aside on revision by the High Court—Guruditta v. Taja, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 108 (109), 40 Cr.L.J. 519, 181 I.C. 59, 41 P.L.R. 217, I.L.R. 1938 Lah. 611, following Kamal Kutty v. Vala, Raja of Chirakkal, 36 Mad. 275, 17 I.C. 65, 23 M.L.J. 499, 1912 M.W.N. 1154, Ganga Ram v. Murad Shah, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 253, 73 I.C. 519, 24 Cr.L.J. 631, Ranada Ranjan v. Bharat Chandra, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 631, 62 I.C. 180, 22 Cr.L.J. 484, 33 C.L.J. 69, 25 C.W.N. 215; Sheoprasad Shriram v. Gobindram Hardit, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 265 (266), 1940 N.L.J. 375. See also Ratan v. Tika, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 233, 41 P.L.R. 188. Having regard to the provisions of sec. 145 (4), Cr. P. C., it would not appear to be absolutely necessary that in the final order recorded by the Magistrate with regard to the question of possession there should be any further finding on the question of the imminence of a breach of the peace. The finding at the time of the institution of the proceedings is sufficient to give the Court jurisdiction to proceed in connection with this matter—Gobardhon v. Khirad Chandra, 44 C.W.N. 427. See Note 424.

395. Subject matter of dispute:—Land or water:—This section is not limited to tangible immovable property, but relates to a dispute concerning any "land or water" including intangible rights, and sub-section (2) gives an explanation of the words—Hurbullabh v. Luckmeswar, 25 Cal. 188. See Note 406 under sub-section (2), infra.

Proceedings under this section cannot be instituted with respect to moveable properties—Hira Lal, 11 O.L.J. 59, 25 Cr.L.J. 440. Thus, a dispute as regards the offerings made at a temple is a dispute regarding moveable property, and a Magistrate cannot make a declaration that one of the parties is in possession of such offerings—Gui Ram v. Lal Behary, 37 Cal. 578; Ram Saran v. Raghunandan, 38 Cal. 387; Sobhag Singh v. Bhaktawar, 23 N.L.R. 81, 28 Cr.L.J. 637 (688). See Note 466.

Property must be specified:—To bring a case under this section, the property which is the subject of dispute must be capable of being accurately defined—Surb Narain v. Biri Mohun, 23 Cal. 80; Maharaja Suryakanta v. Maharaja Jagadindra, 5 Cr.L.J. 32, 11 C.W.N. 198; Sabid Mandul v. Lakshmi, 7 C.W.N. 599. Therefore, a Magistrate cannot take action in the case of a dispute about an undivided share, because the subject matter of the dispute is uncertain, and the boundaries of the land are undefined—Mon Mohan v. Rajendra, 7 C.W.N. 462. See also Muhammad Ataf v. Satramdas Sakhumal, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 143, 37 Cr.L.J. 1030, 164 I.C. 969, 1936 Cr.C. 859.

Absence of clear specification of the subject matter of dispute in the proceedings is a serious defect—Sib Narain v Satish, 24 C.W.N. 621, 31 C.L.J. 369, 57 I.C. 161, 21 Cr.L.J. 593. But where the parties are not at dispute upon the question as to what the disputed lands are, the real question being which party was entitled to possession under a Civil Court decree, the want of a proper specification of the boundaries of the property does not vitiate the proceedings—Sims v. Johurry, 5 C.W.N. 563; Jhaman v. Thakuri, 1 P.L.T. 369, 21 Cr.L.J. 625, 57 I.C. 449. Non-specification, in the preliminary order, of the land in regard to which the dispute exists may in certain circumstances vitiate the proceedings. But where as a matter of fact it appears from the evidence on the record that both parties were perfectly well aware of the plots in regard to which action was being taken, it is not necessary to interfere with the Magistrate's order in revision—Parbhu Dayal, 25 Cr.L.J. 1139 (1140), 81 I.C. 963, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 152, following Iklas Kunwar v. Raghuraj, 4 I.C. 876, 12 O.C. 400, 11 Cr.L.J. 69. Where the undefined character of the area of the land in question, and the consequent difficulty experienced in settling the exact location of the said land presented an insuperable obstacle in the way of the Magistrate's arriving at a definite conclusion in regard to possession, there is no ground for interfering with the order of the Magistrate—Jan Mohammad v. Jivan Khan, 29 Cr.L.J. 861 (862), 111 I.C. 445, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 325.

An order under this section which does not specify by metes and bounds the lands in dispute may be amended by the Magistrate himself—Baboo Reddi v Kullappa, 2 Weir 107. But an order which gives no information as to the subject matter of dispute and which leaves the persons to whom notice is ordered to be issued quite in the dark as to the property in regard to which they have to put forward their respective claims, is not merely defective but invalid and liable to be set aside in revision—Martin, 27 Ail. 296, 1904 A.W.N. 234.

Where a Magistrate finds a party in possession of some land which is a part of a larger plot the possession of the whole of which he claimed, the judgment should contain the boundaries of the land to which the order applies—Osman v. Jamal, 14 C.W.N. xcviil.

See Note 397A.

396. "Within jurisdiction":—A Magistrate cannot pass orders respecting lands situate outside the local limits of his jurisdiction. Where a jalkar was situate partly within and partly without the local limits of his jurisdiction, and proceedings were taken with regard to the jalkar as a whole, the proceedings were set aside; and the Magistrate was allowed an option to institute fresh proceedings with regard to such portion of the jalkar as came within his jurisdiction—Korban v. Raja Srinath, 1 C.L.J. 329, 2 Cr.L.J. 406.

The jurisdiction to make an order under sec. 145 or sec. 146, Cr. P. C., is not personal to the Magistrate who initiates the proceedings. The practice of transferring cases under Ch. XII of the Code by District Magistrates to Magistrates of 1st class subordinate to him is common and there is nothing wrong in it. A Magistrate of the first class holding his Court at the headquarters has local jurisdiction throughout the district—Ram Kussore v. Dwarka Nath, 10 C.W.N. 1095 (1098), 4 Cr.L.J. 223.

A District Magistrate cannot transfer a case to a Sub-Divisional Magistrate if the land concerned is not within the local limits of the latter's jurisdiction—Chellapatti v. Subba, 52 Mad. 241, 55 M.L.J. 693, 30 Cr.L.J. 340 (341), 114 I.C. 625, 28 M.L.W. 664, 1928 M.W.N. 921, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1230, Ind. Rul. 1929 Mad. 305. But where a Magistrate having local jurisdiction has taken the initiary step by passing an order under sub-section (1), he can thereafter transfer the case to a subordinate Magistrate, although the latter has no local jurisdiction in the case—Arumuga, 26 Mad. 188, 12 M.L.J. 391, 2 Weir 678; Satish v. Rajendra, 22 Cal. 898; Chellapatti v. Subba, supra. See Rameshwar v. Baijnath, in Note 43, where it was held that the Magistrate to whom a case under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., was transferred, had jurisdiction to draw up fresh proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., in respect of lands included in .

proceedings and also other lands not within his sub-division and not included in the previous proceedings. See also Ram Kishore v. Dwarka Nath, supra.

Where it is uncertain in which of two local areas the land in dispute is situated, proceedings may be taken by a Magistrate having jurisdiction over any of such areas—Iklas v. Raghuraj, 12 O.C. 400, 11 Cr.L.J. 69, 4 I.C. 876. See also Audendra v. Daman Singh, 16 Cr.L.J. 527, 29 I.C. 513 (All).

A Magistrate of one district has jurisdiction to institute proceedings under sec. 145 on a report drawn up by a police officer of another district in respect of such portions of the land or water as lie within the limits of his (Magistrate's) jurisdiction—Ishan Chander v. Garth, 29 Cal. 885, 6 C.W.N. 378.

397. Preliminary order:—This section is intended to provide a speedy remedy for the prevention of breaches of peace arising out of disputes in respect of immoveable property. Sub-sec. (1) does not contemplate any sustained inquiry before the making of the preliminary order. The condition prescribed is that the Magistrate shall be satisfied from a police report or other information as to the necessity for taking action, the whole purpose being to prevent an immediately apprehended breach of the peace. It is in the highest degree absurd for a Magistrate to delay the passing of a preliminary order while he undertakes a prolonged inquiry extending over several hearings. The second proviso to sub-sec. (4) contemplates the making of an emergent order for attaching property in dispute, but as a condition to this there must be in existence an order under sub-sec. (1). Clearly, therefore, delay in the passing of a preliminary order is calculated to frustrate the whole object of this section, including the provision relating to emergent orders—Muhammad Ali v. Shamsul Haq, A.I.R. 1910 Sind 33 (37), 41 Cr.L.J. 486, 187 I.C. 636.

The making of a formal order under sub-section (1) is absolutely necessary to the initiation of proceedings under this section—Nathu Ram, 15 A.L.J. 270, 18 Cr.L.J. 557; and an omission to make such an order and to draw up a proceeding under sub-sec. (1) will render all subsequent proceedings void—Banwari v. Hiday, 32 Cal. 552, 1 C.L.J. 432; Sukru v. Ram Pergash, 30 Cal. 443; Banka Singh v. Gokul, 49 All. 325, 25 A.L.J. 246, 28 Cr.L.J. 231; Sis Ram, 32 Cr.L.J. 139, 128 I.C. 313, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 895, 12 Lah.L.J. 147, 1930 Cr.C. 991, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 41; Hakam v. Ralia Ram, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 91, 74 I.C. 79, 4 Lah. 66, 24 Cr.L.J. 751; Md. Hasham v. Md. Jhami, 20 Cr.L.J. 124 (Oudh); Manik v. Azimuddin, 6 C.W.N. 923; Jamuna v. Mohan, 2 P.L.T. 724, 23 Cr.L.J. 61; Chanan Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 702, 176 I.C. 124, 40 P.L.R. 20, 11 R.L. 165, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 345; Mariyasai Udayan v. Mahamud Azeauddeen, 37 Cr.L.J. 953, 164 I.C. 689, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 824, 1936 M.W.N. 647, 44 M.L.W. 305, 71 M.L.J. 305, 9 R.M. 158, 1936 Cr.C. 948. The conduct of the parties in allowing the Magistrate to go on without objection is no doubt reprehensible but it cannot validate an order which is without jurisdiction—Mariyasai Udayan v. Mahamud Azeauddeen, supra. But in Sajad Hussain v. Nanak Chand, 1917 P.W.R. 22, 18 Cr.L.J. 461 (following Muhammad Sharaf v. Dhanpat, 1914 P.W.R. 15, A.I.R. 1914 Lah. 295, 23 I.C. 487, 68 P.L.R. 1914, 15 Cr.L.J. 279) however, it has been held that the omission to record the preliminary order is not a fatal defect, if the Magistrate afterwards in the presence of parties records an order which essentially complies with the requirements of this sub-section. So also, in Nur Baksh, 1917 P.W.R. 26, 18 Cr.L.J. 633, it is said that the omission to record a preliminary order in writing or to serve it on the parties, does not invalidate the subsequent proceedings, where the parties appeared before the Magistrate who explained matters to them fully and they evidently understood everything that was requisite. The same view has been taken in Madan Mohan v. Sheoraj, 1932 A.L.J. 503, 1932 Cr.C. 558 (559), 34 Cr.L.J. 156 (157), 141 I.C. 131, A.I.R. 1932 All. 446, Ind. Rul. 1933 All. 63. The omission to draw up a preliminary order is a mere irregularity curable by sec. 537, where no objection was taken before the Magistrate and no party was prejudiced—Mg. Po Lon v. Mg. Ba, 3 Bur.L.J. 256, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 111, 84 I.C. 548, 26 Cr.L.J. 324; Mohan Lal v. Morui, 34 Cr.L.J. 1138, 145 I.C. 868, 1933 Cr.C. 1449, A.I.R. 1933 Pesh. 88; Ganga v. Narain, 15 All. 394 (395); Kapoor

Chand v. Suraj, 1933 A.L.J. 188, 34 Cr.L.J. 414 (418), A.I.R. 1933 All. 264, 142 I.C. 537, 1933 Cr.C. 434, 55 All. 301, Ind. Rul. 1933 All. 125 (F.B.); Ratan v. Tika, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 233, 41 P.L.R. 188, 40 Cr.L.J. 784, 183 I.C. 351, virtually overruling Banka Singh v. Gokul, 49 All. 325 cited above. As observed by the Privy Council in Abdul Rahman, 5 Rang. 53, failure to observe the rules of procedure is a mere irregularity curable by sec. 537, if no failure of justice has been occasioned and the accused has not been prejudiced in any way.

But if no order is recorded, no notice issued, no written statements called for, and no inquiry held, the order would be void and must be set aside—Mahadeo v. Bisu, 25 All. 537 (539); Tara Chand v. Behari Lal, 1916 P.R. 22, 18 Cr.L.J. 36, A.I.R. 1916 Lah. 378, 36 I.C. 868; Budhan v. Ram Rakha, 1915 P.L.R. 169, 30 I.C. 452, A.I.R. 1915 Lah. 232, 16 Cr.L.J. 628; Banka Singh v. Gokul, 49 All. 325, 28 Cr.L.J. 231. The Magistrate acts illegally when he does not pass a preliminary order and refuses to hear more than three witnesses on each side—Lingajja v. Nagayya, 1932 M.W.N. 320.

An order under this section must state all the particulars necessary to enable the Magistrate to act under this section; otherwise the proceedings are without jurisdiction. It is not sufficient that the Magistrate should have before him a police report, that he should have given orders thereon and that a written order be drawn up according to the terms of this section. It is his duty to draw up an order which in all respects satisfies the requirements of law. The written order should be correct and complete in its terms—Mohesh v. Narain, 27 Cal. 981.

Where the Magistrate purported to pass an executive order, but from the form of the order it was evident that it was a thinly disguised order under sec. 145, but no formalities of sec. 145 were observed (viz., no preliminary order was made, no written statement called for), held that the order was passed without jurisdiction and must be set aside—Harbans v. Md. Syad, 26 Cr.L.J. 1511, 1925 Pat. 51.

The jurisdiction of a Magistrate to proceed under this section arises from the fact that he has received certain information and that he is satisfied as to the truth of that information. The jurisdiction of the Magistrate does not depend on how he proceeds. There are two things; one is the authority conferred on him to act and the other is how he is to act. If he has jurisdiction, he is not deprived of jurisdiction merely because his procedure is erroneous or defective. The omission on the part of the Magistrate to follow certain directions contained in the Code, although some of these directions may be more important than others, cannot be said to deprive him of jurisdiction—Kapoor v. Suraj, A.I.R. 1933 All. 264, 142 I.C. 537, 1933 Cr.C. 434, 55 All. 301, 1933 A.L.J. 188, 34 Cr.L.J. 414 (F.B.).

397A. Proceeding:—It is not necessarily illegal or irregular to combine a large number of plots in a proceeding under sec. 145, Cr.P.C., where the dispute is between a landlord who claims a large number of plots on one side and different sets of tenants who claim different plots on the other. When this is done particular care is required to ensure that the parties are not prejudiced by the amalgamation of a number of plots in one proceeding. In a case like this where a body of tenants rightly or wrongly claim a large area of lands as having been settled with them, there is always the danger that from general evidence conclusions will be drawn in respect of specific lands. It is, therefore, essential for the Magistrate to apply his mind to the case of each individual holding—Gulab Kuer v. Ganouri Koers, 40 Cr.L.J. 17, 178 I.C. 333, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 511, 1938 P.W.N. 149, 5 B.R. 11; Raja Gope v. Sukan Singh, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 353, 1939 P.W.N. 64, 40 Cr.L.J. 749, 183 I.C. 286, 5 B.R. 894, 12 R.P. 120, 20 P.L.T. 145; Ram Kishun v. Fauzdar Gope, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 413, 3 B.R. 659, 170 I.C. 90, 38 Cr.L.J. 842, 10 R.P. 75, 1937 P.W.N. 755, 18 P.L.T. 824.

See Note 422.

398. Statement of grounds:—A Magistrate's order in instituting proceedings under this section ought to set out the grounds on which he is satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists—Jagomohan v. Ramkumar, 28 Cal. 416;

Dan Pershad v. Ganesh, 11 A.L.J. 696, 14 Cr.L.J. 495; Khubi v. Darbari, 2 P.L.T. 267, 22 Cr.L.J. 481; A. Meah v. Steel Brothers & Co. Ltd., 39 Cr.L.J. 708, 176 I.C. 266, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 229, 11 R.R. 40. Even where the Magistrate acts upon a local inquiry held by himself, he is still bound to state the grounds—Nityanund v. Paresh Nath, 32 Cal. 771, 9 C.W.N. 621, 2 Cr.L.J. 342.

Omission to state grounds :—It is the intention of the law, not only that the Magistrate should have sufficient grounds for proceeding under sec. 145, but that he should inform the parties concerned of the grounds on which he is proceeding—Gobind Chandra, 20 Cal. 520 (526). Therefore, where the Magistrate omits in the preliminary order to state the grounds for his being satisfied as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace, the final order is without jurisdiction and must be set aside—Nityanund v. Paresh Nath, 32 Cal. 771; Nga Po Tin v. Nga Po Saung, 1 Rang. 53; Ma Gyi, 2 Bur.L.J. 295, 25 Cr.L.J. 1161; Pandurang, 24 Bom. 527 (532); Baliarsimhuni v. Gadagamma, 33 Cr.L.J. 536, 138 I.C. 68, 1932 M.W.N. 425, 1932 Cr.C. 331, Ind. Rul. 1932 Mad 496, 35 M.L.W. 390, A.I.R. 1932 Mad 368; Hira Lal, 1932 A.L.J. 1087, 34 Cr.L.J. 449, A.I.R. 1933 All. 96, 142 I.C. 775, 1933 Cr.C. 165; Dan Prasad v. Ganesh, 14 Cr.L.J. 495, 20 I.C. 751; Banka Singh v. Gokul, A.I.R. 1927 All. 286, 99 I.C. 1031, 28 Cr.L.J. 231, 49 All. 325. See also A. Meah v. Steel Brother & Co. Ltd., A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 229 (232), 39 Cr.L.J. 708, 176 I.C. 266, 11 R.R. 40. But in some other cases it has been held that failure on the part of the Magistrate to set forth explicitly the grounds of his being satisfied that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace, will not vitiate the proceedings, if there is otherwise a substantial compliance with the requirements of this section—Har Prasad v. Pandurang, 1905 A.W.N. 260; Har Piari v. Nathe Lal, 18 A.L.J. 1140; Iklas Kumwar v. Raghuraj, 4 I.C. 876, 12 O.C. 400, 11 Cr.L.J. 69; Babban v. Baldeo, 4 A.L.J. 91; Parbhu Dayal, 25 Cr.L.J. 1139, 81 I.C. 963, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 152; Barmha Singh, 1932 A.L.J. 865, 1932 Cr.C. 936, A.I.R. 1932 All. 681; Kapoor Chand v. Suraj Prasad, supra; Natho Khan, 26 S.L.R. 353, 1932 Cr.C. 681 (683), 34 Cr.L.J. 215, 141 I.C. 628, A.I.R. 1932 Sind 145; Md. Sahdshah v. Wahdatshah, 26 Cr.L.J. 1292, 89 I.C. 156, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 53. Where both parties were fully cognizant of the matter in dispute, and there was in fact a danger of a breach of peace, the Magistrate's omission to state the grounds of his being satisfied as to the existence of the dispute, did not invalidate the proceedings—Ganga Saran v. Bhagwat, 32 All 132 (135), 11 Cr.L.J. 141, 7 A.L.J. 53, 5 I.C. 471. A mere omission by the Magistrate to record the source of information will not invalidate the proceedings, where the Magistrate held the inquiry in the presence of the parties, and they were aware of the fact in the course of the inquiry—Sabid Mondal v. Lakshmi, 7 C.W.N. 599. Even if the source of information had not been recorded that would be an irregularity curable by sec. 537, Cr. P. C.—Shcoprasad Shriram v. Govindram Hardit, A.I.R. 1940 Nag 265 (266), 1940 N.L.J. 375. Once the Magistrate is satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists, he has jurisdiction, and his subsequent action must be considered in relation to procedure and not to jurisdiction. It is a mere irregularity in procedure which would be cured by s. 537—Kamal Kutty v. Udayavarma, 36 Mad 275, 23 M.L.J. 499, 13 Cr.L.J. 753, 17 I.C. 65, 12 M.L.T. 439, 1912 M.W.N. 1154; Narsingdas, 35 Cr.L.J. 1381, 151 I.C. 348, 1934 Cr.C. 490, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 112; Bibi Asghari, 36 Cr.L.J. 656, 155 I.C. 169, 1935 O.W.N. 454, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 316, 11 Luck. 157, 1935 O.L.R. 257; Barhma, 1932 A.L.J. 865, 34 Cr.L.J. 425 (426), 142 I.C. 532, A.I.R. 1932 All 681, 1932 Cr.C. 936, 54 All. 1002, Ind Rul 1933 All. 131. In In re Chennapudayan, 30 Mad 548 and Chockalingam v. Ammalalchi, 2 Weir 98, the High Court refused to interfere in revision unless either of the parties had been prejudiced by the Magistrate's omission to record the grounds. Where the inquiry has been carried out by the Magistrate with considerable thoroughness, and no injustice has been done to any party as a result of the omission to state the grounds, his order cannot be set aside merely because of such omission—Maung Pu v. Maung Chit, 5 Rang 129, 28 Cr.L.J. 623, A.I.R. 1927 Rang 177, 102 I.C. 911.

But in his final order, the Magistrate should sufficiently state his reasons, so that the High Court in revision may determine whether or not the Magistrate has complied with the provisions of sub-section (4) and directed his mind to the consideration of the evidence—Bhuban Chandra v. Nibaran, 49 Cal. 187, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 382, 62 I.C. 323, 22 Cr.L.J. 499, 25 C.W.N. 887, 34 C.L.J. 125.

Reference to police report.—An initial order made by the Magistrate under sub-sec. (1) is not defective merely because it is not self-contained and does not state in express terms the grounds upon which he is satisfied, when such grounds appear in the police report upon which it is founded and to which it makes reference, and which is incorporated in it—Khosh Mahomed v. Nazir Mahomed, 33 Cal 352 (362), 9 C.W.N. 1065, 2 Cr.L.J. 637 (F.B.); Emp v Munnulal, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 78, 17 N.L.J. 231; Sheoprasad Shriram v. Govindram Hardit, A.I.R. 1940 Nag 265 (266), 1940 N.L.J. 375; Goluck Chandra v. Kali Charan, 13 Cal 175. Where the police report sets out sufficient grounds and is expressly referred to in the initial order by the Magistrate, such an order sufficiently fulfils the requirements of the law—Khosh Md v Nazir Md, supra; Kulada v. Danesh, 33 Cal 33 (40), 10 C.W.N. 257, 2 Cr.L.J. 271. If the Police report or other information shows that there is a dispute and the Magistrate believes it, and issues the preliminary order, basing his information on such report only, he acquires sufficient jurisdiction to act under this section, and it is not necessary for him to set out any further reasons for his being satisfied as to the existence of such a dispute. His order is final and the High Court will not scrutinise the said reasons—Krishnappa v. Alamelu, 5 L.W. 165, 18 Cr.L.J. 23.

399. Parties concerned:—It is the initial duty of the Magistrate in a proceeding under this section to find out what parties are concerned in the dispute that has arisen and he should also determine which parties are in actual possession—Narayan v Chandrabhaga, 26 Cr.L.J. 1289 (1291), 89 I.C. 153, A.I.R. 1925 Nag 457. The Magistrate should do his best to ascertain who are the parties concerned in the dispute in a case under sec 145. But his order cannot be pronounced to be vitiated by any error of jurisdiction merely because such inquiry has not been made or carried far enough—Krishna Kamini v Abdul Jubbar, 30 Cal 155 (193), 6 C.W.N. 737 (F.B.). It is upon the basis of the information conveyed to him that the Magistrate is in the first instance to select the persons whom he will require to attend his Court for the purpose of laying their claims before him—Ibid (at p 196). In a dispute between two sets of pujaris, the complaint should specifically name the persons against whom the protection of the law is asked for, for they are to be served with notices to attend the Court and state their case to the Magistrate. And it is also the duty of the Magistrate to ascertain who are the parties concerned—Pandurang, 24 Bom 527 (532, 533).

The words "parties concerned" should not be so narrowly construed as to mean only the persons actually disputing but should be extended to persons who are concerned as claiming to be in possession. Had it been intended to confine the proceeding to the actual disputants, the Legislature would have used the words 'parties disputing' instead of the words 'parties concerned'—per Hill, J., in Krishna Kamini v Abdul Jubbar, 30 Cal. 155 (F.B.) at p 198. For a person to be concerned in a dispute relating to land, it is not necessary to be actually present near the land or to have notice of the proceeding when taken—Manmotha v Ganga, 20 C.W.N. 978, 17 Cr.L.J. 449, 36 I.C. 129. Proceedings under this section are not without jurisdiction merely because some of those persons (i.e. persons claiming to be in possession) are not likely to cause a breach of the peace—Abadi Begam v Mirza Ahmed, 11 O.L.J. 777, 1 O.W.N. 433, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 190, 82 I.C. 691. Although a person is not one of the parties to the dispute but is in possession of a part of the land, he is a party to the proceedings and should be asked to file a written statement—Ram Lakshan v Ram Lakshan, 26 Cr.L.J. 630, 85 I.C. 918, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 421, 17 Cr.L.J. 1073. Under this section are not without jurisdiction because some of the parties are interested only with possession of a portion of the lands in dispute—Narayan v Chandrabhaga, 26 Cr.L.J. 1289 (1291), 89 I.C. 153, A.I.R. 1925 Nag 457.

It was held in several Calcutta cases that the words 'parties concerned' in this section meant not only the persons who were actually disputing but also the persons interested in or claiming a right to the property in dispute, and the Magistrate was bound to ascertain those persons and to give notice to them all so that the whole matter, so far as his Court was concerned, might be disposed of in one proceeding—Ram Chandra v. Monohur, 21 Cal. 29 (32); Laldhari v. Sukdeo, 27 Cal. 892 (904); Gobind Chandra, 20 Cal. 520 (527); Ganesh v. Ayubul, 4 C.W.N. 753; Mangal v. Naimuddi, 6 C.W.N. 101. But these cases must be deemed to have been overruled by the Full Bench case of Krishna Kamini v. Abdul Jabbar, 6 C.W.N. 737, 30 Cal. 155, in which Prinsep, C.J., referring to the above case, made the following remarks (at pp. 183, 184) :—"The reported cases seem to have proceeded on the ground that proceedings under sec. 145 should be regulated on the same principles as if the Magistrate were trying a civil suit involving a right to possession, and that unless all persons having any possible claim are made parties to those proceedings, they are bad for want of jurisdiction. But the law does not require this, nor is it the object of proceedings under sec. 145 that the Magistrate should deal with the matter before him as if he were acting as a Civil Court. . . . It may be very desirable that such parties (ie., the parties who may be interested in, or may have a claim to the property in dispute) should be heard, so as to avoid a possible injustice by determining in their absence an issue which may affect their rights. But the law nowhere declares that such person is entitled to come into the proceedings and that the refusal of the Magistrate to hear him amounts to a refusal to exercise jurisdiction under the law. The object in view is to prevent a breach of the peace between certain parties found to be in dispute by determining the subject-matter of that dispute, not the determination of actual possession or a right to possession in regard to all persons who may possibly be concerned in such a matter." In the same case, Hill, J., observed (at pp. 195, 196) : "The scope of the inquiry under this section is confined to the fact of actual possession irrespective of the merits of the claim of the parties concerned. A claim merely to a right to possession as distinguished from a claim to be in possession, would be outside the scope of the inquiry. . . . To require the Magistrate to ascertain who are the persons interested in or claiming a right to the property in dispute would be to impose on him in some cases an almost impossible task, and would undoubtedly have the effect of unduly prolonging and greatly embarrassing his proceedings and of depriving them altogether in many instances of their summary character." See also Bhuneshwar Prasad, 37 Cr.L.J. 886, 164 I.C. 180, A.I.R. 1936 All 531, 1936 A.L.J. 796, 9 R.A. 119, 1936 Cr.C. 673; Md. Mahdisha v. Wahdaishah, 26 Cr.L.J. 1292, 89 I.C. 156, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 53.

The Madras High Court, however, is of opinion (following the old Calcutta cases) that the words 'parties concerned' include persons who are interested in or claim a right to the property in dispute—Kuppayyar, 18 Mad. 51; Nagoji v. Subbarayulu, 5 L.W. 118, 18 Cr.L.J. 44.

Landlords, tenants :—Where in a dispute concerning the ownership and possession of land between a zemindar as well as his tenants on one side, and another Zeminder as well as his tenants on the other (so that the dispute was of a dual character), the Zeminders were made parties, but the tenants were not, it was held that the presence of the tenants was essentially necessary for the proper and effectual decision of the case, and the omission to join them as parties was illegal and without jurisdiction—Laldhari v. Sukdeo, 27 Cal. 892, 4 C.W.N. 613. Where the dispute existed only among the tenants of the rival Zeminders, and the Zeminders not being concerned in the dispute did not move in the matter themselves, the omission to add the Zeminders as parties to the dispute would not vitiate the proceedings—Manik v. Govind, 6 C.W.N. 206. See also Muhammad Araf v. Satramdas Sakhimal, 37 Cr.L.J. 1030 (1032), 164 I.C. 969, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 143, 9 R.S. 60, 1936 Cr.C. 859. Where the dispute lay between the two rival lessees who were before the Court and who claimed to be in actual possession and there was nothing to show that there was any other party who also claimed to be in actual possession there was no defect in the proceeding although no notice was served on the co-sharers who leased the disputed plot to them—Bhuneswar Prasad, 37 Cr.L.J. 886, 164 I.C. 180, A.I.R. 1936 All. 531, 1936 A.L.J. 796, 9 R.A. 119, 1936 Cr.C. 673. Where the Zeminders on both sides claim possession through their respective tenants, the presence of the rival tenants is necessary and they must be made parties. The order passed in favour of one tenant as against the other is a good and valid order—Gurudas v. Kedarnath, 38 Cal 889, 15 C.L.J. 184, 12 Cr.L.J. 408, 11 I.C. 592. The essence of proceedings under this section is the determination of the question who is in possession. No doubt a Magistrate is entitled to rescind a preliminary order under this section if he is satisfied that no likelihood of a breach of the peace exists, but in discharging parties to the proceedings who claim to be in possession on the ground that they claim to be in possession as tenants only under some of the parties and are, therefore, not necessary parties, the Magistrate is acting with great irregularity and in a manner not contemplated in the provisions of the section; he is in fact envisaging a decision on the question who has the right to possession, which is a matter for a Civil Court and not for a Criminal Court at all. To say that tenants in possession are not necessary parties is to preclude persons who claim to be in possession from giving evidence that they are in possession—Nagarmal Rudmal Agarwal v. Rudmal Gangabisan Agarwal, 38 Cr.L.J. 395, 167 I.C. 500, 9 R.N. 188, I.L.R. 1937 Nag 288, A.I.R. 1937 Nag 93.

Where the disputed land consisted of several plots of land all held by tenants on a yearly rent of half the produce, and the parties to the proceedings were the lakhirajdar and the patnidar, the dispute between whom was as to the right to collect rent, and it appeared that as regards some of the plots there was a dispute as to what tenants were in possession, it was held that as regards the plots about which there was a dispute as to what tenants held the lands, the Magistrate should not have passed any order in the absence of the tenants, because they might be very seriously prejudiced by an order in favour of one or other of the parties to those proceedings—Harj Das v. Abdul, 19 C.W.N. 959, 16 Cr.L.J. 590.

Section 145, Cr. P. C., equally covers the cases of dispossession of the tenants by their landlords. The question of title does not arise before the Magistrate making an inquiry under sec 145, Cr. P. C. He is concerned with the question of possession in such proceedings—Mohammad Ali v. Ladha, A.I.R. 1938 Lah 122, 39 P.L.R. 775, 173 I.C. 352, 39 Cr.L.J. 297.

Agent, Manager or Servant.—The person in possession of land merely as agent or manager is not a party concerned within the meaning of this section—Brown v. Prithiraj, 25 Cal 423; Jhabu v. Rutherford, 7 C.W.N. 208; Newaz v. Rambullubh, 21 Cal. 916 (Note). Where the person in whose favour an order was made under this section regarding a dispute as to the right to dig coal in a certain mouza, was merely the manager of the coal company claiming the property, held that the possession of such person was not one as contemplated by this section, and the order was bad, as the parties really interested were not before the Court—Behary Lal v. Darby, 21 Cal. 915. An order passed against servants without their masters being on the record, is one made without jurisdiction—Nagoji v. Subbarayulu, 5 L.W. 118, 18 Cr.L.J. 44; Peare Lal, A.I.R. 1934 All 853, 1934 Cr.C. 1043, 1934 A.L.J. 630, 4 A.W.R. 896, A.I.R. 1934 All 622, 152 I.C. 500, 36 Cr.L.J. 114. Section 537, Cr. P. C., does not cure the irregularity committed by the Magistrate in omitting to implead the masters by name—Peare Lal, supra. But if the actual proprietors are not resident within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, an order under this section can be made in favour of the person who claims to be in possession as agent or manager of the proprietors—Dhondai v. Follet, 31 Cal 48, 7 C.W.N. 825 (F.B.). If both the master and the servant are resident within the Magistrate's jurisdiction, the master must be made a party to the proceedings—Jubahan v. Bansrup, 6 C.L.R. 193.

In Bholanath v. Wood, 32 Cal 287 and Chhakauri v. Ishar, 6 P.L.T. 799, 27 Cr.L.J. 142 (143), 91 I.C. 814, however, it was held that where the Magistrate made the manager a party to the proceedings instead of the proprietor, who was resident within the Magistrate's jurisdiction, the course adopted by the Magistrate was a mere irregularity or at most an error of law, which did not vitiate the proceedings.

Receiver :—Where the land in dispute is in the possession of a receiver appointed by a Civil Court, his possession is the possession of the Court. Such an officer cannot be described as a party interested in a dispute under section 145. Even if such officer can be so described, there will be no jurisdiction in the Magistrate to make any order on him under this section without the sanction of the Court appointing him—Dunne v. Chandra Kishore, 30 Cal. 593, 7 C.W.N. 390. In a dispute between the old and the new tenants of an estate, the receiver who granted new leases to the new tenants and who himself was not in actual possession, was not a proper party to the proceedings—Chinna Veeranna v. Narayanaswamy, 9 M.L.T. 502, 12 Cr.L.J. 185, 9 I.C. 1009.

Liquidator :—If the liquidator or his servants are responsible for creating a breach of the peace, proceedings may be instituted against him under this section. Such proceedings cannot be said to be instituted against the company, and consequently the leave of the Company Court under sec. 171, Companies Act is not necessary—S. N. Mukherjee v. Krishna Dasi, 37 C.W.N. 932 (934), 34 Cr.L.J. 640, 1933 Cr.C. 705, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 433, 143 I.C. 795, Ind. Rul. 1933 Cal. 484.

Reversioner :—A person who is the next reversioner to the estate is not a person concerned in the dispute, and is not a necessary party because he has no right to present possession—Behari Lal, 24 All 443.

Minor :—A minor who is interested in the dispute is a proper party, but he is not a necessary party as he is not a party likely to cause a breach of the peace. Non-service of notice on the minor does not invalidate the proceedings—Nandan v. Siaram, 7 P.L.T. 156, 26 Cr.L.J. 1287, 89 I.C. 151, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 67.

Community :—Where there is a dispute between two communities, the Magistrate is justified in selecting persons who should represent each community, and after hearing them he should either permit a community to do a certain thing or prevent it from doing it, till a Civil Court has decided upon the rights of the parties—Nanke v. Jamil-ur-Rahman, 23 A.L.J. 41, 26 Cr.L.J. 683 (684), 86 I.C. 59, A.I.R. 1925 All 316.

400. Non-joinder of parties :—Questions of misjoinder or non-joinder of parties do not ordinarily go to the jurisdiction. Such questions as whether A ought to have been added as being a person likely to be affected by the proceeding or B omitted as not being concerned in it, or whether C was added at too late a stage, are questions of procedure by which the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is not affected—Krishna Kamini v. Abdul, 30 Cal. 155 (200), 6 C.W.N. 737 (F.B.); Nandan v. Siaram, 7 P.L.T. 156, 26 Cr.L.J. 1287, 89 I.C. 151, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 67; Moiram Bewah v. Mrijan Sarder, 24 C.W.N. 97, 21 Cr.L.J. 25, 47 Cal. 438. Therefore, proceedings under this section are not without jurisdiction, because some person claiming to have possession of portions of lands in dispute has not been made a party, when he was not one of the parties in the dispute so far as appeared from the information on which the Magistrate acted, and when such person does not appear and raise any objection. And further, proceedings under this section are not without jurisdiction merely because the parties that have been joined are concerned only with possession of portions of the land in dispute—Krishna Kamini v. Abdul, 30 Cal. 155, 6 C.W.N. 737 (F.B.); Sajani Kanta v. Shamsheer Ali, 24 Cr.L.J. 235, 71 I.C. 699; Narayan v. Chandrabhaga, 26 Cr.L.J. 1289, 89 I.C. 153, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 457.

But non-joinder of persons concerned in a dispute, whose presence is essentially necessary for the purpose of a proper decision of the case, involves a question of jurisdiction, and the High Court has power to set aside an order made in a proceeding in which such persons are not made parties—Anesh Mollah v. Ejaharuddi, 28 Cal. 446, 5 C.W.N. 428. In this case the High Court set aside the order of the Magistrate as the Zamindars, who were alleged to be trying to do away with the first party's possession by means of persons to whom they had given pottahs, in other words, the second party, were not impleaded as parties in the proceedings

In a case of co-sharer landlords possession of one is the possession of all and one set is capable of representing the entire body in a proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. C.—Raja Gope v. Sukan Singh, AIR. 1939 Pat. 353, 1939 P.W.N. 64, 20 P.L.T. 145, 183 I.C. 286, 5 B.R. 894, 12 R.P. 120, 40 Cr.L.J. 749

401. Addition of parties:—It was held in Protap Narain v. Rajendra Narayan, 24 Cal 55 (F.B.) that a Magistrate had not power to add parties after the initiation of proceedings under this section, and that if in the course of the proceedings it appeared to the Magistrate that it was absolutely necessary that other persons should be required to attend and he was satisfied that they were concerned in the dispute, the only course open to him was to initiate a new proceeding

But this case was decided under sec. 145 of the old Code of 1882, in which sub-section (3) regarding the service and publication of notice did not exist. The opinion of the above Full Bench case cannot now be regarded as binding authority. Sub-section (3) has been enacted not simply for the purpose of regulating the issue and service of notice, but it is also intended to empower the Magistrate, after he has issued the order provided for by sub-section (1) to the persons claiming to be in possession, to bring in any other persons whom from subsequent information it may seem to him proper to have before him—Krishna Kamini v. Abdul Jubbar, 30 Cal 155 (197, 199), 6 C.W.N. 737 (F.B.) And the addition of those persons does not put an end to the original proceeding, nor requires the initiation of any fresh proceeding—Ibid (at pp 192, 193, 201).

The Magistrate has very wide powers with respect to the persons whom he will bring into the proceeding. He may alter or add to the array of parties either of his own motion or on the application of any one claiming to be concerned in the dispute (i.e., claiming to be in possession). But the Magistrate can add parties at any time up to the commencement of the inquiry under sub-section (4). The section contains no provision for the addition of parties after the commencement of the inquiry. The power conferred on the Magistrate by sub-section (3) of summoning such persons as he deems proper, and the means prescribed by the same clause for giving publicity to the proceeding, provide a sufficient guarantee that before the actual inquiry is entered upon, all parties really concerned will either have been summoned to attend the proceedings or will have had the opportunity of doing so afforded them if they care to avail themselves of it. It would lead to much inconvenience and delay if any one claiming to be concerned in the dispute is allowed to come in and join in the proceedings after the commencement of the inquiry. It would probably be necessary in such a case to start the inquiry afresh, as the party added would have a right to have the evidence taken in his presence, and if several claimants successively were to come in this way, it is evident that the proceeding might be indefinitely prolonged—per Hill, J., in Krishna Kamini v. Abdul, 30 Cal 155 (198, 199), 6 C.W.N. 737. The same Judge again remarked in the same case (at p 201) —“If parties are added after the inquiry has begun, I do not think that it would be necessary, in consequence, to initiate fresh proceedings, but evidence previously taken ought, if the parties so added require it, to be again taken in their presence.” See also Manmotha v. Ganga, 20 C.W.N. 978 (1981), 17 Cr.L.J. 449, 36 I.C. 129

402. 'His Court':—This means the Court of the Magistrate who issued the preliminary order. A preliminary order issued by a Magistrate directing the parties to appear before another Magistrate is illegal—Misri v. Narasing, 2 P.L.T. 186, 22 Cr.L.J. 483

A Magistrate has no authority to issue a warrant to compel the attendance of a party in a proceeding under this section—Kafatulla v. Feruzuddin, 5 C.W.N. 71 (72).

the manager a party to the proceedings instead of the proprietor, who was resident within the Magistrate's jurisdiction, the course adopted by the Magistrate was a mere irregularity or at most an error of law, which did not vitiate the proceedings.

Receiver :—Where the land in dispute is in the possession of a receiver appointed by a Civil Court, his possession is the possession of the Court. Such an officer cannot be described as a party interested in a dispute under section 145. Even if such officer can be so described, there will be no jurisdiction in the Magistrate to make any order on him under this section without the sanction of the Court appointing him—Dunne v. Chandra Kishore, 30 Cal. 593, 7 C.W.N. 390. In a dispute between the old and the new tenants of an estate, the receiver who granted new leases to the new tenants and who himself was not in actual possession, was not a proper party to the proceedings—Chinna Vectanna v. Narayanaswamy, 9 M.L.T. 502, 12 Cr.L.J. 185, 9 I.C. 1009.

Liquidator :—If the liquidator or his servants are responsible for creating a breach of the peace, proceedings may be instituted against him under this section. Such proceedings cannot be said to be instituted against the company, and consequently the leave of the Company Court under sec. 171, Companies Act is not necessary—S. N. Mukherjee v. Krishna Dasi, 37 C.W.N. 932 (934), 34 Cr.L.J. 640, 1933 Cr.C. 705, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 433, 143 I.C. 795, Ind. Rul. 1933 Cal. 481.

Reversioner :—A person who is the next reversioner to the estate is not a person concerned in the dispute, and is not a necessary party because he has no right to present possession—Behari Lal, 24 All. 443.

Minor :—A minor who is interested in the dispute is a proper party, but he is not a necessary party as he is not a party likely to cause a breach of the peace. Non-service of notice on the minor does not invalidate the proceedings—Nandan v. Siaram, 7 P.L.T. 156, 26 Cr.L.J. 1287, 89 I.C. 151, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 67.

Community :—Where there is a dispute between two communities, the Magistrate is justified in selecting persons who should represent each community, and after hearing them he should either permit a community to do a certain thing or prevent it from doing it, till a Civil Court has decided upon the rights of the parties—Nanhe v. Jamil-ur-Rahman, 23 A.L.J. 41, 26 Cr.L.J. 683 (684), 86 I.C. 59, A.I.R. 1925 All. 316.

400. Non-joinder of parties :—Questions of misjoinder or non-joinder of parties do not ordinarily go to the jurisdiction. Such questions as whether A ought to have been added as being a person likely to be affected by the proceeding or B omitted as not being concerned in it, or whether C was added at too late a stage, are questions of procedure by which the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is not affected—Krishna Kamini v. Abdul, 30 Cal. 155 (200), 6 C.W.N. 737 (F.B.); Nandan v. Siaram, 7 P.L.T. 156, 26 Cr.L.J. 1287, 89 I.C. 151, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 67; Moiram Bewah v. Mrijan Sardar, 24 C.W.N. 97, 21 Cr.L.J. 25, 47 Cal. 438. Therefore, proceedings under this section are not without jurisdiction, because some person claiming to have possession of portions of lands in dispute has not been made a party, when he was not one of the parties in the dispute so far as appeared from the information on which the Magistrate acted, and when such person does not appear and raise any objection. And further, proceedings under this section are not without jurisdiction merely because the parties that have been joined are concerned only with possession of portions of the land in dispute—Krishna Kamini v. Abdul, 30 Cal. 155, 6 C.W.N. 737 (F.B.); Sajani Kanta v. Shamsker Ali, 24 Cr.L.J. 235, 71 I.C. 699; Narayan v. Chandrabhaga, 26 Cr.L.J. 1289, 89 I.C. 153, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 457.

But non-joinder of persons concerned in a dispute, whose presence is essentially necessary for the purpose of a proper decision of the case, involves a question of jurisdiction, and the High Court has power to set aside an order made in a proceeding in which such persons are not made parties—Anesh Mollah v. Ejaharuddi, 28 Cal. 446, 5 C.W.N. 428. In this case the High Court set aside the order of the Magistrate as the Zamindars, who were alleged to be trying to do away with the first party's possession by means of persons to whom they had given pottahs, in other words, the second party, were not impleaded as parties in the proceedings.

In a case of co sharer landlords possession of one is the possession of all and one set is capable of representing the entire body in a proceeding under sec 145, Cr. P. C.—Raja Gope v Sukan Singh, AIR. 1939 Pat 353, 1939 P.W.N. 64, 20 P.L.T. 145, 183 I.C. 286, 5 B.R. 894, 12 R.P. 120, 40 Cr.L.J. 749.

401. Addition of parties:—It was held in *Protap Naram v. And the addition of those persons does not put an end to the original proceeding, nor requires the initiation of any fresh proceeding—Ibid (at pp 192, 193, 201).

The Magistrate has very wide powers with respect to the persons whom he will bring into the proceeding. He may alter or add to the array of parties either of his own motion or on the application of any one claiming to be concerned in the dispute (i.e., claiming to be in possession). But the Magistrate can add parties at any time up to the commencement of the inquiry under sub-section (4). 402. 'His Court':—This means the Court of the Magistrate who issued the preliminary order. A preliminary order issued by a Magistrate directing the parties to appear before another Magistrate is illegal—Misri v. Narasing, 2 P.L.T. 186, 22 Cr.L.J. 483.

A Magistrate has no authority to issue a warrant to compel the attendance of a party in a proceeding under this section—Kafatulla v. Feruzul, C.W.N. 71 (72).

403. Written statement:—The statement made by a party in a written statement filed under this section ought to be proved like any other statement, and therefore, a Magistrate is not competent to pass an order in favour of a party merely on the strength of his written statement—Kefatulla v. Feruzuddin, 5 C.W.N. 71. See also Najem v. Jamalali, 12 C.W.N. 771, 8 Cr.L.J. 27. An order based on the written statement of one of the parties, and upon the failure of the other party to file his statement, without some evidence on the part of the party filing the statement in support of it, is without jurisdiction—Gobind v. Nibaran, 8 C.W.N. 642.

The Magistrate should take written statements from all parties. The object of this section is to put an end to disputes as to possession. The object cannot be gained until all the contending parties are on the record and an opportunity is given to them to put forward their respective claims—Raghunath v. Rajkishore, 5 P.L.T. 458, 25 Cr.L.J. 906, 2 Pat.L.R. 104 (Cr.), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 509. The mere fact that a party did not put in a written statement, would not take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to proceed with the case. It is incumbent on the Magistrate to make the inquiry and to take such evidence as the parties offer, irrespective of the fact that one or other of the parties failed to put in a written statement; he has to take evidence if offered by any of the parties and to decide the case upon such evidence—Ramjharia v. Piar Koeri, 4 P.L.T. 308, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 369, 24 Cr.L.J. 557; In re Goluck Chunder, 11 W.R. 9.

Granting time :—Although a Magistrate has a discretion to refuse an application for time to file a written statement—Gobind v. Nibaran, 8 C.W.N. 642; Piziruddin v. Totajannessa, 14 Cr.L.J. 302, 19 I.C. 958 (Cal.); still he ought to grant time to enable the party to file it. Therefore, where on the day appointed for hearing, the parties although present filed no written statement nor produced any evidence, and the Magistrate refusing to grant time heard the parties and being unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was in possession, attached the property under section 146, it was held that the Magistrate ought to have granted time to allow regular proceedings to be followed—Sh. Mansar Ali v. Matiullah, 12 C.W.N. 896. See also Pedda Giddasani v. Achigadu, 1938 M.W.N. 824, 178 I.C. 251. But where neither party filed written statements or adduced evidence but both of them applied for time and, an interval of more than two months having elapsed, the Magistrate passed an order under sec. 146, Cr. P. Code, such an order was not without jurisdiction—Bijoy v. Chandra, 14 C.W.N. 80.

The very object of the proceeding under this section is to put an end to disputes as to possession of immoveable properties so as to prevent a breach of the peace. This object cannot be gained until all the contending parties are on the record and an opportunity is given to them to put forward their respective claims. The effect of the order of the Magistrate rejecting written statement of a party is that his decision under this section will not be binding upon them. The High Court, therefore, allowed the written statement to be filed in such a case where the Magistrate rejected it—Raghunath v. Rajkishore, 25 Cr.L.J. 906, 81 I.C. 442, 5 P.L.T. 458, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 783.

The parties cannot be called on in proceedings under this section to furnish a statement of their rights—In re Pandurang, 25 Bom 179 (185).

404. Actual possession:—The possession contemplated by this section is the actual possession of the subject of dispute. The power or competency of the Magistrate to interfere depends upon the very fact that the possession of the land is in dispute—Rajendra v. Md. Arzumand, 9 C.W.N. 887, 2 Cr.L.J. 408, 1 C.L.J. 331. The possession in regard to which the Magistrate's jurisdiction under this section should be exercised must be of a real and tangible character—Bijoy Nath v. Bengal Coal Co Ltd, 23 W.R. 45 (48).

Actual possession means actual physical possession; it means the possession of the person who has his feet on the land, who is ploughing it, sowing or growing crops in it, entirely irrespective of whether he has any right or title to possess it. Actual possession
